Considerable Forces of The Allies Are Now on Greek Soil

Bulgars Are Still on the Offensive---Turks Failed in Violent Attacks on the British Forces at Kutel-Amara

LONDON, Dec. 10. — Russians have won an important victory in Persia.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—A joint meeting of the House of Commons and the French Chamber of Deputies is being considered.

OTTAWA, Dec. 10.—Mr. Albert Sevigny, M.P., will succeed Speaker Sproule.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—Turks failed in violent attacks on the British forces at Kutel-Amara.

ATHENS, Dec. 10.—Considerable forces of the Allies are now on Greek soil.

The Bulgars are still on the offensive.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Some United States papers say the German Chancellor's speech is the first note of despair.

ATHENS, Dec. 10.—Allied troops are fortifying Salonika apparently preparing for a seige.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—The British War Office last night admitted two retirements of British forces near Lak Dorian on the Greek border, but the British made a stand yesterday and defeated the Bulgarians.

PETROGRAD, Dec. 10. — The War Office officially reports the capture of two generals and the entire staff of the second German army division.

BERLIN, Dec. 10.—Considerable disorder was caused in the German Reichstag yesterday afternoon by the Socialists.

PARIS, Dec. 10.—French troops yesterday regained the trenches lost to the Germans early in the week. The casualties were heavy.

NORFOLK, Va., Dec. 10.—Two German agents were arrested redhanded with bombs in the Dupont Powder Works.

ONTARIO'S CLEANEST CITY.

STRATFORD, December 9.—Having found the water pure, the milk supply right up to standard, and the garbage disposal system working splendidly, Sanitary Inspector Thomas Dunseith to-night reported to the Board of Health at its annual meeting that Stratford the cleanest and healthiest city in Ontario. The wrapping of all bread was the only improvement the Inspector recommended in his report.

Half Million Bushels of Wheat Is Destroyed

Elevators at Erie, Pa., Destroyed by Fire—Canadian Grain Said to Be For the Allies Wiped Out

HALF A MILLION LOSS

ERIE, Pa., Dec. 10.—At 8 o'clock this morning fire broke out in the elevators of the Archer Line at the water front, destroying two sections of the combination elevator.

The lowest estimate of the loss is half a million dollars.

The cause is unknown, but is thought to be due to spontaneous combustion.

Some half a million bushels of Canadian grain, said to be destined for the Allies, were destroyed.

Rumours of incendiarism are thick but no basis for them has been found.

HUNGARY IS RESOLVED TO MAKE PEACE

LONDON, Dec. 10—The Exchange Telegraph's Geneva correspondent telegraphed to-day that he has learned from reliable sources that Hungary is resolved to make peace without the consent of either Austria or Germany. "Great demonstrations in favour of peace are occurring throughout Hungary," the correspondent reported.

Allies Condense Front and Meet New Attack By Bulgars on Right

Withdrawal From Krivolak Salient to Demir Kopu Places Natural Stronghold in Hand of Franco-British Armys

LONDON, Dec. 10.—The forecast of military events in Southern Serbia, where the British and French are holding the Vardar and Cerna River lines, is being rapidly justified. At that time military observers here saw in the next Bulgar-German operations an attempt to envelop the allied contingent which it was feared, would compel General Serrail to contract his front and eliminate the sharp salient that had its apex at the junction of the Cerna with the Vardar.

The main attack in this operation was expected to come from the west, where the French left, stretching along the Cerna, was "up in the air" and peculiarly subject to a sharp blow. Despatches from Athens and Salonica yesterday said the Bulgarians with a sprinkling of Germans have reached Kenali on the Greek border and directly behind the French front unless the latter has been withdrawn since its position was last made known. While the pressure on this flank thus far has not been severe it has compelled the Allies to withdraw fourteen miles down the Vardar, from Krivolak to Demir Kapu, twenty miles from the Greek frontier.

This retirement was not the result of a direct attack but was undertaken solely as a pecuniary condensing of the front and a measure to take advantage of the series of gorges which make the Demir Kapu area one of natural strength. With the left wing of the army in danger of being turned the contraction of the Krivolak salient was a military necessity.

Last night reports reached London of a new attack on the extreme right in the neighbourhood of Strumnitsa, where the British are holding the line. This menace is of rapid development, but has not progressed far enough to warrant the observers in judging its dangers. It is, of course, complementary to the operations around Monastir and is designed either to surround or drive from Serbia the last allied soldier.

The retirement of the Allies to Demir Kapu has led to the report that they intended to abandon the Balkan enterprise entirely, but the continued landing of troops at Salonica would seem to deny any such intention, while there is a very strong military opinion here that Salonica should be held as a base for future operations in the Near East.

The Bulgar capture of Resna and their advance toward Ochrida has put them in possession of the extreme south-western corner of Serbia, and with the exception of a few miles of ground along the frontier of the Sanjak of Novibazar and that held by the Allies the country now is entirely in enemy hands.

The British naval force under Admiral Ernest O. F. Troubridge, which assisted in the defence of Serbia, accompanied the Serbian army in its retreat it was announced yesterday. This force when last heard from left Mitrovitza the day before the fall of that city and retired with the Serbs toward Montenegro.

According to a statement by Mr. Thomas James McNamara, Financial Secretary of the Admiralty, in the House of Commons, the naval contingent will "remain in touch with the Serbian forces as long as its services promise to be useful."

MEXICAN WOMEN WERE EXECUTED

American Says They Were Forced to Face Villa Firing Squad.

El Paso Tex., Dec. 10.—Fourteen fear-stricken women faced a Villa firing squad at Casas Grandes and were shot to death, according to information received to-day by the Carranza Consul-General here. The account of the shooting is verified by an American who reached the border to-night from Casas Grandes, where Villa now has his headquarters.

According to the American, who says he witnessed the execution pre[illegible] the women was [illegible] mother, and pleaded with the commander of the firing squad to spare her life. Her answer was a prod with a Mauser rifle, and she was shoved back into line, only to faint and fall on her face, where she was shot.

The fourteen victims of Villa's wrath were accused of being Carranza spies. It is said they were taken from their homes in the American houses of Casas Grandes, which had been commandeered for the use of Villa officers, and without trial were marched off to death.

The women were not executed separately or in groups, as is the usual custom, according to the American, but were taken out behind a flouring mill and executed by a squad of fourteen soldiers, in command of a major. The women hid their faces behind their soiled black mantillas, and some turned their backs on the firing squad, while others knelt and prayed for mercy. The American says he left the scene after the woman who was about to become a mother fainted. He says he heard the shots as he started back toward the town to catch the train for the border.

Peace Sentiments of the Different Countries at War

With the Austro-Germans, Learned by Cardinal Hartmann, Who is Conveying the Same to the Germans

ROME, Dec. 10. — Cardinal Hartmann carried back to Germany to-day the peace sentiments of the principal countries at war with the Austro-Germans. Before leaving, the German Prelate conferred at length with Pope Benedict. It is understood that Cardinal Hartmann gave assurance that he would make every effort to obtain definite peace proposals from Germany, for transmission to the Allies through the Vatican.

WHAT CAUSES COLDS?

This question is asked every day. A cold is really a fever, not always caused by the weather but often due to disordered blood or lack of important food-elements. In changing seasons fat-foods are essential because they distribute heat by enriching the blood and so render the system better able to withstand the varying elements. This is the important reason why Scott's Emulsion should always be taken for colds, and it does more—builds strength to prevent sickness.

Scott's Emulsion contains Nature's rare strength-building fats, so skillfully blended that the blood profits from every drop. It is free from harmful drugs. Sold at drug stores—always get the genuine.

IMMIGRATION OFFICIALS HAVE CURIOUS CASE

LONDON, Dec. 9.—A peculiar case over the emigration regualtions is engaging the attention of the officials here. A woman and her daughter wished to go to Canada. The daughter, aged only fifteen, was married some little time back to a Canadian soldier, who has now been invalided as unfit for further service. He declares his parents in Canada will receive his young wife, but obviously the statement might prove incorrect and if she were entitled to go, there still remains the question whether the mother should be allowed to go also.

A Montreal business man who wished to return to Canada has met considerable difficulty. He is well known on this side and did business here with numbers of people without his bona-fides being questioned. He, however, left all his papers of identity in Montreal, consequently he has found considerable difficulty in arranging his return.

Some of the new autumn frocks in silk for children of six to twelve years are so quaintly picturesque that one forgives them being made of such impractical material.

GERMAN PRISONERS ARE AIDING FRANCE

ARE PAID FOR THEIR LABOR

Appear Contented with Their Lot—Always Retain Military Training and Respect for Officers.

ROANNE Central France, Dec. 3.—"Achtung!" was the German command of attention given a German Sergeant Major in trim German uniform of 1,500 German soldiers, all in their gray-green uniforms with red-edged caps, ranged in long ranks twenty deep along the great courtyard of the barracks of Roanne. The sharp and guteral Germand command sounded strangely in this French setting, with French officers receiving deferential salutes and giving directions, and French soldiers in their vivid red-blue uniforms standing at shoulder-arms at all the exits.

These long lines of German soldiers were typical of the scores of German prison encampments centring at this little town of Roanne, and radiating from here to the Spanish frontier and over to the French colonies in Africa—in all some 200,000 German prisoners gathered up from Champagne and all along the line—manoeuvring under German officers in the prison courtyards, working the farms, running the steam thrashing machines, binding hay in bundles for French artillery and cavalry horses, and helping supply France with its sustenance for the army and the people.

Here are Roanne, too, is the centre of another form of German industry on French soil, with thousands of German-Polish soldiers doing the same work they did in the coal mines of Poland, digging the coal from the rich deposits of Central France, offsetting the loss of the French coal fields which have passed into the hands of the invaders.

The Associated Press was given the opportunity to see a large number of these German encampments, and typical scenes of the soldiers doing agricultuarl and mining work, the party being arranged by the Minister of Foreign Affairs and under the escort of French Army officers, Lieutenant Brunet and Lieutenant Garcin.

In the courtyard of the Roanne Barracks the Germans had been drawn up to give the visitors a typical instance of their appearance. They looked rather slouchy until the word of command was given. Their uniforms were stained and dirty, showing the results of life in the trenches. They were irregular in height—big, bearded Babarians and short, stocky men.

"Bring them to attention, and have them take three steps forward, turn, and three steps backward," said the French commandant.

The direction was interpreted to the German Sergeant Major, and then rang out his "Achtung" The effect was electrical on these soiled and slouchy ranks. They sprang into even lines, every head straight and shoulders back, transformed from an irregular mass into perfectly aligned platoons, which would have done credit to a parade ground. Then, as the command of three steps was given in German, the long lines of heavy wooden sabots came up into the German goose step, and fairly crashed back and forth over the stone pavement. In an instant the goose step lines were rigid. It was little short of sensational, this galvanizing of a whole regimeat of mud-stained men into a body fairly vibrating with energy and force and automatic military precision.

Six hundred of these men had recently been captured in the French advance in Champagne, but they were mingled indiscriminately with the others. One large dormitory, however, was given over chiefly to Champagne prisoners. This, like the rest of the rooms, was scrupulously clean and in good condition, with mattresses and blankets for each man, rooms for shower baths, and the equipment of a well-ordered barracks. The same place had been used before for French soldiers, and the Germans were getting practically the same accommodation. In the dining hall, besides the regular menu printed in German, was a list of "extras" on the bulletin board, which could be bought—butter, tea, cheese, soap, cigars, tobacco, and other luxuries at the current French prices.

It was the work these men were doing, however, which was of chief interest. Near by was a large establishment where the Germans were seen at work. The great warehouses was fairly alive with these workmen, their uniform put aside for a rough working blouse. Hydraulic presses were turning out bales of tightly pressed hay ready for shipping. Eight big Germans were on top of a flatcar ranging the bales in place, and scores of others were working the machinery and passing the product through the various processes up to the shipment.

At the little town of Aubier a dozen Germans in blouses were running a steam thrashing machine. The grain was falling in a steady stream as the Germans passed the sheaves from the storehouse and ran them through the machine. Others were running the steam engine, steadying the movement of the long shafts leading to the thrasher. This was typical of the thrashing of the wheat yield, now going on all over France. Germans being scattered through all the little farming centres, doing the heavy work of the machines.

One of the important Polish camps visited was near St. Etienne, the heart of the coal region of Central France, where the Polish miners, recently serving in the German ranks, are bringing up the stores of anthracite and bituminous coal. It is the chief dependence of France for fuel and industrial energy, now that the northern coal fields have changed hands. It was late in the day when the visit was made, and the Polish miners had come to the surface and were now crowding forward in hundreds to receive their pay.

"What, are German prisoners paid?" was asked.

"Yes, and they make good wages, about one franc and sixty centimes a day, (32 cents,)" was the reply.

As the Polish miners pressed up for their money they were paid by a typical French accountant, with a big safe and rows of tin money-cases beside him. The men had on their mining colthes, blackened and stained, but through the grim stood out the fact that they were German soldiers, most of them wearing the red-edged caps and some using old uniforms for the work.

Occasionally some question is raised about this payment of wages to German prisoners. But the answer is given that it is under the convention regulating such matters, and France is scrupulous about meeting every obligation of that nature, even though such wages could be well employed at home.

Altogether this trip under official escort covered several hundred miles through towns, villages and great stretches of farm country, with German soldier-prisoners at every hand, in the fields, warehouses, the thrashing centres, and the coal mines, showing how France has solved the problem of her many prisoners not only by restraining them under reasonable living and sanitary conditions, but also setting them to useful labor in meeting the needs of France from agriculture and the mines.

Indulging in Irony.

Browbeating lawyers sometimes find their match in feminine witnesses. We recall an instance in which a member of the Charleston, S. C., bar, Solonel H—, was quietly "squelched" by a lady whose evidence was very damaging to his client. He realized this, and being also nettled by the imperturbability of her manner, he resolved to embarrass her if he possibly could. So he said:

"Madam, I observe that in giving your testimony you make frequent use of the word irony. May I ask if you understand its true meaning?"

"I think I do sir," she replied. "Let me illustrate. If I were to call you a gentleman, I should unquestionably be indulging in irony."

Although Minnesota has the greatest iron mines of the world and supplies a fifth of the country's total production of iron ore, steel has never been made there, and because of her yearly output of nearly 100,000 bus. of wheat Minnesota is popularly regarded as an agricultural State.

A Tragedy.

"How's that black-and-tan dog of yours?"

"Dead."

"Dead?"

"Yes, swallowed a bunch of watch keys, and they wound him up."

GERMAN CAPTIVES LIVE IN A CASTLE

Ease and comparative Luxury are Enjoyed by Officers at Le Puy

LE PUY, Central France, Dec. 8.—German officers living in a historic chateau on the banks of the romantic Loire, much as they would live in some castle on the Rhine, two of them with their wives and babies, with German orderlies, German cooks, German menus, German war maps, German orchestras, German games, German drills—these were some of the things making it apparent to-day that France was living up to the complete letter and spirit of its international obligation of looking after German prisoners of war.

The visit to this German officers' camp was made by the Associated Press through the courtesy of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, with two French Army officers assigned from the Ministry of War to assist in showing and explaining all the details of the care given to German officers.

Prisoners Faultlessly Dressed.

The full assemblage of German officers was seen for the first time as the party entered the gardens of the old chateau, for the officers seemed to have a taste which drew them into these beautiful gardens, finished in exquisite French taste, with flowers and foliage at every hand, and looking off into vistas of the Loire. There was not a sign of discontent about them; on the contrary, they were a picture of a well-conditioned set of men, living a life of ease and even elegance. Their uniforms were spick and span; they were well turned out and well tailored, their coats fitting faultlessly, and their trousers tightly over their big legs; they were well shaved, well fed, well conditioned, as though they had recently stepped out of some military club in Berlin.

There was a slight air of suspicion about the Germans as the French officers entered with the party. They raised their head sprondly and strutted away in pairs and groups, until soon all of them were lost in the maze of shrubbery. But while they were in sight not one of them failed to come to attention and give a deferential military salute to the French officers escorting the party. The latter, too were most careful not to permit the visitors to intrude upon the privacy of the German prisoners by asking them personal questions, taking pictures of them, or treating them as though they were an exhibit. It was this the German officers seemed to fear, but the scrupulous care of the French officers made such apprehensions groundless.

A strong wall, five feet high, topped by four strands of barbed wire a foot apart, circled the outer edge of the castle gardens.

"That is the only restraint," said the officer. "There are no bars or bolts, for the officers are on their parole of honour, and these strands of wire are little more than a formality."

In the living quarters of the castle the German officers were seen engaged in their customary occupations. The rooms were large and light, with the windows overlooking gardens and valleys. The names of the occupants were on each door. On one, for example, were the names Captain Freiheer, Captain Gruner. As the French commandant knocked the door was thrown open and the German captains stood like statues at military salute. One of them was a big, yellow-bearded man, the other, with a monocle in his eye, looked the part of a young nobleman. They were smoking cigarettes, and a box of cigars was open on the table. One of them was interested in a portrait he was painting. The library shelves showed collections of German classics. In the next room a wounded German officer laboured to his feet and, despite his wound, threw back his shoulders and came to the military salute. His wound was slight and he was now convalescing with every comfort about him. On his bed was carelessly throwu a roll of fine blueprints and drawings such as those made by army engineers. When he saw the visitors glancing at these plans he shook his head and smiled.

Prisoners Makes War Maps.

"No, they are not war plans," said he. "I am the burgomaster of Metz, and those are some of the plans for municipal improvements which were under my control. I continue to study them, and they interest me greatly."

Along the long corridors were many other rooms, each with a group of five or more officers under command of a ranking officer as chief. The walls were covered with drawings, portraits, and landscapes showing the artistic bent of the officers. Some of them had unique collections. One had a large number of curious meerschaum pipes; another was fond of medallions and enamels and had a considerable collection.

The German officers continue to keep up their war maps, showing their own idea of the German sweep in Russia, Serbia and elsewhere, and with no restraint from the French officers. The maps were done with military care and precision. Small coloured pins and flags showed the position of the German and allied forces. It was evident that Germn fervor was still dominant, as the coloured pins and flags showed the Germans moving steadily forward in the various theatres of war.

"But that is a mistake," said the commandant, noticing a German war gag pinned far down into Serbia beyond the actual point of German advance. Then he laughed and passed along, making no change in the pins and flags and remarking:

"It's their own affair. Let them have it that way if it suits them."

Some of the officers just brought in from the battle line at Champagne, where 224,000 German prisoners were taken, were in one of the large rooms. One of these young German officers from Champagne stood at military salute as the party passed. Then, as Champagne was mentioned, his salute gradually faded away, his arm relaxed to his side, and he took on a sickly smile at the visitors, as much as to say.

"Yes, they rather got the best of us that time."

The visitors were also led to the assembly room of the German officers, equipped much like club quarters, with gymnasium, games, billiards, and musical instruments. A huge bass viol was pointed out as part of the German orchestra. The officers were sitting about in easy chairs in the manner of club men. Many of them wore the Iron Cross conspicuously displayed on the left breast of their uniform.

"Do they retain the Iron Cross and all their decorations?" was asked.

"Yes," said the French commandant, "they retain everything, their decorations and their household good—everything but their arms; those they laid down in Champagne."

RUSSIA IS TRAINING BRAND NEW ARMY

Russia's 2,000,000 Young Recruits Being Made Into Soldiers.

MOSCOW, Dec. 10.—The new army of 2,000,000 which Russia is raising from her very young men is much to the fore. These young troops are largely concentrated in the big cities, and are transformed from slouching louts to straight-backed soldiers 'in the public streets and squares.

Neary every square and large open street square in Petrograd, Moscow and Kiev is occupied all day by recruits drilling. Crowds collect and watch their doings.

The knack of making good use of moderate abilities secures the esteem of men, and often raises to higher fame than real merit.—La Rochelou-cauld.

GROUPS FOR THE NAVY

Men to Be Accepted Now for Service Later.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—The Secretary of the Admiralty announces that arrangements are being made in connection with the canvass under the national registration scheme for the enrolment in the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve of men whose entry in the navy is to be deferred.

Men accepted for enrolment will be enrolled by a recruiting officer or at one of the Royal Naval Depots, and will be given a certificate of enrolment and an armlet and allowed to return to their homes.

Men will be arranged in four groups, as follows:

Single men aged 18 to 30 and single men 31 and over; married men aged 18 to 30 and married men 31 and over.

The United Kingdom leads all the countries in the wrold as a market for the domestic farm and forest products of the United States. During the last ten years the United Kingdom averaged annually 39 per cent. of all farm and forest products exported.

NEW STRENGTH FOR LAME BACK.

Letter Tells of Long-looked-for Prescription.

Dear Mr. Editor—I suffered form lame back and a constant tired, worn-out feeling. At times I was unable to stand erect and scarcely able to get around. It would usually come on at first with crick in small of my back. I took one box of Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets and my back commenced to get better soon after starting to take them. I did not have to walk doubled over as I did before using the "Anuric." It is the best remedy I have ever taken for what it is intended to relieve.

I hope those who are in need of such a remedy will give the "Anuric Tablets" a trial.

(Signed) A. G. DRAKE.

NOTE: Up to this time, "Anuric" has not been on sale to the public, but by the persuasion of many patients and the increased demand for this wonderful healing tablet, Doctor Pierce has finally decided to put it into the drug stores of this country within immediate reach of all sufferers.

Simply ask for Doctor Pierce's Anuric Tablets. There can be no imitation. Every package of "Anuric" is sure to be Doctor Pierce's. You will find the signature on the package just as you do on Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, the ever-famous friend to ailing women, and Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, proven by years to be the greatest general tonic. Send 10 cents to Dr. V. M. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., for large trial package.

At any rate don't give up hope of being cured of your malady until just a few doses of "Anuric" have proven that it will make you feel like a different person.

EDITOR—Please insert this letter in some conspicuous place in your paper.

How Lord Derb's Recruiting System Operates in England

Many Classes Formed, Some of Which Are Exempted from Active Service—Result of Method Will Be Known on Dec. 11.

POLITICAL ORGANIZATIONS HELP

LONDON, Nov. 23, (Correspondence of The Associated Press). — Whether the United Kingdom is to continue to recruit its army for the war by voluntary enlistments, or to resort to the continental system of general compulsory service will probably be known soon after Dec. 11.

The report of the Parliamentary Recruiting Committee and Joint Labour Recruiting Committee, which took the work of enlistment out of the hands of the army a few weeks ago, will be made on that day. If the results of the thorough canvass of the United Kingdom prove that the number of men which the military authorities want are willing to join the army, the movement for conscription, which was fast becoming a burning political issue, and which the labour unions were opposing, will become a dead issue. If this appeal to the manhood of the country fails to meet the expectations of its promoters the Prime Minister has told Parliament that he will hesitate at nothing necessary to prosecute the war to a successful finish.

The only pressure put upon Britons thus far has been the pressure of public opinion. The remarkable scheme which Lord Derby is directing will place the country on a basis of organization for service as comprehensive and intelligent as that of the conscript nations. It relieves the army of what Lord Derby calls the "hand to mouth" methods of recruiting by a campaign of posters, speech-making, and personal exhortation. It gives the Government definite knowledge of the numbers of men eligible for military service, with their degrees of eligibility, with equally definite statistics of those engaged in "indispensable" civilian pursuits, and has separated them into classes as the men of continental nations are grouped, so that the War Office may call up class after class when they are needed.

Informal but efficient local courts have been evolved to which men who consider themselves exempt from service or think they have been wrongly classified may appeal, and even a court of appeal from the decisions of these local tribunals. All the machinery of conscription has been organized, except the factor of legal power to enforce the processes of the machine. Compliance is still voluntary, but the power of public opinion remains entrenched in the background, and with an accurate knowledge of all the men who may be considered shirkers the local committees will be able to invoke the pressure of public sentiment strongly upon their heads.

When the canvass has been completed the civilian organization will stand ready to furnish the men: it will be for the War Office to ask for them and for the drill sergeants and General Staff to do the rest.

Had Ready-Made Machinery.

Fortunately for its work the committee had two organizations prepared to carry out its scheme as thoroughly as any Government office could have done it, and without the heavy cost of a complex body of salaried officials. These organizations are the parliamentary campaign committees of the political parties, and the labour unions. The canvass has been made on the same thorough and accurate lines as a canvass for votes in a general election. It has been made by voluntary workers chosen largely from the workers of the local party committees and many of them have been women. The experience of the suffragists in practical political work, as well as that of many other women of high social position, has proven useful. Hundreds of motor cars have been loaned.

All individuals have had the opportunity to fill cards volunteering under two classes—those ready for immediate service, and those to be placed in reserve groups to continue their occupations subject to call for service with their groups. The committee will have accurate information regarding the status of the great majority of the men who fail to respond to the invitation to place themselves at the disposal of the army.

There are forty-six groups, twenty-three for single men, (including widowers without children dependent upon them,) each year of age constituting a separate group, and twenty-three similar groups for married men; the first group consisting of single men aged eighteen years, the forty-sixth of married men aged forty. It is proposed to call up the groups for military service in their numerical order, except that men of eighteen years will not be called until they reach the age of nineteen. Several classes of men may be exempted from service—although all eligibles will be listed in the groups—notably munitions workers, certain classes of railway men, and farm labourers; and in special individual cases the local tribunals may decree exemption, particularly for those whose employers can prove them "indispensable."

The Local Tribunals.

The local tribunals to pass upon disputed cases were organized under the direction of the Local Government Board, by the selection of committees from town councils, metropolitan borough councils, and urban and rural district councils. The principal duty of these tribunals is the decision of claims of men of military age and fitness to be excused from service on the ground that they are indispensable in a trade, or for personal, business, or domestic reasons. The appeal court for these bodies consists of five members, with Lord Sydenham as Chairman, and Sir George Younger, a prominent brewer, and three former Government officials.

By common consent the politicians and newspapers which were debating hotly the question of conscription have dropped it until the result of the work of Lord Derby's committee shall be made known. There was a flurry of uncertainty over a statement made by Lard Derby indicating that the Government might enforce conscription on married men before any married classes were called out, if the single men failed to come forward in sufficient numbers, and an ambiguous reply by Premier Asquith when called upon for a statement in the House of Commons upon that point. Lord Derby wrote a statement, which the Premier indorsed as correct, that "married men are not to be called up until young unmarried men have been. If these young men do not come forward voluntarily, you will either release the married men from their pledges or introduce a bill into Parliament to compel the young men to serve, which, if passed, would mean that the married men would be held to their enlistment."

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and abundant. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get this famous old recipe which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and abundant.

Will Wed Under New Name To Get Estate

Indian Man to Have Marriage Annulled and Re-wed Same Woman.

WABASH, Ind., Dec. 10.—In order to become heir to a valuable farm and several thousand dollars, deposited in a bank, and to prevent losing his wife, whom he married two weeks ago, a rural mail carrier of this city, who has been known as George C. Eckman, is to have his marriage annulled and then be wedded again to the same girl under the name of Everhault.

The mail carrier received a letter a few days ago from his grandfather, in Pennsylvania advising the young man that he had just learned of the recent marriage. The letter advised him that a farm and a large bank account would be willed to him if he would renounce the name of Eckman and take his right name, Everhault.

Young Everhault, upon investigation, learned that his father had deserted him and his mother years ago and that his mother later married David Eckman. Court officials advised Everhault to have his marriage annulled and another ceremony performed.

Many Women Suffer FROM EXCRUCIATING PAINS IN THE BACK.

Do you ever feel that you must have some rest for that lame and aching back?

Do you ever feel that those shooting, stabbing, darting pains must be gotten rid of before you can get into condition, whereby you can attend to your household duties without a pain or an ache?

When the back begins to ache it is a sure sign that there is something radically wrong with the kidneys.

What you want is a kidney medicine, and a medicine for the kidneys only.

Doan's Kidney Pills know nothing but kidney disorders, because they are manufactured solely for the purpose of relieving and curing the kidneys.

Mrs. L. Melanson, Plympton, N.S., writes: "I am sending you this testimonial, telling you what a wonderful cure Doan's Kidney Pills made for me. For years I had suffered so with my kidneys I could hardly do my housework. I used several kinds of pills, but none of them seemed to be doing me any good. At last I was advised to try a box of Doan's Kidney Pills. When I had taken the first box I found relief. I have used five boxes, and to-day I feel like a new woman. I cannot recommend them too highly."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

Tribute To Work Of Germans In China

British Government Says They Have Broken Down Native Opposition.

A tribute to the work of the Germans in China has just been sent out by the British government.

It is part of a report from Consul V. L. Savage of Changsha, capital of the province of Hunan. To German traders, men of tact and persistence, he said, is chiefly due to the fact that the Chinese native traders are becoming more and more tolerant of foreign commercial methods and merchandise.

"New firms who enter interior China," he adds, "will no longer have to break through the opposition of their old-established connections among the Chinese, and institute new and unpopular methods. The building up of trade connections in China is just now easier than in any other country."

Credit is also due the Germans for opening up the mining fields of China to foreigners. Consul Savage says:

"Native prejudices, vested interests and the greed and power of the Chinese gentry have, no doubt, raised great difficulties in the past in the way of China. In that respect the province of Hunan, which had great mineral resources, was one of the first to deal with. Yet the same difficulties have been overcome, in some measure, and the export of certain ores and metals is now a principal feature of the trade of Changsha. But to whose efforts is this due? The answer is to those of German firms. British enterprise has had practically nothing to do with it."

Declare Germans Starve Prisoners

Released Britons Make Charge—Say Detention Caused Typhoid

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 10.—A Daily Chronicle correspondent, who travelled from Rotosendaal Flushing with a party of British prisoners just released from German internment camps says that some twenty came from Wittenberg, on the conditions of which camp the American Ambassador reported. These released men declared that the conditions were appalling until last July. The crowds of Russians and the British camp were left almost alone in filth and practically without food, causing typhoid, which carried off 500 Russians and eighty-two British. They had no soap for six months, and a change of clothes was impossible.

Many deaths were the result of virtual starvation. The food was often only hot water, into which bad margarine was melted.

The present party were the first to be allowed to leave Wittenberg. They were brought to Achen in filthy clothes, which they changed there, the old ones being sent back to the camp.

Hearing of the typhoid ravages, Majors Iry and Priestly, Captain Vidal, Sutcliffe, and Field, and Lieutenant Lauder volunteered and were allowed to go there from another camp to attend the men. All those now living owe their lives to these six officers of the Royal Army Medical Corps. Three of the doctors themselves caught the disease and died.

The correspondent saw the men without feet. Both said their loss was caused by lack of attention at Wittenberg.

The Hostess' Response.

Mr. B. who was dining out had done lavish justice to the good things before him. By way of graceful apology he remarked, with a beaming smile directed toward his hostess:

"I've always heard, ma'am, that the highest compliment one can pay the housekeeper is to eat heartily. You observe that I have been exceedingly polite."

"Thank you, Mr. B," smiled back the hostess. "Indeed, I think you have carried politeness to the point of flattery."

WHOOPING COUGH.

Mrs. Charles Lovell, Agassiz, B.C., writes: "Seven of our nine children had whooping cough the same winter, and we attribute their cure to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. We always have it in the house, and recommend it as the king of all medicines. I was formerly entirely cured of protruding piles by using Dr. Chase's Ointment."

American Company Puts Stopper on Supply of Dyes For Canada

The action taken this week by the American Dyewood Company in notifying all Canadian firms that no further Canadian orders would be filled is causing considerable discussion among Canadian dye firms and woollen mills. Some manufacturers take it as a piece of retaliation against Canada because of the recent British embargo prohibiting the export of logwood extracts for colouring matter from the West Indies, their chief source, to any port outside the Empire. The logwood shortage could be replaced by aniline, but the aniline dye supply was cut off shortly after Great Britain and Germany declared war.

"Only one United States firm has taken this action," said Mr. T. D. Wradlaw of the Geigy-ter Meer Company. "The Standard people have sent out no such circular. They are ready to fill orders, but they are already loaded up with work. The action of the American Dyewood Company may be the result of the embargo, though it was understood that they got their logwood from Hayti, which is not a British possession. It is impossible to say to what it will lead. There is already a great shortage in black, dark blues, greens, and the dark colours supplied by the logwood dye."

That Canada will shortly be wearing woollens and leather goods in the natural colours, yellow boots and serges, is not impossible, according to Mr. Paine of the John P. Paine Company. "We are practically dependent on the American Dyewood Company for our dyes,' said he. "We use thousands of pounds of it. They have cut Canada off entirely because the British have cut them off. There is practically no supply on hand. The tanners use it greatly, too. The effect is being felt immediately. Already we have had many enquiries for logwood and we have none on hand."

There is no logwood industry at present in Canada. One was started some years ago at Brockville, but the odds were all against it. Dyestuffs came into Canada free of duty. The freight charges were enormous, and the Canadian demand was very small.

"To succeed at all," said Mr. Wardlaw, "the concern would have to be established on a seaboard. This would eliminate the high freight charges. The New York firms are all on the seaboard. If we had a plant at Halifax or St. John it would have some show. But the dyestuffs still come into Canada free, except for the war tax."

The logwood tree is a small tropical tree about the size of an apple tree, and is cultivated almost entirely in the West Indies and South Sea Islands.

STOP CATARRH! OPEN NOSTRILS AND HEAD

Says Cream Applied in Nostrils Relieves Head-Colds at Once.

If your nostrils are clogged and your head is stuffed and you can't breathe freely because of a cold or catarrh, just get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm at any drug store. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream into your nostrils and let it penetrate through every air passage of your head, soothing and healing the inflamed, swollen mucous membrane and you get instant relief.

Ah! how good it feels. Your nostrils are open, your head is clear; no more hawking, snuffling, blowing; no more headache, dryness or struggling for breath. Ely's Cream Balm is just what sufferers from head colds and catarrh need. It's a delight.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRL'S COAT.

By Anabel Worthington.

A handsome winter coat for a little girl will cost but little if made at home and better materials can be used than if purchased ready made.

The model shown herewith is regular in all particulars. It is of sacque cut and has a double breasted closing, which extends all the way to the shoulder. There is a plain, straight collar at the neck. The sleeves are plain, and are finished without cuffs at the wrist. The coat is also full length.

To make a shorter or reefer coat all that is necessary is to make the closing shorter and to finish the neck of the coat with the long shawl collar which comes far down in front. The garment must also be shortened and a turnback cuff added to the wrist. Thus we have two patterns in one and either may be used as needed.

The coat pattern, No. 7,443, is cut in sizes 4, 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Medium size requires for long coat, 1⅝ yards of 54 inch material.

This pattern can be obtained by sending [illegible] to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

IS GENIUS DEVISABLE?

By HARRIET COWLEY.
[Copyright, by American Press Association.]

Whoever is born with superior mental powers must pay a penalty. Such persons are not satisfied to work in a common field. They struggle for a higher one to which admittance is denied them until their fitness for it is recognized. And how many a "mute inglorious Milton" has lived and died without any such recognition while his untalented brother has won a high position! The same is often true of one who loves madly. The very intensity of his person robs him of his coolness. He frets and fumes while a rival unmoved by sentiment lays siege to the maiden and wins her by regular approaches.

When John Gregory went to college he expected to lead his fellow students as he had led his schoolmates and afterward to lead the world as he had led his university associates. The only other being he loved except himself was Bertha Avery, and he loved her far better than himself. It was Bertha who was accountable for her lover's self admiration. She recognized his superior endowments and called his attention to them. Therefore he believing that through them he would win and hold her love, came to set great store by them.

John was graduated at the head of his class. Not only this, but he was the college literary light of his time editor of the university magazine and winner of all the prizes given for essays. Indeed, so marked was his success as a college scribbler that he determined to enter the field of literature. He was never quite sure that Bertha loved him—indeed, she had never told him that she did—and he did not expect to make the conquest of her heart till he could lay a laurel wreath at her feet.

John entered his chosen field encouraged by all. There was no doubt that he had very superior literary faculties. He entered the editorial service of a magazine for an income, proposing to write out of office hours. He soon concluded that to win the success he coveted he must furnish something in an original vein. To swim in the great ocean of the commonplace did not please him. The first important story he wrote was a satire on certain fads of the day. He had resolved not to embarrass his employers by offering them any of his work, so he sent his satire to another magazine. It was returned with the indorsement that it was too good for the class of readers of that particular magazine.

Meanwhile as editor he was accepting stories of one Jefferson Spangler. They were not to be considered as within the realms of literature, but they seemed to please people who had little or no literary taste. Spangler was a connection of Bertha Avery's and she had introduced him to John, asking him to help one of whose literary ability she had a poor opinion, but who was a very "amiable, deserving fellow." John published some of the young man's productions partly to favor Bertha and partly because they helped to widen the circle of the magazine. At least so thought the editor in chief and owner.

While John was experimenting with different novelties to attract the attention of the public to his work he maintained a sort of indefinite understanding with Miss Avery. He would not ask for her till he had met the coveted success. He always had something under way or finished which he hoped would make the expected hit. Bertha encouraged him to push on and he would eventually reap the reward of his perseverance. But, though many of his works were recognized by a few as scintillations of genius, only those of which he himself had an indifferent opinion found their way into print. One or two stories of marked originality were published and attracted some favorable comment, but not enough to fix the attention of the public on the writer.

Meanwhile Jefferson Spangler was plowing in the field of mediocrity. In time he published a novel which met with a moderate success. John Gregory, surprised, read it, or all of it he could force himself to read, and wondered. But what was his chagrin when the owners of the magazine with which he was connected told him that the next issue would contain a likeness and notice of the "new literary light" and that they had decided to "boom" him.

While Gregory had been trying to dash in upon the public by a brilliant stroke, humble Spangler had been slowly crawling up upon it. He possessed a homely faculty of portraying the common events entering into the lives of ordinary people. Having reached a point where capital concluded that it could make his work profitable, he had nothing more to do but wield his pen. Capital did the rest. Within a few years publishers were competing for his next novel and offering him fancy royalties for it.

The next chapter in John Gregory's life was the receipt of a letter from the girl he adored announcing her engagement to Spangler. Since John had never made a formal proposal for her hand, there was no occasion for her entering into any explanation or apology. She did say, however, that she was not to marry her ideal, but people never did that.

John Gregory is getting old, and is a bachelor. He is second assistant editor of the magazine that "boomed" his rival, without prospect of ever attaining any greater prosperity. Different opinions are given as to the cause or causes of his not having succeeded, the most common of which is that "he flew too high."

Labor Conditions in Canada.

Reports to the labor department as to conditions throughout Canada this fall indicate that unemployment has been very considerably relieved as compared with last year. At present there is comparatively little unemployment in urban centres except in two or three cities of the far west. The outlook for the coming winter is considerably brighter than it was this time last fall.

In this connection it is interesting to note that at the present time there is not a single strike or labor dispute of any magnitude in the whole Dominion, and that wages remain steady.

3 BOXES CURED PSORIASIS

Mrs. Nettie Massey, Comeauon, Ont., writes: "Three doctors described my trouble as psoriasis, and one said could never be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head, and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment and am entirely cured—not a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise this Ointment enough."

FEEDING OF JACK TAR AN ABNORMAL TASK

Everything Goes as Provisions on Board Ship Whether Food or Clothes —Jack's Appetite is Enormous

When a ship prepares, in harbor, to go out and take her place among the great fleet which keeps silent watch and ward around Britain's shores, not the smallest part of her preparations consists in seeing that she can feed the men who form her crew for a prolonged period, if necessary, without relying on her supply ships.

"Provisioning day," then, ranks in equal importance with the day when the coal—food for the furnaces—comes aboard, and the day when the food for the guns is taken in.

Hours before most people are awake, the long strings of lighters come across the harbor from the victualing yard, carrying beneath their hatches enough food and "provisions" to stock a great many of the multiple shops of a shore firm.

And, almost before they are really alongside and made fast, the blue jackets are down on board them, tearing off the hatch lids, and exposing to view the bales and cases hidden beneath.

All Known as "Provisions"

In one lighter half a dozen brawny marines will commence to wrestle with great sacks of flour, each weighing a trifle of 240 pounds, slinging them into stropes so that they can readily be hoisted on board by the groaning winches. In another barge men will be hustling great chests of tea around, taking great care, however, that the chests are not damaged for in that case the sea air would spoil the tea for consumption. "Provisions," by the way, is a very comprehensive term, and is strictly non official. The official title for all goods that a sailor eats, wears, smokes, or reads from is "Paymaster's stores."

Pork and Prayer Books

And what a conglomeration of things come under this head. Candles and corned beef; lard and libraries; socks and sugar; tea and tobacco; rabbit and raisins—both in tins; silk and silk handkerchiefs; pork and pickles; rum and vinegar; flour and flannel; prayer books and shoes; all these and half a hundred more things are covered by the same generic term—"provisions." And each must go into its separate and appointed place. The flour, for instance, is stowed in a hold right forward, where neither rats nor salt water can get at it. In order that it may not be tainted by other provisions, biscuits are the only other things kept in this compartment. Salt is stowed aft with the great barrels of rice, while the salt pork finds a resting place in the wet provision hold in solitary glory. Fresh potatoes are stowed in tarpaulin-covered, damp-proof bins between the funnels, where the heat coming through the boiler casings will keep them dry and prevent their sprouting. Preserved potatoes, carrots, turnips, celery seed, and corned beef and mutton are all stowed in another hold, while the tinned jam keeps company with the sugar, pickles, rabbit, and salmon in still another hold.

Suet and lard are packed with the currants and raisins in their boxes, while—strange companions—the rum and vinegar are stowed in the spirit room, away from all other stores.

The spirit room deserves a word to itself. This compartment is fitted with a flooding arrangement in exactly the same way as the magazines and shell rooms. In the event of fire it can be instantly flooded with salt water, and the rum—highly inflammable stuff—prevented from exploding, and adding the horrors of burning spirit to those with which the sailor already has to contend.

For Immediate Use

One hold, called the ready-issue room is packed with a small quantity of the goods which are most likely to be needed at short notice, and from here the sailor's daily rations are issued. In all about thirty tons of fresh meat—kept in the refrigerator room—sixty tons of fresh potatoes, two tons each of the tinned provisions, and about three hundred tons of flour come on board on provisioning day, to say nothing of the hundredweights of tobacco and soap, and the hundreds of volumes for the library, and the prayer books and Bibles for Jack's spiritual needs. And while these stores are coming in quite a different kind of provisioning is going on further forward in the ship. This is where the canteen manager is getting in his own stores, those little delicacies Jack appreciates, and pays for, to supplement his official rations.

Things one cannot obtain from the paymaster, but which are found in the better class of provision shop ashore, come in here. Cheese and butter—Jack is not officially allowed butter—beans and peas, brawn and sausage, tinned peaches, pineapples, pears, and other fruits, macaroni and tapioca for his dessert, sardines and salmon for his tea. All these and many other dainties the canteen provides—at a price. The greatest item of "provisions" sold by the canteen, however, is the common or garden cigarette in packets, the canteen in a big ship selling over fifty thousand packets in a week.

Modern Italians Splendid

Of Modern Italians Herbert Vivian writes in the Fortnightly Review as follows: To sum up Italians, the better they are known, the more they please. They have shaken off the heavy, sensuous, half-bred, sulky, vulgar pessimism of the bygone nineteenth century, and risen to the easy, kindly tolerance which characterizes the present age. Best of companions, merry, genial, thoughtful, ingratiating, lovable in their pretty little poses and harmless vanities, they are the true sons of the morning. Their lives are full of color, their ideas are acquiring perspective, they are live Old Masters. . . . The prime secret of their success lies probably in the lightness of their serious moods, in their good humor in adversity, in the mental science of their national therapeutics.

Maces are carried by Turkey's irregular cavalry.

Before 1854 the duties of the Secretary of State for the Colonies used to be carried out by the Secretary of State for War.

In the Scottish Highlands in olden times a burning wooden cross was carried blazing to and fro among the clansmen, to rouse them to battle.

Suffered Constantly FROM HEADACHE.

To suffer from headache makes life miserable, and it takes a person who has been or is subject to headache to describe the suffering and agony that goes along with it. The dull throbbing, the intense pain, sometimes in one part of the head, sometimes in another, is caused by some disturbed condition of the system. The stomach may go wrong, the bowels become constipated, the blood may not circulate properly, but whatever the cause, the presence of headache clearly shows that there is something wrong somewhere, and unless the cause of the headache is removed, some serious trouble is very liable to assert itself.

The fact that Burdock Blood Bitters reaches the seat of the trouble, and banishes the headache is due to its success in first relieving, and then permanently curing the cause of the trouble.

Mrs. Wallace J. Boyd, Milltown, N.B., writes: "Several years ago I was a constant sufferer from headache. I was all run down, and nothing seemed to do me any good. I read of Burdock Blood Bitters, and decided to give it a trial, and the result was marvellous. The headache stopped at once, and I feel better in every way since. I recommend it to all sufferers."

B.B.B. is the oldest and best known blood medicine on the market to-day, having been manufactured for the past forty years by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

NOVEL WATER CARRIER

Shipping "Adam's Ale" at the Dardanelles is More Difficult Than it Looks

Every drop of water consumed by the men fighting in the Dardanelles has to be brought to the peninsula in water boats. There are, of course, many old Turkish wells on the peninsula, but they are nearly all dry, and the small supply obtainable from them is not even enough for the transport horses and mules. A huge fleet of tank ships and water barges works continually bringing water to Gallipoli, and French army engineers have built several big underground cisterns each holding many thousand gallons, so that there is always a supply of water in reserve. These cisterns are roofed with bombproof coverings, made of a thick layer of cement, a six-inch network of thick, pliable olive tree branches, and then some six or eight feet of stone and sand. On the whole, the water is handled in the neatest manner. There are no pipe lines through which the water may be pumped ashore. When the sea is calm the small lifeboats of ordinary merchant ships are scrupulously cleaned and towed alongside the water barges. They are then filled to the gunwales and towed ashore. The water is afterwards baled out with buckets and carried to the shore tanks in giant Greek wine casks lashed to carts drawn by four mules.

Mr. Balfour did not make his maiden speech till he had been a member of the House of Commons for two and a half years.

His Reply.

"Johnny," said the father firmly, "you must go to bed now." "Don't want to!" replied Johnny mutinously, sinking deeper in the chair. "Oh, but you must, sonny," persisted father. "Don't you know that 'Early to bed and early to rise makes a man healthy, wealthy, and wise,' my boy." Johnny eyed the old man in silence for a moment. Then he said, with a wise shake of the head:—"You didn't go to bed early when you were a boy, did you, father?"

Doctor Said Sciatica--- Rheumatism--Lumbago

But He Could Not Help Me, and Endorsed the Use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Mr. Wm. Parker, 105 Cayuga street, Brantford, Ont., tells in the following letter of his remarkable experience with Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills: "My doctor treated me for some time for Sciatica, Rheumatism, Lumbago, but to no purpose, for I had to lay off work. The visiting officer of Sick Benefit called to see me and advised the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, stating that he had been cured of the same trouble by their use. I asked the druggist about them and he recommended them highly. Not being satisfied with this, I went back to my doctor, and when he said they were good I began their use. The promptness with which they enlivened the action of the kidneys and bowels was wonderful, and it was not long before I was rid of all my trouble.

"I was so bad that I could only walk by hanging on to a chair or the wall. My wife had to lace my shoes. Only those who have had this ailment can realize the way I suffered. I am writing this letter to let people who have my trouble know of these pills. You are at liberty to use this letter, and if anyone interested will call or write to me I will give every detail."

Write to Mr. Parker, enclosing stamp for reply, and he will verify this statement. He will do this out of the gratitude he feels for his cure and because he realizes how difficult it is to obtain the cure of these dreadfully painful ailments.

There are so many treatments recommended for rheumatism that you naturally doubt them all. Here is an opportunity for you to verify the cure and put this great medicine to the test. It will only cost you a quarter to try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They get at the very foundation of rheumatism, and by removing the poisons from the system take away the cause of pains and aches.

Two More German Deserters Plead To Remain In America

Were Enthusiastic When War Opened, But Hard Knocks and Short Rations Dulled It

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—Wilhelm Knapp and Albert Ohlhof, the German army deserters, who arrived here as stowaways last Friday on the Holland-American freighter Osterdyk from Rotterdam and were sent to Ellis Island, appealed for help to get into the country.

The immigration authorities have ordered them sent back, and they have appealed to Washington. Knapp is 48 years old and a carpet weaver. Ohlhof is a locksmith, 2 years old. Both seem intelligent, and have a good idea of the country they fought up till Oct. 15, when they escaped into Holland, where they say there are nearly 4,000 German Army deserters.

Knapp, who pleads in German for his comrade and himself tells of hardships in the trenches, with little food and many hard knocks. His story is much like that of Karl Schultz, who came here on the Noorderdyk as a stowaway on Thanksgiving Day and was afterward admitted.

"When the war began," Knapp said, "we were all fired with patriotism because we thought the Fatherland was being attacked, but afterward we found that our lives were being sacrificed for the benefit of the war lords.

"On fighting days our rations consisted of a loaf of rye bread, with water every twenty-four hours, and after fourteen days in the trenches we had to do exercise all day when we came out. It is hard to present arms, do parade steps, and look unconcerned when shells are exploding around you I have seen officers, under warm shelter, lying in bed while wounded soldiers lay outside on straw. That is not comradeship. Many men are killed now trying to desert into Holland.

Knapp said his war experience began at Louvain, and from then on it was one battle after another, and they all looked alike to him except that it rained harder at Charleroi than during the affair at Mauberge.

When Emperor William visited the trenches, the soldiers were not allowed to turn to look at him, Knapp said. With regard to the Crown Prince the deserters had nothing to say, but shrugged their shoulders.

Knapp and Ohlhof met Schultz on the Boomjes at Rotterdam a month ago, and when they told him they had deserted he ran away. Both have gained weight on the Ellis Island diet and are content with the food and quarters, except that it is too warm for them after living in the trenches more than a year. Knapp says if he can get out and find employment he will send for his wife.

MAGIC BAKING POWDER

KEEP LANDLORDS IN RESTRAINT

Law in Britain Holds Greedy Landlords in Check.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—The Rent Bill introduced by Mr. Walter Long (President of the Local Government Board) in the House of Commons contains the following main provisions:

In certain prescribed areas it shall not be legal to charge for working-class houses higher rent than that charged before the war.

These areas include the administrative County of London, all towns over 100,000 population, and all other districts where, owing to causes attributable to the war, there has been a large influx of population.

The bill applies only to the class of property that normally lets at £30 per annum and under in London, and at £21 and under in the provinces.

Tenants will not be able to recover excess rents already paid.

The same principle applies to the interest on mortgages for the protection of the landlord.

Hotelmen Meet in Chicago.

Representatives of the hotel trade from Canada, the United States, and Europe met in Chicago yesterday to discuss various questions of interest to the travelling public and to themselves, as well as the prevention of crime and immorality about hotels. Mr. George Wright represented Toronto.

Berlin's First Meatless Day Was Regarded As Historic Occasion

November 2nd was the first meatless day in Berlin and it was an event that will become historic in the empire's capital. All the butcher shops were closed and even many of the delicatessen shops did no business. The many rathskellers, beer saloons, wine saloons and other places where there is a mid day lunch served free with the drinks were deserted. Berliners are big meat eaters and his first meatless day was a great hardship to them. The big restaurants and hotels had prepared especially for the day and the following menu from one of the hostleries is typical of the bill of fare for the meatless lunch and dinner:

Potato soup	.40 marks
sago soup	.40 "
Salmon	1.50 "
Shellfish	.90 "
Halibut	1.25 "
Spinach with egg	.80 "
Asparagus with salmon	1.75 "
Potato balls with fruit	.90 "
Spinach with fried potatoes	.75 "
Fish balls with cabbage	1.25 "

In the many small beer saloons pea soup and spinach with macaroni and cheese constituted the bill of fare.

Vegetables and potatoes are plentiful, according to the Berliner Tageblatt, and the price of potatoes has been fixed by the government at four pfennings a pound. A severe penalty is imposed on any dealer who charges a higher price.

COUNCIL AWARD CONTRACT FOR COLLECTION OF GARBAGE

Matter Was Dealt With at a Special Meeting That Was Held Last Evening—By-law Relating to the Contract Was Missing—Report of Property Committee Adopted.

A special meeting of the City Council was held last evening when the appended report of the Property committee, of which Ald. McIntyre is chairman, was adopted. The report was drafted in the following terms:

Your Property committee beg leave to report as follows:

1. Your committee received further information in regard to the garbage collection matter and in consideration of Mr. E. K. Graham having bought a great deal of material and plant for going on with the work, believing that he would be favoured with the contract, this committee again recommends that the contract be given to him for the year 1916 at $6,250 and that the contract be amended so that it will not require the contractor to provide a refuse ground for garbage under any circumstances, Mr. Graham to give sureties satisfactory to the Mayor and the Chairman of this Committee.

2. We recommend that all future requests for tenders have in them the condition, wherever practicable, that the tenderers shall be residents of the city and also that in future tenderers be required to make a deposit with their tenders to be forfeited if they refuse to take the contract if it is awarded to them.

3. We recommend that tenders be called for by advertisement for the ashes from the incinerator for the year 1916, the ashes to be taken from the incinerator yard weekly and each tender to be accompanied by a cash deposit or marked cheque for the amount of the tender.

4. We recommend that the Sanitary Inspector ascertain upon what terms he can procure a refuse ground and get the work of the removal of night soil done and report to this committee.

5. That this Committee recommend that the salary of C. A. G. Spence Sanitary Inspector, be $1,000 per year from Dec. 1st, 1915, to include the services of his horse when required in the performance of his duties.

"Well Worth the Money."

It will be noted that the above report includes a clause increasing the salary of Sanitary Inspector Spence from $700 to $1,000 a year. "Sanitary Inspector Spence is well worth the money," observed Ald. Dobbin.

When the time came to deal with the by-law relating to the garbage contract, the document was missing. A search was instituted, but without results. Mayor Buller took a vote of confidence and assured Mr. Graham that he would be justified in going ahead with his arrangements to take care of the work as the Council would pass the by-law at a subsequent meeting.

A Message to Thin Weak Scrawny Folks

An Easy Way to Gain 10 to 20 Pounds of Solid, Healthy Permanent Flesh.

Thin, nervous, undeveloped men and women everywhere are heard to say, "I can't understand why I do not get fat. I eat plenty of good nourishing food." The reason is just this: You cannot get fat, no matter how much you eat, unless your digestive organs assimilate the fat-making elements of your food instead of passing them out through the body as waste.

What is needed is a means of gently urging the assimilative functions of the stomach and intestines to absorb the oils and fats and hand them over to the blood, where they may reach the starved, shrunken, run-down tissues, and build them up. The thin person's body is like a dry sponge—eager and hungry for the fatty materials of which it is being deprived by the failure of the alimentary canal to take them from the food. A splendid way of working to overcome this pitiful waste of flesh building elements and to stop the leakage of fats, is to try Sargol, the famous flesh building agent that has been so widely sold in America in recent years. Take a little Sargol tablet with every meal and see if your cheeks don't quickly fill out and rolls of firm, healthy, flesh form over your body, covering each bony angle and projecting point.

All good druggists have Sargol or can get it from their wholesaler, and will refund your money if you are not satisfied with the gain in weight it produces as stated on the guarantee in each large package. It is inexpensive, easy to take and highly efficient.

If you find a druggist who is unable to supply you send $1.00 to Sargol Co., 74 St. Antoine St., Montreal, and a complete ten days treatment will be sent you postpaid.

NOTE:—Sargol is recommended only as a flesh builder and while excellent results in cases of nervous indigestion, etc., have been reported, care should be taken about using it unless a gain of weight is desired.

Accused Of Tossing Woman Over Cliff

Husband's Alleged Accomplice Has Made Complete Confession, Police Officials Say.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 10.—Charles D. Etchison, said to have singed a confession in Chicago that he was an accomplice of Frederick T. Price in the alleged murder of Price's wife, November 28, 1914, went with officers to the place where he said Mrs. Price was thrown over a cliff.

Etchison, a traveling salesman of Washington, and Price are under indictment for murder, but Price says that he is innocent of the death of his wife, Mary Fridley Price, a member of a leading Minnesota family. Price said his wife accidentally fell over the cliff. After her death, he sued the city of Minneapolis for $7,500 damages for leaving the roadside on the river bank unprotected. He later withdrew the suit. Price is also charged with bigamy, having had, it is said, three wives without a divorce.

Etchison said that he and Price then descended to the bank. Etchison said he heard a sound that made him think Price was beating his wife with a stone.

Mrs. Price is said to have received $50,000 from her father the day before her death.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 10.—Frederick T. Price in his cell in the county jail here yesterday, said the confession alleged to have been made by Charles D. Etchison that he (Etchison) and Price had murdered the latter's wife, was untrue.

SUFFRAGE MIGHT NOT CHANGE CONDITIONS

Even Under Present Arrangements Women Must Often Decide Affairs

Even Under Present Arrangements Women Must Often Decide Affairs.

"Don't you think," said the village agitator, "that we need a change of government?" the independent elector mused for a space. Then he replied: "Wait a minute, and I'll ask Mother." There comes a time in every man's life when he discovers that he depends on his wife for some of his opinions. He may decide business and political problems, yet it may be taken for granted that the combined knowledge and intuition of a woman concerning any question of home efficiency and artistic beauty is more likely to be correct than the snap judgment of a male expert on household decoration. Such snap judgments are not uncommon. Consider, for example, the eminent pianist's fervent testimonial concerning the instrument he has played. Even supposing that the opinion were spontaneous, what would be its value in comparison with the opinion of a woman who had lived in the same house with a piano? The manufacturers of the Gourlay Piano have never sought or negotiated such a testimonial They have never found it necessary to resort to such meretricious and misleading publicity. They rest on the opinion of the woman in the home She knows the supreme merit of the instrument, its tone quality, its beauty of case, its durability. She makes up her own mind, then makes up that of her husband, and thus assists the Gourlay to spread a sounding name abroad. Call at the office of J. O. Fife, 341½ Water Street, and see one great Canadian accomplishment.

SHORTER SKIRTS SPRING EDICT OF FASHION

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Dec. 6.—At the closing session of the National Cloak, Suit and Skirt Association's convention here to-day it was decided by an overwhelming vote that skirts will be even shorter from now on. A roar of applause greeted the decision, and as no one in the hall had uttered a sound it is believed that some wretches passing by must have received an earful of the good news.

"Short, Full and Youthful" is to be the Spring Skirt Song, and tucks, frills and ripples will add to the appearance of fulness. These features probably will be put at the bottom of the skirt, where they will get the most attention. Checks and stripes in all materials will be fashionable, and pockets on skirts and cuffs on sleeves will give the spring modes boldness and distinction. Middle aged women are to dress very much after the fashion of college girls, as they have been doing for years in some localities. Everyone is to have a sport coat.

Owing to the fact that the German navy is in dry dock and it is impossible to get any dyestuffs from the Fatherland there will be less variety in colours and more variety in cut for the season. Everything is to be short, from socks to reefers. Modes, very pretty ones, showed the new styles today and ten or twelve delegates put the lighted end of their cigars in their mouths during the exhibition.

GERMAN CHANCELLOR'S SPEECH PUTS AN END TO TALK OF AN EARLY PEACE

British Press Says Peace Prospects Are Now More Remote Than Ever as Result of Chancellor's Address--"Should Be Plain to the Wildest Pacifist, Even to Henry Ford That There Can Be No Peace Until Germany's Power is Broken Once For All" is the Comment of the London Globe."

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR BULLETINS

BERLIN, Via Amsterdam, Dec. 10.—The Socialist members of the Reichstag decided in party causus to-day that the reply of Chancellor Von Bethmann Holeweg to peace queries was entirely satisfactory. They voted that there was therefore no reason for hostility toward the Government. This resolution, it is understood, passed caucus by a large majority, a few Radicals, including Dr. Leibknecht, dissenting.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—Chancellor Von Bethmann Holeweg's speech in the German Reichstag yesterday has practically put an end to all talk of an early peace, so far as Great Britain is concerned. Several high officials, interviewed to-day, said the declarations of the German Chancellor should convince even the most ardent pacificist that the end of the war is not in sight. The London newspapers not only took the same view, but a certain portion of the press declared that peace prospects are more remote as the result of Bethmann Holeweg's speech than at any time since the war began. "We have no delusions left," said the London Star. "We accept proudly a foremost place in this war of liberation. We have counted cost and weighed the sacrifices. We have endured much and are ready to endure to the end."

British officials, interviewed, indignantly resented the attempt of the German Chancellor to throw the responsibility for the continuance of the war upon the Allies. They said that the Chancellor's speech was plainly designed for home, not foreign, consumption, and construed as an effort to appease the growing demand in Germany for peace.

Their statements, and attitude of the London press to-day, apparently correctly represents the attitude of the nation. The newspapers scoffed at Bethmann Holeweg's statement that Germany is invincible, and will, if the war is continued, take more tribute from the Allies. "This attitude, which he either feels or deems it desirable to assume," said this afternoon's Globe, "should make it plain to the wildest pacifist, even to Henry Ford, that there can be no peace until Germany's power is broken once for all.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—The Government will learn early next week whether the voluntary system of bringing the British armies up to the number required hos proven a success. It was officially stated to-day that no extension of the time limit of Lord Derby's campaign, which expires Saturday night, will be granted. Lord Derby will report the first of next week the results of his systematic house to house canvass in an effort to obtain the necessary enlistments. If the recruiting campaign proves a failure the Government is expected to give serious attention at once to a demand for conscription.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—Athens newspapers publish extensive reports of the movements of the Entente troops in Macedonia. Some of these newspapers state that the French have been routed by the Bulgarians. In Ministerial circles it is said, however, that the Allies are withdrawing in conformity to pre-arranged plans, and have sustained no losses.

BERLIN, via Amsterdam, Dec. 10.—German newspapers to-day printed for the first time the news that the United States has demanded the recall of Captains Von Papen and Boy-Ed, the German military and naval attaches. No comment was made.

LONDON, Dec. 10. — Constantinople despatches to-day declare that the natives have risen in rebellion in Tripoli,, which Italy recently took from Turkey, and have captured large bodies of Italian troops whose casualties have been in the neighbourhood of six thousand. According to the Turkish despatch, the capital of Tripoli, is in danger of capture by the natives.

PARIS (French Official) Dec. 10.—'In a grenade combat yesterday the German troops were repulsed beyond the crest south of St. Souplet," said the official communique this afternoon, dealing with the Champagne fighting.

COUNCIL WILL ISSUE DEBENTURES

Money Voted for Patriotic Fund Will Be Spread Over a Number of Years

At last night's meeting of the City Council, a by-law was passed authorizing a grant of $20,000 to the Patriotic Fund. The Council voted in favour of raising the money by means of debentures issued for a period of years.

A by-law exempting from taxation for a period of years the manufacturing property now occupied by the Peterborough Metal Products Company was approved. The exemption will amount to approximately $400 a year. The company has leased the premises formerly occupied by the Canadian Cordage Company for a period of three years, with an option to purchase.

The Council decided to send a letter of sympathy to ex-Ald. Johnston, who recently suffered a paralytic stroke. Ald. Dobbin, on behalf of the Council, expressed regret at ex-Ald. Johnston's condition, and concluded with a striking tribute to his worth as a citizen.

$46,500 WAS THE TOTAL UP TO NOON

The returns coming in up to noon for the Patriotic Fund indicate that the amount asked for will be gained handsomely, and possibly, like the Dominion loan, be over-subscribed, as both should be. The total figures up to one o'clock are $46,500. This does not include the County grant of $20,000.

THE U.S. NOTE TO AUSTRIA AMOUNTS TO AN ULTIMATUM

United States Places Itself in a Position to Sever Diplomatic Relations If Austria Does Not Accede to Her Demands

A STRINGENT NOTE

Examiner Special:

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—America's note to Austria on the Ancona was practically an ultimatum, it was learned on high authority to-day.

It was stated that this country has placed itself in a position to sever diplomatic relations with Vienna if Austria does not accede to the demands.

It is understood that President Wilson has also decided that the Austrian consul, Von Nuber, at New York must go. The evidence against this official has been accumulating for some time, but as in the case of Von Papen, action has been postponed, it is understood, for reasons best known to the administration.

The note to Austria is even more stringent in its terms than the strongest message sent to Germany on the Lusitania incident.

According to the State Department officials, the Ancona note not only sets forth every demand of the latter document, but exceeds it in demanding punishment.

Austria is asked to award reparation for damages, give assurances as to future conduct, disavow the sinking, and punish the commander.

There was sufficient evidence, officials pointed out, to justify the belief that regardless of his order concerning the sinking of the vessel, the captain had been unduly careless and indifferent in his treatment of passengers, and his general observance of the obligations imposed upon him.

An immediate reply is requested.

No more delays such as the Lusitania case will be tolerated.

THE WEATHER

The thermometer this morning was down to 10 degrees above zero, but no new temperatures have been registered as yet. Last year the first note came very early, namely on November 29th. The year previous (1913) zero was first registered on December 17th.

CHRISTMAS NUMBER OF EXAMINER TO-MORROW

The Christmas number of The Examiner, which will be issued to-morrow, is particularly of military nature, as fitting in a war-time issue. A feature will be an eight-page pictorial section giving pictures of many of the Peterborough soldiers who have appeared in the casualty lists, and also photographs of Peterborough boys in the 2nd, 21st, 39th, 59th, and 93rd Infantry Battalions, in the C.F.A., and the Mounted Rifles. The section includes a page of Peterborough officers on active service. In the magazine section of to-morrow's issue are group pictures of the officers and men of the Peterborough City and County Battalion, and other military pictures will be found of interest. As a souvenir of Peterborough's share in filling up Canada's army, the number should be worth presenting. There are other interesting features as well. The price of the number is 2c as usual, while a limited number may be secured in mailing tubes ready to send away for 5c. Better order early if you want one to send to your friends

TWO PETERBORO' BOYS OFFICIALLY REPORTED ON CASUALTY LIST

Pte. Maitland Wood, of the 4th Battalion and Pte. Percy Grimmer of the 25th, Formerly of the 39th Are Wounded---Further Lakefield Recruits to Train at Lakefield---Systematic Recruiting Campaign Planned For Peterboro'---Band Instruments Expected on December 29th---To-day's Military News.

Mrs. J. C. Wood, 777 Water Street, was to-day officially notified that her son, Private Maitland Wood was admitted to No. 3 Stationary Hospital on 4th December, suffering from a gunshot wound in the leg. Private Wood is a members of the 4th Battalion, First Canadian Expeditionary Force. He enlisted in Brantford. Up until about two years ago Pte. Wood was employed in the local branch of the Royal Bank. Among his many associates he was known as "Tony." He was a graduate of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute and a member of the local branch of the Y.M.C.A.

Pte. Wood was with the 4th Battalion all through the hard fighting at Langemarck, and took part in the famous charge in which Lt.-Col. Birchall was killed.

Official Notice.

Mrs. Long, George Street, has received the following wire in regard to her son, Lance-Corp. Fred Long, of the 16th Battalion:

"Sincerely regret to inform you 29112, Lance-Corp. Frederick Long, 16th Battalion, is officially reported returned prisoner of war, wounded, from Germany. He has been admitted to Queen Alexandra Military Hospital, Millbank, London, Dec. 7. Wounded severely. Will send further particulars when received.

"Adjt.-General."

In this connection, a cablegram from a Toronto Star correspondent states that Lance-Corp. Long has suffered the loss of a leg. His leg was broken by a bullet during the battle of Ypres, and as he lay on the battlefield several days before being picked up by the Germans, the limb became infected.

Pte. Gummer Wounded.

On to-day's casualty list appears the name of Pte. Percy Gummer of the 25th Battalion, who is reported wounded. Pte. Gummer enlisted with the 57th detachment in the 39th Battalion here, and drilled with the quota under Capt. C. Ross Cameron and Lieut. Eastwood. When the 39th went to England he was selected in a draft that was sent to France to reinforce the 25th Battalion. He is the second local soldier in the 39th to appear on the casualty list. Pte. Gummer's relatives live in London, England. While in Peterborough he boarded at the home of Mrs. Sharman, 184 George Street.

Capt. Bygott of Lakefield, one of the officers of the 93rd Battalion, has been meeting with such success in his recruiting efforts that in spite of the large number of ne men that Lakefield has already contributed to the 93rd Battalion, he expects to raise an additional quota large enough to be billeted in Lakefield for the winter and trained there. Capt. Bygott has opened a recruiting office in a vacant store in Lakefield, and this will be fitted out as a headquarters for the recruits who are stationed there. The genial officer knows everyone in the northern part of the county, and may be expected to secure many more recruits for the 93rd. Lakefield has made a grand showing in recruiting, and are entitled to the benefit of having troops billeted there. The Examiner wishes Capt. Bygott and Lieut. Carter every success in their efforts.

As announced some time ago, Norwood is raising a quota of at least 25 for the 93rd Battalion. As roughly outlined, the plans of the officers of the battalion for the completion of the 93rd by next spring are that one company should be raised throughout the county, with the Lakefield and Norwood detachments as a nucleus. From the rate at which recruits are coming in it is hoped that by New Year's A and B Companies and the staff will be completed. Peterborough city will be asked to furnish another complete company in the next couple of months, while the fourth is being completed in the rural districts.

Peterborough young men who have not answered the call of King and Country are going to have an opportunity before long of discussing the matter with some of the officers of the 93rd. Lieut. Snider and the other officers of the Peterborough Battalion who have been assigned for recruiting duty, are arranging the details of a systematic canvass of the eligible young men. They will commence with single men and will interview them personally. The Speakers' Patriotic League did a good work by leaving cards at the homes of the men of military age, asking why they had not enlisted, and now the 93rd officers are going to talk the question over face to face with the men whom they think should be in the ranks of the 93rd.

TO-DAY'S ORDERS.

The following Battalion Orders by Lt.-Col. T. J. Johnston, Officer Commanding 93rd Overseas Battalion, C.E.F., were read to-day:

Number 39.

Patriotic Fund Thermometer Had Reached the $41,000 Mark When the Returns Were All In Last Night—Committee Hard at Work To-day to Make Last Day the Best of All.

NOTES OF THE CAMPAIGN

At 8.15 last evening precisely, an enthusiastic member of the working committee of the Patriotic Fund climbed a stool, flourished a paint brush, and marked a red streak up the centre of the big thermometer until it stopped at the figures indicating that $41,000.00 had been secured for the fund. It was an impressive moment. The interested spectators waited in anxiety to see whether the amateur painter would topple off the stool or run the mark up beyond the record. He did neither. Calmly and without emotion he got down and remarked that we'd never let the old flag fall. Cheers were given. So much of the race had been run. We were entering into the last quarter, and Friday is the home-stretch, and the teams are running neck and neck. This illustration is an attempt to use a sporting simile. It is rather ragged Might have been better if the publicity force had dipped into baseball Anyway, you get the idea that things are fairly humming.

The gift for the day of a number of cars is a distinct help. But between the rush to get from place to place, the waits outside, and the anxiety of the driver that the radiator shall not freeze, the position of the driver is not a happy one. But we must persevere even if a few radiators are busted. All great works are accomplished through tribulation.

The reading of returns last night resulted in a scene of orderly disorder hard to beat. Between assertions of theft, chicanery, unscrupulour mendacity, positive swiping, deliberate prevarication, and a lot of other terrible crimes, the announcements went on. Almost every team captain had tales of ruthless thelving from the avails of his route that would bring tears to the eyes of a policeman. John Turner was especially vociferous in his denials, thereby creating the idea that guilt was his portion. Mr. Dunsford was busy fending off assertions that should never have been thrust at a bank manager, but Walter Green affirmed that they caught him with the goods on him. That settled it, though Mr. Dunsford tried hard to prove an alibi. Case carried to the next court.

Having a large and corpulent voice and standing six feet two in his socks, Adjt. McElhiney had to be heard. In fact, there is positively no use anyone else attempting to shove in a word while the Adjt. has the floor. He read the congregation a lesson on financial probity and denounced appropriation, except as a sort of experiment. Just for practice, as it were. He was understood to say that honesty was the best policy, even in fishing, for he'd tried both. His remarks were received with applause, as is quite proper in any financially upright community. We can all approve certain things, even if we do not participate. The meeting was a half-hour of good-natured raillery, protestations, and real fun. The plaster on the ceiling was loosened.

Then the lists were called for and the results of the day's work announced. As expected, it was ahead of the day before. Successes and reverses. Hard work for a moderate amount. A large subscription that pulled up the gross amount.

A BRANCH TO BE FORMED HERE TO ASSIST SOLDIERS

Public Meeting to Organize for the Soldiers' Aid Commission Will Be Held in Peterborough in a Few Days

AN IMPORTANT MATTER

TORONTO, Dec. 10.— Public meetings to organise local branches of the Soldiers' Aid Commission will be called in Ottawa, London, Kingston, Hamilton, Oshawa, Brantford, Peterborough, Windsor, Stratford, and St. Catharines within the next few days.

"The idea is that when we have six or more soldiers returning, to one place, we notify the town or city, and ask them to form a branch," said Chairman W. D. McPherson. "The chances are that if a town has six or more men in the present lot of soldiers returning, the proportion will be the same for subsequent lots, and there will be permanent need of a local branch commission to place these men."

To date the Ontario Soldiers' Aid Commission have six hundred men on their books, and a good proportion of these have been placed in permanent paying positions. "We are getting men placed practically as fast as they come," said Mr. McPherson. "Fifty-five men have been placed in good positions locally."

Many of the men applying to the commission are suffering from nervous breakdown and have lost their ability to earn money. One man yesterday was so nervous he couldn't speak, and had to write his part in the conversation. The shock of battle outlasts the healing of the actual wounds in some cases. The effect of the gas at St. Julien is also still observable in the nervous weakness of some of the men.

This is a most important matter. Already Peterborough has some fifteen soldiers back from the front and some of them are now in a position to accept employment. Two of them have re-enlisted with the 93rd, and another has accepted Col. Hemming's offer of a position on guard work. Soon Peterborough will have quite a large number of her sons home from the firing line and it is none too soon to consider ways and means to place these heroes in permanent positions.

G. T. R. Shops At Pt. St. Charles Are On Fire

Examiner Special:

MONTREAL, Dec. 10.—The Grand Trunk Railway shops at Points St. Charles are on fire. A double alarm was turned in, and the brigade is now there.

The fire was discovered first in the tube shop, but it spread rapidly to the blacksmith shop. Just now it is breaking out in the erecting shop.

"Bad," said Grand Trunk officials. The cause is unknown.

HOME-MADE TROUBLES.

Germany may be right in one way in declaring that the United States is responsible for the troubles represented by the interference of German officials and German sympathizers, with her internal affairs—disorganizing industrial operations and scouting and defying the power of the government of the sovereign people. But not for the reasons Germany urges—because the United States has not maintained an "honest neutrality." Uncle Sam has been rather too neutral. He has, as it looks to onlookers, by a policy of timidity and surrender to German outrage, rather encouraged German outrage. To a certain degree, and in principle, Germany has as much outraged United States neutrality as it has outraged the neutrality of Belgium. Murdering, out of sheer malice and wickedness, the citizens of the United States on the high seas was, one would have thought, more a casus belli, something more to be resented by the protest of force, than a demand for a meek and lowly protest by polite "notes," ineffective against Germany's thick-skinned sensibilities as the thrust of a walking stick against the steel walls of a super-Dreadnought. Fully admitting that the United States knows its own business, and can justify its own course, it may be suggested as a mild matter of opinion that if President Wilson had from the beginning taken the stiff-backed attitude his recent words seem to indicate he has assumed, a good deal of the domestic troubles and treasonable practices that the country is suffering from, would have been prevented.

EXTEND THE PRINCIPLE.

The transactions in which Mr. Garland of Carleton and Mr. Foster of King's, Nova Scotia, were involved cannot be palliated. Representing the people in Parliament, they traded in war supplies for their own advantage. In conformity with the standards which Sir Robert Borden has determined to maintain in public life they had to resign their seats. Liberal newspapers profess that they will now be candidates for re-election. If so they should be defeated. Certainly they should not be accepted as the candidates of the Conservative party. They should not, and we believe, will not, have the support of the Government.—Toronto News.

These are righteous sentiments; but we do not hear the News demanding that Hon. Mr. Hearst, leader of the Conservatives in Ontario, and the Premier of the Province, should measure up to the standard of Sir Robert Borden — act "in conformity with the standards which Sir Robert Borden," according to the News, "has determined to maintain in public life." The offence against public decency, against common honesty, against the country and the Empire, in traitorously weakening the offensive of Canada in the war by scheming to exert undue profits in the purchase of army supplies, is, in principle, in no way different from the action of Mr. Fallis with the same effect, and with the same disregard of honest principles, and the same traitorous weakening of Canada's offensive. If, in his sphere of authority, Sir Robert Borden repudiated the support of Messrs. Garland and Foster, and enforced their resignation of a prostituted responsibility, is not Premier Hearst constrained to act? Our public men should be men we can trust. We cannot expect that, like Caesar's wife they should be above suspicion, for we have had so many examples of public men betraying their trust in connection with providing supplies for this war, that their defects of character and offences of conduct reflect upon the character of honest men to the extent that we may easily have unjust and unjustified suspicion against men of the highest probity. It is a stinging rebuke to Canadian methods that the British Government has been compelled in self-defence to defend itself against Canadian methods, to take the matter of the making of munitions in Canada into its own hands. Let justice though the heavens fall—should it complicate matters by doing justice though governments fall — if shielding our unworthy supporters will conduce to that result.

THE SUPREME CIVIC INTEREST

The City of Stratford boasts, through the mouth of its sanitary inspector, that it is "the cleanest and healthiest city in Ontario." We hope its boast is true, but Peterborough is not a negligible quantity, either, in such comparison. The latest official government records show that Stratford's death rate, with a population of 16,570 was 11.2 per cent, and that of Peterborough with 19,666, was 12.9—not much of an advantage. The death rate is not, however, an accurate standard of judgment in determining the health of a city. Stratford is a comparatively small city, and Peterborough has many more persons who come here at a rather advanced age to end their days, which would have an effect upon the death rate. We have two large hospitals that attract many outside patients, and the deaths of these persons should not be credited to Peterborough's sanitary conditions. A better test is the disease record. This year in Peterborough there has not yet been recorded a single death from what are commonly regarded as communicable or contagious diseases. If Stratford can boast a cleaner bill of health than Peterborough it is to be congratulated; if it has a more capable and painstaking Health Inspector than Peterborough, it is again to be congratulated. Inspector Spence has done good work in Peterborough and for cause. He has the educated intelligence, technical knowledge of his work, and the tact that, added to industry and devotion to duty, give good results; and it is doubtful if any department of the civic service owes more in the way of good results, to individual initiative and service than our health department. The City Council last night by advancing Inspector Spence's salary from $700 to $1,000, took a long overdue action, and won credit to themselves by recognizing good service, and showing intelligent appreciation of the importance of the supreme interest of the city—the public health.

CANADA'S PART IN THE WAR.

How splendidly Canada has risen to the responsibilities of war has been described in detail in correspondence published in the Herald. Now comes the news that Canada's $50,000,000 internal loan, the first to be floated in the Dominion, has been oversubscribed to an extent that warrants the authorities issuing bonds for twice the amount originally contemplated.

Coincident with this comes announcement that Canada's Steel Committee, which was formed to promote munitions manufacture, has been displaced by an Imperial Munitions Committee, this being deemed necessary because of the notable development of the industry inaugurated by the Steel Committee. More than three hundred and twenty separate manufacturing establishments in Canada are now engaged in making war supplies and the industrial army that has been built up promises to be an asset of as much value to the Dominion as is the army of splendid militants sent to the battlefields of Europe by Sir Sam Hughes.

Americans should feel, and do feel, deep interest in the fine part their brother Americans at the North are playing in this world crisis. And almost as much as the sons of Canada themselves do Americans feel pride in the achievements of the "white Gurkhas," for these reflect honour not orly upon Canada but upon the whole of this continent.—New York Herald.

RUMANIANS FOR DELAY.

Sympathize with French, but Fear for Their Own Country.

GENEVA, Dec. 10.—During the past two months there has been a considerable veering of public opinion in Rumania in favor of the neutrality policy of Premier Bratiano, says the correspondent at Bucharest of the Journal de Geneva. The writer adds:

"This has been largely due to the Austro-German invasion of Serbia and to the fear of Rumanians of undergoing the lot of the Belgians and Serbians. A majority of the ruling classes sympathizes with France and hopes that she will be victorious. Many Rumanians conciliating this sentiment with admiration of the strength and force of her resistance to Germany.

"A greater number detests Russia and has no confidence in her army. All Rumanians however, agree in desiring national unity. In a word, the majority of Rumanians thinks Premier Bratiano has done well to wait, for it is believed the war will be a long one, and that the small country has not the strength or means of resistance that the great powers have.

"All are convinced that Premier Bratiano will join the Quadruple Entente, but only when he can oppose to the 800,000 Austro-Hungarians, Germans, Bulgarians, and Turks an army of equal or superior strength.

"Rumania's intervention will be dependent upon the entry of the Russians into Bulgaria. Italian intervention in the Balkans is regarded with scepticism."

READERS OF THE Peterborough Examiner SHOULD JOIN THE CHRISTMAS CLUB

CO-OPERATIVE—LIMITED TO 50 MEMBERS. MEMBERSHIP FEE $1. FEE REFUNDED IF YOU DECIDE NOT TO PURCHASE OR IF YOUR APPLICATION IS REJECTED. THE INSTRUMENTS ARE SUPPLIED BY THE OLD ESTABLISHED HOUSE OF J. M. GREENE.

Why Not Decide on That Christmas Gift Now?

The club was organized to make early Christmas shopping worth while. It was formed in order that Christmas piano buyers, by co-operation in ordering their Christmas present a few weeks before Christmas, instead of during the holiday rush, might secure certain savings, privileges and advantages not otherwise obtainable. The club features are offered through Greene's. It is worth something to a house as large as Greene's to have their Christmas trade spread over two months. And now if you act at once, you may be one of the 50 to whom Greene will give these unusual club features on any piano or player-piano that they sell. If you are thinking of a suitable Christmas present, you should by all means investigate this club thoroughly.

Is Germany Preparing a Blow Direct Against British Empire?

The news from the Balkan theatre would seem to indicate that Germany, having failed to crush either Russia or France, is now preparing to aim a terrific blow at the British Empire. One report has it that she is equipping a strong Turkish army for the invasion of Egypt, in the hope that the Egyptians would revolt and join with the Turks in a religious war against the British. Another report is that Germany is preparing a huge Teuton-Turk army for the invasion of India, and that she has Persia covered with agents who are endeavouring to get the Persians to join in such an adventure.

If either of these views be true, it is a tremendous task on which Germany is embarking, but one which, if successful, might go far to give her victory in the war. The loss of Egypt would mean the ruin of British prestige in the East and the Near East, and the supremacy of Germany in the Eastern Mediterranean. On the other hand nothing is more certain than that both France and Italy must, out of sheer self-protection, launch forces into Egypt to counter such a stroke. The joint efforts of the Allies might conceivably turn such an enterprise into a colossal disaster for Germany. As for an attack on India, that would mean such vast preparation and such terrific and sustained efforts that the effect might easily be to hasten the exhaustion of Germany and the breakdown of Turkish resistance, already weakened by years of war.

While Germany may be concentrating for such a blow at the British Empire, we may be quite sure that the Allies will prepare events much nearer home to demand attention. Nothing is more certain than that Russia will come back. One of the official German excuses for hacking through Belgium in an endeavour to crush France down by a lightning blow was that it was necessary to turn from a stricken France and crush Russia before Russia could begin to call up her unlimited manpower. Britain's giant army, and the great armies of France and Italy have neither of them yet exerted their maximum power, nor have they yet shown the Germans the full meaning of the vast resources of guns and ammunition which the freedom of the seas is bringing them.

We may look for dramatic surprises in the Balkans as a result of Germany's desperate attempt to avert defeat by striking the British Empire in a vital spot. But while surprises may come there, we may be quite sure that the Allies are preparing them in other quarters as well. Every one of the strategical objectives of Germany has been defeated so far. Now that she is weakened by war, there need be no undue fears that she will succeed now. Her murder-at-sea policy made a great sensation, but it ended only in advertising the impotence of her navy. Her Balkan enterprises may be dramatic, but for her the danger is that they will end the hollowness of the German pretensions.—Montreal Herald.

A Success.

Mr. Brown's coloured valet desired to entertain some of his friends, and his master contributed generously to the cause. The next morning Mr. Brown asked Mose if his party had been a success. Mose drew himself up a couple of inches above his usual height.

"Was it a success, suh?" he exclaimed delightedly. "Well, suh, it sho' was! Dey was sixteen invited and twenty dat come."—New York Evening Post.

Passports Needed If You Are Going To The Old Country

TORONTO, Dec. 9.—All Canadians intending to visit Europe in future must carry with them the identification certificate issued within the past few days by the Department of Immigration at Ottawa, and which may be obtained from the Immigration Office of every Canadian centre.

This morning the offices of the local steamship companies were inundated with visitors and 'phone enquiries following the report from New York of the delay of the White Star liner Adriatic for an hour yesterday and the prevention of 100 passengers, mostly Canadian women bound for England, from sailing, all for lack of the passports required by the new British regulation.

"We had a wire this morning from our agent," was the report given at the White Star office in Toronto to-day, "that the Toronto passengers got away safely. The New York report is probably greatly exaggerated. All passengers who carried with them either the old passport or the formerly required 'documentary evidence of nationality,' and a photograph attached, were allowed to proceed, and all the passengers who booked here had this. There were about 150 passengers from Toronto and the vicinity, mostly third-class."

That the only possible passengers delayed would be some who had bought tickets from agents in the country who had not known of even the former regulations, was the opinion of the A. F. Webster Company.

"Every passenger buying a ticket from us, or from any other regular agency, is informed of the requirements," was the statement made. "The last regulation was an order-in-Council, cabled to us on December 1, requiring 'Passports or satisfactory documents establishing the nationality of all British subjects over 14 years of age arriving in the United Kingdom'."

The first passport was an official document, but the second, or documentary evidence, could consist of a birth certificate or a letter from Mayor or reeve bearing his official stamp, or a letter sworn before a notary who could vouch for the traveller's nationality, citizenship, and so forth. Both documents were required to have a photograph attached. According to the White Star Company in Toronto, all the Canadian passengers booking with them had this evidence with them, and all having these documents were allowed to go on the Adriatic.

But for all future travel the new passport must be carried. This consists of a large, official identification certificate giving age, nationality, and other particulars of the applicant. There is no charge made, and all that the applicant must do is to satisfy the immigration officer that he is a bona-fide British subject. His photograph must be attached, together with his signature. The signature must be written in the presence of the immigration officer and sworn to by witnesses.

All the larger centres have already been supplied with these new passports, including Toronto, Hamilton, and London.

It is expected that any Canadians who may have been left in New York will have their passage transferred to the Cunard liner Cameronia, which sails on Friday next.

A BOOM IN MARRIAGES AND IN MALE BIRTHS

English People Have Rushed to the Altar During the Past Season.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—All marriage records in England and Wales were broken during the quarter ended September 30, when the rate reached 21.8 per thousand of population. This is the highest rate recorded during any quarter since the establishment of civil registration. The next highest rate was 21.4 per thousand in the fourth quarter of 1865.

The number of male births shows a steady increase over that of female births. During the first quarter of this year 1,082 males to every 1,000 females were born. During the second quarter male births numbered 1,043 to every thousand females. The third quarter showed 1,065 males to every 1,000 females.

The Auxiliary Pumping Plant Was Pressed Into Commission For the First Time To-day

Waterwheels Were Closed Down Owing to Anchor Ice—Trouble Was Anticipated and the Steam Plant in Readiness—Interest on the $25,000 Investment Takes the Form of Insurance—Fire Hazzard is Lessened as a Result.

The good judgment shown by the Utilities Commission in providing this city with an auxiliary pumping plant was substantiated this morning when the plant was pressed into acual service for he first time since its installation. "Frazil," or what is commonly known as anchor ice, was the cause of the tie-up that affected not only the waterworks pumping station, but the various power houses along the Trent waterway. At a late hour last night the men in charge of the pumping station, discovered that the gates were beginning to set. This is one of the initial warnings and is usually followed by a temporary suspension of operations. To a city with twelve or fifteen million dollars worth of property this is a serious thing. It means that should a fire break out there is no water with which to extinguish it. On 1st, 2nd and 3rd of December last year the water supply was shut off for a period of twelve hours and the situation became so serious that the city found it necessary to send to Toronto for a motor chemical fire engine.

Capacity of Plant.

The Commission then decided that the best interests of the city would be served by providing an auxiliary pumping plant operated by steam. This was subsequently done at a cost of approximately twenty-five thousand dollars. The contract for the plant was awarded to the De Laval Dairy Supply Company and a short time ago the work of installation was completed with the exception of a few finishing touches that have yet to be applied. This morning the inevitable happened and a few minutes after six o'clock found the auxiliary steam plant in actual operation. The capacity of the plant is six million gallons per day, which is one half a million gallons higher than the peak consumption. The caapcity represented by the water wheels is ten and a half millions, while the average daily consumption is in the neighbourhood of three million gallons.

Chairman Present.

Both Mr. T. F. Matthews, chairman of the Commission, and Mr. H. O. Fisk, manager, visited the plant this morning. They were thoroughly pleased with the result and more than ever convinced of its necessity. Anchor ice is soemthing that has puzzled engineers for years, and as yet no successful method of dealing with the evil has been devised. In some cases steam is turned into the racks, but like a number of other similar experiments, it is not always successful. After considering the question from all angles the Commission decided upon an auxiliary steam pumping plant, and the fact that the citizens this morning received an uninterrupted water supply is due to this decision, and the foresight of the Commission. It may be that the plant will not be required more than a few hours each year, yet to be without it might incur a loss of several thousand dollars to the city. As the plant stands, the city is just out the interest, which practically amounts to insurance against potential loss.

Ready For Emergency.

This morning when it was found that the water wheels would be closed down, preparations were made to place the steam plant in commission. This was accomplished within a few minutes after the arrival of Mr. Ross Dobbin, superintendent of the waterworks. Fires are kept under the boiler all the time, so that the plant is always ready for an emergency.

This morning the wheels were only out of commission for about an hour. The temperature raised slightly and the water cleared as a result. A difference of a fraction of a degree is sometimes sufficient to dispel the anchor ice which hangs suspended in the water and clings to anything it comes in contact with. It is sometimes called needle ice.

by platoons. Officers commanding platoons will arrange amongst themselves the hours so as to ensure that each man bathes at least once a week.

T. J. Johnston, Lt.-Col.,
Officer Commanding,
93rd Overseas Battalion, C.E.F.

One Year's Service.

The Examiner is indebted to Pte. E. Lynch of the 93rd Battalion for the privilege of publishing some extracts from an interesting letter received from his brother-in-law, Pte. H. Kelly, of the Royal Dublin Fusiliers. Pte. Kelly, who was wounded at Ypres early in the war, has recently been invalided home from the Dardanelles. He says in part:

"I have been in France, Belgium, Gibraltar, Malta, Egypt, the Dardanelles, and Lemnos, a Greek island, all in twelve months. You will see by the address I am in England again. Soon after I wrote to you I was sent out to the Dardanelles, and after three months there I was sent home with dysentery; but I am glad to say I am nearly all right again. The letter you wrote to me has been halfway around the world. It went to Cork, from there to the Dardanelles, then to Malta, back again to Cork, and then to my home, 200 Viaduct Street, Manchester. Things seem to be very busy here, everybody being on war work, and there seems to be more prosperity in Manchester than ever. Manchester has sent 125,000 men to the Army—not a bad show of patriotism, and far ahead of any other town in comparison to size.

"I must consider myself lucky, although I have seen a good deal of fighting. I thought my number was up many a time, but somebody was praying for me. Even the day before I came away from the Dardanelles I was carrying water from a well with two other men. One was killed and the other wounded, yet I never got a scratch, although I was so ill I was wishing I would be killed. I was that weak I could hardly walk. The day I as wounded in Ypres, our regiment lost 650 men; so I am not going to die yet awhile. I fancy I will die at home."

Writing from "Somewhere in France" to his mother, Mrs. E. Ross Pte. Bob Ross, who will be remembered by baseball fans as one of the Mercantile League backstops in 1914, and who enlisted here with the 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles, and is now at the Front with the 6th C.M.R., says:

"France is not a bad country in the summertime, but there is quite a lot of mud in the winter. I met some of the Peterborough boys here the other day. We were in the trenches last week for a while. I was up on the front line at night with a working party. We were fixing up the trenches. There was nobody hurt and we never lost a man, but the 4th C.M.R. and the 5th C.M.R. lost some."

Word has been received that the new instruments for the 93rd Battalion Band will arrive in Peterborough on December 29th. When Bandmaster Hughes' fine organization make their first appearance with those Class A Bessons, the good things that have already been said about the band will seem mild.

In connection with the Christmas numbers of the Examiner, which will be published to-morrow, we have two apologies to make. One is that space will not permit us to publish all the soldier photographs we have available. The other is that since the military section of the Christmas number was run off the press, there have been a number of promotions made in the 93rd Battalion, and as the section was already printed, it was impossible for us to make the alterations. Therefore, if a full-fledged corporal finds his picture in the Christmas Number to-morrow labelled "Lance-Corporal," etc., he will understand that this was unavoidable on the part of the Examiner.

Friends of the soldiers of the 93rd Battalion need have no worry about how they are getting along in the Armouries. After a week's trial of barrack life, the 93rd are quite contented and complaints are as scarce as beefsteak in Germany. The quarters are roomy and warm, with plenty of air space and facilities for ventilation. The meals are abundant and well cooked; in fact, the manner in which the food is prepared reflects the greatest credit upon the battalion cooks, especially in view of the fact that Sergt.-Cook Wride and Lance-Corp. Bath are away attending the School of Cooking in Kingston. It is plain diet, of course, but wholesome and of good quality, and there seems to be plenty of it, too. "I served ten years in the Navy, and we never got as good chuck as that," is the way one Tommy expressed himself to the Examiner yesterday, and a married man added, "I never could spread as much butter as this on my bread at home." In fact, the Examiner has yet to hear a serious complaint about the meals. Cleanliness in all departments is insisted upon. The tables are scrubbed after each meal and the floors carefully swept, while the appearance of the kitchen would do credit to a well appointed hotel. The men of the battalion are seemingly quite satisfied with their winter home and have settled down like one big happy family.

"All dressed up and no place to go" is the popular song with the 93rd Bugle Band just now. With every department of the Armouries occupied, the buglers have no practice room. By the way, the buglers have ben making steady prgoress, and their new marches on the parades have made a hit. There are fourteen in the Bugle Band at present.

Pte. Naish has been assigned to duty as assistant in the 93rd canteen, succeeding Pte. Gordon Davis, who has been promoted lance-corporal.

The members of the Kill Kare Camp—all of whom are now members of the 93rd Battalion—will hold a dance on the evening of December 17th. The khaki-clad hosts may be counted upon to arrange a most enjoyable evening.

Pte. S. Kitchen, the battalion shoemaker, has established his repair shop in the quartermaster's stores. "Business as usual" is the report he sends out.

When the greater part of Peterborough's population is still in the arms of Morpheus, the boys of the 93rd are out for their morning gallop. Some platoons may be found up north, while others find a canter down south the most enjoyable. After ten or fifteen minutes' alternate running and walking, they come back to the Armouries with rosy cheeks and a man-sized appetite.

As an indication of the spirit that pervades the ranks of the 93rd Battalion, it might be mentioned that many of the single men of the 93rd are subscribing to the Patriotic Fund. Not satisfied with offering their lives they are helping along the fund that is destined to assist the families of their married comrades.

"All the nice girls love a sailor." So the song says, but judging by the number of the 93rd men who are joining the Benedicts, there are many nice girls who like a soldier, too. The banns were published for several weddings yesterday; at least, the Battalion Orders contained the information that the commanding officer had given permission to two of the 93rd to marry.

OTTAWA, Dec. 9.—A new arrangement has been made by General Hughes regarding the examination and care of invalided soldiers returning to Canada. Hitherto they have been sent in batches when transportation was convenient to Quebec, where they have been examiped by the Medical Board of the Department, and an official report upon their condition made.

Quebec has been the discharge depot for returned soldiers, and arrivals have been dispositioned as speedily as possible.

The discharge depot will be Liverpool after this.

The Medical Board of the Militia Department will go to Liverpool, and returning soldiers will be examined there or on their way across the ocean. Medical officers will travel on every vessel carrying Canadian soldiers.

The men will not be held up on this side, but can entrain as soon as they land, which for men from the far West is a particular advantage. Arrangements will also be made to pay the men on the boat or on the other side.

Capt. J. H. Burnham, paymaster of the 93rd Battalion, has received the following letter from Col. Hemming, the commanding officer of the Division:

My Dear Capt. Burnham,

I have your letter of the 8th inst., and in reply am glad to be able to assure you that there is now nothing further for you to do to qualify yourself for overseas service.

You are appointed, and it now only remains for the Department to issue orders for the 93rd Battalion, C.E.F. to proceed overseas, and away you go.

Yours very sincerely,
T. D. B. Hemming, Colonel.

Lt. W. T. Rogers, C.A.V.S., of Peterborough, has been granted the rank of Captain in the Veterinary corps.

Lt.-Col. Johnston and Lieut. Bailey, Assistant Adjutant of the 93rd Battalion, are in Norwood to-day swearing in a number of recruits for the 93rd.

Members of the 93rd Battalion who wish to get some of the Christmas numbers of the Examiner to-morrow can leave their orders with the Armouries newsboy this afternoon. Extra numbers in mailing tubes can be purchased for 5c. Better order early as the number will be in demand.

The Examiner is indebted to Mr. Jas. Kylie, 580 Downie street, for kindly supplying the address of Driver Arthur Searle, which was asked for yesterday. The address is as follows:

Driver Arthur Searle, No. 59980,
2nd Divisional Supply Column,
Base Detail D.S.C.,
Care General Post Office,
Seabrook, Hythe,
Kent, England.

The last letter Mr. Kylie has received from Driver Searle was dated November 18th. The troops were sleeping in tents at that time and found it rather chilly.

The cold weather of the past couple of days left the parade ground at Central Park as slippery as a skating rink

Make Acceptable Gifts

THE things that Men appreciate above everything else are the Practical Gifts of Things for everyday use—things that the recipient would buy for himself.

AND then, too, you raise his opinion of you just another bit higher when you present him with something practical and sensible—something he would buy for himself.

Every time he wears the Scarf, the Shirt, the Overcoat, the Suit, the Sweater Coat, the Hat, the Cap, or the Underwear, or the Hose, or the Bathrobe, or the Suspenders, or the Umbrella, or the Gloves, or the Cravat, or the Muffler, or the Handkerchiefs, which you gave him, he thinks of you.

So, when you select a present for "him" remember men are practical. They cherish the memory of a practical, useful gift, but soon forget the other kind.

And make your gift to "him" something he will really like better than all the other presents he receives—let it be something he can wear.

And don't lose sight of the fact that most men know that anything that bears a LeBrun label is absolutely right in style and dependable in quality.

PETERBORO' BABY CARRIES OFF THE FIRST PRIZE IN CONTEST

James Henderson Turner, Son of Mr. and Mrs. Webber F. Turner, Wins the Fifty Dollars in Canadian Magazine Better Babies' Contest.

NEAREST PERFECT CHILD

A Peterborough baby carried off first prize in the first annual Better Canadian Babies Contest conducted by the Canadian Home Journal. James Henderson Turner, the eighteen-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Webber F. Turner, Mark Street, Ashburnham, won the fifty-dollar prize, and is credited with being the nearest perfect baby in Canada under eighteen months. In a large list of entries from all over the Dominion baby Turner took first place. The Canadian Home Journal inaugurated the better babies campaign a year ago. During the past twelve months articles were published written by doctors dealing with the care, dressing and feeding of babies, and in order that practical good might result, the magazine introduced a better Canadian babies contest. Substantial prizes were offered to the best forty-four babies, the rules being that every child had to be taken to a doctor, very carefully examined and measured, and a score card filled in. These and the babies' photos were then judged by three doctors, and the forty-four children showing the best proportionate developments, mentally and physically, won the prizes. (It was not a beauty contest. Pretty dimples and fairy-like curls influenced the decision of the judges not one particle.) There were entries from every corner in the Dominion, from the Yukon to Nova Scotia.

The Examiner congratulates the parents of this fortunate child. It is no small matter to be the recipient of such an honour, as well as a prize of fifty dollars.

PREVENTS GERMANS FROM ORGANIZING THEIR POSITIONS

PARIS, December 10.—Not only has the German advance in Champagne, which result in the capture of French advanced positions south of St. Souplet and at the Butte de Souain, been stopped, but the Germans are being driven out of the positions occupied, and the French guns are preventing them from organising the ground taken. A German munition depot was exploded last nigt south of St. Souplet.

On the road between Roye and Montdidier, the French artillery fired effectively on a German battery near Dancourt. Mine fighting in which a party of German workers were buried by the explosion of a French mine chamber, is reported from Les Eparges.

Fort Cognelee, one of the most important features of the old defence at Namur, has been destroyed by an explosion, according to the Echo de Belge. The explosion is said to have caused the death of 80 German soldiers.

BANK CLEARINGS

The bank clearings for the week ending December 9th were $550,789 a decrease from the previous week of $51,769. The same week last month the clearings were $406,712, and for the same time last year they were $406,260.

Diplomacy.

Irate Father: If I catch that young idler around here again I'll break his head.

Sweet Daughter: But he's not an idler, father; he's a prizefighter.

Irate Father: Oh, well, then, of course, I will have to treat him as a friend of yours.

From the mass of subscriptions, many amounts of good proportions were noted. Without a rigid scrutiny of the returns all could not be identified, and some may have been missed in the general hilarity and cheers with which each was received. However, the final list will be published, when all will get their credit. Among those called out were Bonner-Worth Co. for $500, Postmaster and employees of Post Office $150, Police Force $60, Mrs. Jas. Wood $300, R. A. Morrow $150, W. R. Morris $100, John Wood $100, W. Davidson $150, C. H. Pennefather $100, Brinton Carpet Co. employees $225.80, F. D. Kerr $500, E. A. Peck $250. It may be noted that this firm gave during the summer a machine gun in addition to liberal subscriptions last year.

Employees of the Calcutt Brewery $126, J. A. Cameron $100, A. L. Killaley $60, Examiner employees $364, employees of C.G.E. Co., so far, $1,041, as compared with $252 last year, Ackerman Co $1,000, employees of the Matthews-Blackwell Co. $900. This subscription is notable for the fact that Mr. Matthews undertakes that if any employee through illness be unable to keep up his payments on subscription he will see that the arrearages are paid. Review Office employees $135, Peterborough Machine Co. $100, De Laval Co. employees $240, Peterborough Cereal Co. employees $31.50, and of the Canadian Bank of Commerce $47, Robt Fair $100, T. H. G. Denne $100, J. D. Collins $100, John C. Reid $125, W. J. Oke and employees $100, Peterborough Canoe Co. $500, and a further subscription from Mr. W. A. Richardson; employees of the Ackerman Co., despite very liberal subscriptions to Red Cross and other funds, $416.83.

These are only a few of the amounts taken at random from those announced.

Now comes assistance from a source unexpected. The men in barracks at the Armouries are making up a list and contribution to the Fund. Good pretty good. As boys, we all thought more of a slice of pie come across unexpectedly than a whole half for which we had pleaded, if not pinched. So what the men can do they will, and it will be welcomed. Soldiers helping the Patriotic Fund should be an incentive to others.

Lady stepped into a local bank, remarked to the teller (who was not told not to tell), asked for a blank cheque, wrote it out for a handsome amount, and remarked that she did not propose to wait to be waited on before making a contribution to the Fund. Good instance of prompt and lucrative action.

J. A. Aylmer, $500. Mr. Aylmer has contributed over $1,000 to the fund and has had the difficult and onerous duty of preparing the lists for the canvas, a month's work. In addition he has undertaken to attend for the fund all collections as he has for the year past. Work that is without money and certainly without price. The Henry Hope Co. a notable subscribtion for a handful of men, $194.

POLICYS NO GOOD IF TAKEN SINCE WAR

But C. O. F. Keeps Up All Previous Policies For Soldiers

The Canadian Order of Foresters cancels any policy written since the war began if the member thereby insured enlists for active service. Nor does he get his dues back. This is the answer to a complaint from Mr W. J. Wawfer, of Drayton, a married man, who took out a policy twelve months ago, and is now refused continuance of policy or refund of fees, as he has joined the Army.

"Each member,' he writes, "pays 35 cents per month for sick and funeral benefit, but in the event of a member enlisting for overseas he would not collect this benefit. I might mention that there has also been a war levy of 50 cents per member, which I understand was to insure members going overseas."

"Any man joining the society 12 months ago would have been told at the time of joining that his policy became void as soon as he enlisted," was the statement of Mr. A. E. Wright, executive officer of the Canadian Order of Foresters in Toronto, "because the head office decided upon that shortly after the war began Policies now contain stamps pointing out that feature. It hardly seems possible that a man could have joined even a year ago without being made fully aware of conditions, since the society advertised the fact in all the papers, and every court was circularized and asked to make the point perfectly clear to all new members. We now have 2,000 old members with the Colours, and the head office is keeping them all in good standing."

It is admitted that while the point is now fully explained in the rules and regulations submitted to every man before he is accepted as a member, the information is not contained in some of the earlier policies issued after August of 1914.

GIFTS TO THE RED CROSS SOCIETY ARE ACKNOWLEDGED

Miss E. Morrow, the treasures of the Peterborough Red Cross Society, desires to acknowledge with very sincere thanks the receipt of the following gifts to the Society:

Twenty-five dollars from the Girls' and Boys' Athletic Association of the Collegiate Institute.

Twenty dollars from the Peterborough Golf Club.

Sirteen dollars and fifteen cents from the soldiers' wives of North Monaghan, being the proceeds of a concert kindly given by them.

All these donations are greatly appreciated.

The Executive would be greatly obliged if all having wool from the Society for the knitting of socks would please endeavour to finish them and return them to the work room by Friday, Dec. 17, so that they can be packed and forwarded before the room is closed for the Christmas vacation.

Every noble acquisition is attended with its risks; he who fears to encounter the one must not expect to obtain the other.—Metastasio.

CONTRACTS FOR PETERBORO' FIRMS

William Hamilton Company and the Canadian General Electric Company Secure Contracts for Machinery

The Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario has under way the extension of a power plant on the south branch of the Muskoka River. This plant, located at South Falls and formerly operated to supply the town of Gravenhurst, has a single unit with a capacity of 600 h.w. It is being enlarged by the addition of a 750 k.v.a. unit. Excavation work was recently commenced and most of the equipment has been ordered.

Provision was made in the design of the existing plant for such an extension, and the installation of the latter does not alter the previous arrangement.

A wood stave pipe line, 160 feet long, will connect the existing headworks with about 60 feet of steel penstock leading to the new unit. The headgate machinism, steel penstock, turbine, governor and relief valves are all being supplied by the William Hamilton Co., Limited, of Peterborough, the generator and the transformers by the Canadian General Electric Co., Limited, Peterborough, and the wood pipe line was supplied by the Pacific Coast Wood Stave Pipe Co., Limited, and is being laid by the commission. Orders for the switchboard equipment have not yet been placed.

The extended plant will supply the towns of Gravenhurst, Bracebridge and Huntsville.

SIR WILFRID CALLS FOR NO PARTY STRIFE WHILE THE WAR LASTS

MONTREAL, Dec 9.— It was with some of the vigour of younger days that Sir Wilfrid Laurier addressed the mass meeting in the Monument National here to-night. His speech was indeed a revelation. The passing years and recent indispositions had left their trace it was true, but the Chieftain's speech was none the less vigorous, none the less terse. For an hour and a quarter he addressed a crowd which packed every corner of the hall, while out in the street there were hundreds more vainly endeavouring to secure admission.

Nearly an hour before the Chairman opened the meeting there was not a seat to be had in the building. And when Sir Wilfrid took his seat on the platform he received a true Laurier welcome.

Scorn For Ex-Nationalists.

Not once did Sir Wilfrid enter on anything which might be termed party discussion. He criticized certain Montreal critics of Canadian participation in the war; he had a passing world of scorn for ex-Nationalists who now occupy seats in the Federal Cabinet.

Party Truce Till After War.

Sir Wilfrid unequivocally defended the maintenance of the party truce till after the war. It had been suggested to him, he said, that Liberals should act as Conservatives had acted in the last general elections. "I have been asked," said Sir Wilfrid, "'Why do you not do the same thing?' Why do we not do it? Why?—because I am the leader of the Liberal party first of all, and because so long as I have the honour to preside over the destinies of the Liberal party it shall never triumph by such methods!

"So long as the war continues, so long as the soil of Belgium is occupied, so long as the last of the Germans has not been kicked out of France, so long will it not be time to discuss party questions, so long should our attention be directed to the prosecution of the war and the securing of the victory that will finally be sure.

TRAVELLERS MUST HAVE PASSPORTS

Letter From Mayor of City is No Longer Sufficient—Regulations Have Changed

TORONTO, Dec. 10.—All the Toronto passengers who intended to travel on the Adriatic to Britain got away although there were some hundred passengers who could not get aboard through the lack of passports.

There were 150 Toronto passengers on board, half of whom were women on their way to spend Christmas with their husbands and friends over there. All these people had been notified of the regulations which call for identification papers. Previously a birth or a marriage certificate, or a letter from the Mayor of the city to which they belonged was good enough, but that has again been changed, and now it is absolutely necessary to have the correct passport, along with which must be the photograph of the person to whom the passport will be issued.

Passport Places.

Arrangements have been made by the Department of State of Canada with the immigration authorities whereby they will accommodate the people who intend to travel to Britain by having properly signed certificates. The following places have been made the centres for this work and people living outside of these places will have to go there for their passports. In every case photographs must be produced and the certificates will be signed by the immigration officer; Halifax, St. John, Quebec, Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Hamilton, London, Fort William, Port Arthur, Winnipeg, Fort William, Port Arthur, Winnipeg, Moose Jaw, Saskatoon, Prince Albert Lloydminster, Edmonton, Calgary, Vancouver, and Victoria.

FREE ENTERTAINMENT

All who care to are invited to come and hear Christine Miller, Spalding, Chalmers, and other great artists at a one hour Edison Diamond Disc recital from 8 to 9 o'clock Saturday evening, at the Greene Music Building, Charlotte street. A delightful hour with these world famous entertainers is promised and it is hoped the recital hall will be filled to its capacity. Comfortable seats and everything entirely free. 2d-136

Officers of German Army Division Made Prisoners in Surprise Attack

PETROGRAD, Dec. 10.—(via London.)—The entire staff of the Eighty-second German army division was captured by Russian mounted scouts and brought as prisoners into the Russian lines as the result of a daring night raid recently, according to unofficial accounts which have just been received.

Under cover of darkness a small company of scouts worked its way past the German trenches toward the German base, the details, as received here, run. Emerging from a wood the scouts found themselves close to a village. They stopped and sent forward a reconnoitering party.

The latter soon came upon a German sentry who gave the alarm. Ten minutes later a German cavalry squadron galloped out of the village, followed by two companies of Austrian Landsturm troops. The Russians meanwhile had dismounted, hiding their horses and concealing themselves.

Fell Into Ambush.

The Germans and Austrians fell into the ambush and became panic-stricken when the Russians opened fire, it is declared, the Austrians running for their lives and throwing down their rifles. In the confusion, the German cavalry, not knowing how large a force might be opposing them, also retreated, many troopers falling under the Russian fire.

The Russians were ordered to follow on foot into the village. They came upon a large estate, and through the windows of the mansion made out the figures of German officers. Half of the force of scouts made for the mansion, while the other continued their pursuit of the retreating troops.

A rush for the doors of the mansion was made by ten Cossacks, the account continues, and so quick was the progress of events that the German officers did not have time to secure their coats and furs before they were hustled outside.

By this time the other division of the scouting party had returned and searched the mansion, which proved to be a division staff headquarters and secured valuable papers. The whole incident took place in less than fifteen minutes.

With their prisoners the scouts began to retire. The German cavalrymen, meanwhile, had reformed and attempted to cut off the Russian retreat. The prisoners were sent back under convoy, however, it is declared, and the retreat covered by the bulk of the scouts, who also succeeded in returning to the Russian lines with small losses.

It is stated that the captured staff included two Generals, one being a Division Commander, seven staff officers and several Red Cross physicians. One Colonel was killed in attempting to escape.

MUSICAL NOTES

Judging from the report of the "Messiah" Ticket Committee, St. Paul's church is likely to be filled by the musical public of Peterborough next Tuesday evening, when the Peterborough Choral Society will give Handel's "Messiah."

Everybody is waiting to see Ruthven Macdonald's genial smile next Tuesday evening. It is almost as famous as his singing.

Miss Pearl Steinhoff, who takes the contralto solos in the Messiah next Tuesday evening, makes her first bow to the Peterborough public.

Miss Dorothy Allan and Mr. Geo. Chandler, who take the soprano and tenor parts, are both well known to us all in Peterborough, and as we know, compare very favourably with any outside talent that might have been secured.

Some Opinions Re Rumoured Retirement of the "Old Guard"

One hears rumours on the streets these days that the old guard of the Board of Education is contemplating retirement with the close of this year. The opinion expressed of this rumoured action reflects a feeling of decided loss to the supervision and management of one of the most important departments in the city's affairs. Prominent men regard the present splendid provision and equipment of Public schools as the outcome of years of careful thought and attention to existing requirements, and of a keen sense and vision of future demands. Schools are well located in the centre of the city and on its fringe in every ward. The King Edward school for instance was planned and erected in the face of considerable opposition. It was provided with more rooms than the Board expected would be called into service for years. Many citizens openly disapproved of the site altogether. But to-day every room is occupied and the building with its spacious grounds way well be regarded as a monument to the men who had the courage of their convictions to build it for the citizens in spite of their criticisms and objections.

It is impossible to make references to all the expressions one hears in casual conversations in regard to what the "old guard" of the Board has done for the city schools, but it suffices to say that there is a general appreciation of their work which is too extensive to detail, and this appreciation is directly proportionate to the individual's knowledge of the school needs.

There is no definite statement from the "guard" that they intend to withdraw from the School Board, but the rumour is so often repeated that quite a number of citizens are, in their own words, apprehensive as to the future calibre of those who may have the supervision of the schools and the Collegiate Institute in their hands.

Death of Scientists in Battle One of War's Greatest Tragedies

LONDON, Dec. 1.—One of the great tragedies of the war is the sacrifice of the lives of so many young Englishmen of brilliant scientific attainments who have given up study and the laboratory for the field. This point came out with particular emphasis in a talk a correspondent had at the London University with Professor W. H. Bragg, to whom has been awarded, jointly with his son, Lieutenant W. L. Bragg, the Nobel physics prize for research in crystals and X-rays.

Lieutenant Bragg is at the Flanders front, attached to the Royal Horse Artillery, where his scientific abilities are being applied in the direction of gunnery. He is one of the cleverest of young English scientists, but he, like many another of his class, could not resist the call to arms. Before the call came, however, he was in the midst of a problem of partial solving of which is more romantic than a romance.

It began with certain discoveries in the mysteries of the formation of crystals made by a brilliant German—Professor Lave. He developed the theory that an X-ray is a phenomenon similar to a ray of light, but produced by wave lengths many times smaller than the inconceivably small waves which are associated with light.

"My son saw a simple way of putting it," said the Professor. "Together we set to work on the problem, and hit upon a happy inspiration, which opened the way to all manner of experiments. Out of this we obtained the knowledge how the atoms in a crystal are arranged, and to our astonishment it upset all the old ideas of crystallography and many other ideas as well. In this work Mr. Henry Gwyn Jefferys Moseley (son of the late Professor A. N. W. Moseley), of Oxford, rendered magnificent assistance.

"Starting from a certain part of Lave's researches into the diffraction of X-rays in their passage through crystals, Mr. Moseley carried on further with amazing results, and between us—Mr. Moseley, my son and myself—we polished up the rough diamond of Professor Lave (who himself got the Nobel physics prize in 1914), and opened up vistas the significance of which, to my mind, is inconceivable. Standing as I do on the threshold of this wonderland, I can only gasp with amazement.

"And," continued the Professor, with a sigh, "in the midst of this, to our great sadness, young Moseley, on the crest of the wave which his brilliance has done so much to raise, has been killed by a sniper's bullet in Gallipoli."

It is strange that out of this unique quartette of scientists three have gone to the wars, for the German professor also is a soldier.

GERMANY FLOODED WITH WAR MEDALS

Those Commemorating Zepplin and Submarine Campaigns Circulate Widely

"GOTT STRAFE ENGLAND"

Token Bears That Inscription and "Blockade" Date—Japanese Shown as Apes.

War medals and tokens have become so numerous in Germany that the numismatist who undertakes to collect specimens of all the designs in circulation faces a gigantic task, according to accounts in German newspapers describing the various coin souvenirs with which the Kaiser's domains are being flooded.

Among the most widely circulated of the war medals are those commemorating the submarine and Zeppelin campaigns. Many of the tokens are designed by well known artists, and while the great majority are made of bronze and silver, there are some gold ones, despite the great demand by the Reichsbank for that precious medal.

A very popular token bears on one side the inscription "Gott strafe England" and on the other "Blockade against England, Feb. 18, 1915."

Many medals were struck in celebration of the destruction of "the English fleet" off the coast of Chile and still more in honor of the sinking of the three British cruisers off the Hook of Holland by Weddingen and his submarine in September, 1914. These coined in memory of Weddingen are more than four inches in diameter.

One of the bronze medals bearing Count Zeppelin's head on one side carries on the other the picture of an airship and the words, "Our Zeppelin in action in the campaign of 1916." Another shows a fleet of Zeppelins and a number of submarines attacking the English coast "in reprisal". The first attack upon Scarborough and Hartlepool is commemorated in silver, as is also "the bombardment of the English fortress by Zeppelins," presumably referring to the raids upon Sandringham and Southend. Another token reminds the world of "the defeat of the British and French fleets in the Dardanelles."

A medal struck early in the war shows the likeness of the Kaiser, with the inscription, "I know no parties, only Germans." The reverse bears a two-handed sword and the words, "In the greatest need, with a clear conscience and with clean hands, we draw the sword."

"On to Paris" is the inscription on a token bearing the head of General von Kluck, while on the reverse is the figure of a women on horseback, with a torch in her hand and a city in flames at her feet. An artistic medal, by Lutz commemorating the campaign against Paris, shows an eagle sitting on a sword which lies obliquely across the Eastern Hemisphere. To the right is seen a column of German soldiers on the march and the words: "We Germans fear God, and nothing else in the world." On the reverse is a German infantryman, with rifle and flag, kneeling upon the body of a fallen Frenchman.

"Turkey entered the holy war on Nov. 12, 1914," says the inscription on one medal, while another bears the words: "The heroic defense of Tsingtao against the English and Japanese." Several tokens show the warships Goeben and Breslau, assisted by Turkish destroyers, bombarding Odessa and Sabastopol.

Medals have been struck in honor of the capture of practically every important city in Belgium and France that has fallen into the hands of the Germans. Four silver medals are dedicated to the Crown Prince as the victor and Longwy.

There is no lack with satirical designs and inscriptions, in which the East India troops are represented by an elephant and the Japanese by apes. An extremely popular token shows Germany as an oak in which sits the German eagle. From the branches of the oak hang Russian, French and Belgian soldiers, while underneath stands an English soldier who is helping a Japanese, represented as an ape, to climb the tree. On the reverse is the inscription: "Now, my little Jap, you climb up the German oak and see if you can pluck a feather out of the eagle's tail."

A particularly big medal is dedicated to President Poincare, who is shown holding in his arms King George, Czar Nicholas, an African, a Turco, a Japanese, and a Zulu. The inscription says: "Thus is culture carried to the ends of the world."

A Question and An Explanation in Regard To the Patriotic Fund

To the Editor of the Examiner,—

Dear Sir,—I would be glad if you could inform me through your paper why it is that the soldiers' wives and families in Peterboro get so much less from the Patriotic Fund than is given in most towns?

In Lindsay a woman with four children gets $25 per month; here a woman with six children gets $17. If the schedule is issued in Ottawa it hardly seems fair that Peterboro should have so much less.

Yours truly,

ENQUIRER.

In answer to Enquirer, the Patriotic Fund has supplied the following statement:

One correspondent asks a question that is often put forward. Lists of allowances have appeared in the press and were such as were made out for the Eastern and Western provinces. The trouble was that these lists were published in the press and without the comment and suggestion that was contained in paragraphs preceding and closing the lists. Montreal, for instance allows more, as the rentals in that city are high. In the west the same state prevails. What would be $17 in Peterborough would be $25 in the West.

Lindsay is an independent organization, and can allow what it likes without reference to any schedule issued by the head office. So long as Lindsay, or rather the County of Victoria, can find the money no restriction could be placed on it. It is entirely in the hands of the local people. Peterborough has to find all the money it gives out and a good proportion to help the west. Lindsay is not compelled to do this, as it is acting for itself, and is not identified with the Canadian Patriotic Fund. The Ottawa schedule is really lower than paid in Peterborough, or about the same. A call was made for a reasonable economy on account of 27,000 families of married soldiers to be provided for instead of the 5,000 at first anticipated.

Some localities pay more than others. Again less. For instance, the average in Toronto is a little over $15 per family. In Peterborough about $12. It will vary as to the number of families without children. The committee might publish the individual allowances but it is a sort of private matter and would possibly subject families to comment in a way that the committee do not wish to further. In general the Peterborough fund will do as well as possible for the families, but it has to be considered how long the war will last, how long the fund will hang out, and the condition of families from day to day. The allowance is not given because it is a part of the pay but as to placing the family in a fair living position as compared with before.

DRESS BETTER AND LOOK BETTER DRESSED

For the Coming Christmas Social Season—What Barrie's, Limited Are Doing

To the average lady, what Christmas gift would appeal more strongly, and give greater delight than a handsome new silk gown, for either street or evening wear? Next to that, in the line of fashionable apparel, a lovely silk blouse in one of the new smart models would invite similar pleasure.

Barries Limited have just opened out of their cases, a large number of distinctly new and fashionable silk dresses, in fancy and demi-tailored styles, in the new rich materials.

To the lady who "has everything" her heart could desire in dresses, these newer creations would be a real treat, and would help to quickly solve the Christmas problem.

Then, too, there is the attractive charm and desirability of the new silk blouses for mid-winter use, shown for the first time here at Barrie's new store. The beauty of these are enhanced when seen over other dress accessories. With these, Christmas shopping should be as easy as it looks.

Every woman knows the exquisite comfort and protection in the possession of a rich, cosy fur garment. The new furs shown by Barries Limited in classy styles of fur sets, such as Wolfe, Fox and other fashionable furs, give additional interest to the high-class stocks carried by this enterprising firm. Mingled with the richness of these new furs are lavish warmth, a challenge flung to penetrating cold, and the promise of secure protection in zero weather, as well as beauty of these winter wraps.

A BIG SHIPMENT FROM CANADIAN KITCHENER LEAGUE

The Canadian Kitchener League sent forward another shipment of Soldiers' Comforts to-day, this time to "Somewhere in Belgium." The contents of the bales were as follows:

122 pairs of socks.
9 scarfs.
2 pairs of wristlets.
1 pair of knee caps.
148 packages of tobacco
28 writing pads.
500 envelopes.
6 dozen pencils.
1 1-2 dozen candles.
1 1-2 dozen khaki handkerchiefs.
Soap, gum and safety matches.

The league wishes to thank the United Cigar Store who through Mr. Hartley supplied the tobacco, and the staff of one of the local offices, for their contribution of writing materials.

Great credit is also due to the ladies of Bridgenorth for their generous donation of 37 pairs of socks.

The lowest estimate which can be put upon the contents of the boxes is $125.

Besides the comforts sent Overseas, 21 pairs of socks and 17 scarfs have been given out to the Peterboro members of the 33rd Battery and other units who are sailing shortly.

The league wishes to again remind all ladies wishing to help that they have plenty of yarn to give out to knitters, and the same may be secured at 461 Gilmour Street, phone 788, or at 329 Charlotte St., phone 1295.

and sand had to be sprinkled over the surface this morning in order that the soldiers might obtain a footing.

Sergt.-Major Miller of the 93rd evidently shines in other circles besides the parade ground. At the progressive euchre party in the Oddfellows' Hall last night the Sergeant-major romped home with the first prize.

Capt. Gilmour of the 93rd Battalion is being transferred at his request to the new 155th Battalion, which is to have its headquarters at Belleville.

Armourer Sergt. Grange and Corp. Lacey of the 93rd Battalion are leaving shortly to take the armourer's course.

There are many applications for positions in the 93rd machine gun section. It will not likely be organized until after Christmas, when it is hoped to have a machine gun here for instructional purposes. In the meantime some of the men who want to join the section have procured the drill books and are busy studying.

The 93rd signallers, under the direction of Lieut. Gillham, Sergt. Ecobichon and Corp. Watson, are making good progress. The men are anxious to learn and devote a lot of their spare time to practice and study.

For the benefit of the married men of the 93rd as well as for that of the single men who are the sole support of a widowed mother, it is announced that now that they have gone into barracks they are entitled to assistance from the Patriotic Fund, and if they have not signed their cards they should visit the local office as soon as possible and attend to that important matter.

Sergt. Douglas Loomis of the 93rd, who has been physical director of the Y.M.C.A. at St. Catharines for the past two years, and who was pervious to that one of the best known class leaders in the local Y.M.C.A., will supervise the physical exercise of the men of the 93rd.

Musketry lectures by Capt. Swaine, the musketry officer for the 3rd Division, are a big feature of the daily routine at the armouries. The officers and non-coms. take these lectures on alternate days. Afterwards they will instruct the men along similar lines.

A man named Graham, who gave Ogdensburg, N.Y., as his home, and who has been a member of the 93rd for a few days, has deserted. He left his uniform in a box car last night and took French leave.

Lieut. Frank Patterson of the 34th Field Battery, and son of Mr. E. G. Patterson, of the C.G.E., is taking a qualifying course at the Royal School of Artillery, Kingston.

Lieut. Harold Hill of the 57th Regiment, who is at present acting adjutant of the 38th Canadian Battalion at Bermuda, may shortly join the staff of the 93rd Peterborough Battalion. Lieut. Hubert Eastwood, son of Major J. H. Eastwood, will also be appointed to the local battalion.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—May I suggest to the street railway employees that they close the door between the rear vestibule and the body of the car when men are smoking in the vestibule. Possibly the more direct appeal to the management to protect patrons against this nuisance would have an earlier and greater effect. There are some men who crowd themselves and an old pipe or cheap cigar into one corner of the vestibule and puff the smoke through the door, whether intentionally or not, to the annoyance of the passengers. The management has already shown an inclination to consider the comfort of its patrons, and by isolating the smokers in the vestibule they will be still further consulting the wishes of the passengers, particularly women. Without exception the pipes you smell in the street cars are on a par with the incinerator. The request that the vestibule doors be closed will be no hardship to them but it will be appreciated by those who ride inside.

HUGE STRIKE FUND REVEALED

German Arch-Schemer Spent Over $700,000 in United States.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—The World states that Captain Franz Rintelen, one of the most inscrutable figures in the German propaganda in this country, now under arrest in England, is the chief figure in recent labour troubles. "So vital a factor is Rintelen in a game for high stakes being played between Great Britain and the German Government that he will never return to this country to answer for his illegal acts," says the World.

"Facts obtained from the same sources which have enlightened the Federal authorities, while showing Rintelen unquestionably destined for Atlanta Penitentiary as punishment for his attempted passport fraud should he ever again set fot on American soil, confirm previous charges of having been cast as the most important figure in German efforts to complicate American diplomatic proceedings by fomenting trouble between this country and Mexico, and show that he disbursed $500,000 in furtherance of these conspiracies.

"Rintelen is presented as the arch-schemer; with on unlimited supply of German gold wherewith to pay his agents, whether they were foreigners like himself or professedly loyal American citizens.

"Not the least interesting angle of the secret part played by Rintelen while covertly he was the German business man, resident member of the New York Yacht Club and familiar with Gotham's best social circles is the hint conveyed as to why he became so eager to depart from America that at last he committed the blunder of trying to leave by a fraudulent American passport.

"It is here that David Lamar is most intimately identified with the career of Rintelen in America. It may be said confidently that of some $700,000 of American money which Rintelen disbursed in an effort to halt the stream of munitions from this country to the Allies, Lamar received between $350,000 and $400,000."

The child is wiser in its simplicity than the philosopher in his wisdom.

The more fickle a woman is the more it always hurts her when told of it.

And many a man has lost money through the hole at the top of his pockets.

For every man who seeks glory at the cannon's mouth, ninety-nine seek it at their own mouths.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mrs. M. Kylie is visiting in New York.

Miss Eleanor McBean and Mr. Jack Allen are the guests of Mrs. D. C. King, Gilmour street.

Mrs. James McGhee has been very sick for the past six weeks with asthma and bronchitis, but is able to be up again.

Mr. T. Hurley, the well known real estate agent, the pioneer of surburban extension, and an old highly respected citizen, is to-day receiving congratulations upon the occasion of his 78th birthday. His many friends, to their congratulations are adding hearty wishes for many returns of the day.

The choir of St. Luke's church held a very charming tea and musicale at the home of Mrs. W. A. Greenslade, 196 Dalhousie street, yesterday afternoon and evening. A large number attended and enjoyed a social half hour as well as the various numbers that were given. Mrs. Greenslade's pretty home was tastefully arranged with plants and cut flowers, the tea room being exceedingly attractive in colours of red and white. The young ladies of the choir served in the tea room, while Mrs. Greenslade was in charge of the musicale in the drawing room. Vocal solos were pleasingly rendered by Mrs. R. W. F. Davidson, Mrs. A. A. Perrin, Mrs. Widdess, Mrs. Rehill, Misses Phyllis Dawson, K. Masterson, B. Logan, Isobel Morphet, Ruby Quartermaine, and Miss Kent of Fraserville. Well executed pianoforte solos were given by Misses Norma Moore and Alberta Rehill.

CHAPLIN'S NEW PICTURE

Last night the Royal Theatre was crowded by an audience that laughed continuously whilst Charlie Chaplin's new play, "Shanghied," in two reles, was presented. They all agreed that this film, which will be presented again to-night together with six other new reels, is the best Chaylin ever acted in.

The American principal farm crops this year are worth about $5,500,000,000, exceeding by more than $500,000,000 their value of 1914, the previous banner value year in the country's crop history.

EYE TALKS SERIES

No. 3---Eyes As An Asset

IF your daily work brings you an income of $600 to $1000 a year and you require eyesight to do that work, what value would the eyes represent as part of your working capital? Take 6 per cent as a basis of money value, and it would require a capital of $10,000 to $17,000 to bring you an annual revenue of $600 to $1000. We would consider this a low valuation of your eyes as an asset.

What care are you giving this valuable working capital? If the eyes ever tire and ache after steady use, that's a sign you are neglecting them. Let Mr. FOWLER, who has highest qualifications as an EYESIGHT SPECIALIST, examine your eyes and tell you what they need.

A Presentation To Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Beavis

Parents of Sergt. Reuben Beavis Receive Purse of Gold and Address From Nassau L.O.L. No. 457

A committee from Nassau L.O.L. No. 457, waited upon Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Beavis, James Street, last night, and presented them with a purse of gold on the eve of their departure for England, where they are going to visit their son, Sergt. Reuben Beavis, the Peterborough boy who has won the Distinguished Conduct Medal, the French Legion of Honour, and the Russian Cross of St. George for his gallantry under fire. Accompanying the presentation was the following address:

Peterborough, Nov. 9, 1915.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Beavis, City.

Dear Friends,

We, the members of Nassau L.O.L., No. 457, as fellow-brethren of your son Reuben, wish to congratulate you and him on his gallantry and the brave fight he has put up for his King and Country. May God bless him and spare him to you for many years to come.

As fellow-brethren, we are proud indeed to think of him as one of our number, and one and all do, and always will, hold him in highest esteem for the brave and heroic spirit he has shown. As a Canadian he has indeed proved himself a worthy subject. We wish to congratulate him on the high honours which he has received from Britain, France, and Russia, and we hope on the Eternal Morning he will receive his reward, "Well done," from the lips of the King of Kings, of whom we are all subjects. We owe him a debt of gratitude, feeling that the injuries received by him have been on our behalf.

We trust that it will not be long before we have the honour of welcoming him back into our midst in the fitting way which his loyal services calls for, and which he so richly deserves. We pray that God will grant you a pleasant and safe journey across the ocean, and best of all, a glad and happy re-union with your boy, and that together you will spend a bright and happy Christmas. We now ask you to please accept this purse as a slight tribute of our respect and admiration for your son, and wish you both a speedy and safe return to your home and loved ones.

We are, sincerely yours,

THE CALL OF THE WOODS.

The Ernie Marks Stock Company presented "The Call of the Woods" at the Grand last evening. The play was well staged and was full of many intensely interesting situations. To-night the same company will present "A Receipt in Full." The last named production is one of unusual merit and should appeal to theatre-goers.

WEDDING BELLS

DAVIS—LUCAS.

A quiet wedding was solemnized on Wednesday, Dec. 8th at 4.30 p.m. at St. John's church by Rev. Canon Davidson between William Alvery Davis and Alice Louisa Lucas, both of this city. The bride was given away by Mr. Victor Wood and attended by Miss Maud Young. The groom was supported by Mr. Clarence Russell, best man.

Supper was served at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Davis at 4 Fradette avenue, and later in the evening the staff of the Peterborough Radial Railway Company were entertained, when a very handsome timepiece with bronze ornament, was presented by them. Mr. J. McCann read an address of congratulation and presented Mr. Davis with a box of cigars. The guests joined in singing, 'He's a Jolly Good Fellow.'

Mr. and Mrs. Davis feelingly responded. Mr. Davis is an employee of the Peterborough Radial Railway and received many good wishes from the boys present, and by their gift was enjoined to be always "on time."

Patriotic Fund Campaign A Grand Success

ALLIES ON DEFENSIVE AT THE DARDANELLES

The French Are Continuing Their Retreat in the Balkan Fighting

British Troops Have Received Artillery and Infantry Reinforcements However and Are Maintaining Their Positions in the Face of Violent Attacks Say Despatches From the Greek Frontier---Thousands of Britishers Eligible for Military Service Rush to the Recruiting Offices to Enroll Before the End of the Voluntary Campaign To-night.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

ATHENS, Dec. 11.—Despatches from the Greek frontier points to-day reported that the French forces were compelled to continue their retreat in yesterday's fighting, but contained no mention of the reported evacuation of Serbian territory by the Allies. The British, it was stated, received artillery and troop reinforcements on Thursday night and maintained their positions in the fact of violent attacks.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—In a whirlwind attempt to stave off conscription, thousands of men eligible for military service overwhelmed the recruiting officers in London and provincial cities and towns to-day, anxious to enroll before the Lord Derby voluntary recruiting campaign ends at midnight. No one knows even approximately the results of the recruiting campaign except Lord Derby. He refused to make any statement to-day, and said that no figures would be made public until he completes his report for the Cabinet to-morrow. On this report probably will depend the decision of the Government on the question of conscription. Lord Derby announced this afternoon that the recruiting offices will not close promptly at midnight, but will remain open until the crowds in line are enrolled.

PEKIN, Dec. 11.—In the final voting of the State Council the Monarchy of China has been restored, and Yuan Shi Kai, President of China, asked to become Emperor.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—A News despatch from Athens, via Paris, says: "The Greek Government has made all arrangements for the demobilization of the army. It is expected a decree of this effect will be issued shortly. The French Minister had his second conference of this week with King Constantine this morning. Subsequently the Ministers of the Entente Powers called on Premier Skouloudis. It is learned on good authority that energetic representations were made for the purpose of inducing Greece to hasten action in regard to the facilities demanded for the Allied troops at Salonika. A decisive move on the part of the Greek Government is expected momentarily.

PARIS, Dec. 11.—"All questions of an urgent nature have been settled with complete accord," it was stated to-day, following another session of the Allied War Council. It is presumed the announcement covers all the reported differences concerning the conduct of operations in the Balkans. The announcement was made after Sir Edward Grey, British Foreign Minister, Premier Briand and General Gallieni had held a lengthy conference at the conclusion of the War Council sessions.

PARIS, Dec. 11.—Despite the heavy downpour of rain all along the front, lively rifle fusillades andcombats with grenades continued throughout last night, this afternoon's War Office bulletin stated. The French artillery silenced the German guns in a heavy bombardment between the Oise and the Aisne on Quennevieres Plateau and near Vendresse. Near Troyonne French trench mortars wrecked the enemy's works and damaged several of their bomb machines.

ATHENS, Dec. 11.—The Turkish forces at the Dardanelles have been reinforced and are making heavy attacks upon the Anglo-French trenches. The New Zealanders repulsed a Turkish infantry attack at Krithia Sector.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 11.—The Berlin Post has been suppressed indefinitely, Berlin despatches said to-day, because it stated editorially that Germany should never agree to surrender in peace negotiations any of the territory she has conquered.

ROME, Dec. 11.—Field Marshal Von Mackensen has arrived at Constantinople with two regiments of Bavarian infantry and several batteries of artillery, according to Athens despatches to-day.

(Berlin despatches yesterday mentioned that Mackensen had been received in audience by Emperor Franz Josef, but did not state on what day he was in Vienna).

ATHENS, Dec. 11.—A Salonika despatch filed last night contained a flat denial of the report that German troops occupied Giegveli yesterday. It was stated that the station was still in the hands of the Anglo-French forces yesterday at noon.

BRITISH FREIGHTER IN TROUBLE.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—The British freighter Tyningham, of 3,470 tons, of Cardiff, Wales, is either on fire or has sprung a leak a few miles out of New York. Shortly after sailing for Queenstown today she wirelessed that she was putting back, signalling "N. H.," which means either "Afire" or "Leaking."

The Call of the West

In the Western Outlook, the Baptist church organ of Winnipeg, is found a paragraph stating that Broadway Baptist church, Winnipeg, has tendered an unanimous call to its pastorate to Rev. J. E. Webb, pastor of the Murray street Baptist church, Peterborough. The Examiner is informed that the Broadway is a new church, built about 2 years ago, the pulpit of which was rendered vacant by the resignation of Rev. Dr. Sowerby.

Rev. Mr. Webb, when spoken to over the 'phone, stated that he had received a telegram about a fortnight ago containing the call referred to by the Outlook.

HOW ONE SMALL BOY DID HIS BIT FOR THE CAMPAIGN

The Son of a Soldier and Earning but Three Dollars a Week Anxious to Subscribe to Patriotic Fund

A NOTABLE INCIDENT

Among the many notable incidents to be recorded, while the Patriotic Campaign was in full swing, there is one which must not be allowed to pass without special notice.

One of the men of Captain Oke's team, was passing from the committee rooms, and encountered at the door, a smiling youth, of 16 or 17 years, who he knew, and saluted with a hearty handshake.

Are you working now Davie? asked Oke's man.

Yes, I have a job till after Christmas—and "say," he continued eagerly, "can any one that wants to subscribe to the patriotic?"

On being assured that such was the case, he expressed his wish to do something toward the fund.

"But," said Oke's man, "your Dad is a soldier, Davie—and we do not ask soldiers' families to contributes to the fund—the fund is for them."

"Oh, yes—I know, but I am making three dollars a week, and of course cannot do very much, but can give twenty cents per month for 1916."

So eager was the lad to do his b't, that Oke's man took him into the committee room and wrote out his subscription, and Davie went away with his button, feeling about two inches taller.

This is one of the many incidents which stiffened the backbone of the captains and men of the teams, who had to withstand onslaughts from those who handed them everything but a subscription—here we had with us Davie and his sling doing his bit, as did his great namesake David of old, to put to rout the enemy of his country, and the same old enemy at that, the Goliath of militarism. The wrongs of the mutilated little children of Belgium, being avenged by the youth of of this free Canadan land.

Oh, ye men who sat down and wrote out your cheques to the Fund for hundreds and for thousands, will you not take off your hats to this little David, who will earn his contribution by the sweat of his brow—and give him three times three, and a tiger?

Litle Davie has given the reply to those who consider the proper way to administer this Fund is through the Dominion Government, and the tax bill.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Miss Mary McFadden and Mrs. F. A. Walker, of Milby, Sask., are visiting friends in town, having come East to attend the funeral of their mother, Mrs. R. W. McFadden.

Messrs. L. A. Archambault and W. Harrison Miller, of Toronto, were in town on Friday attending the funeral of the late Mrs. R. W. McFadden.

TO THE YOUNG MEN OF PETERBOROUGH

Young men of military age and fitness are advised to look carefully over the military pictorial section of to-day's Examiner in which there are three distinct appeals to young men to join the colours. In the first place they will find the pictures of some Peterborough citizens who have given their lives for the Empire—citizens who were comrades of some of the young men who are still in mufti. They have left a gap to fill. That is Appeal No. 1. Then the reader will notice many familiar faces on the inside pages, faces of more comrades who are now in the trenches in France, and who are calling to their friends back home to come over and help them finish the work so that they may the quicker return to their loved ones. Appeal No. 2, you see. And lastly will be noticed, the photographs of some of Peterborough's fine soldiers in the 3rd Battalion. They are asking for their comrades to join them, to fill up the ranks of the Peterborough Battalion, to answer the call of the King and Kitchener for more men, which makes Appeal No. 3. Look at the pictures closely and let your next photograph be of yourself in khaki.

LT.-COL. MILLS TOOK OVER COMMAND OF 93rd THIS MORNING

New Commanding Officer Congratulated Members of the Battalion on Their Smart Appearance and on the Good Things That Are Being Said About Them By the Citizens of Peterborough---Three Hall's Bridge Brothers Set Fine Example to the County---To-day's Military News.

OTTAWA, Dec. 11.— The following message has been sent to all Canadain soldiers by His Royal Highness the Governor General: "Please convey to all Canadian troops in the Dominion of Canada and overseas my very best wishes for Christmas. In doing so I wish to congratulate them on the splendid manner in which they have come forward for the defence of the Dominion and the empire, and I feel sure that they will worthily maintain the traditions of those who have preceded them overseas."

Lt.-Col. Jos. Mills of the 57th Regiment, and until recently quartermaster of the 2nd Canadian Battalion at the front, took over the command of the 93rd Peterborough City and County Battalion this morning. Lt.-Col. Johnston, who has been acting commanding officer of the battalion since its organization was authorized will be second in command.

The appointment of Lt.-Col. Mills as commanding officer of the 93rd was announced several months ago, and he returned from the front on Tuesday to take over the position.

Addressing the officers and men of the 93rd this morning, Lt.-Col. Mills congratulated them upon their smart appearance and bearing. Hundreds of citizens he said, had spoke to him in the highest terms of the conduct of the men of the 93rd and he felt sure that they were the nucleus of a splendid battalion. Col. Mills asked for the co-operation of officers and men in making the battalion an organization such that when they reached England the authorities would say: "This battalion is for France," not to be a reserve battalion from which small drafts might be sent. He was very pleased to note that the orderly room records showed but few offences or "crimes;" a record that spoke very highly for the conduct of the men.

Afterwards Lt.-Col. Mills held a conference with the officers of the battalion in the 57th Regiment mess rooms which have been placed at the disposal of the officers of the 93rd.

TO-DAY'S ORDERS.

The following Battalion orders by Lt.-Col. J. Mills, Officer Commanding 93rd Overseas Battalion, C.E.F., were read to-day:

The Roman Catholics will parade for divine service at 10 a.m. to-morrow under the command of Lieut. de Puyjalon, 93rd Battalion, C.E.F.

Monday—6.30 to 7.00, physical training; 8.30 to 10.00, squad drill, Sects 36-48; 10.00 to 10.30, orderly room; 10.30 to 12.00, extended order drill; 2.00 to 3.00, platoon drill, Sects. 76-10; 3.00 to 4.30, company drill, Sects 61-69.

3—Strength Taken On—

The following men have enlisted in the 93rd O. S. Battalion, C.E.F., and are posted to the companies placed opposite their names from the dates mentioned:

George Edward Woodcock—'A' Co'y Dec. 10th, 1915.

Arthur George Sims—'B' Co'y, Dec. 10th, 1915.

Jewel Windover—'B' Co'y, Dec. 10th, 1915.

Warren Windover— 'B' Co'y, Dec. 10th, 1915.

Deyncourt Windover—'B' Co'y, Dec. 10th, 1915.

William George Lilly—'B' Co'y, Dec. 10th, 1915.

Walter Henry Suddards—'B' Co'y, Dec. 9th, 1915.

4—Retreat—

Retreat will sound for the ensuing week at 4.40 p.m.

5—Leave of Absence—

The Commanding Officer has been pleased to grant leave of absence as under.

Lieut. H. C. Gillham, from 10 p m. 11th to 8.30 p.m. Monday the 15th inst.

Lieut. S. J. Raymond from 12 noon, 11th Dec., to 8.30 a.m. 14th inst.

Lieut. F. Dupuy from retreat 23rd inst, 1915, until 3rd January, 1916.

Lieut. G. F. Newlands from Thursday, 9th inst., pending transfer to 159th O. S. Battalion, C.E.F.

Lieut. D. R. McDonald from 10th to 13th inst., inclusive.

J. Mills, Lt.-Col.,
Officer Commanding 93rd O. S. Battalion, C.E.F.

The Kingston Whig says: Reports from different parts of the division states that since the more strenuous recruiting campaign has been in force there has been an increase in the number of recruits for overseas service. The system now in use makes every man wearing the uniform work as a recruiting officer, so that his unit may be brought up to strength, because unless this plan is carried out the competition between units will make the slack ones short of men. Each battalion has orders to confine its efforts to the county to which it is alloted, but it is an open secret that there is constant "stealing" of recruits from other conties. This is not being fought very strenuously as it works out to the common good. In fact the 3rd Division is supplying men to both Toronto and Montreal for overseas service.

In hundreds of cases, young men with a few dollars to spend have gone to either Toronto or Montreal, had their "time" and enlisted there rather than get into uniform and spend the winter training in their little home town. This has meant a great leakage from the 3rd Division, as there are no large cities within its limits, and for that reason all of the new battalions have an equal chance for recruits. It is likely that more battalions will be formed.

The following is taken from the Lindsay Warder:

The following typewritten letter was received this morning by Lt.-Col. Fee, O. C. 109th Batt. It is not published with a view to showing up the grammar and spelling of the applicant, but rather to commend him and to show the spirit behind the missive; the spirit which, it is hoped, can be found in the majority of young men in Canada to-day:

The Letter.

Friday night at headquarters was an uproarious occasion. Why not? Work of the campaign was over, so far as collections were concerned. The teams met and held discreet converse before supper. Recounted incidents of the day and successes and failures. All in good humour and in fine spirit.

Early in the afternoon it was felt that the amount asked for would be subscribed, if not exceeded. Several of the teams' captains evidently had things up their sleeves. A captain who utters pessimism and shakes his head and is not quite sure, is generally a false prophet. So that after supper when the tables were cleared and all got down to take the figures, there was deep expectancy. The reading of amounts brought cheers. And as each captain gave the amount, he was caled to task with assertions that he had been guilty of poaching on other preserves. The meeting resolved itself into a medly of shouts, cheers, recriminations and assertions. All in good humour and any amount of applause.

Following are the takings for the afternoon:

LITTLE CHANCE OF CONSCRIPTION IN OLD COUNTRY

Doubtful If It Will Ever Be Proposed Says T. P. O'Connor in a Most Interesting Article on the Question of Compulsory Service

HAS BEEN A BAD WEEK

Examiner Special:

Copyright 1915, Central News
by T. P. O'Connor

LONDON, Dec. 11.—The reception of Mr. Wilson's message in England was excellent, particularly as it shows that America realizes the kind of enemy the Allies are fighting. The best specimen and epitome I can give of the British view of the document is in sentences from the Westminster Gazette, which says: "We, meaning Great Britain, are acting with our Allies for what we conceive to be the interests of civilization in both worlds, and though we ask no favours, and may, perhaps, look for little forbearance, we may appeal to the American people, who realise from their own experience what is going on in Europe; and if they are unable to help us by positive assistance, they are not to hinder us by asserting neutral rights or commercial interests to prejudice our naval power."

This week closes in a darker fog of war than for weeks. All kinds of rumours are prevalent, and each contradicts the other. Everybody feels that momentous events are going to happen immediately, but it is impossible to forecast their nature. There are rumours of a German preparation for a big offensive on the western front, but it is impossible to reconcile them with Germany's necessity to keep a big army on the Russian front and to make a big effort to attack the Allies in force at Salonika before they become sufficiently strong to entrench for the winter.

It is equally difficult to discover whether the Allies mean to continue their efforts at Salonika in the face of the tremendous forces that have been released since Serbia's overthrow.

Interviews with the Greek king confirm the view that he does not mean to give a particle of assistance to the Allies beyond what his engagements to the Kaiser permit. This and the Mesopotamia setback make the week-end an anxious one.

Solidly Determined.

But the temper of the British people and the Allies is now so solidly determined for a long, decisive war that all passing events have come to be regarded as the inevitable ups and downs of war, without influence on the final result.

During a week-end visit to my constituents at Liverpool I found this spirit more pronounced than in phlegmatic, silent London, especially among the Irish.

SATURDAY, DEC. 11, 1915

FIGHTING BOTH WAYS.

"Fight or Pay" was one of the slogans of the Patriotic Fund campaign. Those who do either do well; but what words can express adequate appreciation of those who do both? We are told that the members of the 93rd Battalion are not contented with doing their share of "fighting," but they will do their share of "paying," and are contributing to the Patriotic Fund. What a lesson this doubly manly spirit is to those who cannot or will not pay, but can fight and refuse to fight. Some of the 93rd boys have deserved the D.C.M. before they cross the herring pond.

GOOD WORKERS AND GOOD WORK.

While the people of Peterborough are to be congratulated upon the splendid $41,000 response to the appeal for support of the Patriotic Fund, the canvassing committees are to be congratulated upon the energetic presentation of the opportunity to contribute, they afforded the public. A total of $41,000 involved a good deal of industry as well as diplomacy. Yesterday the fund was $5,000 short of the $50,000 aimed at. The committee, recognizing the necessity of "making good," threw themselves into the work with new energy, and succeeded, not only in reaching the $50,000 objective, but surpassing it by $41,000. This result is not only highly creditable to the citizens, but doubly so to the committees. They were almost exclusively composed of busy men, who at the busiest season of the year—their commercial harvest time—left their work to throw themselves heart and soul into the work; thus, apart from their individual contributions, themselves personally making the sacrifices that they could confidently, as they did successfully, demand from others. For a band of true patriots, commend us to the Committee of the Hundred!

A WISE PROVISION.

The Examiner congratulates the Water Commissioners upon the evidence afforded yesterday of the wisdom of installing an auxiliary steam pumping plant at the Waterworks; and we congratulate ourselves upon having by our advocacy strengthened their hands in taking the wise step they have taken. We are now virtually assured of permanence of water supply, which, under Providence, no accident can reasonably be expected to interfere with. Twenty-five thousand dollars is a large sum, but its expenditure is justified by the assurance it gives of protection to our millions of dollars worth of building property against the terrible menace of fire. Thanks to an effective fire department and fire brigade, and a plentiful supply of water, Peterborough has had a splendid immunity from destructive fires, which in other less fortunate places reduce thousands of dollars' worth of property to ashes. We also have assurance that industrial operations and domestic conveniences will not be interfered with. We should be happy even in paying taxes if all the civic money spent represented as good value as the expenditure of $25,000 upon the provision of an auxiliary pumping plant at the Waterworks station. We have a system of waterworks that, as now equipped, guarantees a continuous and abundant supply of as good—if not the best—water for civic purposes as can be found in the Province or Dominion.

HEARTY RECRUITING.

Whether or not Sunday recruiting "rallies," will meet the ideas of the "scribes and Pharisees." The Town of Welland will have them in every church of every denomination in the town to-morrow night. Special speakers—chaplains, who have been at the various fronts, and others, will speak, and noted soloists like Ruthven McDonald and Redfern Hollingshead, will sing. Following the evening metings in the churches will be "rallies" in the two theatres to be addressed by the same speakers, with the same singers present. With such energy shown it is no surprise that the new Welland County Battalion, the 98th, is now up to the 675 mark. This result is due not only to the energy of recruiting agencies, but to the favourable field, the county being composed of eight populous townships, two large towns, and five large villages. With such results, who can doubt that Canadians are able to meet the demands in men — and money too—that may be made upon it.

NOW FOR ANOTHER DUTY.

Now that we have the Patriotic Fund enterprise comfortably off our hands. We should pause only long enough to take breath, and then enter with similar energy upon a matter of as great local importance—that of providing for a city council for the year 1916. With two of the oldest members of the council likely to enter the mayoralty contest, one of whom will necessarily be retired to private life, and with other members likely to retire, we have need to look out for a new lot of good candidates and should at once get about the business. We have no specific suggestions to make, but if we could hand-pick the Patroitic committee for candidates and could secure men who would prove as "live wires" in the city council as they were in the Patriotic Fund canvass, we should have a 1916 council that we could be proud of.

COUNTRY'S WELFARE BEFORE DRINK.

The Britisher likes his beer, but he likes his country and its interests better. The restrictions placed by the authorities in England upon drinking facilities represent a big sacrifice to people of permanent thirst; but when it comes to an issue between drink and duty, duty, the Briton's battle-cry, wins as it has won in closer corners than we are in to-day. Hon. Herbert Samuel,, appointed a member of the Asquith Cabinet, had to go back for election—in Cleveland Yorkshire. He won, hands down, over his opponent, Mr. Henry Knight, a Leeds journalist—the vote standing, respectively, 7,312 and 1,453. The defeated candidate espoused the cause of the drinking interests, his platform including a strong protest against the new regulations relative to the sale of spirits. The lesson is obvious, and we shall be better in Canada and Ontario when political leaders measure up to the spirit of the electors of Yorkshire, and place the welfare of country before the interests of party support by the liquor traffic.

THE CHRISTMAS EXAMINER.

To-day we present to our readers the twentieth issue of the Christmas Examiner, with contents and illustrations suitable to the Christmas season. Not only on grounds of sentiment, but for reasons of business it is timely. In keeping with the appeal of the season, our merchants in all lines are well represented in its advertising pages, an advantage both to them and to their patrons. A circulation of 5,000 copies assures the merchants of good value for the cost of their advertisements, and the customers of good values in the wares of our leading merchants. They are a guide to the Christmas shopper, making holiday shopping easy to both merchant and customer, thus in a double way meeting the appeal of business as usual. Though business as usual, if not better than usual, is a gratifying actuality, the Christmas Examiner, which has always taken an interest in promoting the welfare of the soldiers, introduces and gives prominence to (whatever our business and personal interests may be) what is uppermost in all our minds, our dier boys and their part and our part in this great war. There will be found individual and group pictures of the gallant soldiers who have done their duty nobly at the Front, and of others who have enlisted for similar heroic service. While some of these pictures will awaken sad memories, they will, however, serve to strengthen our interest in those who have made, are making, and will make great sacrifices; strengthen our interest in brave soldiers who, with others, are gaining credit for Peterborough and Canada, and glory for themselves and the Empire, in waging a great fight for the highest interests of humanity. A copy of the Christmas Examiner finding its way to our boys in the trenches will serve both as a home Christmas reminder and, with the full report of the patriotic campaign, show that while they are fighting our battles in the trenches, we are not forgetting the dear ones they leave; and they will feel the force of the saying, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto my little ones, ye have done it unto me."

Canada, during the first seven months of the current year, sent the United States 87,863 head of cattle, against 86,113 head last year, and 19,006 head in 1913.

Problem Of Soil Enrichment Confronts Farmers Of America

Crops Have Depreciated Fertility of Soil and But Meagre Attempts Have Been Made to Revitalize it—Very Important Question of Present Time

The following address was delivered by Cyril G. Hopkins, Ph.D., University of Illinois, Champaign, Ill., at the Ninth Annual Meeting of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents in New York City to-day:

The real value of agriculture land rests primarily upon earning capacity and security of investment. Earning capacity rests in large part upon the productive power of the soil, and security of investment rests chiefly upon durability of productive power. Other factors should not be ignored, but from the business standpoint they are, as a very general rule, of minor importance. These include the character of the roads, or highways, the distance from school, church, and market, the social and sanitary conditions, the normal scenery, etc.

Corn is the most important crop of the United States, and it is grown in all States. It is consequently the best single crop for the purpose of general comparisons. If it costs $5 an acre to raise corn, 5 cents a bushel to harvest and market the crop, 9 cents a bushel to maintain the fertility of the soil, and 1-2 per cent. on the value of the land for taxes, then, with corn at 50 cents a bushel and interest at 5 per cent., land which produces 20 bushels of corn is worth $40 an acre. And what is the value of land that produces 40 bushels of corn? At first thought one might say $80; but the correct answer is $171 an acre. And, if the land produces 80 bushels of corn, the returns will pay $5 an acre for raising the crop, $4 for harvesting and marketing, $7.20 for restoring the fertility of the soil, $2.16 an acre for taxes, and 5 per cent. interest on a valuation of $433 an acre.

Soil Enrichment.

The most important and the most neglected factor in American agriculture is that of soil enrichment. For three centuries the American farmer has drawn the support of the nation from the fertility contained in our virgin soils, with widespread soil depletion as a result. When the land became too poor to raise a profitable crop by the ordinary means of soil stimulation, the American farmer has, as a general rule, allowed the farm to go back to nature, and he has either moved to newer lands or joined the increasing urban population.

The improvement of seed, the use of tile drainage, the invention and general adoption of labour-saving machinery, the development of cheap and rapid means of transportation, and the opening of the world's markets to our farm products, have all combined to make possible and to encourage rapid deterioration of American soils. Crop rotation is good farm practice, but it makes possible more rapid soil depletion because of the larger crops produced where insect pests and plant diseases are avoided by such rotation.

Very Little Fertilizer.

All the domestic animals on all the farms of the United States are equivalent to less than one cow for each ten acres of farm land, and the farm manure is so limited and is spread so thinly, that it serves more to stimulate than to enrich the soil. Even the most common use of commercial fertilizer tends toward soil depletion. Thus, where such fertilizers are used for the production of the staple grain and forage crops, the most common application is less than 4 pounds of nitrogen, 4 of potassium, and 7 of phosphorus in 240 pounds per acre of the highly mixed and high priced manufactured fertilizer.

One 50-buahel crop of corn removes from the soil 75 pounds of nitrogen, 38 of potassium, and 12 of phosphorus, and ultimate soil depletion is inevitable where such fertilization is depended upon, supplying only one-tenth to one-half of the absolute crop requirements, and forcing the balance from the virgin supplies still remaining in the soil. The results of seventy-three "Co-operative Fertilizer Tests on Clay and Loam Soils," extending into thirty-eight counties, as reported in Bulletin No. 15 of the Indiana Agricultural Experiment Station, show, as an average, that each dollar spent for complete fertilizers produced $1.13 increase in crop value, of which $1 goes to the fertilizer interests and 13 cents to the farmer; and the soil grows rapidly poorer, because such fertilizer applications supply less fertility than the crops remove.

The selfish fertilizer manufacturer still boasts that New England produces larger acre-yields of certain cereal crops, such as corn and wheat, than are produced in Illinois; but he ignores the fact that the corn and wheat of New England are commonly grown in small patches in market-garden rotations or in feed lots of commercial dairies; he ignores the fact that 45 per cent. of what was improved farm land in New England thirty years ago has been agriculturally abandoned under his fertilizer system; he ignores the fact that the area devoted to cereal crops in New England was 59 per cent. greater in 1880 than in 1910; and ignores the fact that during the last generation New England reduced her area of cereal crops to less than half a million acres, and agriculturally abandoned more than five million acres during the same period.

If wheat can be grown with profit by use of mixed fertilizers in New England, then why has the New England wheat acreage decreased from more than 79,000 to less than 5,000 acres in thirty years? And why is the area of agriculturally abandoned land in New England more than twelve times the acreage of all cereal crops grown in those States

Listen—the decrease in area of improved farm land in New England since 1880 is equal in acreage to the ten largest of the one hundred and two counties in Illinois; but listen—there are ten counties in Illinois whose total production of cereal crops (167,806,805 bushels) is ten times the combined cereal production of the six New England States (16,972,973 bus.).

Pressure of Food Question.

Already the question of food has begun to exert pressure in this country. During the last census decade our population increased by 21 per cent., the same in percentage but far greater in the absolute than during the preceding decade; but there was less than 2 per cent. increase in food cereals and no increase in food-producing animals. By five-year averages, centred on 1880 and 1910 respectively, our average annual exportations decreased from 215 million to 103 million bushels of wheat, from 162 million to only 42 million bushels of corn, and from 2,500 million to 1,500 million pounds of meat, in order that we might feed our increase of 16 million people.

These are not mere opinions, but highly trustworthy and well established facts taken from the reports of the Bureau of Census and from the official exportation records of the Federal Government.

Application of Science.

The only hope of the future lies in the application of science and education and honesty to the control of industry and agriculture, and let us understand and never forget that agriculture is the basic support of all industry and that the fertility of the soil is the absolute support of every form of agriculture.

The fertility of the soil is well under the control of the farmer, if he is provided with accurate information and with the necessary capital to enable him to put into practice rational systems of truly permanent agriculture. There was no need whatever that the cultivated farm lands of the Eastern States should have been depleted. Lying at the door of our greatest markets, with the application of knowledge and with such encouragement as should have been given, those lands could easily have been preserved and even increased in fertility until their present value might well have been not twenty dollars, but four hundred dollars an acre.

With the increase and permanent maintenance of soil fertility, there is permanent protection for the capital invested in land, whether the investment represents land purchase or farm loan. When one borrows money on such security as buildings, he may be required by the lender to invest some of the loan in fire insurance; and it might well be required, also, that farm loans must be used in a way to ensure the protection of the fertility and earning capacity of the soil; and it is a far more substantial finacial policy to loan money direct to farmers for soil enrichment than to fertilize manufacturers to encourage soil depletion.

The greatest material problem of the United States is not in the preservation of the forests, but in the conservation of coal and iron, not in the development of the water ways; that problem that is incomparably greater than all of these is to bring about the adoption of systems of farming that will restore, increase, and permanently maintain the productive power of American soils. The solution of this problem not only deserves, but will require the earnest, intelligent thought, and the active, honest support of the educated and influential people in the city as well as in the country.

RELATION OF THE RED CROSS TO RECRUITING ACTIVITY AND SCIENTIFIC SURGERY

Is there anyone who is held back from engaging in Red Cross work or from contributing to Red Cross funds by a suspicion that Red Cross enthusiasm is a mark of pacificism, or unpatroitic neturality, or of unmanly effeminancy?

The human mind is capable of curious quirks, but surely there could be no perversion of logic more ridiculous than a line of reasoning which would prove that, if a man is unable to join the forces, he can display his manliness, his patriotism and his courage by a stoical indifferenace to the sufferings of others.

Red Cross work is in every sense an act of real patriotism. In fact there is no Red Cross work more ardent and sympathetic than the soldier who will stop in the midst of battle, at the risk of his own life, to ease his comrades sufferings.

Why then should any man remaining in Canada scruple to avow himself a Red Cross enthusiast! If there is any flagging in Red Cross activity in Canada, it is the fault of the men rather than of women. Men it must be admitted have more interest in the active side of military preparation, but the military value of the Red Cross and the Patriotic funds can easily be proved.

Every branch of the Red Cross and every office of the Patriotic Fund is an effective recruiting poster. The latter announces to the soldier that his dependents will be looked after, the former, that he himself if wounded or such will not be abandoned.

Nothing can give such an impetus to recruiting as the sight of an active Red Cross organization generously supported by the public. Nothing can dampen the ardour of a prospective recruit so much as the thought of the ingratitude of an indifferent nation.

The Red Cross is to the soldier a symbol of civilian support and encouragement. If you are a slay at home, let your patriotism show itself in works. Give every support in your power to the Red Cross society.

The Value of Scientific Equipment.

When the war is over Red Cross surgeons will be able to publish records of surgical operations which will seem to the incredulous as extravagant fiction. Seeing though we do, in an age of great scientific achievements, few of us have any notion of the marvels which the modern surgeon can perform when he has all the tools of his trade.

Even the surgeon can do nothing with some of the terrible wounds which modern weapons of war inflict. None the less an incalculable number of wounded soldiers have been saved for further human usefulness, thanks to the scientific equipment which the Red Cross has been able to install in military hospitals.

A writer recently speaks of the Supreme importance of a certain hospital which contains a very rare and unique instrument, called the "Electro Cardiograph." This is an extremely sensitive instrument, fixed on a rigid concerte bed, which registers automatically the condition of the heart. It is of incalculable value in the diagnosis of heart diseases, and its use has saved thousands of wounded soldiers whose cases would otherwise have been insoluble.

Electrical apparatus has become of great importance owing to the curious nervous diseases produced by modern shell fire. A writer in describing a Red Cross hospital which makes a specialty of electrical treatment gives a striking picture of miracles effected in this way.

"Here were collected together" he states, in addition to mechanical apparatus for muscles and nerves and a wonderful vibrator, a number of instruments, many of the most costly kinds, for galvanism, faradism, ionic medication, and so on. To the average laymen these are little more than scientific words; but to see them in action was almost a conjuring show. A man was sitting there whose right hand was completely paralyzed owing to a bullet wound which had cut through nerve muscle. So far as his own will was concerned that hand was dead, and it would have remained but for this miracle of science.

With his left hand he generally presses a button-pad of a machine against a certain spot in his right forearm and lo, all the lifeless fingers move strongly up and down. With a smile of contented amusement the wounded man sits there for the specified time watching the activity of his own fingers at play independently of him. He cannot make them move or stop their movement except through the machine; but the exercise is doing his masterless fierves and muscles good. They are growing stronger, and soon he will have the perfect use of his hand again. The value of adequate scientific equipment in a hospital is undoubted. The Red Cross cannot have too many resources to meet its needs in this respect.

LITTLE CHANCE OF CONSCRIPTION IN THE OLD COUNTRY

Social events have been organized to send Christmas comforts to the famous Liverpool Irish Regiment who at Festubert added a new chapter to the story of Irish valour. Liverpool has also joined other British cities in expressing horror at the Armenian atrocities.

Emphasis has also been laid there upon the splendid part the American philanthropists have taken in educating and otherwise helping this oppressed people.

The Conscription Issue.

There are two schools of extremists on the issue of conscription. On the one hand there is the body which looks on conscription as the beginning in England of Prussian militarism and all the hideous breed of evils which that infernal system has inflicted on the world. On the other side, there are the men who followed Lord Roberts in his passionate campaign for National Service, and who insist that this war, with England's unpreparedness, has proved the unwisdom of this country in resisting the late old soldier's appeal. Between two such bodies, there can be no compromise, and if the issue come to be fought on the floor of the House they will fight each other very resolutely.

But between these two schools there are a great many men who look on the issue as one mainly of fact. The first fact on which they want information is as to the exact number of men who are required, and how far the present supply falls short of that demand. It is a question on which it is very difficult to get information — largely because definite information, it is supposed, might be useful to the enemy. Nobody can say even in round numbers how many men we have at this moment in France, but it is generally assumed that they are about a million. Then one has to add to these the men detached for service on the other war fronts—in Salonika, in Gallipoli, in Egypt, in Mesopotamia. The men still training in the country are put down as something like a million and a half. The men whose tendency is against conscription maintain that it is unfair to ask the country to send many more in addition to the gigantic numbers. Men, on the other hand, who have a leaning towards conscription, speak of numbers up to half a million —some even go as far as a million— to complete the work of conquering Germany. The question unfortunately has got into the refracting atmosphere of party passion. I do not mean that the Liberals are all on one side and the Conservatives all on the other. The question cuts across ordinary party lines; for there are a great many Liberals who are at least as keen for conscription as the most violent Conservative conscriptionist. The leader, for instance, of the conscriptionist group in the Ministry is Mr. Lloyd-George; on the other hand, it is generally reported that the most powerful memorandum against conscription was written by Mr. Balfour.

Into a Political Atmosphere.

But all the same, the question has got into the atmosphere of party again, and accordingly it is difficult to ascertain the facts. There are one or two facts, however, which one can definitely state, namely, that the Irish Party will oppose conscription to the end. It is a curious indication of the eagerness of the British conscriptionists that at an early stage of the struggle they indicated to the Irish Party that they were quite willing to exclude Ireland; but this was a compromise at which the Irish Party refused to look; first, because they regarded it as a betrayal of the British Democrats, to whose loyal assistance next to Irish effort and tenacity they attribute the victory of Home Rule. Second, because the Irish Party realise that such an exclusion of Ireland, especially if done with the approval of the Irish Party, would be used as a weapon against Ireland when the time comes to put Home Rule into operation.

But how far the uncompromising attitude of the Irish Party will be backed up by the Liberals is a question of still disputed fact. Two things are possible, though not probable, and without these two facts, conscription would be met by the opposition of the bulk of the Liberal Party. The first of these conditions is that a Conscription Bill is proposed by Mr. Asquith. The hold of Mr. Asquith over the House of Commons—and especially over the Liberal Party — is still astonishingly strong. I say astonishingly, considering the many disappointments of the war, and considering the hurricane of attack to which he has been subjected by Lord Northcliffe in his various organs. But it is still doubtful if Mr. Asquith will ever consent to propose a Conscription Bill. All his prepossessions are against it, and he has laid down a condition which binds him, namely, that the Bill should be received with practically universal assent.

A United Cabinet.

Which brings me to the second condition which is necessary for conscription to have any chance; and that is that Mr. Asquith should propose it with a united Cabinet behind him. There can be no united Cabinet on the subject — barring one thing which may upset all calculations, namely, a series of bad disasters in the East. If that should come, nobody could tell what would happen. But leaving that out of account, Mr. Asquith could not hope for a united Cabinet for conscription. Three Ministers would certainly resign—Mr. Runciman, Mr. Harcourt, and Mr. Birrell. Mr. Runciman is a comparatively young man, is the son of a great shipowner; he spent several years of his life as a shipowner himself, and has shown, as President of the Board of Trade, very remarkable gifts of organization. Like his father, Mr. Runciman is a life teetotaller; has the pallid but healthy complexion that belongs, as a rule, to the life teetotaller, and also the power of incessant work which is possible to the man whose energies are not in any way sapped by alcohol. He would be a loss to the Ministry. Mr. Harcourt is a man of consummate ability; can make one of the most powerful and cutting speeches of any man in the House—being a genuine wit; was an excellent Colonial Secretary, and altogether a notable man. His fortunes are easy, for he is married into the great American banking house of which Pierpont Morgan was the head; lives in a house in the fashionable quarter of Berkeley Square; has a historic mansion at Nuneham near Oxford, and is allied with all the great aristocratic families of England. But he is delicate in health; has never tried to be a great popular figure; and is more powerful accordingly in the House of Commons than in the country. Mr. Birrell's hostility to conscription is largely because as Chief Secretary he has such a profound knowledge of the Irish people and such a profound affection for them. "I'm not going to drag Irishmen with policemen away from their homes after they have sent the bravest troops in such large numbers to win our battles already," he said once to a friend.

Depends on McKenna.

But the loss of even these three Ministers would not necessarily mean the downfall of Mr. Asquith's Ministry and the end of conscription. The man on whom, to a large extent, the fate of both the one and the other depends is Mr. Reginald McKenna, the Chancellor of the Exchequer. After years of disparagement, Mr. McKenna has come to his own. He was constantly assailed by the Tories before the war as a man with the mind of a clerk and the bearing of a prig, and during the militant suffrage campaign he was assailed by the Pankhursts and their followers as the man who tortured, starved, and even murdered women, and both he and his wife and children had to be protected from assassination and violence by constant guards of police.

As Chancellor of the Exchequer he has come to his own. In his veins there is the blood of two generations of stiff North of Ireland bankers, and when he came to deal with figures he showed an immediate mastery of them that has taken everybody by surprise. His gifts are solid rather than brilliant, but they were just the gifts that were required in an hour of such gigantic financial stress. He has carried a big budget with consummate patience, good temper, and promptitude of argument; and in short, he is regarded as the man of the hour. Add that he has great courage, a will of iron, rigidity of opinion, and you will see that he is a formidable man.

If he left the Ministry on conscription, it would give a shake to the Ministry and to conscription which it would not recover. For his objections are founded on solid financial grounds. The truth is that even already the amount of recruiting has produced some grave financial and industrial results. Take the export of cotton goods; they form the greatest of England's products, so much so that cotton exports make up one-fifth of the entire export trade of England. But already that industry is reduced by twenty-five per cent. of its output by the number of men who have gone to the Front. It cannot be at any further reduction without seriously embarrassing the financial resources of the country. One hears the same tale of diminished output for the same cause in agriculture, and the importance of a maximum food production in a war like this need not be insisted upon. I find that many big business men, altogether irrespective of party, are very anxious about this industrial side of the war, and if their forces be rallied—and they could be rallied by such a leader as Mr. McKenna—then conscription could not pass.

Doesn't Expect Conscription.

Altogether, then, though I thought otherwise a short time ago, I do not think that conscription will be ever proposed, or that if it be proposed, it can be carried—unless again as I have said—there is a series of big disasters which might produce a panicky feeling, when all things are possible. But panic seems to be the last thing to be expected from the British people in their present mood. They can be charged much more with the happy-go-lucky feeling, which is the strength and the weakness of the race. They are not yet economizing as they should; they spend too much money on drink—though the closing of the saloons by the new licensing authorities is diminishing that. Few rich people drink champagne, unless when they are entertaining a young officer home for a brief holiday from the trenches. But life goes on too much as if we were in peace time. The next great departure if the war continues will possibly take the form of some stringent and compulsory legislation to produce greater thrift. It is the British purse which will be the ultimate factor in deciding the war—that purse has been terribly drained by Britain and by her Allies; she is at last beginning to realise that it is not bottomless, and she doesn't mean to get to the bottom until she has beaten Germany.

WHO'S IN THE BREAD LINE?

THERE would be no BREAD LINES in the BIG CITY if we who live in the country towns did our duty by ONE ANOTHER. YOU and I can do our part to break that bread line—to break up that appalling condition in which men must either beg or starve. Remember: The bread line of the Big CITY is recruited from the country. Our town has its duty to do. OUR Community can solve this problem. Industry should be plentiful in the country towns. But industry can't flourish here if we send our money to build up the BIG CITY. If all of us all of the time spent all of our money in our home town there would be no bread lines in the BIG CITY. Each home town would then take care of its OWN. Let you and me do OUR part.

HOW YOU MAY REDUCE YOUR WEIGHT

Overstoutness is a very unwelcome condition especially in the present day when slender figures are so fashionable and every reader of this paper has noticed the tendency of some people to put on an excessive amount of fat.

If you happen to be one of those whose weight is more than it should be, don't try to starve yourself, eat all you want, but go to your druggist and get off of orilene in capsule form and take one with each meal.

Oil of orilene increases the oxygen-carrying power of the blood and dissolves the fatty tissue, in many cases at nearly the rate of one lb. per day. Be sure to get oil of orilene in capsule form. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Any good druggist has it or a large sized box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Address D. J. Little Drug Co., Box 1249, Montreal, Canada.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

The staff at the City Hall is busily engaged in the task of preparing the Christmas greeting cards for the boys in the trenches. The names and addresses of several hundred have already been accounted for.

Building Permit.

A building permit has been issued to Mr. J. C. Ellis for a shed to be erected at 482 Mark Street, East City. Few building permits have been issued during the past few weeks.

Good Roads.

Invitations are out for the Good Roads Congress that is to be held in the near future. It is hardly likely that the city will be represented. This city has solved the problem of good roads by the use of asphalt.

Council Meeting.

A special meeting of the City Council will be called at an early date to dispose of a number of minor matters that are on file. Among these is a by-law confirming the 1916 contract for the collection of garbage.

It is curious to note the old sea-margins of human thought. Each subsiding century reveals some new mystery — we build where monsters used to hide themselves.—Longfellow.

As a high tide wave passion may be of the greatest value if it is used just to take us over the bar which separates the lower from the higher level of spiritual conduct.—Thackeray.

HERE IS A FAMILY THAT IS DOING ITS BIT

PTE. SCOTT MONTGOMERY, 21st Battalion, in France.

DRIVER RAY MONTGOMERY, Divisional Ammunition Column, C.F.A., in France.

DRIVER MORRIS MONTGOMERY, Divisional Ammunition Column, C. F.A., in France.

PTE. OWEN MONTGOMERY, 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles in England.

Here are four pictures that should cause many a young man to stop and think. These four brothers are former residents of Peterborough, and two of which, Ptes. Scott and Owen Montgomery, were living here when they enlisted, have two other brothers in the Imperial Army—six brothers out of six, serving the colours.

Havelock Has Lost Nearly 500 of Its Population Within Year

And Interdependence of County's Component Communities Suggests their Co-operative for Mutual and Common Welfare.

Havelock is said to have lost nearly one hundred and fifty families, or about five hundred persons, during the past year. The diversion of railway traffice resulting upon the opening of the C.P.R.'s new lake shore road started the slide that diminished activities at the local terminal and lead to an exodus of railway employees and other townspeople which has grown to considerable proportions for a community of Havelock's numbers even in its brightest days. No matter what the exact depreciation in population has been, it is altogether regrettable from the standpoint of the town, and of the County and City of Peterborough. The loss touches the whole ciunty, which would be in a much stronger position if the city, villages and countryside were linked together for their common welfare and advancement. This urban centre cannot regard the withdrawal of any business activity from Havelock, Lakefield or Norwood without a feeling of personal loss. It has often been wondered why the County Council, or this City's Council has not inaugurated some plan to unify the various communities for their individual and common good. The way has been open for some constructive scheme, even if it were only to try it out. Individualism has its merits, but the events of the past eighteen months have brought the sections of this county in closer relations than it has ever known. Incidents of the past week, even, have illustrated how near we are to each other, and how we can co-ordinate our efforts for a common cause. And this has been so spontaneous and successful that it suggests similar possibilities with other, if minor, objectives.

This county desires no ghost towns, and if mutual consideration and assistance can achieve anything in building up the various municipalities, some beginning should be made no matter how vague and visionary the proposal may appear. As an essential fact, individualism, as applied to the county's lesser integral sections has failed.

THE MACHINE GUN

How the Deadly Weapon was Invented—Is Equal to a Regiment

Tests against picked shots have shown that one machine gun will make more hits than 50 marksmen. One may safely say that, as a target hitter, the machine gun is equal to a regiment.

The development of this most effective of the weapons has been very interesting, and much money and time has been spent in perfecting it. Machine guns, of a primative kind was found in early history.

In 1382, the army at Ghent put 200 chars de canon in the field, a number of barrels mounted two wheeled carriages, garnished with spikes and scythe-blades. In 1411 the Burgundian army is said to have had 2,000 of these weapons. Louis the twelfth had a machine gun which fired 50 shots at one round.

The ribaudequin Chinois, captured from the Chinese by the French in 1860 is probably the earliest type of machine gun known. It is believed that this gun was built about the beginning of the fourteenth century. It consisted of a very heavy truck reforced with iron. On this truck were mounted four iron barrels 9 feet long. They were all fired at once by a train of powder leading to every barrel.

The next important development was the Danish 9 barrels gun mounted in sets of three on a two wheeled carriage. One set of barrels was fired at a time. Closely following this came the American revolving cannon capable of firing three charges in quick succession, this gun was very popular in the war of 1812, and doubtless was responsible for some sensational sea victories. But a really satisfactory machine gun was not found until breech-loading had been discovered.

Then came in quick succession the Gatlin Reffye, Requa, Hotchkiss, Gardner, Bessemer, and Maxim, each smaller, lighter, more compact, more accurate, or having greater firing speed than its predecession. The maxim is the one most widely used by the warring nations to-day. It weights 50 to 60 pounds and fires 450 to 600 rounds per minute.

The Colt automatic is another very popular type, very similar to the Maxim and with about the same rate of fire. It weighs only about 40 pounds. The Lewis is similar to the Colt gun but about 2 pounds lighter.

The Maxim, Colt, and Lewis are all highly scientific machines, of the deadliest kind machine guns in the highest sense of the world.

Good Form In Giving Presents

Simple Little Embellishments Such as Ribbons, Seals and Holly Count For Much

At no time does the manner of doing a thing count for so much as at the time of Christmas giving; and while in a few instances there are those who overdo the outward embellishment of gifts, none of us now like to offer the simplest little remembrance unless wrapped in spotless paper, tied with gay ribbons and adorned with bright seals expressing merry greetings.

And this is as it should be for the holiday season gains a great deal of cheeriness and zest from the multiplicity of beribboned white parcels whisking to and fro, and we do not regret the passing of the yellow paper bundle of our grandmother's day.

But the attractive appearance of the gift is not all that counts; we must be careful of the how and when and where of presenting it.

The time that custom more and more sets apart for the exchanging of gifts among friends is Christmas eve, any time from dusk to midnight; but Christmas day itself is sacred to presenting gifts within the family circle.

Some families put all the gifts in the library or living room, in separate piles, and then, after a deliberate breakfast, they all walk in and open the packages in the presence of each other.

Never give a gift in person if you can contrive to send it or put it where it will be found awaiting the recipient when he or she is alone, for when received in this way the gift makes its strongest appeal to one's appreciation.

In giving money, even to near relatives, the utmost care should be taken to give it in the most delicate way possible; especially if you know the money is needed

One of the cleverest ways is to take a tiny Japanese umbrella, place the money in a paper bag and, after rolling and tying the bag around the upper part of the handle underneath, close the umbrella over it and tie with narrow ribbon.

Another good way is to present an attractive little booklet with a check or a greenback for a bookmark, writing on the flyleaf, "note page 14." Turning to see what is noted, the fresh new paper money is seen and the recepient appreciates the manner of its presentation no less than the material benefit.

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION IS ANXIOUS TO HAVE THE INVESTIGATION ENLARGED

Some of the Members of the Board Are Dubious About the Resolution Authorizing the Enquiry---Special Meeting Was Held Last Evening to Consider the Matter---Some Sharp Repartee--Investigation Opened This Morning

CHAIRMAN THREATENS TO RESIGN

Last evening the Board of Education met in special session to consider the course to be adopted by the Board in connection with the investigation that is pending. Those present were Messrs. B. F. Ackerman chairman, W. H. Hill, J. Smith, G. N. Gordon, J. Crane, J. W. Miller, Dr. G. Burnham, R. Denne, V. Eastwood, T. B. McGrath, Mr. E. A. Peck, solicitor for the Board was also present.

The following letter, which is self explanatory, was read by Mr. B. F. Ackerman:

Gentlemen,—I have called this special meeting at the request of the majority of the Board to take such action as may be thought necessary in view of a stated hearing by His Honour Judge Huycke on the 11th inst., into matters affecting this Board.

I regret to say that prior to the election for school trustees last year, Mr. G. N. Gordon, in his pre-election statements, made a series of charges reflecting upon the good name of the Board and its members. I have been given to understand throughout the year, that following the action of this Board in asking the City Council to appoint a judicial officer to inquire into the charges, action would be taken forthwith to celar the matter up, or I would have resigned early in the year. We have now arrived within a few days of the end of the school year, and it is very doubtful if the inquiry can receive full consideration, or a decision reached in time to enable the retiring members to go before the electors cleared of the imputations.

As the charges were made by Mr. Gordon, he is the one to press the inquiry to a speedy conclusion, and I am convinced that his policy has been one of procrastination to baulk the issue, for he well knows that there is not one iota of truth in his imputations.

Personally, and as a member of the Board, I defy any charge of wrong doing, and as I do not propose to sit further on a Board with a member who has endeavoured to blacken my reputation without giving me an opportunity to clear myself, I wish to say that unless Mr. Gordon retracts his statements publicly, and apologizes before the day for nominations, I shall refuse to sit longer on the Board with him.

B. F. ACKERMAN.

Peterborough, Dec. 10, 1915.

"A Clever Tactician."

Mr. Gordon said he was unavoidably absent from the previous meeting; a circumstance which he regretted. He went on to say that only one member of the Board had been impeached and for that reason a judicial enquiry was pendig. Mr. R. R. Hall had written a letter to a client and that client had caused to be published what Mr. Gordon characterized as "privileged correspondence." "Hall is a clever tactician," said Mr. Gordon. "He could have arranged to have had the matter brought to the attention of the County Judge at any time throughout the year. The matter was submitted to this Board and subsequently the City Council authorized an investigation. This was covered by a resolution which, according to the rules governing this Board places it beyond the pale of further consideration unless a two-thirds vote is secured in which case the matter can be re-opened."

Mr. Gordon contended that the Board had no right to re-consider the matter and that such action constituted a contempt of court in view of the judicial enquiry now pending.

Both Mr. Hill and Dr. Burnham wanted to know if Mr. Gordon proposed to have all the charges investigated.

Mr. Gordon refused to disclose the scope of the investigation preferring to leave that to the jurisdiction of the judge.

Defied the "Alligator."

Mr. Hill—"When Mr. Gordon appeared before the public a year ago he made certain allegations reflecting on the integrity of this Board."

"That is absolutely untrue," interposed Mr. Gordon.

The chairman called Mr. Gordon to order while the latter invited Mr. Hill to address the chair, which he did following a few sharp exchanges.

"I defy the alligator," continued Mr. Hill, to the apparent amusement of Mr. Gordon. "He has attempted to slander and libel me."

Again Mr. Gordon objected, claiming that the language used by Mr. Hill was "unparliamentary."

Mr. Hill charged Mr. Gordon with attempting to "bluff" the Board by making the statement that Mr. Hall could have arranged for the investigation at any time during the year. Mr. Hill asserted that he had every confidence in Mr. Hall and he would defy Mr. Gordon or anybody else to prove that he had committed any wrong. "What the people want to know," said Mr. Hill, "is whether the charges are true or untrue."

"Why not leave that to the judge," suggested Mr. Gordon.

"Dangerous Ground."

"That's what we are going to do," replied Mr. Hill. "We are not going to leave it to you."

Mr. Hill went on to enumerate what he said constituted certain allegations said to have originated with Mr. Gordon and which accused him of holding stock in a certain company, and also referred to the expenditure of a matter of twenty-five thousand dollars."

"I want to warn you that you are treading on pretty dangerous ground," said Mr. Gordon. The latter asked for a ruling from the chair restraining Mr. Hill from making "insinuations."

"The object of this meeting," said Mr. Hill, "is to prepare for the hearing on Saturday morning. We want the investigation made as far reaching as possible. This thing should have been done nine months ago."

Mr. Gordon asked Mr. Hill through the medium of the chairman, if he would be satisfied with a decision from the judge as to whether Mr. Hall could have instituted proceedings earlier in the year.

Mr. Hill took the ground that the "accuser was the man to bring on the investigation and not the accused's solicitor.

Mr. Gordon— "Your solicitor laid down on the job."

"More than my solicitor laid down on the job" was Mr. Hill's rejoinder.

The Resolution.

Mr. Eastwood was of the opinion that the pending investigation was to cover everything. He was prepared to leave the matter in the hands of the judge and not deal with it in schoolboy fashion.

Mr. Crane— "The Board want to know what the investigation will cover?"

"Rather late hour to start and find out what it covers. The resolution passed by the Council is wide, so is the jurisdiction of the court" said Mr. Gordon.

Mr. Hill—"Peculiar time of the year to bring on an investigation."

Mr. Ackerman—Yes, and on Saturday too."

"And on market day," observed Mr. Eastwood.

At this stage the resolution authorizing the investigation which was passed by the City Council was produced and read. Mr. Hill contended that it did not include the charges respecting the whole Board, but merely named Mr. Hill as the object of the investigation. "You made certain statements to get advertising, and you will get enough advertising," said Mr. Hill addressing Mr. Gordon.

"And you will get the wrong kind of advertising I am afraid," countered Mr. Gordon.

"There's nothing in the resolution to cause me to change my mind," said Mr. Ackerman. "It's pretty near time we knew what was going to be investigated."

A Public Document.

"The resolution has been a public document for five or six months and has apepared in the public press," said Mr. Gordon.

"I want every act of mine investigated," reiterated Mr. Hill.

Mr. Gordon— "You will get it, you needn't urge upon. It's coming all right," replied Mr. Gordon.

Mr. Crane moved that Mr. E. A. Peck be authorized to have the scope of the investigation enlarged. This was carried. Mr. Peck will also represent the Board at the preliminary hearing.

Mr. Peck did not think that the judge would extend the investigation beyond the bounds of the resolution. The investigation would probably be limited to the resolution.

Mr. Hill—"Mr. Gordon wants the investigation to cover just what he wants."

"That's unfair to the City Council and this Board," said Mr. Gordon.

The Board then adjourned.

Mr. E. A. Peck, representing the Board of Education, and Mr. R. R. Hall, representing Mr. W. H. Hill, appeared this morning before His Honour Judge Huycke with the request to have the investigation relating to the School Board, commenced at once. His Honour decided to open the inquiry on Monday, Dec. 20th. It was intimated that a number of teachers might be required as witnesses, in which case the Board would have to make the necessary arrangements. The week commencing Monday, December twentieth conflicts with the seasonal examinations in the various schools. Judge Huycke pointed out the imperative necessity of facilitating the attendance of teachers who might be required at the hearing. "It's late in the year to bring on an investigation when any other month would have been suitable," said His Honour Judge Huycke.

Mr. Peck—"The Board of Education expected Mr. Gordon to take the initial proceedings."

"The Board had no right to expect anything of the kind, although it might have been proper for Mr. Gordon to have done so," said Judge Huycke. "You waited a whole year and now you want to hurry the thing along at the last moment."

Judge Huycke in answer to Mr. Peck's request for information as to the proposed scope of the investigation, said it was his intention to leave it open. He assured Mr. Peck that it would be broad in scope. He was unwilling, he said, but ready to act as investigator with the consent of the parties concerned, having been assured by the said parties that his finding would be binding. He did not agree with the counsel as to his right to investigate the matter even at the request of the City Council.

Herbert Davis, Birdsalls.
Geo. Ed. Woodcock, 45 Lafayette Ave.
Ed. Doleman, 44 Lafayette Ave.
Walter Henry Suddards, 168 Hazlett St.
Louis Fewings, Ballyduff.
Wm. Thos. West, Pontypool.
Theodore Manning, Lakefield.
Joseph Merik, Port Hope.
Daincourt Windover, Buckhorn.
Jewell Windover, Buckhorn.
Warren Windover, Buckhorn.

The last three named in the above list are sons of Mr. and Mrs. Elijah Windover, Hall's Bridge (Buckhorn). The three boys came in together and were taken on the strength of the battalion yesterday. Their gallant action in all three responding together to the call of King and country is an example to the whole county. Mr. and Mrs. Windover have only one son left and he is too young for military service. The Windover boys were born at Hall's Bridge.

The Windovers add another to the long list of pairs of brothers in the 93rd which has now reached a total of eighteen.

The 93rd had an enjoyable route march yesterday afternoon, marching to Nassau, crossing the river at that point and returning through East City. Music was furnished by the Bugle Band, assisted by the cornets of the brass band.

The men of the 93rd were issued to-day with woollen toques which will be used during the drilling on the parade ground. The guards were issued with the headgear last night and found them very comfortable. The winter caps for the 93rd are expected at any time.

The following verses, written by the chaplain of the 36th Battalion, C.E.F., Bermuda, were sent to Mrs. C. Baxter, Francis street, city, by her brother, Pte. R. Sandford:

Hold the Trench For I Am Coming.

See the mighty foe advancing,
Kaiser leading on.
World-wide sway his sword demanding.
Huns are in the van.

Hold the trench for we are coming,
Canada signals still,
Waves the answer back from Death's land,
By God's grace we will.

See my comrades, see the signal
Flashing in the sky,
Reinforcements now are coming,
Victory is nigh.

Hold the trenches, etc.

See our glorious banner waving
Over our fair land,
Calling lads to uphold freedom
Gladly do we stand.

Hold the trenches, etc.

Fierce and cold may be the trenches
Duty long and drear,
Thirty-eight is on your track, boys,
Advance has sounded clear.

Hold the trench, etc.

CONCERT AT S. A. TEMPLE MONDAY

An invitation is extended to you to attend a concert at the Temple on Monday evening. The Band has arranged a splendid programme, and will be assisted by the songsters. This is the first concert given by the Band since so many of the men enlisted. The Band has been strengthened. Several of its members are members of the 93rd Band, but still retain their interest in the Temple Band. Three bandsmen from Hamilton Salvation Army Band, who joined the 93rd Band are helping the Temple Band; also a new member from Sherbrooke. The Songsters will render some special selections which were given with much success last week-end at Lindsay, during the special meeting conducted by Commissioner Richards. A pleasant evening is promised to all who attend The concert will start at 8 p.m. Programme will appear in Monday's issue.

WHO IS DR. JACKSON?

For years he taught food chemistry, dietetics, and diseases of the digestive tract in one of the large medical schools of the continent. In his extensive experience in free clinics he worked out the formula for Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal, a compound of whole wheat and rye, with deodorized flaxseed and bran. It nourishes better than meat, prevents indigestion, and positively relieves constipation or "money back." Ask your doctor. At all grocers, 10c and 25c.

NEW TACTICS IN THE BALKANS

Serbians, Deluged With Shells, Had No Opportunity for Infantry Engagements

PARIS, Dec. 10.—Chas. Humbert, Senator of France and member of the Senate Army Commission, says:

"The Teutons have inaugurated new tactics in the Balkans, consisting of the employment of minimum troops and a maximum of artillery. They are economizing on human material, which it takes twenty years to produce, while relying on their big guns which their shops seem able to supply in inexhaustible abundance.

"It is certain that Field-Marshal von Mackensen had not more than 175,000 Germans, in addition to 80,000 Austrians, but they had artillery sufficient for one million men, according to the pre-war theory. They employed five guns where only one would have been used in previous wars.

"The result was the Teutonic infantry seldom came in contact with the Serbs, who were deluged with shells, and were unable to display their traditional bravery.

"The lesson of the Serbian campaign is that Germany, realizing that she is at the end of her resources in men, now hopes to crush the Allies by the sheer weight of metal.

"It is our duty to be immediately ready to meet a similar phalanx of guns on our front by still further increasing the number of our batteries."

SHOE REPAIRING BY MACHINERY

The installation of an automatic shoe repairing machine, operated by electricity, now in daily operation in Johnny Sutherland's repair shop, Simcoe Street, is another object lesson in labour-saving machinery. The machine has the following attachments: A Goodyear welt sole stitcher, an edge turner, a scoring device with rolls for trimming the heels and soles, and a set of finishing tools and brushes. Any of these attachments can be operated singly or together, as the power is adjusted so as to suit the wishes of the operator. There is also a powerful blast for carrying off all dust in the process of the work. The wax box is heated by gas, as well as the waxed threads and other sewing parts which are kept hot for the free working of the stitcher. The machine is run by a two horse-power electric motor, and is said to be the only one of this particular type in the city. Mr. Sutherland will welcome all visitors who would like to see machine in operation.

PATRIOTIC EVENT AT THE EMPIRE PRODUCED $65.00

The Canadian-American Club realized $65.00 from yesterday afternoon's programme at the Empire Theatre, and will utilize this sum for the continuance of their preparations of comforts and other supplies for the soldiers at the front. Capt. J. H. Burnham acted as chairman, and Col. Mills gave an interesting address on some of the phases of affairs in Belgium and France. Dr. F. L. Robinson turned the theatre over to the Club for the afternoon.

EDDY'S MATCHES

Have been the same good Matches since 1851. Like Eddy's Fibreware and Eddy's Washboards. They are considered standard by all loyal Canadians under the "Made in Canada" Banner.

MARKET FEATURES

Fowl Plentiful, Prices Soaring —Beef in large Quantities —Butter and Eggs Remain Firm

Fine weather and good roads are a winning combination for market-day. The outside section was not quite so well represented as formerly, but the jam in the city made up for any deficiency there.

One lady who might tip the scales at 200 remarked: "This is no place for stout people."

Fowl were very numerous and brought fancy prices. Chickens averaged 50 cents each for the small birds. One that weighed 7 lbs. sold for 90 cents. Ducks that weighed 5¼ lbs. brought 90c. Geese weighing 11 lbs. brought $1.50, 14 lbs. $1.85. Turkeys weighing 15 lbs. brought $2.90, 9 lbs. $1.70.

Cream sold for 90 cents per pint, and 5c for the sealer.

Butter was plentiful and continued to bring 30 cents a pound.

Eggs were somewhat scarce, and captured 40 cents a dozen for those strictly fresh, and 35 cents for those laid earlier in the season.

One man had a basket of lard which he sold at two pounds for a quarter.

Wings (suitable for good boys before Christmas) sold at 5c each.

The Ladies' Aid of the Park St. Baptist Church had a table of home-made cooking.

OUTSIDE SECTION.

Beef was very much in evidence and sold at 10 cents for front quarter and 12 cents for the hind.

Pork realized 15 and 16 cents.

Lamb sold for 15 and 17 cents.

Live hens sold at 75c, 90c and $1.00 each.

Wood, three loads of it, sold as follows: Mixed, 4 ft. at $3.00 a cord. Hardwood 4 ft. $4.00, and hardwood 16 in., $6.00 a cord.

Apples were selling at their usual prices: Greenings $1.25 a bag, $4.00 a barrel; Spies, $5.00 and $6.00 a barrel.

Vegetables, by the bag, sold as follows: Onions, $1.00; turnips, 25 cents; carrots, 60 cents; potatoes, $1.50.

Red cabbage brought 5 cents each, citrons 10 cents each, squash 10 cents each.

Head cheese, 2 lbs. for 15c.

If next Saturday is a fine day there will likely be a large offering of fowl. Citizens would do well to plan for an early appearance on the market with plenty of small change.

300 FREIGHT CARS CALLED TO MIDLAND

Three hundred G.T.R. cars have been ordered to Midland to assist in carrying grain, indicating the extent of the freight traffic that may be expected in the near future.

The big mogul or compound engines which are being used out of Lindsay are not coming over this section of the G.T.R. until the road has been thoroughly prepared for them. When heavier rails have been laid and the roadbed otherwise renovated, it is believed that the smaller engines will be gradually withdrawn from this division.

COMMITTEE MAKE FINAL APPEAL TO THE CITIZENS

To the Citizens of Peterborough:

The three-day whirlwind campaign for the Patriotic Fund is over. A great deal of work was done preliminary to the canvass by a committee of your citizens. For three days and three nights upwards of one hundred men have been giving their entire time to the canvass of Peterborough's citizens. They have tried to reach everyone, either where he or she worked, or at their homes. If you have been missed the fault does not rest with the canvassers. They have done their best, and do not think that your support to this fund is not desired or needed.

The campaign is over, but the Fund is not closed. Every citizen of Peterborough, who is not fighting in this great struggle, certainly ought to have a part in providing for the needs of the women and children of the men who are fighting for us.

The need of further subscriptions is very pressing, and the Campaign Committee beg to make this final appeal to all those who have not contributed, to bring or send in their contribution to Mr. John Crane, at the Dominion Bank.

No subscription will be too small to be appreciated, and none larger than will be needed.

The committee are preparing a list of all the subscriptions received, anad will acknowledge same through the press at an early date.

Will you not do your bit? If you are not fighting what contribution can you make to the cause of freedom if you are not willing to pay?

THE PETERBOROUGH PATRIOTIC FUND, Campaign Committee.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

35 NEW MEMBERS WERE RECEIVED BY CURLING CLUB LAST NIGHT

Quite a Number of New Faces Will Be Seen at the Rink This Winter, and Former Members Are Renewing Their Game.

Making A Fine Beginning

W. H. Taylor and G. H. Giroux were appointed tankard skips, and W. D. Campbell and Alex. C. Kay skips, for the district cup games at a meeting of the local curling skips last night.

A meeting of the whole club followed when thirty-five new members were accepted. Some of them are former curlers who had dropped out of the game for a season or two, others are curlers who have come to Peterborough since the ice last disappeared, and the rest are novices who have yet to cross the "hog" line. Mr. James Connal will don his "tam" again, and Mr. B. F. Ackerman is also getting back into the game. Mr. Hernie Nicoll who has skipped Norwood rinks, was among those received by the local club, and Mr. Chas. Langley has played in international games on both sides of the border. In Mr. W. R. Widdis the locals are strengthened by one of Lindsay's good curlers. The new members are as follows:

B. F. Ackerman, Arthur Belleghem, E. W. Borbridge, Geo. B. Bouchet, S. Clegg, J. H. Connal, H. W. Cook, John Crane, L. G. Dobbin, H. Evans, H. Ofl Fiske, A. T. S. Gilbert, J. W. Gomer, J. M. Greene, R. M. Hamilton, G. L. Hay, E. H. Howson, M. Kerneghan, S. Gerneghan, A. M. Laidlaw, Chas. Langley, J. F. Linton, G. H. Logie, J. M. Lowes, W. H. Meredith, O. Moore, A. Mowat, T. D. Mulholland, H. W. Nicoll, C. C. Parsons, C. H. Patterson, R. J. Soden, W. B. Warne, Chas. Westbrook, W. R. Widdis.

With a little more of this weather, Angus McIntosh will likely have good ice ready next week, although this is not offered as a promise. It all depends on the weather man. At that the club is getting away to an early start, and the management can be depended upon to enliven the season. The game will not only provide its fascination, but it will also afford a light exercise that should have beneficial effects.

A piano was talked of last season at the the concluding meeting, and Mr. R. M. Waddell almost promised the members that the Club would endeavour to provide for one this season.

Mr. J. E. A. Fitzgerald is the president this year, having succeeded Mr. H. R. H. Kenner.

Junior City Hockey League Is Worthy of Consideration

Boys Under Eighteen Should Be Given a Chance This Winter to Get Experience.

It has been suggested that a City Hockey League should be formed here this winter for the youngsters under eighteen. Mr. M. J. Maher has broached the idea and if there are any other hockey enthusiasts who would be willing to help the juniors there is little doubt but that a four-team league could be organized. Certainly the boys of from fifteen to eighteen should be encouraged, but they need the support of experienced men. The Junior City League of several years not only provided an interesting series of games, but gave the boys considerable experience, including the discipline that is essential to propor conduct in the games. A few of the boys who played in the last Junior City League have enlisted. Harold Knapman of the Y.M.C.A. is with the 39rd Battery, Barney Quinn also of the "Y" team is with the old 2nd Battalion, "Scotty" Rogers of Petter Gettas' "Bostons" is with the 21st Battalion, and Alex Butcher of the same team is with the 39rd Battery, Bruce Clark of the Wanderer's is with the 39th. These are youths in their prime, and not a little of their gameness was probably developed on the ice.

At the present time when the military microscope is being applied to the spines of the men between 18 and 40, there is a tendency to overlook the boys who a few years hence will be stepping into manhood. Hence a league for these youngsters should commend itself to those who have the desire and the time to give these boys the opportunity their predecessors enjoyed.

TWO PETERBOROUGH TEAMS IN THE SAME GROUP

Electrics and 93rd Battalion Teams Are Grouped With Campbellford and Cobourg St. Michaels—There Are Six Teams in the Junior O. H. A. Group

The two Peterborough Intermediate O.H.A. teams, the newly formed Peterborough Electrics, and the team represented by the 93rd Battalion, have been placed in the same group of the O.H.A. The O.H.A. groupings were arranged list night, and the two in which Peterborough fans are most interested are as follows:

Intermediate Series.

Group No. 2—Convener, J. R. Bond, meet at Peterborough. Peterborough Electrics, 93rd Battalion (Peterborough), Campbellford and Cobourg.

St. Michael's Junior Series.

Group No. 2—Convener, S. Lockington, Port Hope meet at Port Hope, Cobourg, Peterborough, Bowmanville, Port Hope, Oshawa, Campbellford.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I venture to make a request of your readers and am sure it will recommend itself in view of approaching winter in Europe, and the need of warm clothing for our soldiers.

There is at present an Association makink waistcoats lining or interlining out of old kid or suede gloves, no matter how soiled or worn. Every portion is utilized and are pronounced by our men to be very warm, as the wind does not go through them. There will be many persons who have old gloves, either ladies' or gentlemen's and if they will kindly send them to Mrs. B. Hudson, 629 Stewart street, she will undertake to see that they are forwarded to the proper address.

River Frozen Over

The lake and river has frozen over practically from the C.P.R. bridge down, and below the locks there is the same evidence of the severity of recent frosts. Near the foot of Lock Street the river froze over in one night, and it is learned that Rice Lake received its top coating eight days ago.

There should be plenty of skating around the city now, especially on the canal, where a long stretch of ice is afforded.

THE WEATHER

The temperature this morning at daybreak was 4 degrees above zero. This is the lowest figure of the present season.

FIRST PRACTICE MONDAY NIGHT

Brock street rink was flooded for the first time yesterday and with the cold snap working well it is expected the ice will be ready for the first hockey practice of the season on Monday night. The rink staff worked through last night in order to get a sheet prepared for the beginning of next week.

Death Sentence Commuted

OTTAWA, Dec. 11.—Executivex clemency has been extended to Mrs. Annie Hawkes of Macleod, Alta., under sentence of death for the murder of another woman whom her husband had brought into the house to live. She d'd so when in a state of hysteria. The sentence has been changed to ten years' imprisonment.

Pretty good work for one afternoon. Excellent pickings. One would go out and affirm that so much money could not be found loose in the city. But the object, the need, the necessity for us to keep our pledges was recognized and met. Thanks, men and women of the city. Hearty, sincere, grateful thanks. Your work and your worth is appreciated. The committee may further on make formal acknowledgement. In the meantime, take it as said and read.

Roughly speaking the total of subscriptions received is $61.22.65, a magnificent showing. Even beyond what was thought might be attained.

Some belated subscriptions will come in; several have been received this morning for good amounts.

Several errors have turned up in the lists of teams. Mr. Jas. Lewis was placed as Jas. Blewett. All wrong. Lewis is a different man to the inferred Blewett. So let Mr. Blewett drop into obscurity. Mr. John C. Reid gave yeoman work on Team 3, and backed his work and opinions with a substantial subscription.

Glad to see Sergt. Allen. Called at the rooms and sat at supper, and then got up and thanked the Patriotic Fund for the sense of relief he had when on the line that his wife was being looked after. Had there been time, the meeting would have been glad to have had from Sergt. Allen his experiences in the trenches.

A whole raft of subscriptions, mentioned here, not of the amounts, but to show that the diligent work of the teams enthused men to loosen up in fine shape. It was fully as much for the giver of a small amount, measured by means at hand, as for those who gave larger amounts. All are appreciated. In fact, the bulk of the Fund came from smaller amounts, but the larger added a grace and finish to an otherwise commendable structure. All honour and thanks to the moderate giver.

Employees of the Bell Telephone Co $111, Grafton & Co. $100, and $25 from the store staff. Liberal gift from City Solicitor Gordon of $15 per month until the end of the war and after. W. Langford and son $75, Peterborough Machine and Lubricator Co. (the team captain had some difficulty on pronouncing the title) $100, J. H. Ferguson $50, Judge Huycke $300, W. H. Hill $125, T. V. C. (Supt. Dept) $216, H. A. Morrow $250, R. Hall & Son $350, D. O'Connell $50, Major Cameron $50, Mrs. T. G. Hazlitt $1,000, Miss Charlotte Dickson $300, Miss Martha Dickson $300, Mrs. Walsh $400, Geo. W. Hatton $100 (with three boys at the Front), W. H. Dunsford $100, Jas. Kendry $500, Auburn Woollen Co. $1,000, John Bentley (Auburn Co.) $500, Can. Chicle Co. $100, Cressman Co. $350, A. McDonald Estate $100, Pet. Canoe Co. $500, and from the employees of the company $170.50, E. G. Patterson $60, F. J. Might $100, and $177.30 from the staff of the Oriental Hotel.

Just a few more to complete the roster and finish the notes: R. M. Waddell, Mrs. Waddell, and Mrs. H. Waddell $1,000, Quaker Oats Co. $1,000, R. R. Hall $250, from Geo. Gladman, W. Scott and R. Hicks $50 each, Lundy Estate $500, Ald. G. W. Green $120, and from Mrs. Green $50, Pet. Hardware Co. $100, W. B. Warne $100, John Williams $50, V. Eastwood $50, employees of the Wm. Hamilton Co. $505, from the office staff of the Co. $272, employees of the Quaker Oats Co. $375, employees Pet. Machine Co. $135, of Peter Hamilton Co. $140.78 (without the office staff), employees Pet. Lock Co. $200, of J. J. Turner & Sons $216.15, Brinton Carpet Co. $29.50, employees of the Canadian General Electric Co. the handsome and substantial sum of $1100.34. The Henry Hope Co. employees, where only a few men are at work at present, gave the fine contribution of $194 40. The employees of the Matthews-Blackwell Co. gave, as may have been noted before, $900. It is expected that the C.G.E. Co. will make a grant or gift to the fund further on, when the manager returns from abroad—possibly one of $1,000.

Taken altogether, it was great picking, entirely. And for all of which we are truly grateful. Memorable for the spontaneous response to the appeal. Warranted, because it was needed.

The closing hour of the final meeting was devoted to brief remarks from the team captains, and all took occasion to praise their men in unqualified terms. Space will not permit of these remarks being reported for the benefit of posterity. One good, broad feeling was to the front, that one hundred men had come together, worked in unison, gained their object, felt the better for the friendly co-partnership and for the work done. All know each other better. In fact, some would endorse a note for the other fellow, and that is a high proof of friendship, or the other thing.

The big placard and thermometer will be saved, and possibly next year there will be an anniversary and gathering to fight the battles over and have a good time. We all hope that this is the last time there will be a necessity for a Patriotic Fund campaign.

Mr. O'Connell's Address.

Mr. Dan O'Connell, the chairman of the committee, arrived shortly after 8 o'clock and was enthusiastically received. In a stirring address Mr. O'Connell expressed his regret that business of importance had necessitated his absence from the city during the campaign, and his great pleasure at the splendid total the teams had rolled up. Mr. O'Connell said that while it might seem envious to mention some names when all had done so well, he felt that something should be said of those whose work had been all important, although they were not prominently in the limelight. In this connection he mentioned Mr. F. H. Dobbin for his splendid work in administering the funds, and in the publicity campaign; Mr. J. A. Aylmer, whose preparatory work for the campaign which made it so easy for the committee, had been long and arduous; Mr. R. R. Hall, for his work in arranging Tuesday's successful public meeting; Adjutant McElhiney, for his assistance and co-operation during the year in connection with the administering of the fund; Mr. Walter Stocker, Mr. F. D. Kerr and others, not forgetting the organizer, Mr. Dean. Mr. O'Connell referred to the splendid way in which the people of Peterborough had responded to all the calls that had been made upon them. They had given freely to the Red Cross Society and all other funds, and it was therefore all the more creditable to see the three-day Patriotic Fund Campaign crowded with such notable success. In dealing with the war situation generally, Mr. O'Connell said that it had been proven that the British people were prepared to meet all the demands that were made upon them, ready to make the sacrifices that were deemed necessary, even if it called for the supreme sacrifice of giving one's life.

The speaker referred to the great benefit the members of the team had gained through the intermingling for three days among men of different beliefs and opinions, and expressed the hope that they might often be gathered to-day, not for a patriotic fund campaign, but for other purposes.

Mr. R. R. Hall aroused enthusiasm in a patriotic address in which he reminded his hearers of the story of Florence Nightingale. He pointed out that that heroic woman was the outstanding figure of the Crimean war, her renown surpassing that of any of the soldiers engaged. This was an encouragement to the people unable to go to the front, who could feel that by liberal contributions to the Red Cross and Patriotic Funds they were helping to do their share in the cause of the Empire.

A WONDERFUL OPPORTUNITY TO SECURE A PIANO FOR CHRISTMAS

The Christmas Musical Club Offers Many Buying Advantages to Members

No greater opportunities have ever been presented to buyers of musical instruments for Christmas than are now offered to readers of The Peterborough Examiner through the Chistmas Musical Club. Those who join the club are entitled to many advantages and savings not accorded to others.

The Club is founded upon the co-operative plan and by purchasing together within a limited period the members can secure standard musical instruments for Christmas at the lowest spot cash prices and still have the privilege of paying for them on easy terms. No extras are added to the prios of the instruments because of Club terms of payment and there are many other buying conveniences. One of the interesting things about the plan is the Relief Insurance and Free Exchange privileges.

Club members are entitled to make selection without restriction from the stock of the well-known house of J. M. Greene Music Co. The fact that the goods may be secured from this old established firm ensures satisfaction and goods of the highest quality. The instruments that may be secured include Baby Ennis and Sweet-toned Ennis; also the well-known "Artist's Choice," New Scale Williams Pianos. A large variety of Player Pianos and Grand Pianos of the above makes are included.

A membership fee of $1, payable after acceptance, entitles the member to all benefits of the Club. If he decides not to purchase before the Club closes, his money will be refunded. Any person thinking of purchasing a Piano or Player Piano, should join the Musical Club now, as it closes on the night of the 24th of December.

A post card mailed to the Christmas Musical Club, care of J. M. Greene Music Co., Peterborough, will bring the information which will tell you about the plan.

TRINITY METHODIST CHURCH TO BE OPENED ON JAN. 2ND

Trinity Methodist Church will be opened on Sunday, January 2, 1916. There only remains to apply a few finishing touches to this splendid new edifice, and it will be entirely completed and furnished for its first divine service. Carpets are being laid in the aisles and the organ is expected here on Tuesday. Rev. Dr. Chown, General Superintendent of the Methodist Church, will be here for the opening Sunday, which will be a memorable day in the history of the Methodist Church in Peterborough, and of this congregation in particular. The ladies are preparing for a big New Year's dinner on Monday, January 3rd. Further details of the series of events that will mark the opening of Trinity will be published later.

NO MEETING.

There will be no meeting this month of the Elementary Graded Union of Sunday School Teachers.

CHRISTMAS BOXES FOR THE MEN OF KNOX CHURCH AT FRONT

The members of Knox Presbyterian church, who are on active service were not forgotten when the time for sending Christmas greetings arrived. A Christmas box was sent to each soldier and among the many articles packed in the boxes was a folder, the sides of which are covered with snapshots, including one of Mr. W. J. Byers' store, of Mr. C. Coleman and his store front, the recruiting window on Simcoe street and one of the remaining members of Mr. Andrew McKenzie's Bible class, twenty-one members of which are on active service. Inside this folder was a letter written by the minster, reading as follows;

Dear Friend,—We are sending you herewith a little corner of Christmas cheer, as a token of the remembrance in which we hold you. We hope it will express to you our heartiest good will and best wishes.

Some of the enclosed snaps will show you where the cake was mixed, where it was baked and where the box was packed.

Someone has said that Christmas is a feeling rather than a time. It is our earnest desire that wherever you are you may have the Christmas feeling of Emmanuel—God with us.

This gift is the gift of the whole congregation. It is to express our admiration of you, our confidence in you and our affection for you. It is also a hope that when this season comes around again you will be back in the land of the Maple Leaf and with friends of Knox church.

The day of the packing, Mr. Wm. Croft marshalled his forces and the forty-five boxes were filled, tied and labelled at the rate of one every five minutes.

The committee of the Ladies' Aid having a large share in the work, was composed of Mrs. Watt, Mrs. Parker, Mrs. U. Gillis, Mrs. Byers and Mrs. McCulloch.

Mr. W. J. Byers of Browntown, offered to give all the articles at cost price that were to go into the boxes, and further increased his generosity by giving the cake entirely free, even going so far as to join the committee in the work room and giving his arm to do the final stirring of the cake.

Mr. Williamson as per usual, was pressed into service to aid the ladies and took the cake up to Mr. Coleman. The latter was baking the cake of 44 lbs. free of charge.

One Year in The Reformatory

HAVE MADE ADJUSTMENT

Reid's Will Get Ready For Business Some Time Next Week—Watch For the Big Sale

After being closed for a full week, since the early morning fire visited their store on Monday last, Reid's have at last made an adjustment with the Insurance Company, and can now make preparation to open their store for business. Largely due to the modern store fittings, the main portion of the stock was uninjured by smoke or water, but in order to make a clean sweep of everything, all of this fine stock of ladies' apparel will be offered to the public at a low rate on the dollar.

Watch for the big sale announcement, which will be started as early next week as possible. New Christmas novelties which were on order, are arriving, and will also be included in the sale.

WEDDING BELLS

LEBAR—KNOX.

On Thursday evening, 9th December, Edgar, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. James Lebar, of 306 Aylmer Street, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Martha Annie Knox The ceremony was performed by Rev R. B. Grobb, of All Saints' Church.

The couple were unattended, and the bride wore a white silk crepe de chene dress and carried a bouquet of white carnations. The wedding march was played by Miss Mabel Young, the groom's gift to her being a gold bar pin set with pearls. The young couple received congratulations from the guests, and the gifts were many and beautiful.

OBITUARY

GEO. GOODWIN,

The death occurred in Ottawa on November 24th of Mr. George Goodwin, formerly a prominent contractor and builder. The deceased was 72 years of age. He was at one time actively associated with the construction of railways, canals, locks and public buildings in different parts of Canada, and was contractor for the construction of the double locks at Burleigh Falls. He was well known in this city at that time.

MR. SIDNEY PRESTON.

The death occurred at Nicholls Hospital at one o'clock to-day of Mr. Sidney Preston, grain merchant at Bethany, following an operation for appendicitis. He was 55 years of age and unmarried. He was a man highly esteemed and prominent in the community in which he lived. Mr. J. J. Preston, M.P.P., member for East Durham, is a brother of the deceased.

The funeral will take place on Monday from his late residence, Bethany, to St. Paul's church. Interment will take place in St. Mary's cemetery, Manvers.

EYE TALKS SERIES

No. 3—Eyes As An Asset

IF your daily work brings you an income of $600 to $1000 a year and you require eyesight to do that work, what value would the eyes represent as part of your working capital? Take 6 per cent as a basis of money value, and it would require a capital of $10,000 to $17,000 to bring you an annual revenue of $600 to $1000. We would consider this a low valuation of your eyes as an asset.

What care are you giving this valuable working capital? If the eyes ever tire and ache after steady use, that's a sign you are neglecting them. Let Mr. FOWLER, who has highest qualifications as an EYESIGHT SPECIALIST, examine your eyes and tell you what they need.

Christmas and Its Festivities

This Celebration Dates Back to Pagan Times--A Chit-Chat Article on Christmas Customs Both Ancient and Modern

Written for the Examiner by Frank Russell

The festival of Christmas is regarded as the greatest celebration throughout the ecclesiastical year; and so important and joyous a solemnity is it considered, that a special exception is made in its favour, should it by chance fall on a Friday; for although Fridays are, by the well-known rule of the Anglican, Roman and Greek churches, to be always kept as fast days, or days of abstinence, yet Christmas day, should it occur on a Friday, is to be observed as a feast day.

Derivation of Christmas

The word Christmas was originally known as Cristes Maesse, the mass or church festival of Christ, and as you all know it is the day on which we celebrate the birth of Jesus Christ.

Its Pagan Origin.

It is apparent, however, that a festival was celebrated at this season, long before it was held sacred as the birthday of Jesus of Nazareth. The Saturnalia of the Romans and the Winter festival of the heathen Britons were both celebrated about Dec. 25th.

A study of customs associated with this period also invariably reveals a heathen origin. The dragging and lighting of the Yule log and the sports of the "Lord of Misrule," as practised in England for so many centuries are thought to be an inheritance from the Saturnalia. The decoration of the churches with holly and the use of the once sacred mistletoe are likewise pagan survivals.

The Roman Saturnalia.

Under the Romans this anniversary taking the title of Saturnalia, or the festival of the planet Saturn, was marked by the prevalence of universal licence and merry-making. The slaves were permitted to enjoy, for a time, a thorough freedom in speech, and behaviour; and it is even said that their masters waited on them as servants. Everyone feasted and rejoiced; work and business, were suspended for the season; the houses were decked with laurels and evergreens; presents were made by parents and friends; and all sorts of games and amusements were indulged in by the citizens. In the colder climate of England the same rejoicings had place, but in a ruder and more barbarous form. Fires were extensively kindled in houses, as well as out of doors; blocks of wood blazed in honour of the gods, Odin and Thor; the sacred mistletoe was gathered by the Druids; and sacrifices, both human as well as of cattle were made to savage divinities. Fires are said to have been kindled at this period of the year by the ancient Persians, between whom and the Druids of western Europe a relationship is supposed to have existed.

In the Early Ages of Christianity.

Its priests frequently experienced the utmost difficulty in inducing the converts to refrain from indulging in the popular amusements so much affected by their pagan countrymen.

At length, however, the Church endeavoured to amalgamate, as it were, the old and new religions by transferring the heathen customs to the solemnities of the Christian festivals, and make them subservient to the cause of religion and piety.

Thus a compromise was effected, the result of which has been a strange admixture of various ceremonies practised by Pagans, Saxons, Ancient Germans and Scandinavians, all of whom have contributed to make up the festivities of the modern Christmas.

St Nicholas.

St. Nicholas of Nicholas for his name is spelled indifferently is the patron name of Russia and by some is supposed to be also one of the patron saints of Holland. His life is wrapped in an obscurity that is but little lightened by fable. He was Bishop of Myra in Lycia but all the accounts that have come down to us are of a purely legendary character and it is impossible to confirm any in history. This saint is regarded as especially the patron of the young and particularly of scholars. In England, in ancient times, his feast (Dec. 6th) was celebrated with great solemnity in the great schools, e.g., Eton, Sarum, Charterhouse, and elsewhere.

The Mock Bishop.

In Germany even now on the vigil of his feast (Dec. 5th) a person in the appearance and costume of a bishop assembles the children of schools and families, distributing indiscriminately and liberally amongst them gilded nuts and sweetmeats and other presents as a reward of good conduct to such as deserve them, to the naughty ones the punishment of the birch, known as the "Klaubauf."

Santa Claus.

Santa Claus is a corruption introduced into England from the United States; the old Dutch settlers of New York kept a "San Klaus" holiday. St. Nicholas is also the patron saint of seamen, travellers and merchants.

The practice of giving of surreptitious presents on the eve of St. Nicholas has in most countries been transferred to Christmas Eve. Hence the association of that feast with Santa Claus.

CHRISTMAS FARE.

"Good Fare,"

by which I mean, of course, meat and drink—has always been in evidence at Christmas-tide, probably a survival of the old pagan festival of the Saturnalia. I am reminded of remark I once overheard made by a little kiddie in the Old Country, "Christmas is all right because of the presents," said he, "else it's only a 'stuffing Sunday!'" There may be something in this, for in every household, high and low, rich or poor, some brave attempt is made to supplement the "Sunday dinner" by the addition of some extra dish or dainty.

The Boar's Head.

The boar's head, in the mansions of the wealthy was the "piece de resistance." This was served up in great state. Immediately the server was ready to carry this in to the dining hall, a flourish of trumpets would announce his approach, and his march up to the head of the table, would be accompanied by music, while the servitor would sing an ancient chant of three verses, the opening one of which reads thus:—

"Caput apri defero,
Reddens laudes Domino.
The boar's head in hand bring I
With garlands gay and rosemary;
I pray you all sing merrily.
Qui estis in convivio."

The two first and the last lines are in Latin, which may be rendered thus, in prose:—"I bring in the head of the wild boar, rendering praises unto the Lord . . . . who are here to feast.

Mustard was an indispensible condement for this dish.

Puritan Attempts to Abolish Christmas.

During the time of the commonwealth the Puritans endeavoured to obliterate the festivities of Christmas as being popish, ungodly, and carnal, by Act of Parliament. The vendors of mustard set up a powerful opposition on the grounds that if Christmas, and the boar's head were extinct, there would be such a diminished demand for their manufacture, that they would have no sales worthy of the name. There being now no wild boars in England, an ordinary boar's head with a lemon in its mouth, forms in many homes the substitute.

The Baron of Beef and Sirloin

The baron or double sirloin of beef, or where that is too large, the sirloin of beef is a great Christmas dish—the roast beef of Old England. Time was when the 'sirloin' was only known as the loin, but a legend has it that one of the English Kings was so enchanted with the flavour of a baron, at some house where he honoured the table as a royal guest, that he called for a sword and knighted the loin, saying that in future this prime joint should be known as Sir Loin.

Turkeys, Geese and other poultry as well as venison are also popular dishes in the Old Land at Christmas.

were popular as early as two centuries ago, as a Christmas dish. Originally, so Selden, the chronicler, informs us, these pies were baked in a coffin-shaped crust, intended to represent the creche or manger in which the Holy Child was laid.

Ben Jonson speaks of these pies in his "Masque of Christmas"; originally they were termed 'Christmas pies,' but the word Christmas was objectionable to Puritan ears just as the dainty itself at that particular season was offensive to Puritan taste.

'All plums the prophet's sons deny,
And spice-broths are too hot;
Treason's in a December-pie
And death within the pot!
Plum-broth is popish, and mince-pie—
O! that was flat idolatry.'

The Plum-Pudding.

This time-honoured dish at a Christmas dinner has the authority of at least a couple of centuries. In its early days it was known as plum-pottage, or plum-porridge, or plum-broth. This dish figures in 'Poor Robin's Almanac' for 1750, and in the earlier days being of the nature of a 'broth' was served as the first course of the dinner. But at the commencement of the nineteenth century the consistency of this 'luscious plum-porridge,' appears to have been changed into the more substantial con coction which we now term as Christmas pudding.

It is true that in a Book of Cookery, published by one Rabisha in 1675, entitled "The Whole Body of Cookery Dissected," there is a recipe for a pudding 'to be boiled in a basin' which appears to bear a great resemblance to our modern Christmas favourite.

Addison, so the 'Tatler' tells us, said "no man of the most rigid virtue gives offence by an excess in plum-pudding or plum-porridge.

ANCIENT CHRISTMAS CUSTOMS.

The Lord of Misrule.

was a functionary formerly appointed in every large household to direct the rejoicings and revels of the Christmas season. Every nobleman and person of position had a 'Lord of Misrule'. The performance of this individual, during the period of his license and disorder, recall the ancient Saturnalia of pagan Rome. Everyone in the household was in honour bound to obey him. For twelve days and nights—that is from Christmas Eve up to the Epiphany—he reigned supreme.

The Abbot of Unreason.

Even in Scotland, previous to the time of the Reformation, a similar official (?) held sway. He was known as the Abbot of Unreason. The readers of the great Scottish novelist—Sir Walter Scott—may recall a graphic description of one of these personages in the charming romance, "The Abbot".

The Scottish Abbot and the English Lord of Misrule are probably offshoots of the French Abbe de Liesse or the Latin Abbas Stultorum, who directed the festivities of the Feast of the Ass, which was a survival from the Saturnalia, when riot ran loose.

Mummers.

These were parties of masqueraders who disguised themselves in masks after the manner of the ancient Romans in the feast of the Saturnalia—some of them were disguised like bears or unicorns. Those who could not procure masks, disguised their faces by rubbing colours or soot on them, The chief aim was to create surprise by the oddity of the masks, and the grotesqueness of the dresses. A party of mummers would visit the houses of the gentry, and perform some rough drama, interspersed with witty personal observations, some of which, it is said, showed great brilliancy of wit with considerable power of verse making.

Carols.

Carols are joyous songs for festive occasions, and more especially for Christmas. Formerly they were accompanied by dancing. That distinguished light of the English Church, Bishop Jeremy Taylor speaks of the Angelic song in the morning of the Nativity as the first Christmas carol. He says, "as soon as these blessed choristers had sung their Christmas carol, they taught the church a hymn to put into her offices for ever."

Not all the Christmas carols, however are religious. Many are lively secular airs that are anything but devotional. Probably the most abidingly popular one is one which has come down to us from the first, beginning, 'God bless you merry gentlemen.'

Carol Singing.

On Christmas Eve is much in vogue in the Old Country. The members of the various church choirs and the Sunday-school children parade the streets in the evening singing outside the homes of the more influential parishioners. These singers are usually invited into the houses they visit and feasted with tea or coffee and cakes.

MODERN CUSTOMS

Waits.

These are bands of boys or men who on nights preceding Christmas parade the streets of towns and villages in England singing carols accompanied by instrumental music, expecting in return to receive a gratuity from the houses in front of which they stop. Waits (derived from an old French word 'waite', meaning guard or sentinel) date back to the fourteenth century, when they were musical watchmen, who were required to give practical evidence of their vigilance by playing on the flageolet or hautbois at stated hours during the night. Mention is made of them in a book of the household of King Edward IV of England.

The tunes played by the 'waits' of the present day are not always those set to carols, but include many airs which are popular at the time.

Carols in Church.

In most of the churches in England carol-singing is part of the Christmas service, either on the Day itself or during the octave of Christmas.

Some of the carols are extremely pretty both as regard words and tune; some are words that are anything but devotional.

CHRISTMAS CUSTOMS

The Christmas Tree.

Which is a young spruce or similar tree placed in a room with its branches gaily decorated with various coloured candles and hung with ornaments and gifts—chiefly for children—is of German origin.

Father Christmas or Santa Claus, usually depicted as a shaggy bearded old man who is supposed to come from the north in his reindeer sledge laden with children's toys, on Christmas Eve is identified with St. Nicholas. Grimm the German writer, notes that in some parts of Germany, Santa Claus or Nicholas is merely the attendant of the real gift giver, who is sometimes the infant Christ, and sometimes Dame Bertha, though he is often represented as an ugly, hunch-backed dwarf, called Krampus, who carries off naughty children.

The Christmas Tree.

So far as England is concerned is not by any means an ancient institution. Previous to the time of the marriage of the late Queen Victoria to Prince Albert the Christmas tree was comparatively unknown. But the Prince, who was a German, introduced the popular German custom and it "caught on" and achieved a great success.

Army Service Big Health Help, Says Professor

Dr. Harlow Brooks Tells What It Would do for American Young Men

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—The great physical and mental benefits which would accrue to the manhood of the United States if this country had some system of military training, such as has been proposed in varied forms since the recent realization of the need for national preparedness, are interestingly pointed out in an article in the Medical Review of Reviews by Dr. Harlow Brooks, professor of clinical medicine at Bellevue Hospital National college, and retired captain in the medical corps of the national guard of New York.

Dr. Harlow, one of the noted internists in America, puts aside all other considerations except the betterment of the individual, and from that viewpoint alone points out that the nation would be immensely benefited by a system of military training, even though those who underwent the training might never be called upon to defend their country.

Six Month's Service.

He advocates a period of six months' service with the colors for all men of military age, which is the rule in vogue in Switzerland. He writes, in part:

"As a nation we are now putting great stress on the proper athetic training of our young men, not only in our colleges but also in settlement work centres, in industrial communities and even in church organizations.

"If a temperate and proper athletic training is really worth while, certainly we must admit that in no other training it is so perfectly developed or so carefully studied as in the military service. Compare from a physical standpoint the senior classes at any university with the graduating class of young men at West Point or at the Virginia Military institute. The lesson must be obvious. Under no other system is physical education so carefully elaborated as in this, which has been the outgrowth of the wisdom of centuries.

"Even more valuable from our standpoint are the basis and definite lessons in personal and public hygiene, which are of elemental necessity in military life. The proper care of and respect for every portion of the body are among the very first lessons of the recruit, and throughout his training and throughout his after life these principles remain axioms of personal and public conduct

Regularity of Life.

"Regularity of life, of food, of sleep of recreation, and a proper balance of physical and mental exercise, with adequate rest, are primitive requirements in military training. The care of the feet, of the skin and hair, the preparation and selection of proper foods and clothing are taught in the simplest and most direct way, and the utility of 'temperance in all thing' is more vividly shown here than in the medical college.

"There can be no question but that six months of instruction in hygiene, in discipline, in organization, in business methods and in right and straight living as well as right and straight shooting are a most worthy investment for any young man

"As a direct result of such a service the nation would secure a loyal and interested citizenry for we must love and honor that for which we have personally sacrificed something.

"Political and national ills would undoubtedly be elevated and the physical and mental inability to give this service to the state would soon become here as elsewhere a reproach and a shame and an incentive to physical and mental clean living."

CURL HAIR THIS WAY AND KEEP IT HEALTHY

It has been found that the use of a harmless and inexpensive fluid which the druggists know as "almerine," will keep the straightest hair in curl, giving it the appearance of true naturalness, besides keeping the hair softer and glossier than possible with the heated iron. The fluid may be applied with a clean tooth brush, this being drawn through the hair from crown to tip and allowed to dry over night.

In the morning the hair will be beautifully wavy and curling, and will lie easily and loosely on the head, as it should, considering its welfare from a hygienic standpoint. A few ounces of almerine will last for months and as quite almerine is beneficial to the hair, which it is really beneficial to the heated iron, it cannot be said of the heated iron, it should be generally adopted by the fair sex. It will not spot or discolour the scalp or hair, nor leave any sediment, grease or stickiness.—Home Doctor.

SOME STRANGE CHRISTMAS BELIEFS

Indians say that the best time to catch a deer is on Christmas night at 12 o'clock, when they believe the deer kneels.

Some of the Germans believe that those born on Christmas day have the power of seeing spirits and even commanding them.

A popular saying in Spain for Christmas day is, "The bird of dawning singeth all night long to frighten away all evil things."

In Roumania it is the custom to bless the Danube at Christmas and a procession consisting of priests and people dressed to represent Biblical characters move through the streets singing chants, and go to the banks of the river. The ice is broken and a small wooden cross thrown into the water. Any one who can recover the cross is regarded as extremely fortunate and sure of good luck for the remainder of the year.

Christmas celebrations in Mexico begin Dec 17 and continue until Dec. 24. Each night a festival is held, nine in all, an invitation being sent out to these "posadas." "Posada" means "inn," typifying the way the holy travelers, Joseph and Mary sought in vain for rest and shelter.

CHRISTMAS AND ITS FESTIVITIES:

Mistletoe.

The Mistletoe, which has many mystic associations connected with it, was a sacred thing long before the advent of Christianity into Britain. Pliny, the Greek historian, is one of our authorities for the reverence in which the mistletoe was held by the Druids when found growing on the sacred oaks. The mistletoe figures also in Scandinavian legend as having furnished the material of the arrow with which Balder (the strong) was slain by the blind god Hodei or Heda.

A Parasite.

The mistletoe is a parasite widely distributed in its twenty different species in the warmer parts of the old world. But only the mistletoe proper is a native of Europe.

In England as in France it is most abundant on the apple tree, but is rarely found on the oak. Its berries are largely eaten by birds more especially by the missel-thrush by whom it is propagated by his cleaning his beak, after eating some of the viscuous berries, on the bark of the tree on which he has alighted.

Under the Mistletoe.

A special custom in connection with mistletoe at Christmas time, and largely practised in the Old Country, is an indubitable relic of the days of the Druids, handed down through long centuries. A branch of the mystic plant is suspended from the ceiling, and any one of the fair sex who inadvertently, or more often of deliberate intent and set purpose passes beneath the sacred spray, incurs the penalty of being, there and then, kissed by any lord of the creation who chooses to avail himself of such privilege—and a kiss under such circumstances is always taken in good part, not in any way involving an insult.

The Practice of Kissing Under the Mistletoe.

has the seal of long honoured custom. Time was, when it was used for the decoration of churches at this period, in the Old Land. But its use was abandoned because it was found that it not only led to kissing during service time, but was found to tempt the young people of both sexes to the too frequent reading of the marriage service during sermon time.

At first the use of the mistletoe in house decoration was confined to 'the servants hall,' and kitchen. But it speedily invaded the drawing room and the parlour, and it became ominous, that a maid not so saluted would not be married before the next Christmas.

Even nowadays the short frocked girls and jacketed boys seem never to tire of kissing one another, while another class of those disappointed if not receiving the Christmas kiss, are the running to seed, shelf-climbing young ladies around thirty-five, who, getting desperate, are after the jolly, middle-aged bachelors, who see no harm in kissing every pretty girl who comes in their way, for there is a lot of make-believe running away as well as bold standing, under the mistletoe.

Many of the youths of the lower orders carry a small spray of mistletoe in their hat bands or pinned to their caps and are accustomed to lift their headgear over the head of any girl of their own class and take a kiss "under the mistletoe". In fact it is expected of them!

French Society Manners.

have never approved kissing; as a result the mistletoe has no peculiar signification in France. Yet it is worthy of remark that the greater part of the enormous quantities of mistletoe sold in the English markets at Christmas, comes from the numerous cider-apple orchards in Normandy.

CHRISTMAS SPORTS.

Snapdragon.

This is a favourite Christmas sport which has been in vogue in England from time immemorial. A quantity of pudding raisins are placed in a large shallow dish, and brandy or some other form of alcohol is poured over the fruit and ignited. The bystanders now endeavour to grasp the raisins by plunging their hands through the flames: and as this is a feat requiring both courage and rapidity of action, a considerable amount of laughter and merriment is evoked at the expense of the unsuccessful competitors If the raisins are extracted before the flame is burned out, a handful of salt is thrown over the flames which are changed from a blue to a lurid yellow hue making the faces of the onlookers appear like ghastly corpses. Of course it is usual to darken the room while this festivity is taking place. In this is to be found a trace of the ordeal by fire of the middle ages and also of the Druidical fire-worship of a still more remote epoch. Total abstainers need not shrug their shoulders at this sport for the intoxicating property of the alcohol is all burned out before the raisin reaches the mouth of the would-be recipient.

Forecasting the Husband.

In some places, maidens, who are inquisitive at to their prospective lovers, will draw a stick of wood from a heap to see whether he will be tall or short, crooked or straight. Others will pour molten lead into water and from the figures formed will prognosticate the trade or profession of the future husband. If imagination leads them to see at last, or a plane, or a pair of shears he will be a shoemaker, a carpenter or a tailor, if a hammer he may be a smith or a mechanic while the pick-axe denotes a common labourer.

Among others a favourite method of forecasting the future is to sit on the floor and throw their shoe with the foot over the shoulder, and then according to the position the footgear assumes to predict what is about to happen.

Christmas Stockings.

The custom, so beloved by kiddies, of hanging up their stockings on Christmas Eve is of German origin. The children hang up their hose to be filled by a person bearing the name of Krish-Kinkle (a corruption of Christ-kindlein, or the Infant Christ) who is supposed to descend the chimney with gifts for all good children—if, however, any one has been naughty, he finds a birch rod instead of sweetmeats or candies in the stocking. This instrument of punishment is supposed to be contributed by 'Pelsnichol,' or Nicholas with the fur, in allusion to the dress of skins he is supposed to wear.

Ode to Christmas.

Here is a very charming little piece of verse, contributed by Miss Rose Mills Powers to the "Youth's Companion."

Candles on the tree aglow,
Holly red and mistletoe;
Radiant faces, rapturous cries,
In the nursery wondering eyes,
Stockings full and bulging out,
Toys of every sort about;
Music, joyous, glad and gay;
All of Christendom at play;
Season of the Holy Child,
Dearest gift, divine and mild,
Angels songs, dispelling fear,
Yule, the blessed Yule is here!

Christmas Boxes.

The Christmas-box, a small money-gift to persons in an inferior condition to the donor, on the day after Christmas known in the Old Country as Boxing Day—is an institution essentially English, although the making of presents at Christmas as also at the New Year is of great antiquity. Within the memory of middle aged persons the practice of giving "Christmas Boxes" had become such a serious social nuisance that tradesmen stuck up notices in their shop windows to the effect that no Christmas boxes would be given, and at the same time the public authorities issued remonstrances to the same effect. Of late years the practice has greatly decreased, doubtless owing to the increased self respect of the parties interested.

Christmas Boxes a Nuisance

In the old country almost before one had finished breakfast—Boxing Day being a statute public holiday—one received visits from every tradesman's errand boy—if one happened to deal at his employer's store, from the pew-owner in church, the sexton, the bell-ringers, to say nothing of officials one rately or never saw, such as the man who turned on the water, the scavenger, the lamplighter and of course the garbage van man, all on Christmas boxes' intent.

One Class Exempted.

Yet there is one class of public-service men to whom is always gladly given some little present, I refer to the postman, one man on each round being permitted, during the time he is off duty, by the authorities to carry a book and receive gifts of money for the general benefit of the postmen attached to one's own Post Office. Everyone, high and low, rich and poor, gives something to the postman who well deserves some little recognition; for his duties are arduous and must be performed no matter how inclement the weather may be.

Christmas Cards—Their Origin.

The Christmas Card, now an almost universal vehicle for the conveyance of seasonable wishes, dates from A.D. 1846, when Mr. J. C. Horsley, R. A. designed a card on the suggestion of his friend, Sir Henry Cole. The Christmas card business has become a thriving industry, carried on the whole year round, having assumed gigantic proportions. It has also become a source of very considerable revenue to the various postal administrations. Many well known artists supply designs for these pretty mementos.

A Thriving Industry.

These cards are now sold and distributed in millions. Immense progress has been made in beauty and artistic effect, since their inception. In the earlier days these popular emblems were more or less confined to Old Father Christmas, images of flowers, the robin redbreast or the dove, emblematical of peace and goodwill. For Christmas is above all other periods, the time when "old sores" are supposed to be healed, all past slights or petty quarrels are expected to be forgiven in accordance with the seraph's dictum "Peace on Earth and Goodwill towards"—or rather among—"men," in which category woman is naturally included.

CHRISTMAS FEELINGS.

In commenting on Christmas Day, and some of its observances, one must not forget to remark on the hallowed feelings of affection and goodwill, which are generally called forth at the celebration of this anniversary. This is the time of all others, when quarrels, or differences are, or should be, made up, forgiven, and forgotten; old broken-off friendships are renewed and confirmed, and a general spirit of brotherly love, affection and forgiveness is evoked.

Of course there are some 'grouches' who resist, and even resent, any attempts at reconciliation, and as a general rule, it will be found that these are those in fault. I do not think I would much care to possess their conscience, when they recite the petition in our Lord's own prayer "Forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us" Do they realize that, as there is no forgiveness accorded by them, neither can they expect any forgiveness themselves? "With what measure ye mete, it shall be meted to you again." Even to such the holy season of Christmas makes no appeal or if it does make an appeal, it falls on deafened ears.

A Greeting.

Personally, if the writer of these lines has offended anyone in this burgh, either male or female, let him assure the injured one that it has been done more from want of thought rather than from want of heart, and he hereby conveys his earnest desire to the offended one that their relations may, in the future, be most cordial. And finally, he wishes his many readers—one and all—

"A VERY HAPPY CHRISTMAS."

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

Flush your kidneys occasionally if you eat meat regularly

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage, or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy, and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys, and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

Santa From the South

By DeLysle Ferree Cass

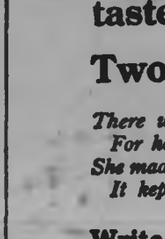
While the newspapers throughout the United States were busily announcing the warlike operations of Gen. Sancho Fernandez here, there and elsewhere that December, it was a fact that the revolutionary dictator of Mexico was really in Washington, D. C., where he had been peremptorily summoned by the president.

His conference at the capitol was short and very much to the point. It was pointed out with painful decisiveness to the Senor General Fernandez that hereinafter he would have to make his ragged army respect the rights of U. S. A.

The pill that General Fernandez was thus made to swallow was not sugar coated, but it unquestionably did him good. He went down the White House steps that day before Christmas a sadder and a wiser man. However the dictator of Mexico was a philosopher.

General Fernandez muffled his face deep in the soft warmth of his fur-collared greatcoat, and started off down the avenue.

By and by he came to the business district where throngs of last-minute shoppers were bustling about. Snow had begun to fall heavily—great fleecy flakes that filled the whole air and, supplementing the gay holiday decorations and shouts of street hawkers, gave the scene an air of fairylike unreality.



The jolly, free-handed Christmas spirit was contagious, but it made him feel very lonely. He wanted a comrade—someone, anyone, in all this big, busy city, who would hail him simply as a friend and not as the celebrated General Fernandez.

He came to a street corner where he heard his own name shouted in a shrill, childish voice close by.

"Huxtree there, people! Huxtree paper! Spend a cent and read all about General Fernandez the Mexican butcher! He's murderin' women and babies down there right now! Big battle at Guaremo; three hundred killed! Huxtree here, all about the bloody General Fernandez!"

At first the dictator scowled; then smiled queerly and approached the ragged waif at the newsstand. She was blue with cold and a-shiver beneath scanty rags. Below an old shawl, her thin, prematurely-aged face looked wan and pinched.

Genuine pity—an unusual thing in the dictator—seized him as he surveyed her.

"Do you really believe that this General Fernandez is as bad as all that?" he asked her with a whimsical half-smile.

The street waif stared up at him suspiciously.

"Run away from here, you fade; Can't y' see I'm tryin' to sell my papers? Tonight's Christmas eve an' I wanna sell out so as to go in one of the big stores an' see Santy Claus."

"How many papers have you left to sell, little girl?"

"Twenty-one."

"I'll take them all. Here's a quarter. You can keep the change."

"Whadda y' doin' this fr?"—still suspicious.

The great General Fernandez smiled at the waif sadly, indulgently.

"Child, I'm a stranger here and I'm ever so lonely. Everybody else has a welcoming home tonight—has someone to whom he can give presents and know that they'll be appreciated. It's Christmas eve and I too want to forget myself for a while and play Santa Claus for somebody."

"If I really thought y' meant all that," muttered the waif skeptically, "I'd say, why not practice some o' y'r good intentions on me. Lordy knows, I need 'em."

The dictator's face became radiant. He laughed whole-heartedly as he had not done before in years and took one of the wee girl's half-frozen hands hands kindly within his big gloved one.

"It shall all be just as you say," he cried, much to her astonishment. "Come along with me now—first somewhere to get you a warm coat and hood and some furry mittens. Then we'll go to a fine restaurant. And after you've eaten every bit you can hold, we'll go see the toys and you can pick out your own present."

"Y'r not kiddin' me, mister?"

"On my honor, no."

"Then, if it's all the same to you, let's hit the toy departments first. I've had m' eye on a big yellow-headed doll—real hair it is, too!—there in the Emporium fr six months."

"We'll do just as you say, kiddie, but on one condition."

"What's that, mister?"

"You must tell me that you don't believe all the things you said about General Fernandez of Mexico."

"I'll call him Santa Claus if that'll suit y' any better, mister."

"Under present circumstances that name strikes me as quite appropriate for him," murmured the dictator. "But come on now. It's going to be a really merry Christmas after all."

Christmas at the Shetland Islands.

A scene less populous but not less striking is old Christmas eve, the 4th of January, when the children and young men of Lerwick, in the Shetland Islands, go a-guizing, the children disguise themselves in strange dresses, parade the streets and invade the houses and shops begging for offerings. At 1 o'clock the young men, coarsely clad, drag blazing tar barrels through the town, blowing horns and cheering. At 6 o'clock in the morning they put off their grimy clothes and dress in fantastic costumes to go in groups to wish their friends the season's compliments.—Harper's Magazine.

Some Jolly Games For The Merry Yule Party

For a new and jolly game which costs nothing to get up fill a good sized basket with words cut from newspaper headlines. Each word should be cut out in small squares. Players sit around a large table and each receive a square of pasteboard or a sheet of heavy paper. In the middle of the board is placed the basket filled with words. There should be a couple of bottles of paste of mucilage besides.

Each player in turn is given a hatpin which he plunges into the basket. All words brought up on the hatpin belongs to the person jabbing. When each player has jabbed six times in turn the pins are laid aside and the point now becomes to see who can form the cleverest Christmas telegrams from the words jabbed up. Allow fifteen minutes for working out these phrases. The entertainer or some one who does not enter into the game decides which is cleverest. Give a book of witty sayings as a prize in this round.

A lively blindfold contest results when guests are required to tie bundles on a Christmas tree blindfolded. The Christmas tree may be a very small one arranged in a bucket on the table if no trimmed tree is at hand. Of course the blind men start from a point as far from the tree as possible. Each bundle has a small box of bonbons or even a popcorn ball half tucked away at its heart. The bonbons belong to the player who is successful in tying the package to the tree.

A toy race is always jolly too. This is where wheel toys are pushed over a certain course with umbrellas or where mechanical toys are wound up and sent trundling across the room at a given signal. The person first to push his wheel or toy over the course is winner, and the mechanical toy which outdistances its fellows also wins for its owner a prize. Any toy which overturns in the race is barred from honors.

Good Guess.

"How's that?"

"He said I was as sound as a dollar, and that was all I had."—Judge.

Strange New York Celebration.

What probably is the strangest New Year's rite is held in the Cevennes mountains in southern France. At the last evening mass of the old year the herds and flocks of the peasantry are gathered before the portico of the little stone church high up on the mountain side and are blessed by the priest and sprinkled with holy water by the acolyte, who follows him in order that this the sole wealth of the countryside may increase and prosper during the year to come. The sight at the holy hour is wonderful. As the church bells tolls above them the frightened animals bleat and bellow and try madly to escape. First the oxen are blessed, then the cows, next the sheep and lambs and finally the goats and pigs.

It enables the blood to retain a natural supply of oxygen, lung food, and vitality. In any cough bronchitis or catarrh, it's guaranteed to positively cure. Beware of dangerous substitutes offered under misleading names for genuine Catarrhozone, which is sold everywhere; large size, containing two months' treatment, costs $1.00, small size, 50c.; trial size 25c.

New Year's Day in March.

New Year's day used to fall in March, not in January, and there was a good deal of sense in this, for, even as the world's first year was supposed to have begun in the sprouting of leaf and grass, so each New Year's day was set for the season when Nature began to wake after her winter sleep.

HER DREAMS CAME TRUE

Life Unbearable from Indigestion Health Restored by "Fruit-a-tives"

MME. C. GAUDREAU

Rochon P.Q., Jan. 14th, 1915.

"I suffered for many years with terrible Indigestion and Constipation. I became thin and miserable. I had frequent dizzy spells and became so run down that I never thought I would get well again.

A neighbor advised me to try 'Fruit-a-tives'. I did so and to the surprise of my doctor, I began to improve and he advised me to go on with 'Fruit-a-tives'. I continued this medicine and all my Indigestion and Constipation was relieved. I consider that I owe my life to 'Fruit-a-tives' and I want to say to those who suffer from Indigestion, Constipation or Headaches, try 'Fruit-a-tives'. Give this lovely fruit medicine a fair chance and you will get well the same as I did".

Christ and His Birthday

As to the birth, Christ gave no thought to the manner of its celebration by his disciples. They do not appear to have remembered it during his life. Had he ever any knowledge of the adorable stories begarlanding his crib for us? It is hardly probable. And, behold, that forgotten, neglected birthday has conquered a place of honor! It is celebrated in conditions in which the Saviour might recognize his own purpose. To speak of one aspect only, Jesus loved children as no one has ever loved them. "Let them come to me," he said to the lofty apostles, anxious to guard him from that merry, unruly crowd suspected incapable of edification. No doubt those most serious ancestors of our traditions had occasion that day and often in similar circumstances to believe the Master touched with insanity.

No matter, the intentions of the Son of Man have been largely realized. His birthday has become the day of the children. No earthly day has shed more brightness upon their path. No church festival gives more life to the immeasurable truth of the promise. "I shall be with you to the end of the world." None makes it sweeter to the heart.

Christtas has a charm beyond them all. It was the Christian soul, filled full with Jesus, created this festival. Every generation had given it something of its own. There has been a rivalry of good will. In the Eucharist, according to a doctrine the abuse of which must not make us forget its true and sorrowful profoundness Christ dies from age to age for our sins and will suffer until the last sinner is saved. In the radiance of Christmas Christ smiles eternally upon the little ones and the grownups who can make themselves children again.—Charles Wagner, Author of "The Simple Life."

There are many beautiful stories associated with the origin of the first Christmas tree. One legend says that on the holy night all nature, even the animals and the trees, was rejoicing and that the cedars, instead of pointing their branches upward as pointed, slender trees, spread their branches wide to protect the mother and her new born child.

Empty Houses and Ransacked Stores in Deserted Belgrade

Wake of Mackensen's Army Described by Correspondent with Germans—Intense cold Reported from Interior of Serbia—Ice on the Danube River.

BELGRADE, Nov. 27 (by courier to Berlin, Dec. 3).—This is the sorriest of three conquered capitals I have visited. Brussels and Warsaw seemed, at least superficially, nearly normal. Belgrade is dead.

But the scene of the first act of the Serbian tragedy is still replete with dramatic values. You can roam for hours through the deserted streets, past the empty homes and ransacked stores, meeting only a few slinking Serbian women, the poorest of the poor, for all who could do so have fled. Of the 100,000 peace-time inhabitants, fewer than 20,000 remain, not counting lean and hungry dogs.

If you pry into some of these abandoned homes you will find tables still set, half-eaten meals, plates of soup long cold, unmade beds, floors strewn with articles of clothing—all mute testimony to the precipitateness of the exodus, and tending to confirm what was told me here, that the Serbians considered Belgrade impregnable and the beginning of the Austro-German offensive as a mere demonstration, until the very streets of Belgrade rang with the battle cries of Bavarians, Brandenburgers and Hungarians with an old score to settle.

The Path of the Storm.

You have no trouble in tracing the path of the Mackensen cyclone through the city. The first storm that came over the famous "war island" rushed over the railroad embankment along the Danube, and, circling around the rock-crested citadel, passed up a broad avenue of handsome dwellings facing the park behind the citadel. Not one house survived undamaged the cloudburst of steel and fire.

Walking along the sidewalk you sniff the unmistakable smell of the dead buried under the debris or trapped in the cellars, for along here was the scene of the fiercest street fighting. The Serbians defended this approach to the heart of the city with the forlorn hope of desperation, firing from cellar windows and improvised barricades flung across the street. Serb women are said to have fought side by side with the men, making the Hungarians advancing from the Danube buy every foot of ground and each wreck of a house with blood.

In the heart of Belgrade, a square opposite the Hotel Moscow, you see a spot where the Serb rearguard made its last stand behind a barricade until attacked in the rear by a German column coming from the opposite direction and effecting a junction with the Hungarians here. The Germans speak respectfully of the Serbians and frequently express unstinted admiration for the fight they put up. Thus an old colonel told me: "The Serbs have more patriotism in their little finger than some of our enemies have in their whole body."

Life still pulses through Belgrade's main street. You meet little groups of Serbian refugees straggling back to their homes, the women wearing the vividly coloured national peasant garb. They take no notice of the endless chain of Austro-German columns the long trains of slow-moving bullock cars, or the many Russian prisoners who are "seeing Belgrade." There is a touch of grim irony in the fact that the only prisoners I have seen here were Russians. I was amazed at first to see 2,000 Russian prisoners being marched past King Peter's palace.

The explanation of the mystery appears to be that the Serbian soldiers are too badly wounded, or too exhausted when taken prisoners to perform useful labour. They are consequently sent to the Austrian prison camps, and there being no native labour available, the Germans have imported Russian prisoners to do the necessary work of cleaning up a conquered country.

Epidemic Is In Prospect After Christmas

The Crisis of the Strange Malady is Reached by January the First

RECOGNIZED SYMPTOMS

At certain periods of the year there are certain diseases that sweep the country. In the spring influenza afflicts mankind; in the summer, rose fever, and in the early autumn the hay feverites snuffle and mangle the English language. But with the beginning of the year an epidemic of a disease of the most virulent sort spreads over the civilized world, causing ninety-nine out of a hundred of its inhabitants to raise their right hands involuntarily and swear by all that's holy they will hold fast to the straight and narrow path forever and forever.

The symptoms of the disease are always the same. It is better and more generally known that the common cold; it is more regular in its appearance, and more persons suffer from it than from any other affliction, yet physicians and bacteriologists have never found a remedy or isolated its germ. This microbe, once taken into the system, can never be eliminated. The same victims suffer from it year after year, and each year end hundreds of thousands of new sufferers join the ranks.

The disease first makes its appearance in December. A victim beams beatifically around a poker table and announces. "Well, boys, I swear off on the 1st.

Jan. 1 arrives. Simultaneously several hundred million persons rise, yawn and glance at the calendar. Involuntarily the muscles of the right arm contract, elevating that member toward the ceiling. In a state of temporary stupor the victim voices good intentions. Some of the more serious cases even rush off to a notary public to record these thoughts in black and white and pay said notary $5. The stupor is attended by either a lapse of memory or a distorted mentality. In the first case the victim has entirely forgotten his attack of the year before; in the second he says, as he has said almost every year of his life: "Oh, this year it will be different. I'm not going to bust 'em this time." This is the crisis of the disease; now comes the slow recovery.

So many persons suffer in this country from the disease that it might almost be called a national question. Its seriousness lies in the effect upon some of the largest industries of the country. Manufacturers of expensive feminine apparel, cigar stores hundred of other institutions that give our country its envied reputation of being progressive and enterprising, a land of big business and mammoth industries, are hit and hit hard. The fact that in most cases the recovery is exceedingly rapid is the only redeeming feature. Few of the resolution makers have been known to remain in dreamland later than noon Jan. 1.

Perhaps, one reasons, officials of the affected industries have made no effort to have the government take measures to prevent the spread of this New Year's disease to the younger generation, and to try to effect its cure in the case of present victims, is that with recovery comes an increased addiction to the articles in question. This is another generally recognized symptom and is a secondary and psychological effect rather than a primary and physical.

In from five minutes to one week, statistics show, the disease usually runs its course. The victim becomes himself again. He draws himself to his full weight, voices the thought, "Aw, what's the use?" and resumes his normal mode of life with renewed ardor. If he's a smoker he smokes more often for a few days; then gradually habits become normal until the next attack gives a new impetus. This is shown by the consumption of cigars. During the first few days of January fewer are smoked than at any time during the entire year. The

She ought to know, whether she patients recover and reaches its maximum Jan. 8, after which is a gradual falling off to normal.

Superstitions Which Are Common To The Christmas Season

A Maiden Who Cannot Forecast Her Matrimonial Fortune at Least Once a Year is Scarcely Worth a Lover At All

SHAKESPERIAN VERSION

Christmas would be almost as incomplete without its love superstitions as without its holly and plum pudding, and the maid who cannot forecast her matrimonial fortune at least once a year is scarcely worth a lover at all.

She ought to know, whether she does or not, that if she wants her husband to be to reveal himself in her dreams she has only to eat the egg of a black hen on Christmas eve and any fears or hesitations she may be troubled with will soon be dispelled when once her head is cozily pillowed If she wishes to make the spell as potent as possible she will boil the egg hard, remove the yolk, and after she has filled up the cavity with common or table salt, will eat egg, shell, salt and all. If she doesn't dream of her lover then it will certainly not be the hen's fault.

If she is not partial to eggs our curious young lady may peel a St. Thomas' onion, wrap it in a handkerchief and place it under her pillow on Christmas eve, reciting these mystic lines as she does so:

Good St. Thomas, do me right
And see my true love come to-night,
That I may see him in the face
And him in my kind arms embrace.

It is just as natural for a maid to speculate as to the ardor of her swain's affection as to wish to settle the young man's identity, and if she will she may know to a nicety how far his infatuation for her has gone. This is what she must do to gain this desirable knowledge: When she retires to bed she must place three pails of water in her bedroom and attach three holly leaves to her nightdress. Then let her slumber in full assurance that her lover in dream form will present himself and touch one or other of the three pails. And all depends on what particular pail he touches. If it is No. 1 it is a sure sign that his affection is but skin deep; if No. 2, he worships the very ground she treads on, but if he touches the third pail, alas, for her expectations, for he loves her not at all!

But Cupid has no monopoly of Christmas superstitions. Did not Shakespeare himself lend his sanction to the belief that the cock by its crowing on Christmas night keeps all evil influences at a respectful distance?

Some say that over 'gainst that season comes
Wherein our Saviour's birth is celebrated.
The bird of dawning singeth all night long,
And then they say no spirit dare stir abroad.

You will like the rich strength and full flavor.

WHAT THE CHIMES SAY

"Do Good! Do Good!" They Ring Out at Christmas

How plainly the Christmas chimes seem to ring out to all, both rich and poor:

"Ye who would be truly happy, do good, do good! Live not for yourselves, for there is no joy in selfishness Dispel the grief and want you see everywhere around you. Give freely of what you have and thereby lay up treasures in heaven."

Thus chimes the bells, and he who heeds their solemn warning, while merrily they ring may have his Christmas blessing if he will.

Happiness! It is a divine gift, and man is godlike, if ever, when he fills some human heart with joy.

What was it but a laudable desire to render all mankind joyful at Christmas which impelled people in the olden time to open their homes and their hearts as well to all alike at Christmas that all might enter and share the Christmas feast? Friend or stranger it mattered not, the master welcomed all, and all men who would partook of his bounty. No man sat down alone beside his Christmas fire, wrapped in his own selfishness and careless of others' comfort, No; the great Yule log was brought with pomp and much rejoicing from the wildwood, a mighty fire was kindled upon the hearth, and the whole neighborhood gathered around to share the genial wormth while bright eyes danced with glee as the Christmas boughs cracked merrily in the ruddy blaze. The flush of joy was on every cheek, and every honest heart throbbed with gratitude and homely pleasures. The wassail bowl went round blithe carols were sung, and merry lads and maidens danced under the mistletoe boughs.

Christmastide, which was also called Yuletide, lasted a fortnight, and everybody had leisure to spare until the Christmas revels ended with the masques, the plays and the mad frolics of Twelfth Night. But nowadays how things are changed! Even the week between Christmas and New Year's is full of industry, and few are those who devote all their time to enjoyment. The great hearthstones of ancestral halls have disappeared. There are no wide chimney nooks wherein the brownies may lurk in cozy comfort, and heaven only knows where our penates hide—perhaps in the piano box or up in the chandeliers.

The Singing of Carols

The custom of singing carols is still maintained in Italy—indeed, on the continent caroling at Christmas is almost universal—and particularly in Rome, where, during the season of Advent, Pifferari may be seen and heard performing their novenas.

These pilgrims, who, by the way, are shepherds from the Calabrain mountains, annually flock to Rome at this season. Their picturesque costume is thus described: "On their heads they wear conical felt hats, adorned with a frayed peacock's feather of a faded band of red cords and tassels. Their bodies are clad in red waistcoats, blue jackets and small clothes of skin or yellowish homespun cloth. Skin sandals are bound to their feet with cords that interlace each other up the leg as far as the knee, and over all is worn a long brown or blue cloak, with a short cape buckled closely round the neck. Sometimes, but rarely, this cloak is of a deep red with a scalloped cape."

10 CENT "CASCARETS" BEST LAXATIVE FOR LIVER AND BOWELS

Don't Stay Constipated, Headachy, Bilious, With Breath Bad or Stomach Sour

No odds how bad your liver, stomach or bowels; how much your head aches, how miserable and uncomfortable you are from a cold, constipation, indigestion, biliousness and sluggish bowels—you always get relief with Cascarets.

Don't let your stomach, liver and bowels make you miserable. Take Cascarets to-night; put an end to the headachy, biliousness, dizziness, nervousness, sick, sour, gassy stomach, bad cold, offensive breath and all other distress; cleanse your inside organs of all the bile, gases and constipated matter which is producing the misery.

A 10-cent box means health, happiness and a clear head for months. All druggists sell Cascarets. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a gentle cleansing, too.

Plays Observed On Christmas Eve

A Christmas custom of ours and the one possessing the greatest antiquity is that of presenting plays the evening of the 24th of December. This was first noticed in the west of England. For several hundred years "St. George and the Dragon" was the most popular. The actors, always children, were fantastically dressed and decorated with ribbons, brightly colored paper and wooden swords. The theme was war and love. There were debate, battle, death and mimicry and a physician ever ready to restore the dead to life. This custom sprang from the ancient crusaders, consequently the feats of chivalry and the romantic extravagance of knight errantry that are preserved to this day in a modified degree

Masking, which is practiced to some extent among Scotchmen, is derived from the Roman Saturnalia, when people disguised themselves and practiced tricks upon their neighbors. This is now but scantily indulged in, but such of it as exists has been preserved since the fifth or sixth century. The Survey of London mentions a splendid "mummerie" which was performed by the citizens in honor of Prince Richard, son of the Black Prince, in the year 1377.

We do not hear very much nowadays about the lord of misrule or the waits, but both are remembered. The former had license to do everything he could thing of to keep up the jollity during the "twelve days," and the latter referred to wandering minstrels, who serenaded houses and waited until food and wine or, more acceptable, money was bestowed upon them.

Our games on Christmas night of cards, billiards, shuffleboard musicians, dancing and the tales that are told of knights, ladies, lovers queens, kings, giants, dwarfs, witches, fairies, goblins and the rest were played and indulged in so long ago that the remotest historian has been unable to ascertain the correct date of their beginning.

THE OLD CHRISTMAS HYMNS

It is good to think of the old time Christmas hymns again as the Day approaches; good to get out worn hymn books, the prettiest for the piano rack, with tunes as well as words, and play and sing them over, just as we should re-read, if pleasure and duty join hands, the story of Scrooge and Marley's Ghost.

It is even good to recall the titles more or less familiar to all of us, according to our bringing up. There are "Hail to the Lord's Anointed," "As with gladness men of old did the guiding star behold." "Angels from the realms of glory," and "Hark, what mean those holy voices," each reiterating in rhythmical melody the story of the ancient chroniclers.

In the little church where the flaring star poised a bit unsteadily over the white head of the beloved pastor, "Oh, come, all ye faithful," ushered in the day, and no matter how fast sped the minutes, how near the approach of the dinner hour, or how expectantly youngsters thought of unrifled stockings, if the early morning service invited them there was always plenty of time for "Joy to the world, the Lord is come," "When marshaled on the mighty plain," Brightest and best of the sons of the morning," "Hark, the herald angels sing," "It came upon the midnight clear," and that best loved of all, "While shepherds watched their flocks by night."

Tom Hood, the punster, once described the meeting of a man and a lion, and in doing so he said—"The man ran off with all his might, and the lion with all his mane"

Coughed Almost All Night

WITH THAT DRY, TICKLING SENSATION IN HER THROAT.

How many people have lost a good night's sleep by that nasty tickling sensation in the throat?

The dry, hard cough keeps you awake, and when you get up in the morning you feel as if you had had no rest at all.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is a specific for just this kind of a cough, as it is composed of the most soothing and healing expectorant herbs, roots and barks known to medical science.

Mrs. Joseph Hiley, Orangeville, Ont., writes: "Just a few lines to let you know what Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup did for me. I took a severe cold, and coughed almost all night with that dry, tickling sensation in my throat. The first bottle did me so much good I thought I would try the second one, and I am pleased to say "Dr. Wood's" resulted in a complete cure."

There is nothing that can take the place of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. There is nothing "just as good."

"Dr. Wood's" has been on the market for the past twenty-five years.

It is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price, 25c and 50c.

Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

WHAT DOES YOUR MIRROR TELL YOU?

Your mirror has a message for you. Is it one of health and good cheer? Or do you read there signs of disease and a warning to take action?

Is your complexion pale and sallow? Lips, gums and eyelids without color? Is there puffiness under the eyes?

These are indications of anaemia or poor quality of blood. Other symptoms are shortness of breath, palpitation of the heart, faintness and dizziness, swelling of the ankles, indigestion and irritable temper, ringing in the ears and dimness of vision.

The blood is watery. It is lacking in the red corpuscles which supply nutrition to the nervous system and go to build up the cells and tissues of the body. You need just such help as is best supplied by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. In this food cure you get in condensed and easily assimilated form the ingredients from which good, rich, red blood, is formed. Gradually and naturally the weak, listless body is restored and the vital organs resume their various functions.

Since the Nerve Food cures by the building-up process, you must expect to keep up the treatment for some little time. The thoroughness of the cure will more than reward you for your perseverance, and in the meantime your mirror will tell you of improving health and the return of color to the cheeks.

50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

BULGARIANS INVADE GREEK TERRITORY

TEUTONIC REPRESENTATIVES RECALLED

Greece Refuses To Make Any More Concessions Refusal May Mean War

Conversations With the Allied Diplomats Have Ended—Part of Anglo-French Forces Have Retreated Entirely From Serbia Into Greece—Bulgarians Suffer Heavily.

GERMAN OFFICERS SUICIDE

ATHENS, Dec. 11.—Greece has refused to make any more concessions to the Allied Powers at present, it was authoritatively stated to-day.

A few hours after the arrival of unconfirmed reports that the Allies were evacuating Serbia the announcement was made that conversations with the Allied diplomats have ended. Official despatches to-day confirmed the reports that at least part of the Anglo-French forces have retreated entirely from Serbia into Greece. Whether they were pursued across the border by Bulgarian or German troops is not known.

HAVE FORMED NEW FRONT.

ATHENS, Dec. 11.—Anglo-French forces in the Balkans have formed on a new front and are holding the enemy strong.

PETROGRAD, Dec. 11.—Nine German officers have suicided on the Russian front at Dvinsk.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Austria has been informed that the United States will break off relations unless settlement is made at once.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—It is believed here that the Greece refusal just now means war with the Allies.

SOFIA, Dec. 11.—Bulgarians have suffered very heavily in attacking the Allies.

Bulgarian Irregulars Have Penetrated Greek Territory May Cut Communication

Greek Authorities Have Adopted Measures to Frustrate the Bulgars—Shortage of Coal in Greece Threatens to Cause Suspension of Navigation and Traffic—Government Appeals to Britain for Relief.

ITALIAN STEAMER HAS BEEN SUNK

SALONIKA, Dec. 11.—Strong bands of Bulgarian irregulars have penetrated Greek territory, it is officially stated by the French General Staff. The invaders intend to cut the railway lines. Greek authorities have adopted measures to frustrate the Bulgars.

ATHENS, Dec. 11.—Shortage of coal in Greece threatens to cause suspension of navigation and railway traffic. Government has appealed to Britain for relief.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Ambassador Bernstorff notified Secretary of State Lansing that Emperor William had recalled Captains Boy-Ed and Von Papen.

STEAMER SUNK.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—Italian steamer Alighiere has been sunk by a submarine.

ATHENS, Dec. 11.—Austrian and Italian squadrons reported engaged in the Adriatic. Austrians were bombarding an Albanian town when the Italian squadron arrived and gave battle.

RESIGNED COMMAND.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—Sir James Wilcocks has resigned command of the Indian corps on the western front for personal reasons.

ATHENS, Dec. 11.—After undergoing severe hardships on the Nish trail, Serbian Prime Minister and forty deputies have arrived at Salonika.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Count Von Bernstorff asks for safe conduct for Boy-Ed and Von Papen.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—Crew of Danish steamer Minsk, sunk by submarine, now reported safe.

ICE-BREAKERS KEEP OPEN PATH TO RUSSIAN PORT

Three Powerful Breakers Each of Nearly 10,000 Tons Displacement Operating in the White Sea

LONDON, Dec. 11.—Reports from Archangel indicate that the Russians hope to keep that port open this winter well toward the end of January. Three powerful ice breakers, each of nearly 10,000 tons displacement, are steaming back and forth in the White Sea breaking down ice in the regular channel approach. The month of February is regarded as the most difficult one of the winter in the White Sea, and even if that period affords too great ice to be negotiated, it is believed certain that the ice crushers will be able to open up a passageway again before the first of April.

The vessels now operating in the White Sea channel were built, it is learned, in English yards. The prototype of the three craft was the Ermak, designed and built at the Elswick yards. The ice crushers do more than ram the ice—they rise up over the edges of the floes and crush the ice down by sheer weight of hull. The Ermak originally appeared with three propellers, but the forward screw was discarded after short experience.

In transportation circles it is said that shipments to Petrograd from New York via Vladivostok are going through in an average time of sixty days. The time by way of Archangel is about twenty-five days. There is practically no daylight now in the White Sea, the long winter days having set in, but Archangel approaches to the White Sea are reported as being well lighted, and navigators have little difficulty after rounding the North Cape in running down the Murman coast and making the White Sea entrance light.

The waters off the Murman coast are deep and the coastline bold. For a distance of fully two hundred miles the Gulf Stream current is felt and ice floes are reported as few in number until well up to the White Sea.

British Withdraw Lines Nearer to Greek Frontier French Repulse Bulgars

Violent Attacks By Bulgarian Troops, Supported by German Artillery and Infantry, Compel Successive Retirements of French and British Forces in the Balkans.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—Bulgarians, supported by German artillery and infantry, are violently attacking the French and British lines in the southeastern corner of Serbia and are compelling them gradually to retire toward the Greek frontier.

These withdrawals are being carried out in an orderly manner, the troops even taking back with them their forage, but their approach to Greek territory is bound to raise again grave question of the attitude of the Athens government.

Should the Franco-British forces attempt to hold a new line within the Greek frontier, it would be a temptation to the Teutons and Bulgars to follow them. Should they retain Salonika as a base, complications would inevitably arise with the Greek government.

However, the retiring troops are not yet on Greek soil, though two successive withdrawals by the British were officially announced last night. On December 7 the troops were withdrawn to a new line and on December 8 they retired to another line.

The official statement was as follows:—

"On December 6 the Bulgarians, after a heavy bombardment, attacked our troops west of Lake Doiran. Our advanced trenches were entered by small parties of Bulgarians, who were immediately driven out with the bayonet.

"On the morning of December 7 the Bulgarians attacked again and by weight of superior numbers drove our troops out of their position. Under cover of darkness the troops were withdrawn to a new line. Reports as to our losses have not yet been received.

"On December 8 the British troops successfully repulsed all attacks and in the evening they were withdrawn to a new position in order to conform with the general alignment.

Bulgarians, officered by Germans, are fiercely attacking the Allies in Macedonia, according to the Times Salonika correspondent, who regards the situation as grave. The correspondent says that a series of fierce assaults, by day and night, have been directed against the Allies' right wing from Demir-Kapu to Kosturino. These assaults, the despatch adds, have so far been successfully beaten off, but the enemy is being continually reinforced and apparently intends to renew the attacks with the object of gaining Strumnitza Station, toward which the German cavalry has been making reconnaissances.

HOLLAND STRIPPED OF THINGS TO EAT

Warring Nations Drain Country of Edibles.

Every third grown-up Hollander is serving in a special committee nowadays. The Minister of Commerce, Labour and Agriculture, to whom it falls to care for our daily bread in the widest sense of the word, is unable to cope with the task single-handed. It became necessary to form an endless list of special committees, each to deal with a special problem. Thus we have a coal committee, a vegetables committee, a wheat committee, a flour committee, and so on.

Everything in Holland's tables, everything wanted by trade or industry, has grown costlier, or is unavailable. Not because it is not there, but simply because it is wanted across the frontier so intensely that people over there are willing to pay almost any price to get it. This results in exportation in such dimensions that while the exporters grow rich and richer day by day, common people cannot find the commodity they want, even if they had the wherewithal to pay the almost prohibitive price.

The government, of course, has tried to find remedies. Exportation of a number of articles has been forbidden for many months by the people here or because they or their component parts were imported here under the guarantee of the Netherlands Oversea Trust, which implies non-re-exportation.

Decisive Battle Is Expected As Allies Retreat

ROME, Dec. 11.—One of the decisive battles of the war is expected as the Allies continue their retreat from Serbia. Dispatches from both Athens and Saloniki to-day indicated that Germany intends to carry her encircling movement into Greek territory. If German troops have not already crossed the Greek frontier, the combined German-Austrian-Bulgarian armies are expected to make a supreme effort to drive the expeditionary forces back to Saloniki and to the sea. It is believed probable here that Greece will be forced into the conflict, possibly with in a fortnight. She may be found fighting with the Central Empires or with the Allies. It is even probable that King Constantine may choose to fight independently, resisting first one and then the other army that threatens Greek neutrality. It is believed certain that the allies will retire across the Greek frontier and that fighting will occur on Greek territory. However there is every confidence that the allies will be able to make a successful stand at Saloniki under the protection of Anglo-French warships.

Entente Powers Anxious to Know Greek Policy

LONDON, Dec. 11.—In view of the latest turn of events in Macedonia the diplomats of the Entente powers are pressing the Greek Government to clear up promptly the situation with regard to the allied troops there, as it is considered essential that they enjoy full liberty of movement, says a Reuter despatch from Athens.

The feeling in Greek circles seems somewhat pessimistic, according to these advices, in view of the recent communications from the British and French legations dwelling upon the determined attitude of the Entente powers.

Partial Demobilization.

PARIS, Dec. 11.—The Athens correspondent of the Havas Agency sends the following under date of Thursday:

"The paper Ethnos announces that the Austrian and Turkish officials have advised the subjects of those nations to be ready to leave the city of Athens. The newspapers have renewed the discussion of a reported approaching partial demobilization of the army. The report is unconfirmed, but it is said the general staff is considering the best measures to accomplish it."

ITALIAN AND RUSSIAN ENVOYS SEE PREMIER

PARIS, Dec. 11.—The Havas correspondent at Athens reports that the Greek Premier, Mr. Skouloudis, yesterday received the Italian and Russian Ministers.

It is supposed these Ministers called on the Premier for the purpose of indicating to the Greek government that Italy and Russia adhere to the demands of Great Britain and France for guarantees of freedom of action for the expeditionary forces which landed at Salonica.

ITCHING BURNING OF ECZEMA INTENSE

Began on Child's Face. Spread all Over Head. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Healed.

Elrose, Sask.—"My little boy had eczema when he was about a week old. It began on his face and spread all over his head. It was in pimples and they would fester and break like little boils all over his head, but were like rash on his face. The eczema was very itching and the burning was intense; it made him so restless he could scarcely sleep.

"I tried Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Two cakes of Cuticura Soap and three boxes of Ointment cured him." (Signed) Mrs. A. F. Thayer, July 13, 1914.

WOUNDED CANADIAN HERO MARRIES NURSING SISTER

TORONTO, Dec. 11. — This week's marriage of Miss Irene Margaret Hodgson, daughter of Mrs. Thomas Hodgson, 61 Charles street east, to Lance-Corporal Donald E. Campbell, of London, Ont., adds still another to the rapidly-growing list of war romances. A cable from London, "Married, Dec. 6," was how the happy pair announced it.

The bride was a nursing sister at Lady Markham's Hospital, Beechborough Park, Shorncliffe, England, to which Lance-Corporal Campbell was taken after his wound at Festubert. He had enlisted at the outbreak of war with the 72nd Seaforth Highlanders in Vancouver, and went through Langemarck unscathed. However, so dangerously was he wounded at Festubert that for months his life was despaired of.

Three months ago eminent surgeons declared that the wounded soldier, who had expected to convalesce at his home in Canada, must remain in the hospital for further treatment. The disappointment was a bitter one, but it had ample compensation. He found a bride.

Though the brief cable gave no particulars, in a letter to her parents, dated Nov. 26th, Miss Hodgson stated that the wedding, at the request of Sir Arthur and Lady Markham, would take place at the chapel on the Beechborough estate, and that Lady Markham would provide breakfast and give the bride away. Sir Arthur had promised to get a special license. The groom, who enlisted as a private, has now three stripes, which he won for gallant service.

Experience is unquestionably the surest standard by which to test everything.—Washington.

YES—IT IS POSSIBLE TO STOP RHEUMATISM

Rheumatism is a tormenting and stubborn malady. In some cases it yields to treatment which is without avail in other cases.

The darting pains, lame muscles or stiffened joints only disappear by gradually expelling the uric acid, and so many thousands have been relieved by the blood-enriching oil-food in Scott's Emulsion that you should give it a faithful trial. Scott's Emulsion acts as a powerful blood-purifier by increasing the red corpuscles and it strengthens the organs to carry off the acids which cause the trouble.

Try Scott's Emulsion. It cannot harm. It has helped thousands and may be exactly what you need. No drugs.

WAR ORDER DISPLACED BY ORDINARY BUSINESS

Engineering Company Cancels Big Contract for Making Shells.

ALLIANCE, O., Dec. 11.—With domestic business and export demand growing beyond its capacity, Colonel W. H. Morgan, president of the Morgan Engineering Company, announced that his company had cancelled contracts calling for $5,000,000 worth of shrapnel and high velocity shells, and in the future would take no more orders for munitions.

One of the large export orders which will recompense the company for the loss of the shell contract was closed with the Japanese Government for the erection in Tokio of an iron and steel plant to cost approximately $1,500,000.

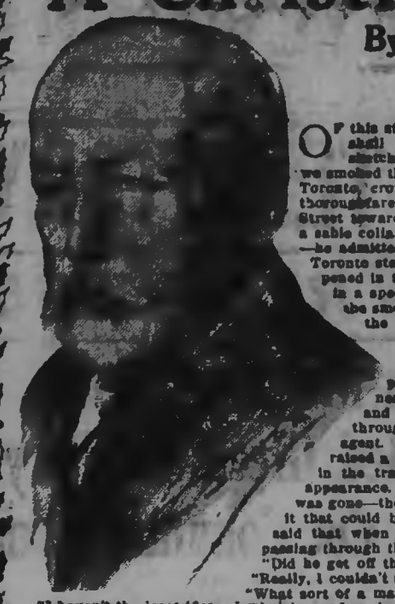
A Christmas Story

By Order of the President

(Reprinted from Herald Press Gropsicle)



OF this story the late Sir William Van Horne is the hero, and I shall endeavor to reproduce the scenes as he so cleverly sketched them to me in his home one winter night, the while we smoked the after-dinner cigar. Picture them a Christmas eve in Toronto, crowds of shoppers abroad in the brilliantly illuminated thoroughfares, and Sir William Van Horne walking down Yonge Street towards the station in a magnificent fur-lined overcoat with a sable collar. Yes, he was proud of the figure he cut in that coat—he admitted it. It was one he had bought within the hour in a Toronto store. He was going back to Montreal and, as often happened in these days, he travelled with the passengers instead of in a special car. When he got on the train, prior to going to the smoking-room, he threw off his new coat and threw it over the back of his seat. There he left it.

There ends Act I. And there began the troubles of the evening.

All alone the C. P. R. president's overcoat occupied the president's seat. Sir William did not come near it until the train pulled up at Burketon Junction, and then he only gave it a passing glance as he rushed through the car, in a hurry to get out and see the station agent. When he returned the overcoat was gone. Sir William raised a rumpus. He cross-examined the conductor, and called in the trainmen. They could give no explanation of the disappearance. Sir William was inconsolable. His beautiful coat was gone—the handsomest coat he had ever had! The only clue to it that could be discovered was that supplied by a passenger, who said that when the train stopped at Burketon Falls he saw a man passing through the carriage with a coat on his arm.

"Did he get off the train?" asked the president.

"Really, I couldn't say."

"What sort of a man was he?"

"I haven't the least idea. I was reading at the time and didn't take much notice of him."

By the president's orders, the train was pulled up at a wayside station, and a wire was sent back to Burketon Falls to put the police on the track of any man seen wearing a black, fur-lined overcoat with a sable collar.

Then Sir William, in his democratic way, strolled forward to the baggage car to hunt out another coat from his baggage. As he passed through the third-class coach, he saw a man sitting there wearing an overcoat remarkably like the one he had lost. But the collar was turned up and he could not be sure. He scrutinized the man carefully and passed on to the end of the car. Then he turned back through the car and gazed fixedly into the man's face.

The man turned troubled eyes to the president and quickly averted his gaze from the piercing scrutiny. In that glance the president knew him to be guilty. He leaned over the man and said in a low voice: "Come forward with me to the baggage car."

"What for?" asked the man obstinately.

"Because I say you've got to," replied the president, "unless you want a fuss made before the other passengers?" The man got up and followed the president without another word. The conductor, at a sign from the president, also followed.

"Now," said the president sternly, when the baggage car was reached, "where did you get that overcoat?"

The man looked at his questioner sheepishly.

"I don't see that I'm bound to tell you," he answered.

He was evidently a laboring man, and was overshadowed and subdued by the president's manner. His face was bronzed and weather-beaten; it was by no means the face of a criminal. He looked like one of the great army of workers who, by labor with pick and shovel and axe, spend their lives in conquering the wilderness for their fellow-men.

With a quick movement the president slipped his fingers into the breast pocket of the coat and pulled out a silk handkerchief. On one corner of this were his own initials.

"Do you know to whom that belongs?" asked the president, shaking the handkerchief threateningly in the man's face.

"No."

"That handkerchief belongs to me, and that overcoat you've got on belongs to me. Now do you know what I'm going to do with you? I'm going to hand you over to the police at the next station."

"Oh, for God's sake, don't do that, sir!" exclaimed the man, almost in tears.

He stripped off the overcoat and held it out.

"Here's your overcoat. I didn't mean to steal it. I saw it lying on the seat, and I thought some passenger had got out and forgotten it. Really, sir, I never meant to steal it!"

"If you didn't mean to steal it, why didn't you hand it to the conductor?"

"I thought if I didn't take it somebody else would. I looked on it as a stroke of luck, that's all."

"Well, you'll find it a stroke of bad luck for you, my man!" "Get a policeman as soon as we get into Bethany Junction," he said to the conductor. "I'll look after this man meanwhile."

"My God, sir! don't do it!" pleaded the man. "It'll drive my poor wife crazy. I haven't been home for six months—been railroading back in the bush. She and the little ones are expecting me for Christmas."

"Where do you live?"

"At Peterborough."

"What's your name?"

"Kennedy."

"I suppose you've got four or five little ones looking forward to your coming home Christmas?" asked the president, sarcastically.

"Yes, sir." Tears came in the man's eyes; a choking sob burst from him.

"Shut up, you snivelling coward!" roared the president. To see the man actually in tears angered him beyond measure.

The brakes were already grinding on the wheels. The man put his hand on the president's arm. "Don't do it, sir," he said. "I don't ask it for myself, but for my wife and youngsters. There's no harm done. You've got your coat."

The president shook him off roughly. "You common thieves," he said—and the words cut the laborer like a knife — "you common thieves are always afraid to face the music. You always snivel about your wife and family at home' when you're found out. But I've made up my mind to stop your little games on this railroad and by Gum, I'll do it!" "Jump out and get a policeman," he said to the conductor, as the train came to a standstill.

A few minutes afterwards the conductor returned with a policeman, and the man, silent and dejected, was marched off into the dark night in custody.

When the train started off again for Montreal the president rode in the baggage car. He sat on the top of a pile of boxes, quietly smoking a cigar and dangling his feet. His gaze was fixed on a new perambulator, but it was a long time before he really saw it. When the conductor came in he nodded toward the perambulator, and remarked: "Seasonable present, eh?"

"Yes, sir, a very useful sort of article," replied the conductor.

"But what I want to know," replied the president, "is why anybody should buy a wheeled baby carriage at this time of the year. A man bought that, for sure. A woman would have bought one with runners at this time of the year.

"Of course she would," replied the conductor. "But the man must have had a busy time shopping, mustn't he? There's a rocking horse in the baby carriage; there's a toboggan; there's a turkey, and, oh—dozen of things. It'll be a pretty happy Christmas wherever that baby carriage and its load is going."

"Yes, a carriage for the new baby, and lots of presents for a pretty healthy little family, by the look of it."

The label on the baby-carriage caught the eye of the conductor. He lifted it with his thumb and forefinger, and bent over to look at it. Then he dropped it as though it burned his fingers, and turned to the president with something like consternation in his face.

"What does it say?" asked the president. "Why man, anybody would think 'twas dynamite with a live fuse attached to look at you. What's on the label, anyway?"

"It says 'John Kennedy, Peterborough.'"

"Holy Caesar!" exclaimed the president, springing to his feet "Why that's the man who took my overcoat—the man I had arrested!"

"Yes, sir."

The president stood for a long time looking at his cigar. He recalled the pitiful pleadings of the man—his pale, agonized face, the unmanly tears.

"It'll drive my poor wife crazy," the man had said. "I haven't been home for six months—been railroading back in the bush. She and the little 'uns have been expecting me for Christmas."

Sir William thought of his own wife and family in his luxurious home in Montreal. They were waiting for him this Christmas eve, he knew, waiting and counting up the hours before he would return. Yet he had only been away two weeks. As a contrast he pictured some humble little home in Peterborough where a poor woman, who had not seen her husband for six months, was waiting this Christmas eve for his arrival. She would have scrubbed up the house till it looked as clean as a new pin. She would have a dainty meal ready for her husband and the president's imagination added the domestic touch of a kettle singing on the stove. She would have put clean clothes on the little children, and probably at this moment, was telling them for the hundredth time, "Your father's coming home!" And the little children! Surely they were dancing about the house and saying, "Daddy's coming! Daddy's coming!" He knew what little children were! Lastly came a stinging thought. The baby carriage was probably meant for a new baby that the father had never seen.

The president began to repeat. After all, what had the man done? Probably he really thought the overcoat was lost, and had picked it up just the same as a man might pick up a ten-dollar bill on the floor of a hotel, feeling he might as well have it as anybody else.

When the train got to the next station, Sir William jumped out and walked into the little station house.

"Give me that key," he said to the astonished operator. The president had been an operator in his early days, he at once sat down at the telegraph instrument and gave the call for Bethany Junction. When he got through to that place he sent a message that considerably surprised the operator at the other end.

"Get Kennedy, the man arrested this evening, released immediately. His arrest a regrettable mistake. Get out an engine and one car and immediately run a special through to Peterborough. Kennedy must get there to-night."

"By whose orders?" asked the operator at the other end.

"By order of the president, William Van Horne," was the reply.

At Peterborough station that night a woman named Kennedy, with a baby in her arms, and three or four little ones flocking around her, was considerably astonished to hear an important looking gentleman, who stepped from the train on which she had expected her husband, inquiring for her by name.

"Is Mrs. Kennedy here?" roared Sir William.

"Yes, sir," said the woman timidly. "I'm Mrs. Kennedy."

"Your husband is coming along on the next train," said Sir William.

"He'll be here in a couple of hours. Here, let me shake your hand and wish you a Merry Christmas. God bless you, ma'am! God bless you!"

He jumped on the train and was gone.

And in the hand that the president had shaken Mrs. Kennedy found a Christmas present. It was a twenty dollar bill!—

HOW WOMEN AVOID OPERATIONS

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Cleveland, Ohio—"My left side pained me so for several years that I expected to have to undergo an operation, but the first bottle I took of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound relieved most the pains in my side and I continued its use until I became regular and free from pains. I had asked several doctors if there was anything I could take to help me and they said there was nothing that they knew of. I am thankful for such a good medicine and will always give it the highest praise."—Mrs. C. H. Griffith, 7305 Madison Ave., Cleveland, Ohio.

Hanover, Pa.—"I suffered from female trouble and the pains were so bad at times that I could not sit down. The doctor advised a severe operation but my husband got me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I experienced great relief in a short time. Now I feel like a new person and can do a hard day's work and not mind it. What joy and happiness it is to be well once more. I am always ready and willing to speak a good word for the Compound."—Mrs. Ada Wilt, 196 Stock St., Hanover, Pa.

EAT REMAINS OF CANDLES

Christmas Services Among the Eskimos of Labrador—Part Most Enjoyed by the Children.

Somebody has said that when the world was being made the Creator gathered up all the waste material he had left over and made Labrador out of it. Some people say the Creator never intended it to be inhabited. But inhabited it is with a sturdy, taciturn band of Eskimos, who, thanks to the Moravian missionaries who have penetrated to that country, celebrate Christmas in their own peculiar way.

As service time in the church draws near all the inhabitants, old and young, the men on one side and the women on the other, are waiting in eager expectation. It is quite dark by four o'clock and the bell rings. All come trooping in clad in the best clothes they can muster.

No one stays at home from these services unless he is sick or lame, and whenever it is possible sleighs are used to bring these disabled ones to church.

For the little children the happiest part of the services comes later when each child receives a lighted candle, symbolizing the light of the world. Each candle stands in a white turnip which serves as a candlestick. Most of the candles are made from deer tallow which the Eskimos bring to the missionaries. After the services the children eat not only the turnip, but what is left of the candle as well.

One year only about ten persons, mostly men, could come from the nearest island. The ice had been driven together, and rather than miss the Christmas service they had risked their lives in crossing over on that moving, heaving, broken ice to the mainland. Then they had to climb the mountains and walk through the deep snow until they reached the mission station after twenty-three hours of danger and a fearfully exhausting march through the snow.

How happy they were to be in time to celebrate the Christmas festival in the house of their God! About six days later, when the ice had formed, all the rest of the people came, but oh! so sad and downhearted. Like little children they told the missionaries their tale of sorrow. They described how sad they all had been when they found that it would be impossible to come to the mission station for the Christmas service.

GENERAL MUNRO

It is generally agreed that few soldiers have won greater distinction than General Sir Charles Munro, who succeeded Sir Ian Hamilton as Commander of the Dardanelles forces. As a well known military critic remarked: "If there is a way out of this 'Dardanelles muddle,' Sir Charles will find it." Sir Charles entered the army at the age of nineteen, becoming a captain in ten years, major in 1894, and colonel twelve years ago. On the Northwest frontier of India and in South Africa he proved himself a born leader, while as Chief Instructor at the Hythe School of Musketry, he rendered incalculable service to the home forces. It was during the manœuvres of 1913 that General Munro showed what a magnificent strategist he is, for with a small force he outmanœuvred heavy divisions in the most skilful manner. His most marked characteristic is the sympathetic attitude he always adopts towards "Tommy," but, as the latter says, he is a "terror for training."

One who knows General Monro intimately remarks that his most prominent quality is his soundness. He knows his mind right through. "He has always thought out every possibility beforehand. He has prepared for as many sorts of failure as there are chances of success, and with his precise knowledge, he estimates the strain on the weak links of his material."

It is a curious fact that this great soldier comes of a race of famous Edinburgh doctors— three of his ancestors having held in succession the office of Professor of Anatomy and Surgery at Edinburgh University for considerably over a hundred years. General Munro, by the way, bears a striking resemblance to Sir John French. Seen from behind, he might easily be mistaken for the great little Field Marshal, who is one of his greatest admirers.

Tommy's Hymn of Hate

Tommy in the trenches has the good solid British hate of excess whether it come under the cloak of religion or sentiment. There is a good story going the rounds that illustrates this: It has to do with the now somewhat mouldy "Hymn of Hate." The boys on the firing lines having chipped the "Boshes" one day, irritated them to such a degree that the Germans began singing Lissauer's poem. The Tommies waited until they were through, then, catching the air on a mouth organ, they gave an imitation:

"'Ite of the 'eart, an' 'ite of the 'and,
'Ite by water and 'ite by land,
'Oo do we 'ite to beat the band?"

And the answering roar of the British chorus of "England" woke a shout of laughter that enraged the Germans to wasting many rounds of ammunition.

Zutoo Tablets
At Any Cost

Such is the statement of Mr. A. O. Norton, of Boston, the largest Jack Manufacturer in the world. His voluntary testimonial regarding ZUTOO follows:

286 Congress St., Boston, Mass.
"I have been a sufferer from Headache since childhood and have used all, or nearly all the so-called 'cures' on the market. Some months since my attention was called to Zutoo Tablets and I have been using them ever since with the most gratifying results. I find they cure a 'sick' or 'nervous' headache in a few minutes and leave no bad effects. My family use them whenever needed with equally good results. I have frequently given them to friends who were suffering from Headache and they never failed to give quick relief. I always carry Zutoo Tablets in my grip on the road and WOULD NOT BE WITHOUT THEM AT ANY COST."

Come! let us lay a crazy lance at rest
And tilt at windmills under a wild sky.—Galsworthy.

I cannot help but love the knight who goes,
Unchampioned, derided by his foes
And friends, to seek the white star of his dream
In the black night. He only sees the gleam;
And, heeding neither laughter nor the sneers
Of sane complacency, his course he steers
Into the starless skies. Perchance for him
The gleam will never out of darkness swim.
Yet better, dream-possessed, to falter down
Than in failure than to snicker like a clown
Over the dream. God give us grace to see

WOUNDED CANADIAN HERO MARRIES NURSING SISTER

TORONTO, Dec. 11. — This week's marriage of Miss Irene Margaret Hodgson, daughter of Mrs. Thomas Hodgson, 61 Charles street east, to Lance-Corporal Donald E. Campbell, of London, Ont., adds still another to the rapidly-growing list of war romances. A cable from London, "Married, Dec. 6," was how the happy pair announced it.

The bride was a nursing sister at Lady Markham's Hospital, Beechborough Park, Guernsliffe, England, to which Lance-Corporal Campbell was taken after his wound at Festubert. He had enlisted at the outbreak of war with the 72nd Seaforth Highlanders in Vancouver, and went through Langemarck unscathed. However, so dangerously was he wounded at Festubert that for months his life was despaired of.

Three months ago eminent surgeons declared that the wounded soldier, who had expected to convalesce at his home in Canada, must remain in the hospital for further treatment. The disappointment was a bitter one, but it had ample compensation. He found a bride.

Though the brief cable gave no particulars, in a letter to her parents, dated Nov. 26th, Miss Hodgson stated that the wedding, at the request of Sir Arthur and Lady Markham, would take place at the chapel on the Beechborough estate, and that Lady Markham would provide breakfast and give the bride away. Sir Arthur had promised to get a special license. The groom, who enlisted as a private, has now three stripes, which he won for gallant service.

Experience is unquestionably the surest standard by which to test everything.—Washington.

YES—IT IS POSSIBLE TO STOP RHEUMATISM

Rheumatism is a tormenting and stubborn malady. In some cases it yields to treatment which is without avail in other cases.

The darting pains, lame muscles or stiffened joints only disappear by gradually expelling the uric acid, and so many thousands have been relieved by the blood-enriching oil-food in Scott's Emulsion that you should give it a faithful trial. Scott's Emulsion acts as a powerful blood-purifier by increasing the red corpuscles and it strengthens the organs to carry off the acids which cause the trouble.

Try Scott's Emulsion. It cannot harm. It has helped thousands and may be exactly what you need. No drugs.

BULGARIANS INVADE GREEK TERRITORY

TEUTONIC REPRESENTATIVES RECALLED

Greece Refuses To Make Any More Concessions Refusal May Mean War

Conversations With the Allied Diplomats Have Ended—Part of Anglo-French Forces Have Retreated Entirely From Serbia Into Greece—Bulgarians Suffer Heavily.

GERMAN OFFICERS SUICIDE

ATHENS, Dec. 11.—Greece has refused to make any more concessions to the Allied Powers at present, it was authoritatively stated to-day.

A few hours after the arrival of unconfirmed reports that the Allies were evacuating Serbia the announcement was made that conversations with the Allied diplomats have ended. Official despatches to-day confirmed the reports that at least part of the Anglo-French forces have retreated entirely from Serbia into Greece. Whether they were pursued across the border by Bulgarian or German troops is not known.

HAVE FORMED NEW FRONT.

ATHENS, Dec. 11.—Anglo-French forces in the Balkans have formed on a new front and are holding the enemy strong.

PETROGRAD, Dec. 11.—Nine German officers have suicided on the Russian front at Dvinsk.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Austria has been informed that the United States will break off relations unless settlement is made at once.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—It is believed here that the Greece refusal just now means war with the Allies.

SOFIA, Dec. 11.—Bulgarians have suffered very heavily in attacking the Allies.

British Withdraw Lines Nearer to Greek Frontier French Repulse Bulgars

Violent Attacks By Bulgarian Troops, Supported by German Artillery and Infantry, Compel Successive Retirements of French and British Forces in the Balkans.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—Bulgarians, supported by German artillery and infantry, are violently attacking the French and British lines in the south-eastern corner of Serbia and are compelling them gradually to retire toward the Greek frontier.

These withdrawals are being carried out in an orderly manner, the troops even taking back with them their forage, but their approach to Greek territory is bound to raise again grave question of the attitude of the Athens government.

Should the Franco-British forces attempt to hold a new line within the Greek frontier, it would be a temptation to the Teutons and Bulgars to follow them. Should they retain Salonika as a base, complications would inevitably arise with the Greek government.

However, the retiring troops are not yet on Greek soil, though two successive withdrawals by the British were officially announced last night. On December 7 the troops were withdrawn to a new line and on December 8 they retired to another line.

The official statement was as follows:—

"On December 6 the Bulgarians, after a heavy bombardment, attacked our troops west of Lake Doiran. Our advanced trenches were entered by small parties of Bulgarians, who were immediately driven out with the bayonet.

"On the morning of December 7 the Bulgarians attacked again and by weight of superior numbers drove our troops out of their position. Under cover of darkness the troops were withdrawn to a new line. Reports as to our losses have not yet been received.

"On December 8 the British troops successfully repulsed all attacks and in the evening they were withdrawn to a new position in order to conform with the general alignment.

Bulgarians, officered by Germans, are fiercely attacking the Allies in Macedonia, according to the Times Salonika correspondent, who regards the situation as grave. The correspondent says that a series of fierce assaults, by day and night, have been directed against the Allies' right wing from Demir-Kapu to Kosturino. These assaults, the despatch adds, have so far been successfully beaten off, but the enemy is being continually reinforced and apparently intends to renew the attacks with the object of gaining Strumnitza Station, toward which the German cavalry has been making reconnaissances.

ICE-BREAKERS KEEP OPEN PATH TO RUSSIAN PORT

Three Powerful Breakers Each of Nearly 10,000 Tons Displacement Operating in the White Sea

LONDON, Dec. 11.—Reports from Archangel indicate that the Russians hope to keep that port open this winter well toward the end of January. Three powerful ice breakers, each of nearly 10,000 tons displacement, are steaming back and forth in the White Sea breaking down ice in the regular channel approach. The month of February is regarded as the most difficult one of the winter in the White Sea, and even if that period affords too great ice to be negotiated, it is believed certain that the ice crushers will be able to open up a passageway again before the first of April.

The vessels now operating in the White Sea channel were built, it is learned, in English yards. The prototype of the three craft was the Ermak, designed and built at the Elswick yards. The ice crushers do more than ram the ice—they rise up over the edges of the floes and crush the ice down by sheer weight of hull. The Ermak originally appeared with three propellers, but the forward screw was discarded after short experience.

In transportation circles it is said that shipments to Petrograd from New York via Vladivostok are going through in an average time of sixty days. The time by way of Archangel is about twenty-five days. There is practically no daylight now in the White Sea, the long winter days having set in, but Archangel approaches to the White Sea are reported as being well lighted, and navigators have little difficulty after rounding the North Cape in running down the Murman coast and making the White Sea entrance light.

The waters off the Murman coast are deep and the coastline bold. For a distance of fully two hundred miles the Gulf Stream current is felt and ice floes are reported as few in number until well up to the White Sea.

Bulgarian Irregulars Have Penetrated Greek Territory May Cut Communication

Greek Authorities Have Adopted Measures to Frustrate the Bulgars—Shortage of Coal in Greece Threatens to Cause Suspension of Navigation and Traffic—Government Appeals to Britain for Relief.

ITALIAN STEAMER HAS BEEN SUNK

SALONIKA, Dec. 11.—Strong bands of Bulgarian irregulars have penetrated Greek territory, it is officially stated by the French General Staff. The invaders intend to cut the railway lines. Greek authorities have adopted measures to frustrate the Bulgars.

ATHENS, Dec. 11.—Shortage of coal in Greece threatens to cause suspension of navigation and railway traffic. Government has appealed to Britain for relief.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Ambassador Bernstorff notified Secretary of State Lansing that Emperor William had recalled Captains Boy-Ed and Von Papen.

STEAMER SUNK.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—Italian steamer Alighiere has been sunk by a submarine.

ATHENS, Dec. 11.—Austrian and Italian squadrons reported engaged in the Adriatic. Austrians were bombarding an Albanian town when the Italian squadron arrived and gave battle.

RESIGNED COMMAND.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—Sir James Wilcocks has resigned command of the Indian corps on the western front for personal reasons.

ATHENS, Dec. 11.—After undergoing severe hardships on the Nish trail, Serbian Prime Minister and forty deputies have arrived at Salonika.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Count Von Bernstorff asks for safe conduct for Boy-Ed and Von Papen.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—Crew of Danish steamer Minsk, sunk by submarine, now reported safe.

HOLLAND STRIPPED OF THINGS TO EAT

Warring Nations Drain Country of Edibles.

Every third grown-up Hollander is serving in a special committee nowadays. The Minister of Commerce, Labour and Agriculture, to whom it falls to care for our daily bread in the widest sense of the word, is unable to cope with the task single-handed. It became necessary to form an endless list of special committees, each to deal with a special problem. Thus we have a coal committee, a vegetables committee, a wheat committee, a flour committee, and so on.

Everything in Holland's tables, everything wanted by trade or industry, has grown costlier, or is unavailable. Not because it is not there, but simply because it is wanted across the frontier so intensely that people over there are willing to pay almost any price to get it. This results in exportation in such dimensions that while the exporters grow rich and richer day by day, common people cannot find the commodity they want, even if they had the wherewithal to pay the almost prohibitive price.

The government, of course, has tried to find remedies. Exportation of a number of articles has been forbidden for many months by the people here or because they or their component parts were imported here under the guarantee of the Netherlands Oversea Trust, which implies non-re-exportation.

Decisive Battle Is Expected As Allies Retreat

ROME, Dec. 11.—One of the decisive battles of the war is expected as the Allies continue their retreat from Serbia. Dispatches from both Athens and Saloniki to-day indicated that Germany intends to carry her encircling movement into Greek territory. If German troops have not already crossed the Greek frontier, the combined German-Austrian-Bulgarian armies are expected to make a supreme effort to drive the expeditionary forces back to Saloniki and to the sea. It is believed probable here that Greece will be forced into the conflict, possibly with in a fortnight. She may be found fighting with the Central Empires or with the Allies. It is even probable that King Constantine may choose to fight independently, resisting first one and then the other army that threatens Greek neutrality. It is believed certain that the allies will retire across the Greek frontier and that fighting will occur on Greek territory. However there is every confidence that the allies will be able to make a successful stand at Saloniki under the protection of Anglo-French warships.

Entente Powers Anxious to Know Greek Policy

LONDON, Dec. 11.—In view of the latest turn of events in Macedonia the diplomats of the Entente powers are pressing the Greek Government to clear up promptly the situation with regard to the allied troops there, as it is considered essential that they enjoy full liberty of movement, says a Reuter despatch from Athens.

The feeling in Greek circles seems somewhat pessimistic, according to these advices, in view of the recent communications from the British and French legations dwelling upon the determined attitude of the Entente powers.

Partial Demobilization.

PARIS, Dec. 11.—The Athens correspondent of the Havas Agency sends the following under date of Thursday:

"The paper Ethnos announces that the Austrian and Turkish officials have advised the subjects of those nations to be ready to leave the city of Athens. The newspapers have renewed the discussion of a reported approaching partial demobilization of the army. The report is unconfirmed, but it is said the general staff is considering the best measures to accomplish it."

WAR ORDER DISPLACED BY ORDINARY BUSINESS

Engineering Company Cancels Big Contract for Making Shells.

ALLIANCE, O., Dec. 11.—With domestic business and export demand growing beyond its capacity, Colonel W. H. Morgan, president of the Morgan Engineering Company, announced that his company had cancelled contracts calling for $5,000,000 worth of shrapnel and high velocity shells, and in the future would take no more orders for munitions.

One of the large export orders which will recompense the company for the loss of the shell contract was closed with the Japanese Government for the erection in Tokio of an iron and steel plant to cost approximately $1,500,000.

PARIS, Dec. 11.—The Havas correspondent at Athens reports that the Greek Premier, Mr. Skouloudis, yesterday received the Italian and Russian Ministers.

It is supposed these Ministers called on the Premier for the purpose of indicating to the Greek government that Italy and Russia adhere to the demands of Great Britain and France for guarantees of freedom of action for the expeditionary forces which landed at Salonica.

ITCHING BURNING OF ECZEMA INTENSE

Began on Child's Face. Spread all Over Head. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Healed.

Elrose, Sask.—"My little boy had eczema when he was about a week old. It began on his face and spread all over his head. It was in pimples and they would fester and break like little boils all over his head, but were like rash on his face. The eczema was very itching and the burning was intense; it made him so restless he could scarcely sleep.

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

PURITY.

Whatever may be our mental attainments or social qualities, we are nothing without purity, only "Tinkling cymbals." Our love is stained, our benevolence corrupted, our piety a pretense, which God will not accept. An impure woman is an awful sight. She outrages all just ideas of mankind; all proper conceptions of spiritual beauty. To have evil imaginings, corrupt longings or deceitful propensities ought to startle any young woman. It is the exuding or impure waters from the heart. Who feels such utterances from within should beware. They are the whisperings of an evil spirit, the temptations to sin and crime. If I could speak to all young women in the world, I would strive to utter the intrinsic beauties and essential qualities of purity, I would seek to illustrate it as the fountain of all that is great and good, all that is spiritually grand and redeeming. This is no virtue, no spiritual life, no moral beauty, no glory of soul nor dignity of character without purity.

I wish that the words I write to-day might sound between the pauses of summer zephyrs and arrest the attention of some girl whose mind is made up to leave her country home and seek a career in the world. I would feel, were I to die to-night, that I had not lived in vain, could any word now written dissuade her from such a purpose. The path you seek my dear, is set with many thorns. Keep, then, I pray you, as long as possible in the love-guarded way of your present simple life. Without you have a certain shelter awaiting you in the heart and home of trusted friends, do not come to this or any other city to seek your fortune. Unless you have some pronounced talents, stay at home and cultivate the duty that is commonplace. If you are penniless and homeless, try every avenue open to you where you are before you merge yourself in the restless tide of a strange and wicked city. Finally, if forced to leave your country home, come heedfully and soberly. Work is earnest, make it so. Play is pure keep it so. Wherever or whatever your work may be, do it faithfully, conscientiously, enthusiastically. Let its demands be first always, and teach pleasures to wait upon it.—Amber.

Don't claim an ignorance of evil, but rise up and look it to purer realms of thought, and help yourself and humanity by thinking and talking of the good things all about us. Beautiful love, fine friendship, noble charities Look for them and you will find them.

The following beautiful tribute to woman's love and devotion is from the pen of Robert G. Ingersoll. "The one thing in this work that is constant, that one window in which light forever burns, the one star which darkness cannot quench, is woman's love. It rises to the greatest height, it sinks to the lowest depth, it forgives the most cruel injuries. It is perennial of life and grows in any climate; neither coldness or neglect, harshness or cruelty can extinguish it. A woman's love is the perfume of the heart. This is the real love that wrought miracles in art, that gives music all the way from the cradle song to the symphony, that bears the soul away on wings of fire; a love that is greater than power, sweeter than life, and stronger than death."

Ralph Waldo Emerson gave this good advice to his daughter: "Finish every day and be done with it; you have done what you could; some blunders and absurdities no doubt crept in; forgot them as soon as you can. To-morrow is a new day; you shall begin it well and serenly and with too high a spirit to be cumbered with old nonsence. It is too dear with all its opportunities to waste a moment of it on mistaken yesterday's."

The ethics of home correspond in a large measure with ethics of society. All these virtues which are crowned jewels of the highest civilization have their inception in the home. The glory and charm of womanhood and manhood, the niceties of character which give distinctiveness and beauty to childhood and youth, the adjustments of personal and domestic relations within the home, the education of the impulses, budding susceptibilities and growing powers of children all fall within the powers of home ethics.

A man to be a success in life must be of sound character, good mind, truly honest, and with clean, sober habits. We would like to see every boy in this town straighten up, quit the whisky, the cards, the cigarettes, and tobacco, and start out on manhood's journey good, clean men, and their character would be complete. Show us a boy in town that has none of these habits, and we will show you one who will make the model man of our city.

"Was the public dinner you went to a success?" "It was the best dinner I ever attended. Every speaker who was down for speech on the programme had tonsilitis."—Tit-Bits.

MOTHER! YOUR CHILD IS CROSS. FEVERISH, FROM CONSTIPATION

If Tongue is Coated, Breath Bad, Stomach Sour, Clean Liver and Bowels

Give "California Syrup of Figs" at once—a teaspoonful to-day often saves a sick child to-morrow.

If your little one is out-of-sorts, half-sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless "fruit laxative," because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs"; then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

SINGING OF CAROLS

Santa Claus was born ages ago, and he has been so busy ever since that he never has taken the time to study his family tree. American children call him Santa Claus; the little Dutch folk, St. Nicholas; the French, Pere Noel; and the German, Prince Ruprecht or Kris Kringle. But they all mean the same thing.

TAILORED SUITS AND EVENING FROCKS

Worn at Opening Events of the Season

EMERALD GREEN A FAVOURED COLOUR

NEW YORK, Dec. 11. — New York's social season is in full swing; it opened in a blaze of glory with the swinging back of the Metropolitan's doors late in November. This first night as always, drew the usual brilliant, opera-going audience, wonderfully gowned in the soft shades so much favoured for formal evening wear this winter. The white throats, beautifully dressed hair, and gleaming jewels distracted the attention more than once of even the "dyed-in-the-wool" music lovers, who are usually immune to clothes when Caruso is to be heard.

The Favoured Pale Tints.

Among the prevailing shades worn by the gorgeous "first-nighters" were pink, blue, and white, with here and there a stunning black frock, or one of vivid emerald green. This shade of green is an exception to the rule of white, or pastel shades, now so modish; there were several ntire gowns in this shade at the opera and the most striking and artistic costume noticed at the Horse Show, some weeks earlier was also of this green. It is wonderfully becoming to a woman with white hair and a youthful face. Black is favoured for evening, too, and served as an attractive touch of contrast among the pale tones in the "golden horseshoe."

The Matter of Fans and Gloves.

Among the most fascinating accessories accompanying these attractive costumes were the fans; these were not the small, useless fancies of several seasons past, but large, graceful fans of ostrich, curled and uncurled. Many were in white, or the pastel shades; one especially attractive fan was of midnight blue, uncurled ostrich.

Dark Green Duvetyn Suit

The matter of gloves with the sleeveless frocks, and all were sleeveless with one or two exceptions, has probably been a problem with many; white gloves, coming just above the elbow, were generally worn; now and then one noticed a pair in pale pink or deep cream to match the frock; one or two pairs of black, too, were worn. The universal use of tulle, malines, or the fine-meshed net was very noticeable; it was used to veil the neck and arms, as a scarf, in the hair, or billowing, pannier-fashion, over the hips. The men with their black suits and white fronts made an excellent background for these pretty women and their delicately coloured frocks.

Daytime Suits at the Horse Show.

The daytime costumes at the Horse Show were quite as interesting as those worn in the evening. While there were many attractive one-piece dresses worn under smart separate coats of cloth or fur, the tailored suit, as in days gone by, was most in evidence. Not the straight mannish suit entirely, although there were many of these, too, but the easy-lined, semi-tailored suit of broadcloth, gabardine, duvetyn, whipcord, and novelty checks and stripes. Many dull-coloured mixtures were worn, trimmed of course, with fur or braid.

An exceptionally effective suit of dark green duvetyn, was made with a flounced skirt and flaring peplum on the coat. A wide soft collar of dark fox and a barrell muff of fox accompanied the suit. Other effective details were the matching spats, the wide velvet hat, and the nifty stick. Another tailored suit, worn the same afternoon, equally simple and chic, was of dark blue gabardine, made with a Russian blouse coat, and flaring skirt, trimmed with narrow bands of seal; a small ball muff of beaver and seal was carried, and spats of white corresponded with the white faille ribbon on the stiff-brimmed hat.

Mother—(after relating pathetic story)—"Now, Reggie, wouldn't you like to give your bunny to that poor little boy you saw to-day who hasn't any father?" Reggie (clutching rabbit)—"Couldn't we give him father instead?"

A BARBARIC FASHIONABLE WEDDING

(By Dorothy Dix.)

"The prettiest girl in Duchess county," has proved that nature has furnished the inside of her head with good gray matter as well as adorned the outside with luxuriant tresses, by stepping into her best young man's automobile, and being whirled to the parson's and married without any fuss or feathers about it.

It is to be hoped that her example will be followed by other girls and that marriage a la minute will become the mode, and that that horrible survival of savagery, the fashionable wedding, will soon take its place along with the rack and the thumb screw, and the other instruments of torture which we have grown enlightened enough to discard.

Of all fool customs on earth none has so little to recommend it as the show wedding. Stripped of all disguises it is nothing but a combination of nervous prostration, bankruptcy, and blackmail, and why any young couple should deliberately choose to start a new life with that sort of a curse wished on them, passed comprehension.

The "Galley Slaves."

To begin with, for months and months before the wedding, the bride and her mother have worked like galley slaves accumulating an over-supply of clothes, as if on the wedding day the shops would be closed forever, and there would never be another opportunity to buy a garment. The poor little bride has been pulled and hauled about by dressmakers and milliners until she is worn to a frazzle, and her nerves are raw.

It is a common remark that girls never look so ugly as they do at their own weddings. It is because they are so worn getting ready for a big show that they are fitter for a sanitarium. It is also why most honeymoons are ghastly affairs of tears and hysterics, and quarrels, instead of being the dream of bliss to which two young hearts had looked forward.

Then the expense of the display wedding! Bankruptcy for both father and fiancee unless they have long pocketbooks. Many a poo rold father works himself to death paying for his daughter's white satin, and orange blossoms, and flower girls, and ring bearers.

Many a poor young man never really recovers from the debt he was plunged into at the time of his marriage for taxicabs, and souvenirs for bridesmaids and groomsmen, and ushers, and bachelor dinners, and all the flummery attendant on a display wedding.

The "Hold-up" Presents.

And the presents? Regular hold-ups at the point of a card, and with such horrible results! Clocks by the score, vases by the bushel, pieces of furniture that swear at each other, junk—junk—junk! And every piece of it got to be paid back at somebody else's fool wedding that can be guaranteed to happen at just the moment when you need a new dress, or baby has the measles.

Why should any man and woman about to take the awful plunge into Heaven or hell want to do it in the presence of a gaping, curious, criticising crowd? If ever there is a time for privacy, it is at a wedding. It would be no more incongruous to invite people to come and see you die than it is to ask them to come and see you married.

In reality to elope is the only dignified way of getting married, and if girls will adopt the sensible plan of merely pinning on their hats and strolling around to the clergyman with their own Tom, Dick or Harry, instead of dragging him up to the altar to the tune of that Lohengrin rag, it will do much to boom matrimony. For it's the high cost of marriage that keeps many a young man from marrying.

Chat For And About Women

Stop This Side of Fatigue.

It is a common expression with women when they do not feel up to the mark, when both looks and manners show a slackness, that they are "just tired." This just tired feeling is a warning too often passed over, for if women could learn that the sensation of fatigue marks your limit, and act upon it there would be fewer nervous breakdowns.

After a hard day no matter if one of work or play for either of these can induce fatigue, rest, instead of keeping yourself up for something more Stop short of being just tired, for you will find that the ounce of prevention is far better than the pound of cure which will inevitably come later. Yet how many women will do it A doctor will tell you that the best thing for most women to do would be to grow a conscience, one which will make you give up something which would induce that tired feeling. Few women will do it, so all that is left for the doctors to do is to patch them up, and keeping on patching, till the inevitable breakdown comes.

Fatigue means a decrease of vital force. If up to the point of feeling tired you have required all the vital energy you have been using to keep you in good physical condition it is a foregone conclusion that your limit has been reached when the first signs of fatigue begin to show themselves. That is the time for you to drop everything and rest. During rest this vital force is generated. Sleep that has relaxation in it is the best aid to insure it. Rest does not always have to mean lying down to produce it.

How to Rest.

Very few women know how to rest. Chairs are built to invite repose. Sofas crowded with pillows seem made to woo relaxation. Yet women sit upright in the former and lull only slightly in the latter, entirely overlooking the fact that to relax properly every muscle in the body should be made to let go.

How many women of your acquaintance know how to let their hand drop lightly in their lap? Not many! The strain is felt all along the arm. It is not left there in the lap, but actually held there by the gripping power of its master, the will.

Many women thing they keep young looking by the use of massage. The rubbing is good enough, but the absolute relaxation that is forced upon her during the treatment is the thing that gives the real benefit. Youth, beauty, vivacity are not only kept alive by persistent relaxation and conservation of the vital forces but are born from them. No power on earth can keep youth alive, when constant unrest of body and mind are ageing the forces.

Regard relaxation as an absolute necessity. Study how to walk without weariness, to sit without restraint and to live without haste. A lot of cares that you have gripped frantically have needed no grip at all. Most of the 'worries' you have are creations of pure imagination. You have lived through a day of them and found them turned into jokes. Most things don't matter at all. Most of your losses have been just inconveniences, but you have turned them into tragedies and lasting griefs by the grip you have had upon them.

Teach yourself that life and youth are preserved by letting go. Let go pleasures as well as cares, when thy become onerous Cultivate serenity. Find out your limit, and then stop one hour short of being "just tired".

LADY'S APRON.

By Anabel Worthington.

There are so many different kinds of work that one almost needs a different apron for each. Then, again, some women do one kind of thing and others do not, and so we must have a choice of garments.

The model shown in this illustration will be found a sufficient protection for the dress in nearly all circumstances, although it cannot be used in place of the frock, but must be worn over it.

The front of the apron is in princess style and is somewhat fitted in to the figure. It extends up to the shoulders, forming a bib in front and is joined at the shoulder to a piecing which completely covers the back. The sides of the apron extend only to the waist line and are joined to the front by a seam and to the back at the lower edge of the bib. The fastening is placed in the centre of the back and the apron is thus drawn well in against the figure and does not get into water or in one's way when cooking or otherwise engaged.

With this apron a sleeve is provided and this extends only a trifle above the elbow. It may be slipped on to protect the lower part of the dress sleeve from the spatter of grease when cooking or of water or other soiling agent.

Gingham, calico, cambric, chambray, &c., are used for these aprons.

The apron pattern, No. 7,400, is cut in sizes 34, 38 and 42 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 4¼ yards of 36 inch material.

This pattern can be obtained by sending to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

THE MERCHANT'S DOLE

A Tale For the Children

There was once a very rich merchant in a city, whose heart was full of love towards his fellow men; and time and space there is not here to tell of all the charity and kindness which he showed towards God's poor. Among other acts of charity every Christmas Eve he gave a bountiful dole to twelve of the poorest persons in the city, in memory of the Lord's Apostles.

Now, one Christmas Eve, in the midst of a great feast he gave to the richest and nobles of the citizens, he could not forget the sad, careworn faces of the twelve poor people to whom he had given dole that day. At last stealing away from all the light and warmth and splendour, he went up to his own chamber, and kneeling there in the darkness, he prayed for all those who were in poverty, hunger and want that night.

Suddenly, he heard a voice call his name. Turning round, he saw that the room was full of light, and in the light stood an angel—not one of those strong messengers of God who bear His commands to men and execute His judgments, but evidently one of the young angels who always behold His face.

His garments were of the softest the fairest colours, his wings were like the soft plumage of a dove, and his light, waving hair was wreathed with the fair flowers of Paradise. In his hand he held a book bound in jewelled covers, and he wrote therein with letters of gold.

"Brother," he said, "unto me is given the task of recording the names of all those to whom kindness is shown on this eve of our Lord's Nativity. Tell me, I pray thee, the names of those to whom thou has given dole this day."

So the merchant told him the names of the twelve unto whom he had given dole that day. But when he had written the twelve the angel still paused in the act of writing, as though he expected another name to be given him.

Seeing that the merchant was silent, he said gently, "But there was one more."

The merchant answered, "Not so. Unto twelve only have I given this day, and their names thou hast recorded."

But the angel said, "Yet there was One more unto Whom thou has given this day and every Christmas Eve."

The merchant was silent and perplexed.

"Dost thou not understand? Dost thou not remember" cried the angel.

Then with tears of joy in his eyes at the very thought of what he had to tell, he added to the others the Name which is above all names.

Then the merchant understood, and he bowed the head and worshipped.

And the angel closed his book and went back to heaven; and though the light went with him, the room was not again dark, for it was full of the Presence of the Lord, and His love was the light thereof.

PRUSSIAN AUTOCRACY NOW AT ITS LAST EBB

Horatio Bottomley Says the End Draws Nigh—German Victories Mean German Defeats

With every respect to the Prime Minister—for whom I have always entertained an affectionate regard, I am going to ask you to ignore everything the politicians say about the war. They know nothing about it. They didn't know it was coming; they don't know how it is going on—or how it will end. To be quite plain, and risking your displeasure, I am disposed to think that one man only, and that is General Joffre, really knows very much about it. He is in supreme command of the allied forces in the field, and, of necessity, he has been studying and preparing for the thing for years. Everyone else—even Lord Kitchener himself—is subordinate to him.

Let us hope that we may get some inspiriting news. But I am very apprehensive of these official statements. Just recall some of them. Long ago the German navy was to be dug out of the Kiel Canal, "like rats out of their holes"; if the Zepps came they were to be greeted "with a swarm of hornest in the skies." We were practically through the Dardanelles—"within a few miles of the greatest triumph of the war"; then Russia had spent herself and had made her "final contribution" towards the cause of the allies; the Prime Minister himself told us that the statement that we were short of munitions was a lie; then we appointed a Minister of Munitions to deal with the shortage. And so I could continue. And yet an expectant world will hang upon the Premier's words, and swallow them as a babe at the breast swallows its mother's milk.

All Is Well

Now, I have never yet assumed the role of military expert. But why shouldn't I do so? After all, every other writer on the war does, and so does every politician. So here goes: To begin with, all is well. "What about the Balkans?" you ask. Well, as I said the other day, "Blow the Balkans!" It's a long way from Constantinople to India—and very uphill! Meanwhile, in the real, main theatre of war we have the measure of the enemy. Aided by the British reinforcements General Joffre ought soon to have the Huns on the run—and once having got them across the Rhine, the war is over. That is what we are going to do; that is the objective of the great offensive now in progress. If you will just take a commonsense view of the situation, you will realise that it is in France and Belgium and Russia that the war will be determined. And there all is well.

Down With Pessimists

Consider how all the prophesies of disaster have been falsified. Paris was to have fallen over a year ago—but is still intact. Calais was doomed—but is now a principal military base. The East Coast was to be invaded. Only poor, valiant little Belgium has gone; and Russian Poland has been evacuated. On the other hand, Germany has lost her African colonies and her Chinese port; she has lost several million men—and she is on the verge of famine. Yes, the stuffing has been knocked out of the religion of valor; presently we shall see only a band of petty military tyrants left whipping the rabble to doom. And then the slaves will turn! The last blow at Germany as a world power will be dealt at her within Germany itself.

On every hand, indeed, are signs of the coming break-up. The Huns must be at their wits' ends for metal, for instance. They have been reduced to tearing up the tramway lines in Kiel for shells. What should we be feeling if we were so hard up for material for shells that we had to tear up the tramway lines at Portsmouth? An United States paper says that we are "bleeding Germany white." We are, and we must harden our hearts over the job. We must bleed until Germany is just a bloodless corpse.

The End Approaches

Serbia? Oh, I know all about Serbia. And I say with confidence that the German rush there is three parts bluff. To begin with, if the Germans get too far into Serbia they will never get out again. They will find it worse than Russia. Serbia isn't a flat country like Belgium. If the Serbian armies are broken up, it will only be into bands, which will harry and trap and destroy the German contingents in detail. They are already doing it! Again, the barrier to the East begins at Constantinople; and the Young Turks, after a secret conference, at which for the first time for a year the representatives of Germany were not admitted have warned the Germans off—got the best part of a million men to keep them out around the world. Germany is slowly That's the beginning of the end.

So I say, again, to all the Dismal round the world. Germany is slowly Jimmies—lift up your hearts! Look defiating, like a Zeppelin hit by a shell. The British Empire is as steady as the rocks of freedom. Germany's hour has come—her writing is on the wall, and well she knows it. And we? To all intents and purposes we haven't been scratched. We have't begun! What a beginning it will be! And what an end! I say again that the end is in sight—Germany is whacked. Be in at the death.—Horatio Bottomley, in John Bull.

Weak Reserves of Men

A Belgian who managed to make his way out of Brussels tells me (a contributor of the Liverpool Daily Post writes) that nothing has struck him so much as the progressive, deterioration in the quality of the German troops passing through Brussels. They have become at once older and more youthful, and with the enlistment of the old and young there has been a corresponding deterioration in arms and equipment. Many of the rifles carried were practically obsolete, and the impression given to my Belgian friend was that the stories of Germany's huge reserves of men were another part of the bluff with which Germany seeks to impose upon neutrals and belligerents alike.

The German Emperor has a horror of cats. When he came to England all cats at the castles he was to visit were rounded up and sent into exile till he had departed.

SPIRITUALISM FRAUDS WORSE DURING WAR

Spiritualistic Cranks Fleecing Soldiers' Dependents Who Ask For News—Whole Science Fraud

Fraud in many new guises in England has sprung up as the result of this war, and unscrupulous scoundrels and women swindlers are reaping a rich harvest by a variety of tricks which the police authorities find considerable difficulty in checkmating.

There is the swindler, for instance, who houses one or two refugees in order to obtain unlimited funds from the generous hearted public. No books are kept in such cases and, as a rule, no books are asked for. Tradesmen are being swindled every day by men in officers' uniform who order goods without authority, while the military authorities are being extensively defrauded by women who secure extra allowances by a dozen and one different dodges.

Again, there have never been such prosperous times for spiritualists and fortune tellers, who, trading on the credulity of women, reap rich harvests by pretending to furnish information of relatives on active service. These humbugs are specializing on the war, claiming to be able to tell how a particular soldier or sailor is faring at the front or on the sea.

Many Pathetic Cases

People who have been making inquiries into the matter, find that the meanest frauds are perpetrated upon women of the humble classes, who, not having heard from their lovers, husbands, or brothers for some time consult spiritualists, who profess to show them the face and form of the one they seek. The fees as a rule range from $1.25 to $2.50; and it is quite easy to understand how women, distracted with grief and anxiety, are willing to pay anything they possibly can in order to learn something about the man who is fighting so bravely for us and in whom they are specially interested. A particularly cruel case was brought to notice recently. A widow, with two sons at the front, of whom she could get no news, was persuaded by a sympathetic, well meaning, but foolish friend to visit a certain west end spiritualist. While doubting the genuineness of such people, she nevertheless went, and after paying a fee of ten dollars was gratified by seeing the form of her elder son in the crystal into which she was told to gaze and to learn that he was quite well, although, according to the spiritualist, the youngest son was slightly wounded and in hospital.

For a couple of weeks the widow attended the spiritualists' seance every day, receiving the most comforting news in return for fees which amounted altogether to nearly $250. Then to her horror she suddenly received an intimation from the War Office that both sons had been killed some weeks previously in the fight for Hill 70; the shock, after the comforting news she had received from the spiritualist, being so great that she did not recover and died within a few days.

An Absolute Fraud

Girls with lovers seem to be the easiest victims of these spiritualists, and the disappearance of a couple from London recently was due to the action of the police, who had been put on their track by the father of a girl who had been fleeced to the extent of $100. The girl had consulted the spiritualist about her lover from whom she had not heard for some weeks. She was told that he was a prisoner, when, to her great delight, he suddenly came home on a few hours' leave. Learning of what his sweetheart had been doing to gain news of him he promptly informed her father, and together they made things so warm for these spiritualistic humbugs that the latter were forced to disappear.

The whole business is a fraud from start to finish, and, as related in London "Truth," the spirits of fighting relatives usually exhibit themselves by the favorite method of a phosphorescent slate, which reflects dimly the face and form of the medium. As "Truth" candidly remarks, in ordinary circumstances the victims of the spiritualistic medium are not deserving of much sympathy. They enjoy being humbugged, and they deserve to be, but it is rather pathetic to see numbers of poor women, whose children or husbands have just died for their country, falling a prey to unscrupulous rogues who deliberately trade upon their sorrow.

Defy Dyspepsia!

Among the symptoms of Dyspepsia or Indigestion may be mentioned a heavy, cutting pain soon after eating; a distended, full feeling of the stomach and bowels; belching of wind and flatulence; a burning sensation in the stomach, which indicates acidity; heartburn; palpitation of the heart; oppression of breathing; pain under the ribs and shoulder-blades; headache through the temples and eyes; dizziness, coated tongue and constipation; sometimes nausea or vomiting.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt is the natural specific for all these conditions. Being an antacid, it immediately relieves the acidity of the stomach and stops the fermentation. It stimulates the secretion and muscular action of the stomach and bowels, and overcomes the constipation. When its use is kept up the normal action of all the organs of digestion is re-established.

PLUM PUDDING

Plum pudding of any sort will be eaten on Christmas Day with the keenest relish. The sauce of sentiment will make up for some errancies in the cuisine. Once there was an old gentleman who was fond of boiled puddings. His wife left one in the pot for him, and when she returned, asked how he liked it, "Fine," he replied. "Where is the cloth?" she inquired. The old man looked up with surprise, 'Were there a cloth on?" Sentiment had clouded his taste. Sentiment clouds other tastes. For example, there are people in Canada who would have none but an American pianoforte. And yet there is a Canadian instrument, made in Toronto, which is as good as science can build or money can buy. The Gourlay Piano has been on the market for twelve years. In that time it has won high fame as being dependable, sweet-toned, and beautiful. The Gourlay, Winter and Leeming Company determined from the beginning that no extreme forms of advertising would be undertaken to bring the instrument to public notice. For that reason, no travelling artiste was ever supplied with a Gourlay in return for a favourable notice. No Toronto studio received free Gourlay Pianos in return for an occasional kind word. The business was placed on a solid commercial basis. The Gourlay was found by the public to be a piano of supreme merit, and its success on the Canadian market was assured. Those who have not had an opportunity to examine the Gourlay Piano would do well to call at the office of J. O. Fife, 341½ Water Street.

PARALYZED LIMBS.

To-day it is sleeplessness, headaches, digestive trouble, and irritability. Next thing you know some form of paralysis has developed. Mr. Alex. Honsburger, 10 Moore Street, St. Catharines, Ont., writes: "Nervous trouble developed into paralysis of the limbs so that I became helpless. Doctors failed me, but after using ten boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I resumed work and now feel better than I did for twenty years."

FAMOUS HORSE DIES OF PNEUMONIA

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 11. — Realization, classed by Miss Loula Long as the second finest horse in her show stable and mate to Revelation, is dead of pneumonia. Realization was a six-year-old mare, bought two years ago at Toronto, Canada. The mare caught cold while being returned from New York, where she captured the Waldorf cup at the Madison Square Garden show, and died 10 days after reaching Longview.

TO KEEP SKIN HEALTHY, YOUTHFUL, WRINKLES

Now that the social season is here, be especially careful to keep your skin in fine condition. You know how conspicuous complexion defects appear under the bright light of the drawing or ball room. Also how very evident are some make-ups when similarly illuminated. I have myself discarded cosmetics entirely, using a process which gives far better results, and which leaves no trace on the skin. At night I smear on a thin coat of ordinary mercolised wax, washing it off next morning. This gradually absorbs the devitalized particles of surface skin; just as gradually the more youthful skin beneath comes forth, providing a complexion as clear, smooth and delicately tinted as a young girl's. Get an ounce of mercolised wax at your druggist's and try this remarkable treatment.

Remember, too, that wrinkles, even the finer lines, are not easily concealed in a brilliantly lighted room. You can quickly obliterate these hateful marks by bathing your face in a solution of powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in witch hazel, 1-2 pint. And your face won't look sticky as after using pastes.—Aunt Sally in Woman's Realm.

COWAN'S Milk Chocolate MEDALLIONS

Melt in the Mouth

Little Miss "MAIDEN" CANADA

A RAILWAY PRESIDENT'S VIEW

By SIR THOMAS SHAUGHNESSY.

Reprinted from Montreal "Star."

Sir,—The prophet who, in olden days, was not honored in his own country, very often deserved his fate, for those people who are apt to foretell some wrath to come, or impending ruin, are not pleasant company.

In Canada, however, we are incurable optimists, and there are few of us unprepared to paint the future in colors of the rainbow. There is, indeed, no tendency to prophecy too much and do too little, waiting for the war to end and for the return of the tide which is to bring once more the flow of men and capital to our farms, our mines, our forests, and our factories. Whereas in reality our future is based on our present, and unless we have a secure foundation, the superstructure to which we put the labor and the capital must be unstaple.

The potential wealth of Canada lies in her immense natural resources, but these must remain merely potential till they have been developed with the aid of human labor, which, in turn, must be paid its wages. Some day when her population is sufficiently large, and her people have put aside more savings, Canada may herself provide the capital to develop her own resources, but for many years to come a large proportion of this capital must come from outside, and be paid for in interest duly earned. Our credit, therefore, is our chief concern, and it is the first duty of every citizen to exact careful and economical expenditure in Government, municipal and public company expenditure, to be merciless on graft, to insist on a lynx-like and perpetual audit even in the days of record earnings, bumper increases and untaxed war profits. The spendthrift nation gets short shrift from the foreign banker, who, in his turn, is putting out to interest the savings entrusted to him by his own thrifty customers. Our credit now is of the most urgent importance, since the enormous cost of the war has made it difficult, if not impossible, for Great Britain and other European countries to continue that investment in Canadian securities on which the development of Canada depended so much in the ten years preceding hostilities. The sentimental interest taken by the Mother Country in Canada accounted to some extent for the confidence with which the British investor bought our securities. If, as is likely, we have to turn now for our loans to New York we can no longer count on sentimental sympathy, but must be able to guarantee that the money we desire to borrow will be carefully and economically spent on enterprises which are immediately productive. Extravagant promotions born only to serve a political end, must be vigorously stifled at their birth, and those unhealthy offsprings which have been spoon-fed by too lenient subsidies or Government guarantees, must be reduced to sterner tutelage—in some cases perhaps handed over to the guardianship of an official receiver.

The business man of the United States is essentially an individualist, and never has shown much belief in state socialism or any form of commercial enterprise operated by Government officials, however upright or well-intentioned. Where, on the other hand, there is scope for a well-arranged private business or industry, with the prospect of good dividends, no one is more ready than the American to stake large sums of money without hesitation. Mortgages on farm lands are also a favorite form of more conservative investment south of the border, and such mortgages often provide the farmer with funds useful for increasing his live stock or better cultivation of his land. Our lands, particularly in Western Canada, are still assessed on a comparatively low valuation, so that the security we have to offer in this field is good. The migration of farmers from the United States to Western Canada shows no sign of falling off, and there is no doubt that considerable capital for the development of our agricultural land will follow in their footsteps.

If then we see to it that our security and our credit are good, I see no reason to fear that the progress of Canada will be hampered by lack of capital, even though the European investor may be cut off by the present war. The uncertain element is the supply of labor, and till the issue of the war is decided, one can only hope for the best. It is, however, a historic fact that European wars during the past century have been followed by emigration to the North American continent. An important factor in these migrations has been the heavy taxation which resulted from war. Although there is reason for believing that the rates of wages in European countries may soon approximate to those now current in the United States and Canada, the taxation required to pay for the war will tempt many to transfer their homes across the Atlantic. Much of this movement from Central Europe will be directed no doubt to the United States, but any further immigration through the ports of Boston and New York will only increase the westward pressure of population which is already resulting in an ever-flow from the middle western states into our prairie provinces.

The future of Canada, therefore, depends largely on the ability with which we handle the incoming population, the preparedness we make for absorbing the heterogeneous elements whom we may be called upon to assimilate after this terrible racial eruption in Europe. During the past thirty years Canada has more or less successfully absorbed a very large immigrating population, but much energy has been dissipated through lack of co-operation shown between the Dominion Government, the Provincial Governments, and the transportation companies. We should be busy now thinking out and formulating an organization which should place upon the land, or in the industries for which they are fitted, with the least possible friction or loss of time, those individuals or families which come to make a new home in Canada. In the past we have been apt to let the immigrant shift for himself and find his place by himself. As a result, many a good farm laborer has been lost to the land, and has helped, in times of economic stress, to overcrowd our cities. We have said to the mechanic: "Take the first job that is offered to you," instead of having a carefully organized bureau which would tell him of the place where his skill was needed. This war has accelerated many manufacturing activities in Canada, and there is a possibility of a greater demand for highly skilled labor than was the case when Canada depended more completely on her agriculture. Even in the case of the immigrant farmer from Europe, we have not always been ready with the expert advice which would enable him to adapt himself without loss of time to his new conditions. We have let men with invaluable knowledge of intensive farming go to waste on homesteads remote from the markets, and have not sufficiently posted our settlers on climatic and soil conditions the knowledge of which is essential to their success as Canadian farmers. We have, as it were, brought seeds and bulbs and plants from Europe by the ton, and planted them indiscriminately in a garden which had not been prepared for them—a method of culture which could only result in a heavy percentage of waste. There is so much to be done to develop this Canada of ours, that any waste of energy should be avoided. We must conserve that energy just as much as we must conserve our credit, if our future is to be as great as all true Canadians hope to see.

Yours truly,
T. G. SHAUGHNESSY.

THE CATBIRD

THE catbird, like the brown thrasher, is a lover of swamps and delights to make its home in a tangle of wild grapevines, greenbriers and shrubs, where it is safe from attack and can find its favourite food in abundance. It is found throughout the United States west to the Rocky Mountains and extends from Washington, Idaho and Utah northward into the provinces of Canada. It winters in the Southern States, Cuba, Mexico, and Central America.

Reports from the Mississippi Valley indicate that the catbird is sometimes a serious annoyance to fruit growers. The reason for such reports may possibly be found in the fact that on the prairies fruit-bearing shrubs, which afford so large a part of this bird's food are conspicuously absent. With the settlement of this region comes an extensive planting of orchards, vineyards, and small-fruit gardens, which furnish shelter and nesting sites for the catbird as well as for other species. There is in consequence a large increase in the number of the birds, but no corresponding gain in the supply of native fruits upon which they were accustomed to feed. Under these circumstances what is more natural than for the birds to turn to cultivated fruits for their food? The remedy is obvious: Cultivated fruits can be protected by the simple expedient of planting the wild species which are preferred by the birds. Some experiments with catbirds in captivity show that the Russian mulberry is preferred to any cultivated fruit.

The stomachs of 645 catbirds were examined and found to contain 44 per cent. of animal (insect) and 56 per cent of vegetable food. Ants, beetles, caterpillars, and grasshoppers constitute three-fourths of the animal food, the remainder being made up of bugs, miscellaneous insects, and spiders. One-third of the vegetable food consists of cultivated fruits, or those which may be cultivated, as strawberries, raspberries and blackberries; but while we debit the bird with the whole of this, it is probable—and in the eastern and well-wooded part of the country almost certain—that a large part is obtained from wild vines.

The rest of the vegetable matter is mostly wild fruit, as cherries, dogwood, sour gum, elderberries, greenbrier, spiceberries black alder, sumac, and poison ivy. Although the catbird sometimes does considerable harm by destroying small fruit, it can not on the whole be considered injurious. On the contrary, in most parts of the country it does far more good than harm.

GIRLS! HAVE WAVY, THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Save Your Hair! Double its Beauty in a Few Moments—Try This!

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?

Taxicabs in 1711.

Something over a couple of centuries ago the principle of the taxicab was known, remarks an exchange. An advertisement in the London Daily Courant of Jan. 13, 1711, announces that at the Sign of the Seven Stars, under the piazza of Covent Garden, a chariot was on view that would travel without horses and measure the miles as it goes. It was capable of turning and reversing and could go uphill as easily as on level ground.

"What is it?"

Portugal.

Portugal obtained its name from porto, the haven or port where the Gauls landed their stores. This is Oporto, called by the Portuguese O Porto (the port). The town was given as a dowry to Teresa when she married Henry de Lorraine, who styled himself Earl of Portugal because the place was known as the portus Gallorum (the port of the Gauls). The name finally extended to the whole country.

OLD BILL'S GIFT

By Octavia Roberts

(Copyright by Western Newspaper Union.)

Bill, more familiarly "Old Bill"—he had never been known to mention a family name—looked around his "haven of holiday comfort," as he termed it, with a chuckle of supreme satisfaction.

"It's great!" he gloated, "with only one thing missing—a Christmas tree."

Bill was a character. The townspoople designated him a tramp. Somehow, however, the appellation did not seem to fit. He did not drink nor swear. He did not beg. His willing ways had made him popular, and when Bill was "down on his luck" and passed a doorway hungry-looking, his wants were generally provided for unsolicited.

It was the day before Christmas. Behind the patient gleam in "Old Bill's" eyes lurked some sentiment of memory that impelled him to celebrate. This especial year he had been preparing for the event with the eager ardor of a school boy. Bill had made no confidants. Quietly and enjoyably he had laid his plans.

These were now perfected. A week back Bill had "gone to housekeeping." He had discovered an old abandoned barn just beyond the town limits. The lower part had lost doors and windows and was bleak and cheerless indeed. A rickety stairs, however, led to a room in one corner of the loft. It was cozy and warm and at one time had been a harness room. Here Bill had "camped." He had fished out an old oil stove, a cot, a table and chair from the town dumping heap.

A particular housewife had presented him with a roasted chicken because one side was slightly charred. On the rude table beside it were half a dozen homemade doughnuts and a real mince pie.

Bill took a last look at the goodly array of comfort then went out to seek a branch of arbor vitae which would serve as a Christmas tree.

As he neared the barn on his return he came to a speedy halt.

A light glowed over at one corner of the place. It proceeded from a lantern set in the feed box of a manger. In the manger itself across the stale hay it contained a blanket was spread, and, swathed in coverings upon this, as revealed by the lantern rays, lay a little sleeping babe.

Near by a serious-faced man was shaking the snow from his shoulders. Beside him, seated on an old suitcase, was a comely but care-worn woman.

The man began to speak. Bill, agape, drew into the shadow and listened. It was to hear enough to learn that bad luck was driving these homeless ones from their former home, penniless, on foot, to the father of the wife, ten miles further on. The storm had driven them to temporary shelter.

The husband and father had taken a well-thumbed volume from his pocket. He began reading aloud. It was of "an upper room," of a master and his beloved disciples, of a supper never to be forgotten in the memory of mankind.

Bill stood like one transfixed. What tender chord had been struck that he closed his eyes! He was back forty years in memory, at his mother's knee. How vivid, how appealing—a picture she had shown him of the Christ-child in a manger, of the devoted father and mother, as here before him, a prototype of that holy eve so real, so touching—the First Christmas!

A mighty thought moved him as he quietly spoke:

"Friend, upstairs you will find comfort till the storm is over. Call it a Christmas greeting—see?" and was gone.

"I'll strike out for Farmer Dale's haymow," shivered Bill, after half an hour's desultory wandering, and he turned about—to start, to shout out, and then to run.

For there in the distance the familiar farmhouse showed no illumination within, but beyond it a glare shot up—a haystack on fire!

Bill reached the farmyard. The wind had blown the flames against one gable of the house and it was burning. He ran to the stable for a pitchfork. Then began a fierce battle. Bucket after bucket of water he carried. The last spark was dashed out, and Bill sank exhausted to the ground as the farmer and his family, visiting at a neighbor's and attracted by the blaze, came rushing upon the scene.

"Yes," declared Farmer Dale, two hours later, as he showed Bill up the stairs and into a comfortable chamber, "this is your room, and you will sleep here, and you're a free boarder long as you like, understand? Why, there'd be no house to sleep in if it wasn't for you!"

Old Bill was a long time getting into bed. Like to a child he sank into a peaceful slumber, his softened spirit in radiant dreams wandering through that "upper room" filled with the souls of those, however humble, who had helped to make true "Peace on earth good will to men."

SLIGHT LOSS OF MEMORY

Irish Humor is Depicted in Story of Soldier's One Arm Challenge

The scene was in a little country inn in Ireland. At one corner of the bar was a long table at which sat several soldiers, one of whom was wounded. He was relating some of the narrow escapes that he had experienced on the field of battle. "Begorra, ye ought to have seen my brother Dennis, who was fighting by my side," he said. "First, we got the order to charge, and as we were about to obey the command there was a blinding flash, followed by a huge roar. It was wan o' thim 'Jack Johnsons,' and turning round much to my horror I found that a piece of shrapnel had blown wan of my brother's arms clean off. Did this frighten him? Niver a bit. Shouting out, Ould Oireland for iver,' he dashed forward, caught hold of two of thim Jarmins by the scruff of their necks and crashed their heads together and kilt them entoirely."

"But how could he do that?" interrogated one of his listeners, "whin he only had wan arm?"

"Wan arm, had he? That's thrue enough for ye, but my brother Dennis forgot all about that whin he was foighting."

Tobacco Heart

CURED BY

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Tobacco does not seem to affect all alike. Many men enjoy their smoke, live to a good old age, and apparently suffer no ill effects from the use of the weed.

There are others, though, on whose heart and nervous system tobacco produces the most serious results.

It causes palpitation, pain in the heart and irregularity of its beat, makes the hands tremble, sets the nerves on edge, and the breath becomes short.

To counteract this demoralizing influence on the heart and nerves there is no remedy that equals Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

They make the heart beat strong and steady, restore tone and vigor to the nerves, and remove all the evil results caused by the tobacco.

Mr. Nelson Young, Brampton, Ont., writes: "I have had, up to about a month ago, a very weak heart, which I suppose came from smoking cigarettes. When I heard of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills as a cure, I immediately gave up smoking, and started using them. It does you justice to be the founder of such a great remedy. They made me feel like a new man."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Uncle Dick's Contraptions For Boys

By FRANK CRANE.

WITH Christmas just ahead conditions were all aflutter in the woodshed, and when Uncle Dick entered Tommy's workshop he found a full quorum of his nephew's chums on hand to greet him.

The boys had about finished comparing notes on the number of helpings of turkey and fixings they had assimilated on the last national holiday and were ready for business. For no explainable reason they had assumed that it was going to be a snowy winter and were all keen for snow fixings.

"Well, let's see," said Uncle Dick after getting in touch with the boys' mental attitude. "You've got your snowshoes ready if a stray blizzard should happen along and you've commenced building the land-and-ice schooner. What you want now, I take it, is something in the way of a coasting device in case there's a moderate fall of snow."

"Hurray! that's just the idea!" exclaimed Tommy. "A bobsled!"

"Bully!" added Ed Emith. "We ought to make one fast enough to win the championship of Jones' hill."

"All right," agreed Uncle Dick, smilingly. "I'll make a drawing of a bob with which we won the championship of Cedar Point, but I think you can improve on the one we built by using the flexible sleds you already have.

"By the way, thinking of that bob reminds me of the mysterious disappearance of the man who invented it. His name was Atwater—Professor Atwater everybody called him. He had no family, but lived alone in a little shack he had built himself. All that was known about him was that he was working on some kind of mechanical device. Just what it was could only be guessed at, as he allowed nobody nearer the house than the front gate—that is, nobody but Tommy's Uncle Bob. You see, one day Bob found the little old man sitting down in the road with a sprained ankle. He had slipped on the ice and injured his foot so badly that he could barely crawl. I've told you what a big, athletic chap Bob was. Well, Bob stood the Professor up on his good foot and trundled him pick-a-back a full half mile to his shack. Bob wanted to fetch a doctor, but the Professor wouldn't have it. He got Bob to remove his shoe and help him bandage the ankle and consented to his stopping in the next day. After that they became great friends. The old man told Bob all about the great invention he was working on and which was nearly completed. Of course we didn't know that until afterward, as Bob wouldn't tell anybody about the old man's affairs. That was the year we won the bobsled championship on the Cedar Point hill. Joe Thomas, the druggist, had won the blue ribbon event of the winter for two seasons with a sled built from his own design. The best we ever accomplished was third place the previous year. We were trying hard to think up some way to beat Joe Thomas that season when Bob spoke about the problem to Professor Atwater. The little old inventor got interested right away and got Bob to explain how they were constructed, particularly Joe Thomas' flyer, which was controlled with a steering wheel.

"Then he went out with Bob, looked over the coasting hill and discovered the secret of Thomas' success. The roadway down the hill, which was about a half mile from top to bottom, had several sharp turns, one of them being pretty close to the edge of a steep bluff. 'It seems to me that the fastest sled is the one that is controlled the best,' was the old man's only comment, as they walked back home.

"The next day, with Bob's assistance, he built what was probably the first sled with flexible runners. It was light and strong and we won the championship hands down with the contraption."

"But you said something about his mysterious disappearance!" exclaimed Tommy, as Uncle Dick paused.

"Oh, yes, I was just coming to that," said the story teller, smiling at the eagerness of his audience. "Late the following spring Cedar Point was all worked up over a near murder and the mysterious disappearance of the supposed murderer. The tragedy occurred at the village hotel in the room of a stranger who had been stopping there for a few days. According to the investigation that followed, it seemed that the stranger, who registered as John Jones, was seen to enter his room accompanied by Professor Atwater at about eight o'clock in the evening. Shortly afterward loud talking and a pistol shot were heard coming from the stranger's room. On forcing his way into the room the hotel proprietor discovered his guest prostrate on the floor with a pistol lying beside him. The disordered room told the story of a desperate struggle and the open window showed how the assailant had made his escape. While Dr. Scott was attending to the wounded man the village police force, consisting of Jim Hennessy, started in to round up the criminal. There was no mistaking who it was. Professor Atwater was seen to enter the room with the stranger. The old fashioned pistol found on the floor was known to belong to him; it had, in fact, his name engraved on the silver mounting. In view of these circumstances all that remained for the policeman to do was to arrest the little professor. As the window opened on the roof of a low porch it was an easy matter for him to reach the ground; but where had he gone? A visit to his shack showed that he wasn't there and nobody could be found who had laid eyes on him after he was seen to go into the room with the stranger. At this juncture somebody suggested sending for Gabe Casey and his bloodhounds. Hennessy jumped at the idea, and it wasn't long before Casey appeared with his two big dogs, who had shortly before that trailed an escaping convict twenty miles through Perkins' swamp. The keen nosed hounds quickly picked up the warm scent and started off with quick, short yelps.

"After leaving the hotel grounds the trail led through a dark street and then across lots to the country road. Without a moment's hesitation the bloodhounds loped along the road, baying loudly as the trail grew warmer.

"Then came the climax! When they came to a point almost in front of the roadway that entered our place they stopped. No amount of manoeuvring on the part of Casey could get them to take up the trail after that. He led them around in circles, and tried all the devices he knew, but they always came back to that one spot in the roadway. So they had to give it up, and the disappearance of Professor Atwater became a nine days wonder in the county.

"In the meantime the victim of the shooting had been removed to the county hospital. While he had become partly conscious he was unable to speak, so that he failed to solve the mystery.

"But Tommy's father and I solved it the following week. One night about midnight brother Tom woke me up and whispered:—'Say, Dick, there goes Bob. He must be walking in his sleep. Let's follow him and see what he does.'

"So we sneaked along behind Bob as he tiptoed down stairs in his nightgown. Going into the kitchen he lighted a candle and cut a half dozen slices of bread, which he carefully buttered, sliced off some corned beef, and, with a pail of milk and fixings, made up a fine lunch. I was so full of laugh I could hardly hold in, but Tom whispered:—'Don't wake him! Let's see what he'll do next.' Well he put the stuff in a bucket, and went to the door. The door opened without making a squeak, but we finally accomplished it and sneaked out doors. We weren't far behind him as he walked rapidly toward the barn. Keeping out of the moonlight, behind a boxwood hedge, we saw him stop under a big oak and look carefully around.

"Then it dawned on both of us that far from walking in his sleep, Bob was very much awake. A whispered consultation decided us to see the thing through, so we crept up as close to the tree as safety would permit and watched the manoeuvres. Placing the basket on the ground, Bob cupped his hands around his lips and gave a splendid imitation of a screech owl. The cry was low and seemed to come from 'way off in the woods. There was just light enough for us to see what happened in the half shadow where Bob stood. As the shrill cadences of the night owl's cry died away we saw the end of a rope being lowered from the branches and could make out the shadowy form of a man in the crotch of the big tree.

"It was the work of a moment to tie the basket of food to the dangling rope's end. It quickly disappeared into the shadows, to return as quickly minus its contents. We didn't overhear the whispered confab taking place while this was going on, as we were concerned in getting back to the house before Bob saw us. But we didn't succeed, as Bob caught us retreating across an open patch of moonlight.

"Then he was compelled to tell us all about it. The man in the tree was Professor Atwater. It seems that Bob had met him on the night of the shooting as the old man was fleeing from his pursuers. While he was telling the true story of the affair they could bear the deep baying of Casey's bloodhounds from the direction of Cedar Point. Bob knew the dogs and realized the difficulty of fooling them. But there was one chance, and he took it. Lifting the little inventor bodily, he swung him on his shoulders. The old oak, which had a big hollow extending down from the crotch, struck him as an ideal hiding place. Here he deposited the old man without allowing any part of him to touch the ground. The spot where he had picked him up was, of course, the place where the baffled hounds lost the scent. After Bob told us the story we fell in with the idea and helped to keep the prisoner in the tree well stocked up with good things to eat.

"We had no very clear idea as to how we were going to eventually get the Professor out of the clutches of the law, but this problem solved itself. The third week after the shooting the wounded man regained consciousness and made a confession. He was a rival inventor and had lured Professor Atwater to his room with the model of the little contrivance that makes it possible for the newspapers to print the large editions they issue every day. Posing as a capitalist, he tried to get the Professor to show him the basic principle of the invention. But the old man was suspicious, and an argument ensued, which ended in the stranger trying to get possession of the model by force. In the struggle that followed the stranger accidentally shot himself with the inventor's pistol, which he had wrested from the weak grasp of the old man. When the story was made public the old man descended from his snug hiding place so fat he could hardly waddle from stuffing himself with the delicacies we had loaded his basket with every night."

Taking Uncle Dick's tip, Tommy and his friends decided to convert two flexible steering sleds into a bob, which they found very easy to accomplish by consulting the diagram.

THE BLOODHOUNDS LOPED ALONG THE ROAD BAYING LOUDLY AS THE TRAIL GREW WARMER.

THE ECHO OF A REMARKABLE SHOT

AS THE ACCOUNT OF IT COMES DOWN THROUGH THE CHRONICLES OF THE CALABASH NIVERS FAMILY, STILL REVERBERATING IN OLD PASSADANKY.

Ed. Mott's Writin's.

CALABASH NIVERS fired but one shot that day—only one. But he bagged a panther, a deer and three bears.

That was not the shot that was heard 'round the world, but it was a shot that woke up the Old Passadanky country to the remarkableness of Calabash Nivers and is still reverberating, so to speak, in the annals of that incomparable vicinage. You may hear it any time you chance along that way and tarry a while at the Passadanky tavern kept by Frisbee Nivers, lineal offshoot of Calabash Nivers—something like this, as Frisbee Nivers has it in custody, handed down from the chronicles of the Nivers family, of Old Passadanky:—

Dwelling as he did in his early years almost in the primal wilderness then thereabout, Calabash Nivers depended as much for his income upon what he could harvest from the products of the woods and wilds as he did upon his cultivated acres. Yes, and more, too. The 'tater crop was liable to rot. Weevils would get into the wheat. Drought played bob with the corn. Frost nipped the early garden sass. But the bear crop was ever sure. The weevil never was made that bored holes in the panther and chewed its vitals.

As a matter of fact, speeding the dog in the dimlit aisles of the forest knocked the spots off of speeding the plough in the sun-kissed and fertile soil in those days when Calabash Nivers, pioneer and founder of the Niverses of Old Passadanky, made choice to enrich that country with his presence and his vim and vigor. And so sometimes the ploughshare rusted while the gun barrel shone. But it was all for the best, Calabash Nivers was wont to say.

"It is better to get $20 worth of bear than $10 worth of 'taters," he philosophised, "to say nothing about the exercise it gives the dog."

Thoughtful man Calabash Nivers was—remarkably so. Note it in his consideration for a mere dog. Depriving himself of the exhilaration of hoeing out the 'tater patch that a poor, dumb brute might have healthful recreation bounding with joyful cry on the warm trail of the bear! And yet the weevil scooped his wheat and the frost nipped his tomato plants, just as quick and as consuming as they would years or [illegible] is a marvel to the Niverses unto this day how they ever could have had the heart to do it.

One day in those far away times—take the word of Frisbee Nivers for it—Calabash Nivers, moved by his peculiar theory of domestic economy and consideration for the dog, remarked to his wife that he would go to the woods and garner bear or something and give the dog some exercise.

"You may go garner," said his wife, who seems to have been some remarkable herself, "but the dog is going to run the churning machine to-day while I hill up the corn patch, and after he gets through with that I don't think he'll need any more exercise for a while."

So Calabash Nivers went to the woods alone that day and by patience and perspicacity did such a day's harvesting as was never done in those woods before and, of course, never since.

The forest and the ways of its wild creatures were as an open book to Calabash Nivers, and he sat down by the roots of a big hemlock tree to ponder.

He knew that something would come that way, and he had not long to wait for its coming. It came out of a hollow place in the woods in the shape of a big she bear and her two little cubs. Slouching hurriedly along, unaware of the proximity of Calabash Nivers, that she bear at last tumbled, with her cubs, into a clump of bushes not ten rods from where he sat.

If Calabash Nivers had not been used to turning the leaves in the grand volume of Nature's endless lore he would at once have plunked a bullet into that bear, captured her offspring and gone home as one contented. But, ah! Calabash was an adept in the sylvan mysteries, else the echo of his remarkable shot would not be reverberating in the annals of the Nivers family, of Old Passadanky, to this day and generation.

"Nature," said he, as the old bear hid herself and her cubs in the thicket, "never goes off half-cocked. That bear isn't huddling herself and her little ones in them bushes just to get in out of the sun. There's something else about it. It will pass this way in due time."

So Calabash Nivers waited for it. It was soon in sight. A deer broke from the thick of the woods and came bounding along the green sidehill, just opposite where the sage of Passadanky sat.

A few jumps behind the deer came a big panther, hot on the deer's trail and clearing twenty feet at every jump.

Although he saw, from the way the panther was winding up the space between itself and the deer, it would soon jab its claws in its quarry and make it bleat, Calabash Nivers' perspicacity was so bulging that he never raised a finger to shut the career of the fierce pursuer short.

The deer was a doe, and he saw that the course she was taking was bringing her along above the bushes where the bear and her two cubs were lying low. He also saw, by the way she swerved as she passed the bushes, that she either saw or got wind of the bears. The panther was close behind her.

Note how true the calculation of Calabash Nivers, student of Nature that he was! And see how he looked ahead and how quick he thought! He knew that there wasn't anything a hungry panther doted on more than on fat and juicy baby bears, and that there was the deadliest enmity between bears and panthers just for that.

"That deer is workin' that panther, all right!" said he. "Let Nature glide on her way."

And Nature was gliding on her way after her never-varying plan, as Calabash Nivers foresaw she would, for as the panther went bounding by he saw the old bear rise to her feet and glare after it. The panther was, of course, too deeply intent on the prospects of that haunch of venison to hear or see the bear, and consequently didn't know what Calabash Nivers knew lay ahead in the course of that chase.

"It's all right!" said Calabash. "Nature knows her business!"

The deer sped past the clump of bushes a few rods, turned like a flash in her tracks, took a flying leap over her savage pursuer and returned on her back track. The panther wheeled and followed. The deer headed straight for the bushes where the bear and her cubs were. As she neared them she slackened her pace.

"Just as I knew she would," said Calabash Nivers, watching the game, with an elbow on one knee and his chin resting in his hand. "The deer is playing bear against panther. Very neat! My perspicacity, aided somewhat by nature, will reward me with much loot of the woods this day!"

When the deer got to the bushes the panther was within one easy leap of her, and he crouched to make it as she passed. But he didn't make it. Straight over the bushes bounded the deer in the air, and right in front of the panther out of the thicket rose the fierce and gigantic front of the old she bear. The suddenness of the change in the situation seemed to surprise the panther, but only for a moment.

"He's out for blood and provender," said Calabash Nivers, as he viewed the prospect o'er, "and if he can't get 'em out of deer he'll compromise on bear."

And the panther didn't lag. He launched his big body at the bear, like slamming a missile out of a catapult. The next instant his claws were in her shoulder and his red jaws at her throat. But the tremendous bear folded the panther in her embrace, and put all her strength in the compress. Calabash Nivers heard the panther's bones crack and crunch within it, and with bear roar and panther screech mixing themselves together, both roarer and screecher toppled to the ground dead as dead could be.

THE DEER HEADED STRAIGHT FOR THE BUSHES WHERE THE BEAR AND HER CUBS WERE.

When the bear and the panther came together the deer, which had so ably engineered the meeting, had stopped and become a satisfied looker-on at the fracas. But Nature rather overreached herself in the deer. If the deer, according to the estimate of Calabash Nivers, had only had some of that remarkable individual's perspicacity, of which he could have spared a whole lot and still been long of it, she would have fared better and he would have garnered well enough without even scenting the woods with powder. But Nature ruled things in the deer and showed weakness. The deer came forward to where the two victims of her strategy lay dead and began to vent her fury on her late foe, the panther, by stamping his carcass with her sharp fore hoofs.

"A pretty sight," said Calabash Nivers, "but unwise."

For he wanted that panther skin, and the deer was ripping it into worthlessness. So he was compelled to shoot her. She never knew what hurt her. Calabash was sorry to have to do it. But lack of perspicacity was fatal to her. A little too much of Nature and not quite enough of Calabash Nivers. Calabash captured the two bear cubs and thus with merely one shot bagged a panther, a deer and three bears.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

One Christmas Eve

By Harry T. Barker

(Copyright by Western Newspaper Union.)

He was grinning like a schoolboy at the gyrations of a mechanical clown. His bluff hearty laugh seemed to come straight from his heart. His long white whiskers, bearskin coat, merry eyes and full-round figure—suggested the veritable Kris Kringle to a T.

Men, women and children were all smiles as they looked him over, but too polite to linger and embarrass him. The proprietor of the store, observing the slight halt in the passing procession, beckoned to the stranger.

"My friend," he spoke rapidly, "could I have a word with you?"

"A dozen, if it suits you," responded the other heartily, and followed his interviewer inside the store.

"It's just this," explained the store man: "we've got a Santa Claus—see him yonder, in that booth, shaking hands with the children?"

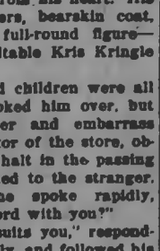
"I see him," nodded the Westerner. "He is on till midnight and I can't spare him. A family here—the Moodys—best people in town—want me to send them up a Santy. You're just made for it. Come—ten dollars cash and it won't take you an hour. I'll furnish the robe and cap."

The Westerner smiled queerly. I'll take the job," he replied.

Directed by a lad from the store, he was piloted to the Moody mansion, admitted and shown into a room off the main parlor, where a Christmas tree stood, loaded and ablaze.

All around it the hired Santy gazed keenly, almost eagerly. He appeared to be scanning the various framed portraits on the wall and seemed disappointed, as if in that inspection he missed something he had expected to find.

A servant came and helped him on with his costume, directing him in what he should do when the children entered the festal room. An admirable Santy he made. He went through his part in a merry heartsome way, then quietly slipped out through the side door and proceeded down the street. He seemed to have been over the ground before, for he reached his destination by pursuing lanes and byways where he would not be observed in the costume he still retained.



It was in the snow-drifted garden of a neat but humble little cottage that he finally halted.

"I'll do it," he spoke to himself, "if I can work it. Maybe I'm not forgotten here!" He knocked on the door and a woman opened it.

"Don't be scared, ma'am," spoke the Westerner. "You see, I've just been up to the Moodys—relatives of yours, I believe—acting Santa Claus Knew that you had a little one here, saw the tree and thought maybe I could make her happier by going through my act."

"Oh, would you?" cried the lady in quick delight. "Indeed, it would cap the climax of all her Christmas eve joys."

"Smuggle me into the room with the Christmas tree," suggested the Westerner buoyantly. "I'll do the rest."

It was passing strange, but, conducted into the apartment and half hiding behind a screen, the Westerner studied the walls of the room circumspectly, just as he had done at the Moody mansion. A great glow spread over his face as he noticed a portrait over the piano, in the special place of honor. It was wreathed with holly and evergreen.

"No, not forgotten; that's certain," he uttered in an intense tone. "I guess I've landed in a real home spot."

The little one of the household came in, leading the children of some poor neighbors. They screamed and then fluttered with delight as Santy came into view. Then their eyes danced as his jolly manner restored confidence. He handed out the presents from the tree. The air quivered with the joyful shouts of the happy little ones.

"'For Uncle Reuben,'" he read the card pinned onto an old worn woolen stocking. "Where's he? Come on, Uncle Reuben!" he shouted into space, and his tone was a sob.

"Oh, he isn't here," prattled little Esther, stepping forward. "He hasn't been for two Christmases. That's him," and she pointed to the holly-wreathed portrait. "He'll come back some time, though. Mamma says so, don't you, mamma? And every Christmas I put a nice card in his old stocking, and then I save them all up, to give to him when he comes back."

A choking sound came from the throat of the Westerner. He turned aside and reached under his robe. It was to unclasp a great belt buckle, a belt bulging with gold.

"Your Christmas gift, Mary!" he cried to the mother of little Esther. "Only a trifle out of a whole mine—it's full of the stuff," and he threw it into her lap.

Then off went costume and cap. "Don't you know me, Mary?"

"Uncle Reuben!" she gasped.

"Uncle Reuben and Santa Claus, both in one!" shouted the Westerner hilariously. "Little Esther—come!"

And Esther bounded into his arms in a wild transport of recognition and delight.

HOW YOU MAY THROW AWAY YOUR GLASSES

The statement is made that thousands wear eyeglasses who do not really need them. If you are one of these unfortunates, then these glasses may be ruining your eyes instead of helping them. Thousands who wear these "windows" may prove for themselves that they can dispense with glasses if they will get the following prescription filled at once. Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets; fill a two-ounce bottle with warm water and drop in one Bon-Opto tablet. With this harmless liquid solution bathe the eyes two to four times daily, and you are likely to be astonished at the results right from the start. Many who have been told that they have astigmatism, eye-strain, cataract, sore eyelids, weak eyes, conjunctivitis and other eye disorders, report wonderful benefits from the use of this prescription. Get this prescription filled and use it; you may so strengthen your eyes that glasses will not be necessary. Thousands who are blind or nearly so, or who wear glasses, might never have required them if they had cared for their eyes in time. Save your eyes before it is too late. Do not become one of these victims of neglect. Eyeglasses are only like crutches, and every few years they must be changed to fit the ever-increasing weakened condition, so better see if you can, like many others, get clear, healthy strong magnetic eyes through the prescription here given. The Palmas Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail, if your druggist cannot.

AN IRREPRESSIBLE BOY

BE WORRIED the cat, he played rat-tat-tat
On the roller skates a full hour by the clock.
He tried roller skates where dishes and plates
In jeopardy lay, till some fell with a shock.

With an Indian yell on doll's house
he fell,
And added poor dolly's scalp to his belt;
Then knocked off its toes and its fair Grecian nose
Which same was of wax—he proceeded to melt.

Two tubs he upset without one regret;
He stood on his head till his face it turned blue;
A curtain he tore and then sighed for more
Inventively mischievous things he might do.

He hid granny's specs, but that didn't vex;
Her face brightened up with his fun and his noise.
"One sweet kiss repaid all," so she said,
Resignedly adding that "boys will be boys."

But strangest of all at night's quiet fall
How meekly, how placidly, this rogue would say:
"Good-night, mamma dear. Good-night, papa dear.
"I've tried hard to be such a good boy today!"

Damage of Shell Shock

When a big shell explodes it creates a sudden and very great pressure in the surrounding air. This pressure causes "shell shock" from which thousands of soldiers have suffered during this war. Though there is not the slightest sign of a bruise or injury in any way, yet men have been completely incapacitated for months after a big shell has burst near them. Sometimes, indeed, the sudden air pressure has been so terrible that men have been killed outright from it, although no portion of the shell has hit them. In nearly every case, indeed, the eyesight is affected, and does not become normal until months after. There have been a number of cases, too, where soldiers have lost their memory owing to shell shock, and are unable to recognize any of their friends, though they are normal in every other way.

The Yuletide Dawn

By Victor Radcliffe

(Copyright by Western Newspaper Union.)

Joy bells were ringing out upon the clear, frosty air, but their sweet-tintinabulations had little of cheer or comfort for Gabriel Monroe.

He had made his own life's history, and this was what made him somber this ideal winter's day—the day before Christmas. Pride had been humbled by regret; he was old, wearied, heartsick. This was his second day home—if he could call it that—after a five years' sojourn in a foreign land.

It all came back to him now, the salient appeals to his better soul pierced the frail armor of the heart he tried to make iron. He recalled the hour when his daughter, Eloise, had come to him with the news that his son, Gerald, had married against his wishes. On the moment, Gabriel Monroe had disowned him, banished him from heart and home. In vain had Eloise pleaded for her brother.

He closed the old mansion at once, announcing that he intended to live abroad. Eloise declined to go with him. Gerald was young, inexperienced, without resources. Plainly she recited her duty to her father as she felt it. She would stay and help Gerald become a man.

Since his return, after a lapse during which he had not so much as written to his rejected children, he had learned that a little gold-en-haired child had come to Gerald and his wife. His son had not made a great success in a business way. He had been ill and at present had a hard time making ends meet.

But he had turned out to be a diligent, earnest man. The gentle influence of a loving wife, the sisterly care of Eloise, had been his at all times. Eloise, her father heard, was beloved of a worthy young engineer, at present at a distance.

Old Gabriel moved about uneasily in his luxurious armchair. He paced the apartment for an hour, he tried to read. His eye caught a notice in the local paper. There was to be a Christmas sale at the village hall, he noted, under the auspices of a ladies' club, for the benefit of the poor. Why not go? Sooner or later he must meet old acquaintances.

The maddest, merriest of Christmas groups thronged the big hall. There were booths and counters and, near a bewildering Christmas tree, an immense papier mache creation in the form of a stocking. Its province simulated a fishing well, for near by were poles and line, and upon payment of a fee a cast over into the top of the stocking brought up a gift, fastened on by someone concealed inside.

Old Gabriel made happy a score of little ones by paying for their fishing plunge. He bought several trinkets and toys and distributed them freely. His heart was beginning to warm up. He met a few old friends. He lingered late. Somehow his thoughts were turned into a new channel. The flood gates of sentiment were wide open in his heart for the first time in years.

The auctioneer of the occasion began to sell off what had not been disposed of. He came at last to the big stocking. Someone started a bid of ten dollars. Almost unconsciously old Gabriel doubled it. Thirty—forty—there was zest in helping a good purpose. The auctioneer nursed the excitement of the bidders.

"What a Christmas the money will make for the poor!" he shouted. "Maybe the stocking isn't half empty—stocking and all there is in it goes to the highest bidder!"

"Forty-five!" sang out the town banker.

"Fifty," nodded old Gabriel, and "Sold!" announced the auctioneer, highly pleased, and then, as everybody, excited and laughing, surrounded the fortunate purchaser, there came a tap from inside the stocking and a muffled voice sounded:

"Please let me out—it's dreadfully close in here!"

As a section of the papier mache contrivance moved apart, revealing the "fisher maiden" of the occasion, out stepped—Eloise.

"Father!" she gasped.

He started and quivered. He had bought "all there was in it." Upon the impulse of a moment hung all the future destiny of four souls. He opened his arms, the tears rushed to his eyes and Eloise was in his embrace.

It was the gossip of all the town how old Gabriel Monroe met and expanded the golden opportunity of his life that Christmas eve.

It was like a romance—the faithful tutor of Eloise telegraphed for, the discarded son, his wife, sweet little Dolly, sent for and installed in a home whence want and care were banished.

It was "grandpa" who carried the little one in his arms into the room where the Christmas tree was all ablaze and sparkling next morning, and, sweetest music to his storm-tossed, but now haven-found soul, were the rapturous words:

"Oh, the beautiful—the beautiful!"

Liberty may be endangered by the abuses of liberty, as well as by the abuses of power.—Madison.

After a busy morning

THE pleasure of shopping may cause you to forget that you are hungry and fatigued till you are on the point of reaching home. On such occasions, or, in fact, whenever you want food quickly, a cup of OXO is just the thing. It can be prepared in a moment.

It is a good plan to take a cup of OXO whenever you experience fatigue, or have to expose yourself to wet or cold. It is wonderfully refreshing, and fortifies against sudden changes of temperature.

Each OXO CUBE is enclosed in a neat dust-proof wrapper, and can be served as daintily as afternoon tea.

GETS THERE IN THE END

BY HAROLD BEGBIE

When the Pessimist is roaring of the ruin that must come
If the government refuses to resign,
And the Whimperer is striking every poor old woman dumb
With the dreadful daily wailing of his whine,
Let us gratefully remember, for our comfort and our stay,
And perhaps repeat it softly to a friend,
That however dark the heavens and however long the way,
The Briton always gets there—in the end.

When the Kaiser is declaiming of the glory that shall be
When the world is lying prostrate at his feet (Forgetting for the moment that old Tirpa is not at sea,
And that Germany is running short of meat),
Oh, be sure that Bethmann-Hollweg, if he doesn't mutter "Fudge!"
Whispers gently, "Sire, I hope I don't offend
By remarking, just for caution, that so far as I can judge,
The Briton always gets there in the end."

When the Herr Professors call us every wicked name they know,
And those Herr Professors know a frightful lot,
When the scribes of all their flimsy dismal gutter journals glow
With disgust for poor old England piping hot,
When the German Frau is teaching little Teuton lips to pray
"Gott straf England, and to Turkey's wants attend,"
We must hope Sir Roger Casement will lugubriously say—
"But the Briton always gets there in the end."

We are what the gods have made us in the course of several years,
And the gods no doubt have had their bit of fun;
We are slower than the greyhound, but we haven't donkey's ears,
We are lazy but we're freer than the Hun;
We shall go the way appointed, tho' we slip and slide and swerve,
And on every field of strife where we contend
We shall fight convinced that someone in the future will observe
"The Briton got there nicely in the end!"

SUFFERED FROM LUNG TROUBLE—HEALTH NOW RESTORED

READ THIS

Copeland Medicine Co., Limited., Toronto. Dear Sir,—After taking several bottles of your Consumption Cure, I would like to make known to others the benefit I derived from its use.

I was very much run down when I commenced taking your medicine, but now I have fully recovered, and in four months have gained 17 pounds. I cannot speak too highly of it, and will be pleased to recommend it to any who enquire as to its merits. You may publish this letter if you wish, and, if so, I trust that it will reach the eyes of some poor sufferers and save them from the dreadful disease of consumption.

Yours respectfully,
(Sgd.) MRS. MARTYN.
70 Symington, Ave.
Nov. 27, 1912.

Can You Doubt Such Voluntary Testimony?

Why go on suffering day after day? The relief is yours for the asking. If you are not convinced of the merit of COPELAND'S C. C. C. write to us for other letters, and for names and addresses of people who have used C. C. C. and get their opinions at first hand.

Sufferers from lingering coughs, colds, chronic Bronchitis, run-down condition, lung troubles, can get permanent relief at small cost—why wait? Write to-day.

THE MACHINE GUN TELLS THE STORY OF ITS LIFE

From Its Initiation to the Present Day the Machine Gun Has Been One of the Greatest Usages in Warfare

"The invention of the devil." Such is Sir Ian Hamilton's description of me, the most loved and the most hated of all man's creations for human slaughter. I am actually an offshoot of the automatic gun, which was first brought into prominence in the Franco-German War under the name of mitrailleuse. This was manufactured in French workshops at the personal expense of the Emperor, and every effort was made to keep it secret, even from the soldiers. But the Germans knew of it, and, while openly professing to their troops that it was merely a scientific toy, privately resolved to turn the whole weight of their guns on it when it appeared on the field. The result was that the hopes of the French were unrealised.

The Path to Fortune

My father, in fact, is Sir Hiram Maxim, and I was born in London in rather curious circumstances. While on a visit to Vienna, in 1882, Sir Hiram, who was then engaged in electrical and chemical work, met an American Jew whom he had known in the United States. "Hang your chemistry and electricity!" said the gentleman. "If you wish to make a pile of money, invent something that will enable these Europeans to cut each other's throats with greater facility." Sir Hiram pondered deeply, and I was the outcome. The essential difference between me and my predecessors is that I am automatic in action; that is to say, the gas of the explosion or the force of the recoil is utilised to lock and unlock my breech mechanism, load me, fire me, and eject the empty cartridge case. And all this is done with great rapidity. In one minute I can pour out a stream of 500 or 600 bullets, which can be aimed to a distance as far as the eye can reach. Under ideal conditions, indeed, my capacity is greater still, having reached 2,000 rounds in three minutes. But in practice my maximum rate of fire is about 60 rounds per minute, because of the heat engendered, etc.

Equal to 200 Rifles

The heat produced by firing may surprise you. Round my barrel is a jacket holding 7½ pints of water, which is for keeping me cool, or, rather, to prevent me from getting red hot. Now, after 600 rounds of rapid fire, this water is boiling, and if firing is continued about 1½ pints is evaporated for every 1,000 rounds. At worst, however, I do the work of many men. It is usually calculated that in half an hour, under ordinary conditions, I deliver a greater volume of fire than 60 rifles, though the French think that this is an under-estimate. From their experiments they have deduced that my fire is, at a definitely known range, equal to that of from 150 to 200 rifles, and to 60 to 80 rifles when the range has been obtained by a range-finder.

Here, in a nutshell, is the reason why I have been so largely used since I "came out." Adopted by the British army in 1889, I have "assisted," as the French say, in each of our subsequent campaigns, including the war in South Africa, where, however, owing to the nature of the operations, I was comparatively ineffective. The Russians also pressed me into service in Manchuria, and with results which frequently disconcerted the stoical Japanese commanders. A remarkable case in point occured at Mukden.

The Huns' Belief

In a certain village the Russians had four machine guns, two on each side, and these played such havoc with a certain Japanese regiment that it was resolved to silence them at all costs. Volunteers were called for, and then mountain guns were actually sent forward to within 500 yards of the Russian machine guns. This was a singularly bold stroke, but it was justified by the results, since two of the Russian pieces were destroyed. The historian will record, moreover, that the Kaiser fell in love with me at first sight, and that in consequence the Germans began the war with no fewer than 50,000 Maxim guns!

Advance, Australia

According to Mr. Fisher, the Prime Minister of Australia, the Commonwealth has dispatched to the front a total of 74,576 troops and has raised another 17,000, making a total force of 91,576. Already Australia has spent over $65,000,000 on its war services, "but we intend to see the matter through to the last man and the last shilling," says Mr. Fisher. Each man landed in Egypt costs Australia $425. The average cost of the first issue of personal clothing and equipment is $115 per man, the average cost of maintenance for twelve months being $65.

Dummy Warfare

All sorts of devices are used by the opposing enemy to deceive and disguise their positions. Guns, for example, are hidden by branches of trees, their limbers painted to resemble the ground on which they are, while dummy guns of wood are erected to draw and waste the enemy's ammunition. Dummy devices of all kinds are great favorites for deceiving, indeed. The latest dodge consists of dummy trenches which are used by the French. These are really iron plates covered with canvas so painted that they look like lengths of parapets of trenches. To make the dummy look even more real tufts of fresh grass are fastened to the canvas making the iron plates look exactly like the parapet of a trench a short distance away.

COUGHED NIGHT AND DAY

How This Little Orphan Boy Was Cured

We want the people of Peterborough to know that all letters like the following are truthful and genuine:

Towanda, Pa.: "I took a little orphan boy to live with me and last Christmas he contracted a hard cold which developed into bronchitis. He was very ill and a bad cough set in so that he coughed night and day. After trying everything, nothing seemed to do him any good, until along in February I got a bottle of Vinol. After using half the bottle his cough began to improve, and two bottles entirely cured his bronchitis and he gained in weight so that he doesn't look the same child."—Harry A. Stephenson, Towanda, Pa.

The reason that cough syrups fail in such cases is because they are palliative only, while Vinol removes the cause, being a constitutional remedy in which are combined the healing elements of fresh cods' livers, together with tonic iron and beef peptone. It strengthens and revitalizes the entire system and assists nature to expel the disease.

IN THE WHITE HOUSE

How Presidents of Past Enjoyed Christmas Holidays.

No Celebration by John Quincy Adams Because He Regarded Religious Festival as a Foolish Extravagance.

ACCORDING to history the only president of the United States who did not celebrate Christmas (because he regarded it as a foolish extravagance) was John Quincy Adams, "the most economical man known in public life."

Mrs. John Adams, the wife of the second president of the United States, had a most discouraging time trying to make merry in the White House during the Christmas holidays. (She was the first wife of a president to celebrate Christmas in the executive mansion in Washington, for the president and Mrs. Washington were always at Mount Vernon for the holidays.) She had no dominating sense of economy, but it was the White House itself that was shabby, and a Christmas reception given to the members of congress by the president proved, from her point of view, to be a ghastly failure.

President Jefferson was a widower with four daughters, and during his second administration Martha, the eldest, was the head of her father's household, and made Christmas the happy and festive occasion it was designed to be from that time when the star stood still above the manger in Bethlehem.

There were trees, and decorations, and all sorts of entertainments for the children of the official families, as well as gifts for the poor of the capital.

Although the Madisons did not spend all of their Christmases in the White House, on account of the little historical interruption by the British, when they occupied other quarters for a time, the brilliant Dolly managed a record for holiday hospitality and merrymaking that has never been surpassed.

When Andrew Jackson came to the White House he was bowed and broken by the death of his wife and depressed by political animosities. He had neither heart nor the slightest inclination for holiday celebrations, yet he pulled himself together at Christmas time, and saw to it that the day meant something happy to those in the White House.

In the meantime the Monroe administration was marked by nothing in the way of holiday celebrations beyond what was conventionally prescribed, and after President Jackson's efforts at keeping the spirit of Christmas in spite of his own personal sorrows, President Harrison did not live to see a Christmas in the White House.

Mrs. Tyler lived to celebrate only one Christmas in the White House. After his second marriage the Tyler administration was noted for its brilliant entertainments. Whether it was Christmas or any other time of the year, hospitalities were dispensed in the old Virginia style, and there was no stint of merrymaking at the White House.

General Winter Takes Command of All Troops at the Front.—Photo shows a long line of motor trucks labouring through the first fall of snow in France this year. Winter adds greatly to the problem of the transport system of all the armies in the field.

The Polk administration reverted to the grim and practical idea of John Quincy Adams. Perhaps it was not economy that changed the Christmas celebration at the White House; it is difficult to define the reason why President Polk did not make the holidays a festive event in the executive mansion; it may have been the temperament of the chief executive; perhaps it was because Mrs. Polk did not believe in the gay and festive way of celebrating the holidays, as, according to intimate history, she did not.

President Zachary Taylor, brilliant figure in military history, who had no chance whatever in the social history of the White House, because he died in little more than a year after he had taken his seat as president of the United States, and spent only one Christmas in the White House, bequeathed his administration to the Fillmores, people pitiably distinguished by sorrow and in no way adapted to the social obligations of the great national responsibility of sustaining the political and social obligations of the White House.

"Shortly after becoming president," someone writes of President Fillmore, "his wife died, and a year later a daughter, an only child, passed to the great eternity."

A CHRISTMAS HYMN

No tramp of marching armies,
No banners flaming far;
A lamp within a stable
And in the sky a Star.

Their hymns of peace and gladness
To earth the angels brought,
Their Gloria in Excelsis
To earth the angels taught:

When in the lowly manger
The Holy Mother Maid
In tender adoration
Her Babe of heaven laid.

Born lowly in the darkness,
And none as poor as he,
The little children of the poor
His very own shall be.

No rush of hostile armies then,
But just the huddling sheep,
The angels singing of the Christ
And all the world asleep.

No flame of conquering banners,
No legions sent afar;
A lamp within a stable
And in the sky a Star!

Silver Bullets

"It is the silver bullet which will win war," said Mr. Lloyd-George. By it he meant that the nation with the largest purse is the one which will conquer in the long run. That nation is Great Britain. The income of Great Britain is $9,000,000,000 a year, while that of Germany is $7,500,000,000. That is to say Britain can spend dollar for dollar with Germany, and still have fifteen hundred million dollars in hand when they have emptied their enemy's pockets. Man for man, too, the Britisher has a considerably larger purse than the German, though there are more of the latter. The Britisher's income is about $200 a head on the average, while that of the German is only $115. So Great Britain alone has a larger supply of "silver bullets" than Germany. Add the colonies, however, and Germany by this time has realized that the pocket of the British Empire is practically inexhaustible. We can leave Russia and France to supply all the necessary silver bullets for Austria-Hungary and Wilhelm's other dupes.

Not Like George.

"Mamma," said little Robert, "How old will I be my next birthday?"

"8 x years old," was the reply.

"But suppose I should die," continued the small investigator, "wouldn't I keep right on having birthdays like George Washington?"

How to Get Rid of Pimples Quick

Science Now Gives Beautiful, Clear Complexions in Few Days, Through Stuart's Calcium Wafers.

TRIAL PACKAGE MAILED FRE

A woman may have but ordinary features or even a coarse, heavy contour of face, but if she is the possessor of a fine, colorful skin, showing vigorous health and a pure blood, she will be attractive to every eye.

The great trouble with the majority of women is that they try to remove pimples by outside treatment, such as greases, massage, cosmetics, electricity, etc. These methods will not cure nor even temporarily remove pimples and facial disorders.

It's Really Foolish to Have Pimples. Stuart's Calcium Wafers Removes Them in a Few Days.

The difficulty is generally impure blood. Its color is black or blue or brownish cast, instead of ruby red, as it should be.

All the cosmetics in the world will not bring back the color if your blood is filled with impurities which it cannot remove or throw off. Stuart's Calcium Wafers operate directly on all blood impurities. One of its many quick-acting and harmless ingredients is Calcium Sulphide, admitted by scientists to be one of the most remarkable blood purifiers in existence. Go to your druggist, whoever he may be, and he will give you a box of Stuart's Calcium Wafers, price 50c.

Youth Drowns in Pool of Brown University

Hour's Work With Pulmotor Fails to Save Student.

Providence, R.I., Dec. 11.—Arthur E. Breckenridge, 19 years old, of Providence, a junior at Brown University, was drowned in the Colgate swimming pool at the College. He was found by a fellow-student lying face downward at the deep end.

The attendants were temporarily absent, and how Breckenridge met his death is unknown.

For more than an hour a pulmotor was used to try to resuscitate the student, but without effect.

Germans on the Russian Front Fall Back to the Bug River

BULGAR REGIMENT ENTIRELY WIPED OUT BY FRENCH

Britain and France Have Agreed To Continue The Balkan Fight to a Finish

Bulgarians Are Attacking Vigorously in the Balkans But French Forces Hold Good Positions—Intense Activity on Eastern and Western Fronts.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—The United States Government requested the British Government for safe conduct of Von Papen and Boy-Ed.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—British steamer St. Kilda is aground on St. Pierre Island, and the Cunard liner Ultonia is aground off the Coast of France.

PARIS, Dec. 13.—Official statement says Bulgarians are attacking vigorously in the Balkans, but French forces continue to hold good positions.

BERLIN, Dec. 13.—Intense activity is reported from the Eastern and Western fronts, and fighting is still in progress without a definite result.

PARIS, Dec. 13.—An official statement says Britain and France have agreed to continue the Balkan fight to a finish.

PARIS, Dec. 13.—Journal Des Debats says one thousand persons have been killed or injured in a premature explosion at Havre, France.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—Lord Derby Saturday night issued a special and final appeal to young men to enlist.

PARIS, Dec. 13.—Athens despatches say detachments of Austrian infantry have reached Philippopolis, Bulgaria, and that the Austro-German army corps is on the way to that town.

STOCKHOLM, Dec. 13.—Dr. Bergstrom, former Minister of War, has been appointed Consul-General to Canada. This is a new office.

PARIS, Dec. 13.—Foreign Secretary Gray and Earl Kitchener, at the conclusion of the Anglo-French conference, left for London Saturday afternoon.

BERLIN, Dec. 13.—An official statement yesterday claims Anglo-French forces in Southern Serbia are retreating at places over the Greek frontier, and also in Montenegrin and Albanian campaign to have captured 8,000 prisoners and forty guns.

General Gouraud, K.C.M.G.—Formerly commander of the French forces at the Dardanelles, where he lost an arm has been given a new command in the French army.

How Germany Will Advise Austria To Answer United States' Sharpest Communication To Any Belligerent

Was the Big Question Officials at Washington Considered To-day—Whether Long Diplomatic Negotiations Must Be Endured Depends on the Answer.

UNITED STATES IN NO TEMPER TO PARLEY

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—How Germany will advise Austria to answer the Ancona note was made public to-day, the sharpest communication the United States has sent to any belligerent, was the big question officials considered to-day. On the answer depends whether long diplomatic negotiations must be endured, and whether Austria will yield at all. The impression to-day is that Germany will advise Austria to bring about some such long-drawn out negotiations as followed the sinking of the Lusitania. It is felt to be certainty that such a situation will result if the Teutonic diplomats think they can bring it about. This feeling in the State department, it is believed, was one cause for the outspoken character of the note. It was desired that Austria should realize that the United States is in no temper to parley.

A Peace Appeal To All The Rulers From Henry Ford

Aboard the Peace Ship Oscar II Now Approaching Christiana—Due There To-morrow or Wednesday

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—From the peace ship Oscar II, now approaching Christiania, Henry Ford has wirelessed a peace appeal to all European rulers.

The Oscar II. is due in Christiania to-morrow or Wednesday. Ford wirelessed the United States via the liner Noordam and Cape Race, N.F., to-day that he had sent the peace messages to European capitals.

SALONIKA, Dec. 13.—The evacuation of Gregveli and Duron by the Allies was officially confirmed in despatches received here to-day.

The Bulgars are reported five miles from the Greek frontier, slowly following the expeditionary forces.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—The Germans on the Russian front have fallen back to the Bug River line.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—The Kaiser presided over an important war council at German headquarters on the Eastern front.

ROME, Dec. 13.—The Italians have invested forts of Ladaro and are making great progress.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—It has been definitely announced that the Allies will fortify and retain Salonika.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—The British lost 1,500 men and 8 guns in the retirement from Serbia.

Irish regiments bore the brunt of the fighting.

PARIS, Dec. 13.—Bulgar regiment was entirely wiped out by the French.

PARIS, Dec. 13.—Sixty-four spies were shot in France since the war opened.

Anglo-French Army Has Retired to Positions Just Inside the Greek Frontier

LONDON, Dec. 13.—No definite information has reached London that would locate the new Anglo-French line in the Balkans. Military observers here are not even certain whether the allied force is on Serbian soil or has retired altogether into Greece. The latest advices, however, indicate that the line Friday was formed just inside the Greek frontier. This view is confirmed by German official advices which say all the Allies have been driven from Serbia.

The official messages from the front to London and Paris make it clear that a general retirement has been in progress for four days—a retirement necessitated not only by superior forces on the front, but by severe pressure on both flanks and the presence of Bulgarian irregulars in the rear that have been threatening the railroad connecting the army with its base at Salonika. Apparently the vigor of the battle which has accompanied the retreat declined on Thursday; for the movements of the French and British was less restricted Friday. Only minor rear guard actions were fought and little loss occurred on either side. Artillery and machine guns, held well in the rear, inflicted very heavy losses on the Bulgars in the earlier phases of the battle, but the weight of men and metal the Bulgars were able to throw into the field in attack after attack compelled the gradual evacuation of the Vardar valley positions.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—It is understood the Allies' Council at Paris decided to pour one million troops into the Balkans at once.

ROME, Dec. 13.—Government announces that all revolts in Tripoli have been suppressed and rebels punished.

VIENNA, Dec. 13. — Austrian seaplane squadron bombed the Anconia in the Adriatic.

PARIS, (Official) Dec. 13.—Violent artillery action took place along the entire western front. In the Dardanelles mine warfare has resumed with increasing activity.

PETROGRAD (Official) Dec. 13.—No change along the western (Russian) front. On the Black Sea Coast, east of Bosphorus on Friday three Russian torpedo boats, after artillery action, sank two Turkish gunboats and a large sailing vessel. In the Caucasus we captured fortified positions.

PARIS, Dec. 13.—An Athens despatch says the British have received reinforcements with heavy artillery. French reinforcements continue to arrive at Salonika.

SAYS GRAPE JUICE GOT HIM DRUNK

Man, Found in Alley, Enters Unusual Defence.

SANDUSKY, O., Dec. 11.—W. J. Bryan and his grape juice advocacy were rapped rather severely in an indirect way in police court here.

"I didn't have a thing to drink, your honour, but a little bit of grape juice," said Henry Hancee, 41, of Sharon, Pa., when arraigned on a charge of drunkenness.

"Five dollars and costs," said Police Judge Jacob Dietz, when the officer, who made the arrest, told him he had picked Hancee up in an alley.

An Ennismore Man in West

"D. C." Sends Another Interesting Letter Describing Conditions in Alberta

Rockeyford, Alberta, Dec. 8, 1915.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Another short discourse in regard to my visit to the great west. Rockeyford is a small town, or rather, a village, situated sixty miles north-east of Calgary, which two years ago did not have a fence post. The population is about forty. But few women and children. They will open a school after New Year's in the Town Hall. The streets are yet as nature left them. The buffalo grass is yet to be seen on either sides of the main street. It has a branch of the Bank of Commerce, a restaurant, elevator, a general store, barber shop and pool-room, a livery barn, blacksmith shop, a branch of the Crown Lumber Co., where everything in connection with building is supplied, which is shipped here from B. C., where there is large mills. It is also surrounded by a splendid farming country, which yielded a heavy crop this year. It has been irrigated by the C.P.R. Co., but the water is not used here, as the water would not penetrate this gumbo soil, and had sufficient rain this season. It has also rich coal mines in Drumheller, some thirty-five miles east where some fifty mines are in operation. In speaking of Edmonton, which is situated on the river Saskatchewan, where men could be seen this summer washing gold, but not in paying quantities. Work was scarce and some took that way of making a living. The Parliament Buildings there are also a place worth visiting. The main building has a great dome in the centre, around which winding stairs are erected, where elaborate furnished rooms are to be seen. It is built on the side of the old Edmonton fort, but on the highest part of the ground; the high level bridge crosses the river at that point. It is nearly a mile long, which accommodates the train, street cars, wagon road and foot path at a height of one hundred and seventy-five feet. A person would not expect to need barkes on the waggons in a prairie country, but they are needed every few miles of the road. The prairie seems level to look at, but all of a sudden you come across coulees, which look like the beds of old rivers, with steep banks, which cannot be crossed only in rare cases, without bridges, which have been built by driving piles. The weather is splendid here for all kinds of work except ploughing, which has been closed. Nov. 15th cold, clear and calm every day, with about eight hours of sun. There is more wheat here on the roads than gravel, as there is none in the country, and the roads are still in their natural state. Threshing will probably be finished by Christmas, but there is new threshing outfits coming into the country yet for some remote districts which cannot get machines. They thresh oats at the rate of six bushels per minute and wheat four, which costs three cents for oats and four for wheat. Some outfits furnish all their own help, their own boarding cars and cook vans, which are buil on trucks with long axles to prevent upsetting. They look like box cars but are wider. Some machines use gasoline, which has gone up to 40c., and is expected to reach the 50c. mark next season. Wheat has advanced in price, yesterday 4c., which is equal to 90 here on track, in cars lots, and is worth 1.06 7-8 in Fort William. Oats has also advanced 4c., which makes the price 34c. here in car lots, and is worth 40 5-8c. in Fort William, which means considerable more money for a country with a large crop and larger acreage than ever before. The threshing machines here never stop for Sunday as there is such a crop to handle and very few churches in the country. The good water here is like good liquor here; it is hard to get. Alberta has gone dry. I have just heard a story of a hotelkeeper here whose name was August, when the liquor act passed he painted a sign on his windows, saying that July 20th, 1915, will be the last of August.

I will close my discourse by saying this may be continued, if it can be tolerated.

A PATRIOTIC VETERAN

The gallant sons of Canada,
Are shouldering their guns
To defend our country, kith and kin
Against the haughty Huns;
They are coming from the east and west,

From prairie, hamlet, town,
From farm, and forge, and factory,
To put the Kaiser down;
And I would soon fall into line
With Jack Canuck so bold,
And help to keep the flag afloat,
If I were not too old.

When I hear the drums and bugles
As the boys go marching by,
With the glorious old Union Jack
Above them waving high,
The stirring martial music,
Gay patriotic strains,
Fires my blood, and sets it coursing
With wild fever in my veins.
Then on the lists without delay,
My name would be enrolled
And I fain would join the colors,
But they said I was too old.

Yet the bitter pang of pain,
Those two words made me feel,
Was as keen as ever piercing thrust
Of foeman's cruel steel.
There is still one consolation
Now I'm aged and unfit,
It is, when stalwarts, young and strong,
I tried to do my bit.
Like any true Canadian who
Would scorn to have it told,
That he had shirked stern Duty's call
Until he was too old.

This is no braggart's boasting,
For where paths of honor lead
Canucks were never wanting
In their country's hour of need.
They met Riel and his rebel horde
On the lone western moor,
And faced upon South Africa's belt,
The bullets of the Boer.
Adventured far their lives in war
In sultry climes and cold,
And I'd be with them as of yore,
If I was not too old.

But hark ye youths of brawny arm,
The call goes forth for you,
To rally round your banner now
As loyal patriots do,
For our dear land, fair Canada,
Strike now, nor count the cost,
For life preserved at honor's price
Is but ignobly lost,
Now rise and fight, for sacred right,
And strong oppose our ruthless foes,
Ye men of martial mould,
While ye are not—too old.

SAYS GEM SMUGGLERS USE THE PARCELS POST

$5,000,000 in Diamonds Reach New York Hidden in Packages.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Details of diamond smuggling plots by means of which diamonds of some millions of dollars' value have been brought into New York without paying duty were told by a man familiar with the diamond business of Antwerp.

It was his estimate that, in the last six months, diamonds worth $8,000,000, had arrived in New York hidden in parcels post packages. The smuggling has been stopped by the seizure, a fortnight ago, of the last parcel sent.

A British cruiser posing about the North sea, stopped a boat bound from Rotterdam to Copenhagen, rifled the mail aboard and confiscated the particular parcel in which were concealed diamonds to the value of 2,400,000 francs.

The man who had mailed the diamonds at Amsterdam was aboard. The parcel was consigned to him at New York.

This man, it is understood, came on to New York and not until some time later did the four firms and three individuals who owned the diamonds learn what had become of their shipment.

A gentleman who was spending a month in the Highlands went to hire a carriage for the purpose of taking his family for a drive. He looked at a vehicle and inquired how many it would hold. The 'ostler scratched his head thoughtfully and replied: "It hauls four generally, but six if they're weel acquaint."—Exchange.

Why Tolerate Catarrh?

You have noticed, no doubt, that any cold aggravates nasal catarrh, and the flow of mucous amazes you that such objectionable matter could find lodgment in your head. To ignore this catarrh when the cold subsides is wrong because it continues to slowly injure the delicate linings of the nasal passages and clog them up.

To correct catarrh, cleanse the nostrils frequently with a solution of warm water and salt, insert vaseline on retiring, and take a spoonful of Scott's Emulsion after meals for one month. Scott's acts through the blood to feed the tissues, and contains soothing glycerine to check the inflammation and heal the sensitive membranes.

Scott's is pleasant to take.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

CHRISTMAS IN NAVY

How the Festive Season is Observed Aboard Ship.

Not Much Work is Done—Athletic Sports, Traditional Dinner and Evening Entertainment Features of Occasion.

NOWHERE in all the world is the "spirit of Christmas" entered into more whole-heartedly than on board the ships of the United States navy.

Observance of this chief of all national holidays varies, of course, in form with the location of the fleet at the time.

Into each of the continental "home ports" (headquarters of certain individual vessels) the big gray monsters come dropping in by twos and threes till, in New York and Philadelphia, and Norfolk and Frisco, it looks almost like a naval review. According to long established custom, they are there to give the boys in blue a run on the beach ("liberty," as they call it in the service), and every man jack who is not actually undergoing punishment is allowed and encouraged to take his look at the bright lights—go home on leave or uptown for fun or anything else he likes as long as his money lasts but away from the ship in any event. This custom applies not alone to the enlisted men, but to the officers as well and, when Christmas morning dawns in a home port, there are not likely to be many more persons on board any man-o'-war than the regulations call for in the minimum.

The few "shipkeepers" cannot, under such circumstances, make a very successful effort toward merriment, Rear Admiral Samuel McGowan writes in the National Monthly, but what they lack in numbers they invariably make up in other ways, one of these ways being the complete satisfaction of the inner man.

Abroad and at sea, though, it is altogether different. Every soul on board, from the usually sedate flag officer and the more or less unapproachable first lieutenant, down to "Jimmy-legs" and the ship's cook and the messenger boy, voluntarily constitutes himself a committee of one to see the thing through in "old navy" fashion, and even King Neptune, when he comes on board on "crossing the line" to douse every hayseed and landlubber, has a formidable rival in the "spirit of Christmas."

It matters not much whether the ship be anchored off Vera Cruz or plowing through the Pacific ocean, the distance from home and friends makes it incumbent on all to do their level best to make at least a brave try for "Merry Christmas."

Routine drills are entirely suspended; and, except for cleaning ship (cleanliness in the navy being deemed not only akin to, but actually neck and neck with godliness itself), not a lick of avoidable work is allowed to be done by anybody.

"All hands" are called, to be sure, on scheduled time, but many more men than usual are allowed to "sleep in," and, after the tiniest minimum of tidying up, preparations for the day's festivities are gotten under way.

There is a varied athletic program that begins in the forenoon, and after an hour or so off for dinner at midday, continues well along toward sunset. Sailors are taught to be thorough. So they go at their potato races and pie-eating contests and tugs of war and jumping contests with the same fervor that they show when trying for a 13-inch turret gun record or stamping out a Caribbean revolution. There is no lack of interest. That can be depended on. And when call is sounded they are a tired lot.

Toward sunset the various contests have been completed (or not unusually called off "on account of darkness," as the baseball people say), and, after an early supper, a stage is rigged up on the quarter-deck and the crowning event of the entire celebration is on. Sometimes it is a minstrel show, another time a vaudeville performance, but without exception there is plenty of music and near music, and no such entertainment would be complete without the inevitable and inimitable cakewalk. Some of the improvised costumes are fearfully and wonderfully made. But they are striking and, for the most part, very appropriate, while the pirouetting and gyrating of the cakewalkers themselves are well worth seeing. The program is a long one, but interest never lags for a moment—for American sailors are just as thorough at play as they are while at work.

Prisoner Huns in Their Trenches.—Some German soldiers captured after a British ch. ge, photographed in the trench in which they were captured. The large saw held by the man in t he foreground is used for cutting barbed wire. Others are holding hand grenades.

Points for the Trapper.

Every Canadian boy in the farming districts knows that a few hours spent on the trap line during his spare time each day will furnish him with spending money all the year.

Choose the trapping grounds as early as possible. At the beginning of the cold weather watch for signs of animals. Locate as many dens and runways as possible while the fur-bearers are active, as they always are during the fall, when they gather their food and arrange their quarters for winter. Then when the animals become prime, one can tell how many traps he can use.

The trapping ground must not be too far from home, especially for the boy who goes to school and must look after his sets after he has done his work about the farm. It is seldom that a boy can attend to more than three dozen traps, unless he has the best part of the day to look after them. A dozen traps placed properly and looked after are more profitable than three times the number placed in a haphazard fashion.

After deciding upon a location, go along the creeks and make small dens near the edge of the water. Within a few weeks, if there are minks in the locality, these excavations will be used by them. Then when the time comes one has excellent places prepared for his sets. A few hours spent doing this will pay mighty well.

All traps should be tested when they are received. Oil all springs, using a piece of fat meat or some lard.

Never set bright, new traps. To cover up the shine, sink them for a week in slimy mud. This gives them a dull black color. After they are rusted slightly they may be browned by immersing for a short while in a stain made by boiling walnut husks and water.

For the skunk, mink, and raccoon employ No. 1½; for the opossum and civet cat, No. 1; for weasel and muskrat, No. 0.

Family Joys.

"When you were courting me," said his wife, "you declared there wasn't another woman in the world like me."

"Yes," replied her husband, "and I'm glad of it—for the sake of other men."

In common things the law of sacrifice takes the form of positive duty.

"WHY WOMEN CANNOT SLEEP."

The highly organized, finely strung nervous system of women subjects them to terrors of nervous apprehension which no man can ever appreciate.

The peace of mind, the mental poise and calmness under difficulties, which are necessary for happy womanhood, are only possible when the sensitive organism is in a perfectly healthy condition. If there be any derangement in this respect no remedy in the world so completely restores womanly health as the wonderful "Favorite Prescription," invented by Dr. R. V. Pierce.

Chatham, Ont.—"A few years ago I suffered a general break-down and got very weak and thin. I was in an awful state. I was very much discouraged and at times thought I would lose my mind. I knew of Dr. Pierce's medicines so I got his 'Favorite Prescription.' It gave me immediate relief, and completely cured me in a very short time. My sister used it with good results also. She was in a very delicate condition. I got her to take it and two bottles cured her completely."

"I take great pleasure in recommending Dr. Pierce's medicines; they are all that is recommended of them."—Miss. MARGARET BATAFF, 87 Park Ave., Chatham, Ont.

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Colour and Lustre to Hair

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray, streaked and looks dry, wispy and scraggy, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the tonic; you can get from any drug store a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," ready to use. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural colour, thickness and lustre of your hair and remove dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy, lustrous and abundant.

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS

By Robert Thomas Hardy

TO A MOTHER

Mother, dear, your boy's grown up,
And from you gone away,
And yet you never were more dear
Than on this Christmas Day!
God guard and bless you, Mother mine.
Great joy be yours, I pray!

TO A FATHER

Dear old Dad, I give you greeting.
On this joyous Day of Days
You have been the best of fathers,
And deserve no end of praise.
May your life be always happy!
Carking care fit far away!
Dear old Dad, I give you greeting
On this joyous Christmas Day!

COULD NOT BEND DOWN

COULD NOT WALK STRAIGHT

BACK WAS SO BAD.

The bad back comes from the kidneys, and unless the kidneys are carefully watched, and properly regulated many serious troubles may follow.

Doan's Kidney Pills will cure all forms of kidney trouble, and cure the kidneys so that they will stay cured.

Mr. J. A. Lubiniecki, Delephia, Man., writes: "It is my pleasure to write you in regard to Doan's Kidney Pills which I have been using for some time for kidney trouble, which used to affect my back so that at times I could not bend down nor could I walk straight. I learned about your pills from your almanac, and I bless the happy hour I thought of buying this medicine. One time a druggist persuaded me to buy ——'s Kidney Pills, saying they were just as good, in fact he guaranteed they were. I yielded to his advice, and what was the result? I had boring down pains in my back for two days, so I took the balance of the pills unused to the druggist and told him to give me Doan's Kidney Pills as they would stop the pain in twelve hours at the outside. He told me he was sorry I did not use more of the pills, and lengthen the time to await results. I told him there was no need of waiting with Doan's Pills; they go right to the spot. No substitute for me."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; See that our trade mark, "The Maple Leaf," is printed on both the table and wrapper.

"Doan's" are manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Timidity of the Horse.

The horse is by nature a timid animal, as, generally speaking, all animals are to whom nature has given powers of swift flight as their chief means of self preservation. Of course individuals differ in this respect, but the rule is so general that it should never be lost sight of in training. That the horse can be trained to war simply shows the extent to which his natural impulses can be modified and subdued by the art of man.

Breeds of horses differ in regard to natural timidity. The pure bred Arab is beyond all comparison the most fearless horse in the world. It is possible that this may be owing in part to the fact that his natural development was for long ages in an open country, where he was not in constant danger from unseen foes, but chiefly I think because he is a higher evolutionary type than any other horse.—Farm and Fireside.

An Indian's Comment.

Are we civilized? A young woman who visited the Grand canyon a few weeks ago had an educated Indian as a guide one day, and as the party went along they saw a father, aggravated by something his young son had done, stop on the edge of the canyon and give the boy a thorough spanking. The Indian was indignant. "That is what I call barbarous," he exclaimed. "Now, that boy will always remember this great canyon as the place where he received a spanking. He might have carried a picture of its grandeur in his mind that would have assisted in developing him, but now all that is spoiled. We Indians don't do things that way. We expect our children to endure pain, but we don't inflict it." And wasn't the Indian right?

Fully Informed.

Uncle Moses aspired to the elective office of justice of the peace in the "black bottom" part of town. One bar there was to his preferment; he could neither read nor write. His master advised him to go to the commissioner of elections and ask whether he was eligible. Moses went and returned. "What did he tell you, Moses?" inquired the master. "It's all right, sah," answered Moses; "dat gen'lemum suttinly was kind, yas, sah. He told me Ah was illegible fo' daf office."

Firedamp.

Firedamp is the ordinary name for the carbureted hydrogen which issues from "blowers" or fissures in coal seams. It is inflammable, and when mixed with air in certain proportions is highly explosive. Its ignition is attended by the danger of an explosion of coal dust.

His Adventurous Life.

"Uncle, have you had many exciting adventures in your life?"

"Oh, yes, my boy. Several times I have been caught in automobiles driven by fool friends who wanted to show me that their cars could make sixty miles an hour."

Think and Live Long.

Brain workers, according to a medical expert, live longer than muscle workers. Those who make use of both live longer than either, and the greater brain workers live longer than the lesser ones. "Life insurance companies realize the progressive shortening of life as one goes down in the scale of education when they refuse to accept illiterates because they are bad risks."

What He Lacked.

"They tell me," said the innocent maid, "that your marriage was the result of love at first sight. Is it true?"

"It is," answered the round shouldered man coldly. "Had I been gifted with second sight I'd still be in the bachelor class!"

Can Neither Bully Nor Cajole Allies By His Eloquence

LONDON, Friday, Dec. 10.—Owing to the fact that the reports of the German Imperial Chancellor's address in the Reichstag had only been partly received when the London morning newspaper went to press, there is no general comment on it this morning. Those newspapers which do print editorials, however, adopt a sarcastic tone at the Chancellor's expense.

The main object of the speech is summarized by the Daily Chronicle under four points, first, to deny that Germany is seeking peace; second, to threaten the Entente allies with the consequences if they do not seek peace; third, to divide the Entente allies by singling out Great Britain as the cause for the continuance of the war, and, fourth, to deny that Germany's moral position with regard to Belgium is any worse than that of the Entente allies.

"These," says the Chronicle, "are all fine themes for an orator. But they are not supported by facts, and if the Chancellor thinks his words at the present moment can either bully the allies into surrender or cajole them into quarreling among themselves, he entirely overrates the potency of his eloquence."

The general view is that unless Germany had desired peace, yesterday's debate would not have occurred.

The Daily Graphic, which expresses the belief that the world will smile at the idea of Germany offering to forego advantages which Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg said would accrue to her through a prolongation of the war, says: "People do not talk about peace unless they want it, and it is because the Germans are conscious of the risks of prolonging the war that they are talking so noisely about peace.'"

Extract from a schoolboy's Bible examination paper—Q. "What does Scripture say of a lie?" A. "A lie is an abomination to the Lord, but a very present help in time of trouble."

"Why so sad and downcast?" "My wife has threatened to leave me." "Cheer up; women are always threatening something like that, but they hardly ever do it." That's what I was thinking.'"

CHURCH OF CHRIST REAP AS THEY SOW

The Responsibility of the Spiritually Illuminated.

Christians Now on Trial for Life or Death—The Illumination of Jesus at Jordan—The Illumination of the Church—Jesus Bowed to the Spirit—His Footstep Followers Do Likewise—Both Reap Glory, Honor, Immortality—Suffering First, Glory Afterward—Riches of Grace in Future Ages for God's Faithful People.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publication.]

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 12. — Pastor Russell gave a profitable and interesting discourse here today, from the text, "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." (Galatians 6:7.) He spoke as follows:

Some weeks ago we spoke particularly of the world's sowing and reaping. To-day we shall apply our text more especially to the Church of Christ. Thus applied, the Apostle's thought would be that whatever a Christian sows that shall he also reap. The Christian is now on trial for life or death eternal. The world is not now on trial. If the Christian lives according to the Spirit of God, he shall receive life everlasting; but if he sows to the flesh, he shall reap corruption—everlasting death.

The Church has more enlightenment than has the world. Some in the world are naturally brighter than some in the Church; for not many wise, rich, or noble are called to be saints in Christ Jesus. (1 Corinthians 1:26-29.) But in proportion as the Church class have knowledge they have the opportunity of obtaining the information which God gives to His people, not to the world. When they consecrate themselves to God and become living sacrifices, our Lord Jesus takes them and makes them acceptable to the Father by imputing to them of His merit. Then God gives them the begetting of the Holy Spirit; and whoever is begotten of the Holy Spirit begins immediately to have an enlightenment of the mind.

So it was in the case of our Lord Jesus Christ. When He had made His consecration at Jordan and had gone down into the water, had symbolically gone into death, then as He came up out of the water the Holy Spirit descended upon Him in the form of a dove and "the heavens were opened unto Him." (Matthew 3:16.) All the higher things began to open up to His mind, things that He did not see before, things not seen by the natural mind, things seen only by this power of the Holy Spirit.

Jesus' Experiences After Baptism

As soon as our Lord's eyes of understanding were anointed with the Holy Spirit, He was driven of the spirit into the wilderness—driven by His own newly begotten mind, His own will. He went there to get away from everybody and everything that might distract His attention from the higher things. His was a very great mind. From boyhood He had been studying the Scriptures, but He had not understood the deep things; for the natural mind, even though perfect, cannot understand these matters. (1 Corinthians 2:14.) He knew the various features of the Mosaic Law. He had read the prophecies. But He did not understand them fully. He was familiar with the writings of Moses. He knew the story of the brazen serpent lifted up in the wilderness; He was aware that a bullock and a goat were sacrificed on the Day of Atonement; He was acquainted with the prophecies relating to Messiah. But He did not know what all these things signified.

A perfect mind would be able to repeat whatever it had ever heard. Our Lord's mind was perfect. Therefore everything He had read or heard was fast in His memory, and He could recall any part of the Scriptures. He needed neither Bible nor concordance to refresh His memory or to furnish references.

During His forty days in the wilderness our Lord thought over those Old Testament Scriptures. As He did so, the things therein about which He had previously wondered began to open up to His understanding. He was now illuminated. So busy was He in His Bible study that He forgot all about eating. But after those things which had been obscure to Him had grown clear, He became hungry. He did not understand everything in the Scriptures, however; for He afterwards said that He did not know the time for the setting up of the Messianic Kingdom: "Of that day and hour knoweth no man, neither the angels, nor the Son, but the Father only." God had not given out this knowledge as yet. But our Lord knew all that was then due to be known and He assured His disciples that as His Father should reveal things to Him, He would reveal them to His followers, in due time.—Mark 13:32; Acts 1:7; Revelation 1:1.

Our Lord Jesus Christ was granted the illumination of the Holy Spirit, and thus was an illustration of how all God's people of this Gospel Age would receive a supernatural illumination. Theirs would not be in the same degree, however, for His life was perfect, far beyond that of fallen man. He had left the glory which He had with the Father, had humbled Himself to come down to earth and be made flesh. (John 1:4.) As a man He was perfect, and in addition had the illumination which had come to Him as a spirit-begotten New Creature. This was instructing and guiding Him. From that time forward His life was one of daily guidance by this Spirit of continuous enlightenment.

How Jesus Sowed to the Spirit.

This enlightenment was with respect to the Father's will for Him; for He said, "I came to do the will of My Father in Heaven." What He did was to sow to the Spirit. His Father's proposition to Him was that He should present His body a living sacrifice, and be faithful unto death. He was not to settle beforehand how it should be done; for the Father would direct that matter. He kept looking into the Word of God. His mind was kept open to see what the Word instructed Him to do; and thus He was guided by the Word. He ordered His life by the Father's will. He did those things which the Scriptures said that He was to do.

This course led the Master to be out of accord with the people of His time; and this meant that those who would be in harmony with Him would be out of harmony with men. His followers were to have only one Master, Christ. Our Lord had only one Master, even the Father. He has set us an example, that we should walk in His steps. Having received the invitation to cast in our lot with Him, to consecrate our lives as He did, we are called to share with Him in the sufferings of this present time, that we may share in the glory that shall follow. The one depends upon the other.—Romans 8:17; 2 Timothy 2: 11, 12.

The Spirit-Begotten Are Illuminated.

Some of us have accepted this offer. We have consecrated ourselves to God and have received the illumination from above. When we received this enlightenment, our minds began to open to see the things of God as never before; and we are now seeing truths which our neighbors, children, parents, and others do not see. Having the illumination of the Holy Spirit, we have the mind of Christ. This Heavenly illumination makes clear the will of God for us. Because we have taken the proper steps, He has accepted us and has given us this earnest of our inheritance—the Holy Spirit—through which we are enabled to discern His will. This causes the true Christian to be separate and distinct from the world.

"Blessed are your eyes, for they see; and your ears, for they hear," said the Master. Others did not hear nor see. The great majority of those who heard our Lord Jesus did not comprehend His teachings. Those who could comprehend, blessed were they!

It is for those illuminated ones to sow to the Spirit, and not to the flesh. They are to use their wills, their talents, and their influence for the spiritual things, but not for the earthly things. They have given up the natural things, the things of the earth. Of course they must have the necessities of life; but our Heavenly Father has promised to give His children what they need. "Your Father knoweth what things ye have need of." (Matthew 6:32.) We cannot tell Him what we need; for we are not wise enough to do so. He knows, and all will be well. If He should grant us too many earthly blessings and privileges, we would feel all the more fearful lest we should make a mistake in using them.

Whatever may be our talents, they are given to God; and we are to use them to His glory. According to our use of them we are sowing either to the natural, earthly things or to the spiritual, Heavenly things. If we are sowing to the Spirit, we are using our time, our talents, etc., to the best of our ability as God would have us use them; and He will be very gracious in dealing with us.

Results of Living After the Flesh.

There is no standstill for the New Creature. He must go on and reach a certain standard of perfection; else he cannot be accounted as one of the Kingdom class. So we must surely do the best that we are able to do, and then leave the matter with the Lord. But if we should give our lives over to the flesh, to live according to our own natural preferences, to live in the base of the brain, minding natural, earthly things—if we should give time and attention to pet cats, dogs, ponies, automobiles, fine clothes, fine earthly appointments, and the pleasures of life, sowing to the gratification of the human nature—we would be living after the flesh, even though we do not murder, steal, lie, etc. And "if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die."—Romans 8:13.

Should anyone ask why God would destroy a consecrated Christian who lived according to his natural inclinations, we reply that the Christian is on trial for life or death. He has consecrated himself to God. The world has not. He has been begotten of the Holy Spirit. The world has not. Mankind are not now in the condition wherein they are on trial for life. But the Christian has covenanted to give up these natural, earthly things in order to get the spiritual things. The fact that God has given of His Spirit to this class is the indication of their acceptance by Him. Therefore if any of them should turn back, should break his contract with the Lord by minding earthly things, he would die.

During the Millennial Reign of Christ, the world will be on trial for life or death everlasting. Then no one may live a thousand years unless he shall be obedient to the laws of the Kingdom, and unless he shall turn to the Lord, shall seek to do the will of the Lord and shall manifest, at least outwardly, the Spirit of the Lord. Yet at the end of the thousand years those who outwardly obey only will not be accounted worthy of everlasting life. By that time all should have the Spirit of God; for during that period He will pour out His Spirit upon all flesh—the Spirit of the Lord in the human nature. Perfected human nature will be able to have the Spirit of God working perfectly in the human body. But if at the end of the thousand years anyone shall choose to live according to the flesh, he will not be granted everlasting life.

Choosing the Better Part.

Those who now choose the spiritual things are wise; for "eye hath not seen, nor ear heard" the glories and blessings in store for the Church of this Gospel Age. (1 Corinthians 2:9.) When our great Redeemer shall present His faithful Bride class blameless and irreprovable in the presence of Jehovah God, then they will receive their reward who have lived according to the Spirit, who have willingly and gladly sacrificed the earthly things, who have continued to dwell in the secret place of the Most High. They will be of the Jewel class, cut, polished, and mounted to shine forth to all eternity, a diadem in the hand of our God.—Malachi 3:17; Isaiah 62:3.

To the Church the great Apostle says: "We are God's workmanship." (Ephesians 2:10.) When the Church shall have been fully completed and glorified, then truly we shall exclaim, "What hath God wrought!" We are the children of God, begotten by His own Spirit, to reflect His glory throughout all eternity. He is showing us exceeding great favor now, but this is only a prelude to the future glories, "the things which He hath prepared for them that love Him." "In the ages to come He will show the exceeding riches of His grace in His kindness toward us through Christ Jesus."—Ephesians 2:7.

St. Paul does not attempt to tell us what these riches are. He would have us see that our God is rich in mercy, rich in grace, rich in every other estimable quality of character, and would have us trust that so rich a Father will do for His children "exceeding abundantly more than we could ask or think." Indeed, he assures us elsewhere that it is impossible for him to explain or for us to comprehend "the riches of our inheritance."—Ephesians 1: 18-23.

Riches of Grace in Future Ages.

"Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him; but God hath revealed them unto us by His Spirit." Nevertheless, this revelation is only an approximate one. We cannot clearly discern the unseen things; we cannot comprehend them with our finite natural minds. But with the new mind we can, even though but vaguely, grasp the thought of our Heavenly Father's riches of grace and love, and can draw analogies from the things of the present life. Thus we can gain some faint idea of the glorious things which await the Church; and thus by faith we are enabled as New Creatures in Christ to see the things which are invisible and to rejoice in the wonderful things which are only partially disclosed at the present time.

As we gaze up into the starry heavens, we see great constellations of fixed stars, slowly revolving about some distant centre. Astronomers tell us that the use of powerful telescopes has revealed the fact that these stars are suns, and that around each one of these one hundred and twenty-five millions of suns revolves a planetary system similar to our own. This would mean that there are probably one billion other worlds than ours. So far as we know, these worlds are uninhabited. But it seems reasonable that God's work will one day extend to these planets. The foundation may have been already laid and the glorified Church of Christ may have a work to do in connection with them—all under our Father's direction and in association with our Lord Jesus.

"In the ages to come He will show us the exceeding riches of His grace toward us" according to His loving kindness in Christ. Day by day we are coming to know our Heavenly Father better; and as we see more and more of His loving kindness it begets this same spirit in us. He first loved us; and the more we know of His love, the more we love in return.

"What Shall the Harvest Be" With Each?

When we consider all our present favors from the Lord, and all the possibilities of the future, what do we purpose to do? Shall we sow to the flesh, and reap corruption—death eternal? Or shall we sow to the Spirit, and reap eternal life? This is what we desire. But let us remember that "he that soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he that soweth bountifully shall reap bountifully." There will be a great difference in the reaping.

Those who sow sparingly shall not reap any share in the Messianic Kingdom. Many spirit-begotten ones will not reign with Christ in that Kingdom. While they do not repudiate the Lord, yet they are measurably unfaithful to their covenant. Through great chastening they will wash their soiled robes in the blood of the Lamb, and will come in as honored servants of the King. They will be bridesmaids to "the Bride, the Lamb's Wife." (Revelation 7: 9, 14-17; Psalm 45: 14, 15.) But the Father has invited us to be of the Bride class.

It is in vain that we profess to be the Lord's people, profess to be the servants of righteousness and truth, profess to love these principles, if our conduct clearly demonstrates that we love unrighteousness. For such persons to claim to be God's people is to mock our God by assuming that He cannot read the heart, and that what may be hidden to some extent from earthly beings is equally hidden from the Almighty. He that doeth righteousness is not necessarily he who is absolutely perfect, but rather he that doeth righteousness to the extent of his ability and trusts in the Redeemer's merit to compensate for unintentional shortcomings. Such are righteous in God's sight; such are approved.

Let us then, while rejoicing in the Divine favor, see to it that we walk circumspectly. Let us be sure that our walk in life is not after the flesh, which eventually leads to death everlasting, but after the Spirit, which leads to life eternal with our dear Redeemer.

FRIEND OF THE SOLDIERS.

Sister Beatrice Has Achieved National Distinction in France.

Mrs. Bartlett, of England, known along the French battle-front and in all of the military hospitals as "Sister Beatrice," an angel of mercy, in a great [illegible] cape, with [illegible] dress, is at work organizing in Canada a campaign for medical and surgical supplies, and to arrange for their shipment to the French port.

When someone asked if she were going to speak in different places in America, she said she would like to. "I would like to tell what I have seen, but my time is limited, and what little I have must be devoted to securing the hospital supplies for the winter. I have to be in Limoges the beginning of December, so you see there is very little time for me to make sure of a great store of medical and surgical supplies, for which there is an immediate and desperate need. Last winter the conditions were unspeakably terrible, when, although multitudes of people were working night and day to give the hospitals the necessary accessories, the supply was altogether inadequate, and the suffering was beyond description."

"You were there, then, doing hospital work?"

"Oh, yes, when I was not going about asking people to send us more and more bandages, ether, linen—all the appliances to lessen pain and destroy disease of the wounded or dying. You see, thousands of men were operated on where they fell, on the grounds—because there was no way to get them to the hospital. At Dieppe, where hotels had been turned into hospitals, there were more than 9,000 operations performed on a table that was made up of four card tables, pushed together, and covered with oilcloth.

Socks Last But Three Days.

It would seem that, since the beginning of the war, the whole world of women has been knitting socks for the soldiers, and yet keens on knitting with untiring zeal. The modern girl takes to it with a skill that rivals her grandmother's art, and turns out grey socks by the dozens of pairs. "Perhaps there is no desperate lack of socks?" one ventured.

Mrs. Bartlett smiled and shook her head. "Socks last only three days for a soldier on the march. The factories are crippled by the lack of workers, and socks only in sadly limited quantities can be produced. You see the dire need?"

For a year "Sister Beatrice" has been the only woman connected with the French Military Medical Service, and she has attained a national distinction for her remarkable executive ability in organizing hospitals, as well as her work as hospital inspector, and all that quick and constant hospital service involves in time of war.

No less valuable have been her achievements when it came to raising funds by direct and personal appeal. She went about in the mining and industrial districts of England and spoke from her automobile, demanding that the unsalaried supply the needs of those who were out in the field.

TORTURED BY RHEUMATISM

TORONTO, ONT., Oct. 1st, 1915.

"I have lived in this city for more than 12 years and am well known. I suffered from Rheumatism, especially in my hands. I spent a lot of money without any good results. I have taken "Fruit-a-tives" for 18 months now and am pleased to tell you that I am well. All the enlargement has not left my hands, and perhaps never will, but the soreness is all gone and I can do any kind of work. I have gained 35 pounds in eighteen months."

ANCIENT TEMPLES

Mighty Structures of Old Dwarfed by Modern Skyscrapers.

TOWER OF BABEL A MIDGET.

It Would Not Reach Two-thirds of the Way Up to the Top of the Eiffel Tower, That Sways 984 Feet In the Air. Big Buildings and the Pyramids.

It has long been the popular impression that the modern effort to pierce the clouds with skyscrapers is but a feeble imitation of the work of those ancient sons of Noah whose memory is perpetuated in the Bible. Reading in the eleventh chapter of Genesis, where it tells of the people attempting to erect the Tower of Babel, "whose top may reach unto heaven," it strikes one that they must have gone farther toward realizing their ambition than we of today may ever hope to do.

But as a matter of fact when the Lord halted building operations by confounding the workers' language and scattering them broadcast over the earth the summit of the tower was but one stade, or 606 feet 9 inches, from the level of the plain.

The Ziggurrat, or temple tower of Babylon, is described by Herodotus as having eight stages, each somewhat narrower than the one directly beneath it. The top was reached by a gradually rising spiral ascent, and on the topmost tier was a shrine wherein the god Marduk was supposed to dwell. Diodorus says this shrine contained three colossal golden images—one of Bel, one of Beltis and the third of Rhea or Ishtar—together with two golden lions, two enormous silver serpents and a golden table forty feet long and fifteen feet wide.

The tower, as the Bible sets forth, was built of brick, with slime for mortar. This slime, it is believed, was natural asphaltum obtained from nearby springs. Ages after the building operations had been interrupted by the Maker's wrath Nebuchadnezzar undertook, with indifferent success, to restore the ruins to their former state.

The modern ruins of Babel were supposed to be represented by the great pile of Birs Nimroud, which stood in Borsippa, eight miles from the ancient city of Babylon. Its sides were from 375 to 643 feet long, and the edifice still rises to a height of 153 feet.

The next structures in point of antiquity are the pyramids of Egypt. These are the oldest and most mysterious of man's works still existing. But they are not really so tall, considered in the light of present day achievements. The greatest, known as the Great Pyramid of Cheops or Khufu, was originally 481 feet 4 inches high and 755 feet square at the base. The second—that of Chephren or Khafra—was 472 feet high and 706 feet wide. The third—that of Mycerinus or Menkaura—was never completed, but it stood, nevertheless, 215 feet high and 346 feet square at the base.

In all nearly seventy of these pyramids have been located, and, inasmuch as they all appear to have been royal sepulchers, it is the belief that the dynasties of the builders covered a period of at least a thousand years. The area of the Great Pyramid is more than thirteen acres—above twice as great as that of St. Peter's at Rome. The passages leading to the chambers containing the royal mummies defied detection for thousands of years, only to be torn open at last and their contents ruthlessly made away with.

Of modern edifices the tallest by far is the great Eiffel tower of Paris, whose steel webbed structure pierces the blue to a height of 984 feet. Then comes the Woolworth building in New York, the loftiest office building in the world, its fifty-five stories rising 750 feet into the air. The height of others is: Metropolitan Life building, New York, fifty stories, 700 feet 3 inches; Singer building, New York, forty-one stories, 612 feet 1 inch; Washington monument, Washington, 555 feet; Cologne cathedral spire, Cologne, Germany, 517 feet; Rouen cathedral spire, Rouen, France, 492 feet; cupola of St. Peter's, Rome, 460 feet; St. Paul's, London, 364 feet.

The loftiest obelisks ever constructed are those mentioned by Diodorus Siculus, which rose 138 feet and were eleven feet thick at the base and seven feet thick at the top. One of the world's largest domes is that of the Roman Pantheon, 142 feet in diameter and 143 feet high.

The ancient peoples were great for their methods of embalming, for their art, their literature, their general culture. But when it comes to building skyscrapers they will have to give way to the builders of the Eiffel tower and the Woolworth building, who have pierced the clouds without their language being confounded in the slightest.

Death by the Bowstring.

In Turkey and Persia the bowstring is the method of execution. This is a stout cord of caigut placed around the victim's neck with two slipknots, which are suddenly drawn tight by two strong men. This kills the criminal by strangulation. — London Telegraph.

A WONDER WORKER.

"It heals like magic!" is a favorite expression when Dr. Chase's Ointment is used. It works quickly, stops all itching at once, often heals in a single night. For eczema, salt rheum, barber's itch, skin irritations or eruptions, it is a most satisfactory treatment. Being antiseptic it prevents blood poisoning.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S REDINGOTE DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

The garment of elegance for the coming winter is decidedly the redingote. This is to be found in both coats and dresses and in all manner of adjustments. In our illustration we show a form of this style which is both becoming and simple in construction.

As a foundation we have an underblouse and an underskirt. The blouse is open at the neck with a wide collar at the back and with the front gathered and quite full to show as a chemisette when the dress is complete. The sleeves are attached to this underblouse. They are plain and neatly fitted to the arm, ending at the wrist with a pretty cuff.

The underskirt is made with two gores fitted to the figure. The lower edge in the medium size measures 1¾ yards.

The overdress consists of a waist and skirt. The waist is in the form of a sleeveless jacket, quite open in front to display the underblouse as a chemisette near the top. It is fastened by a single button above the waistline. The skirt portion is quite circular, fitted at the top and made in two parts, seamed down the back and left open in front. At the lower edge this overdress measures 2¾ yards in the medium size.

The redingote dress pattern, No. 7,415, is cut in sizes 34 to 42 inches bust measure. Medium size requires for blouse and underskirt 4⅛ yards of 40 inch material; for redingote 3⅜ yards of 44 inch material.

These widths cut without piecing or waste.

This pattern can be obtained by sending to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

Comfort and Cure For Baby's Skin Troubles

Dr. Chase's Ointment Cured When Baby's Body Was Covered With Distressing Eczema

If every mother could try Dr. Chase's Ointment for the chafing, skin irritation and resulting eczema which tortures so many babies, what a blessing it would be for the little ones.

This letter will give you an idea of what a wonderful work this Ointment is doing in the way of bringing comfort to children who are so unfortunate as to contract eczema. It is so easy for this trouble to develop from chafing or irritation caused by the clothing, and so difficult to get it cured, that Dr. Chase's Ointment is appreciated when once its healing qualities are known.

Mr. M. L. Duscloa, Postmaster, Dugnayville, N.B., writes: "I believe it my duty to recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment as a cure for eczema. My baby was seized with eczema and his face and arms were covered with this terrible disease. After trying all sorts of ointments the disease continued to spread until it covered the entire body. When the itching became bad he would scratch himself and was sometimes found in his cradle covered with blood. Hearing about Dr. Chase's Ointment I bought two boxes and before this was all used the child was cured. That was a year ago, and there has been no trace of eczema since. I recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to all who suffer from eczema as being the best treatment in the world for itching skin diseases."

Dr. Chase's Ointment is for sale by all dealers at 60 cents a box. It is a good idea to keep it at hand along with the bath soap to be used for roughness of the skin, chafing or irritation. Prevention is so much better than cure. Powders clog the pores, but Dr. Chase's Ointment cleanses the pores and thereby keeps the skin soft and smooth. Sample box free if you mention this paper. FINDS SUNKEN VESSEL WITH $100,000 IN ORE

Bridgeport Man Recovers Valuable Cargo of Copper.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Dec. 11.—William Gardner of this city has located $100,000 worth of copper which was sunk near Klakner's Island on the steam lighter Roslyn one stormy night 32 years ago. Gardner, who is the only survivor of the crew of the Roslyn, has fought for the wreck unceasingly since the vessel went down.

The Roslyn was insured and was carrying more than 200 tons of lake copper in 100-pound ingots. Several attempts on the part of underwriters to locate here were unsuccessful, and they finally abandoned the search.

The consignees refused to make settlement. Later all claims became outlawed. Thousands of dollars have been spent by Bridgeport residents in an attempt to recover the copper under the supervision of Simon Lake.

Gardner is now chief engineer on the tug John Glen. Salvage operations on a large scale, headed by Gardner, will soon be begun to recover the copper, which lies in about five fathoms of water. It is estimated that it will cost $3,000 to raise the ore.

WHY PEOPLE FEEL DEPRESSED IN THE COLD WEATHER

Why is tiredness and langour so prevalent just now? A physician explained that the cold of winter drives blood from the surface of the body to the liver. Normally one-fourth of the whole blood supply is in the liver, and when more blood is accumulated in that organ everything goes wrong.

No better remedy exists than Dr. Hamilton's Pills which are composed of such vegetable extracts as Mandrake and Butternut, and possess wonderful liver stimulating powers. It's a marvel the way Hamilton's Pills clear the blood of the poisonous humours. They put new life into worn out bodies, build up the appetite, bring back a reserve of nerve energy, tide folks over the cold days of winter and the depressing days of spring. For your health and body comfort get a 25c. box of Dr. Hamilton's Pills to-day.

HAS EARNED RANK.

Promotion of Brigadier-General Wilson a Popular Move.

The appointment of Col. E. W. Wilson, the officer commanding the 4th Military Division, as brigadier-general, is one of the most popular ones Montreal has experienced. Taking charge of the militia headquarters in Montreal just a year ago, Col. Wilson, who in civil life is the manager of the Canada Life Assurance Company, brought about a peaceful revolution in the methods which operated so slowly under the old regime. The staff were hard pressed at the time in connection with the arrangements for raising troops for active service, and there was a stream of callers all day long at headquarters, which impeded the work it was necessary to do, and involved the wasting of a vast amount of time. This was not the fault of the staff, but new conditions had arisen which needed new methods, and Colonel Wilson, bringing his well-known business abilities to bear, inaugurated a system which resulted in a speeding up of the work of the department, and general satisfaction all round. When the headquarters were moved Colonel Wilson had a further opportunity to improve matters, and now there is not a district headquarters in the whole of the Dominionw here more prompt attention is given to callers and to communications.

The secret of the success that has been attained lies perhaps in the fact that Col. Wilson has been through every branch of the militia. He joined the Victoria Rifles as a private in 1882, and passing through every rank, gaining first his stripes, then his commission, until he rose to command the regiment. Then he retired from military life for a time—this was in 1907—but a year later he was appointed brigadier of the 123rd Infantry Brigade, retiring in 1911. It was only when the war broke out that he once more took up military matters, and the great things that have been accomplished under his regime, the many battalions that have been raised under his auspices, numbering 234 units, are a sufficient indication that the choice of the Minister of Militia was a wise one, while his decison to make Col. Wilson a brigadier-general is one that is acclaimed by every N.C.O. and private in the Montreal district.

THE VALE OF SHADOWS.

By Clinton Scollard.

There is a vale in the Flemish land,
A vale once fair to see.
Where under the sweep of the sky's wide arch
Thro winter freeze or summer parch,
The stately poplars march and march,
Remembering Lombardy.

Here are men of the Saxon eyes,
Men of the Saxon heart,
Men of the Fens and men of the Peak,
Men of the Kentish meadows sleek,
Men of the Cornwall cove and creek,
Men of the Dove and Dart.

Here are men of the kilted clans
From the heathery slopes that lie
Where the mists hang gray and mists hang white,
And the deep lochs brood 'neath the craggy height
And the curlews scream in the moonless night
Over the hills of Skye.

Here are men of the Celtic breed,
Lads of the smile and tear,
From where the loops of the Shannon flow,
And the crosses gleam in the evening glow,
And the halls of Tara now are low
And Donegal cliffs are sheer.

And what shall these proud warlords say
At foot of His mighty throne?
For there shall dawn a reckoning day,
Or soon or late, come as it may,
When those who gave the sign to slay
Shall meet His face alone.

What, think ye, will their penance be
Who have wrought this monstrous crime?
What shall whiten their blood-red hands
Of the stains of riven and ravished lands?
How shall they answer God's stern commands
At the last assize of Time?

MILLIONS OF NEW SOLDIERS FOR BRITAIN

Derby's Recruiting Scheme is a Success

THE BULGARS LOST HEAVILY IN THEIR ATTACKS UPON THE RETREATING ALLIES

British Machine Gun and Rifle Fire Took a Terrible Toll of Lives as the Bulgars Tried a Massed Attack---Two Successive Assaults Were Stopped by the British---Germany's Claim in Regard to Submarine Warfare.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

ATHENS, Dec. 13.—An eye-witness says: "The British were subjected to the heaviest assaults in the fighting. The Bulgarians made repeated attempts to break the British line and surround small detachments. Two assaults against the British front cost the Bulgarians 8,000 in killed and wounded. Although the Allies later retired to more secure positions, a grand assault was ordered by the Bulgarian commander, when the first charge was hurled back. The Bulgarians advanced through a thick fog in dense formation to within 500 yards of the British trenches. British machine guns and rifles suddenly swept their front with frightful fire. Those who escaped the first hail of bullets ran swiftly forward until within 200 yards of the British trenches. A second shower of bullets mowed them down by hundreds, and the survivors broke and fled.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—That at least three million have answered Lord Derby's call for volunteers, was the report in official circles to-day, following the close of England's greatest recruiting campaign. Definite figures will not be obtainable until Lord Derby's report to Premier Asquith is made public. If these figures are correct, it is estimated Britain has now an army of 5,000,000.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—The British steamer Pinegrove, 2,000 tons, was sunk by a submarine. Twenty of the crew were saved.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Dec. 13.—Lieut. Robert Foy, Max Breitung and their three alleged accomplices, indicted on five charges of conspiracy in connection with German propaganda and bomb planting on United States ships, pleaded not guilty in the United States District Court to-day, and were remanded. A bond of $25,000 was continued for each of the five defendants.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 13.—A full military investigation was ordered to-day into the death of Pte. Walter Smith, a guard at Point Burwell wireless station, who was found hanging from a tree by a wire an hour after he went on sentry duty.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—Premier Asquith formally denied in the House of Commons this afternoon that the Government intends to reduce the salary of Cabinet members and members of Parliament as a measure of economy.

PARIS, Dec. 13.—German troops exploded a mine in front of the French trenches south of Mesnil Hill, in the Champagne, last night, the War Office reported this afternoon, but the French troops immediately occupied the pit dug by the explosion. No other developments of importance were mentioned in the official communique.

BERLIN, Dec. 13.—The Russian troops operating in the Riga region have captured a German post, it was officially admitted this afternoon. Von Hindenburg's army has had minor engagements with the enemy's reconnoitering parties at several places, the War Office stated.

ABOARD THE PEACE SHIP OSCAR II., Via Wireless to Land's End, Eng., Dec. 13.—War has broken out aboard Ford's peace ship. Several members of the peace mission are preparing to quit the party at Christiania and return to America, alleging that extreme pacifists have adopted an insulting attitude toward everybody, and upholding President Wilson's preparedness programme. Ford himself is doing his best to prevent an open break. He issued a statement to-day denying he was responsible for the steam roller tactics alleged to have been employed by the extreme pacifists. As a matter of fact, this accusation was not made against Ford but chiefly against Rev. Charles F. Aked, of San Francisco, the former Rockefeller pastor, and Rev. Lloyd Jones Jenkin, of Chicago. A complete split is imminent.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 13.—The departure of Sir Robert Borden for New York yesterday on a holiday trip, which will last until Christmas, probably means that the Government has definitely decided not to fill the vacancies in the House of Commons before Parliament meets. The decision not to hold by-elections is doubtless due to the inability of the two parties to prevent contests more particularly in Lisgar and Brandon, which were voluntarily vacated by Sir James Aikens and William Sharpe to enter the Provincial arena. In these seats the grain growers declared they would provide a contest on the free wheat issue. It is officially announced that the Government, when the House meets, will introduce a bill to extend the life of Parliament for one year. It is promised that there will be no railway subsidies and no bond guarantees. It is proposed to "utilize the session for the ordinary business of Parliament." It is not probable, however, that the session will pass without some interesting developments in the Public Accounts Committee, and there may be a demand for the appointment of a special committee for the investigation of war contracts. It is believed here to be quite probable that rather than face a possible exposure of wrong-doing, the Government will dissolve Parliament and go to the country.

WAR OFFICE TAKES OVER "ANTI" CORPS.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—The control of the British anti-aircraft corps has been transferred from Admiral Sir Percy Scott to the War Office, it was officially announced to-day.

Another Case of Reckless Driving

Another illustration of careless driving was provided on Saturday night at the corner of George and Simcoe streets, when Mr. J. A. McWilliams was struck and hurled to the ground by a horse and buggy with two young men. He had no chance to escape as the horse struck him without warning. He received first aid in Payne's drug store into which he was carried. He suffered minor injuries to his neck, head and knee. The two men in the buggy drove off without making effort to ascertain what injury they had caused. Once more it should be asserted that a more stringent administration of the traffice by-law would be welcome by the mere citizens who have to avoid careless and criminal drivers. Lenience to a certain degree may be something of a virtue, but beyond that it becomes dangerous.

Mr. O'Connell Gave A Fine Address

Mr. Daniel O'Connell gave a very interesting address at the meeting of the T.A.S. of the Sacred Heart Church yesterday afternoon. He went back to the origins of the various nations now composing the Entente Allies, tracing their characteristics and development, and showing that the various qualities manifested to-day, endurance, perseverance, bravery, etc., are inheritances from the Angles, Saxons, Normans, Celts, and other races from which the present nations have sprung. Mr. O'Connell was listened to with deep interest. His address was not only instructive, but it also had a fine patriotic flavour. Mr. O'Connell was tendered a hearty vote of thanks.

STAR ATTRACTION AT EMPIRE THEATRE

The "drawing cards" at the Empire Theatre this week are Clara Kemball in "Marrying For Money" and Marie Douro in her great success "The Morals of Moveland." It was Clara Kemball who sharing the honours at the Massachusetts Annual Ball of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League, was the leader in a spirited contest, for who was to have the honour of walking with the Governor of the State. She received 378,933 votes; Mary Pickford had more than a quarter million votes. Peterborough moving picture lovers will have an opportunity this week of seeing Clara Kemball in her great success, "Marrying For Money," at the Emire. Also, Marie Douro in "The Morals of Moveland." 14

SPOKE ON THE ETHICS OF THE PRESS

At a meeting of the Ministerial Association of Peterborough this morning, Mr. F. H. Dobbin gave a most interesting address on "The Ethics of the Press," which was thoroughly appreciated by the members, and which evoked an interesting discussion.

EXAMINER'S CHRISTMAS NUMBER MADE A HIT

The Examiner's Christmas number on Saturday evidently caught the eye of the public, as the complete edition of 6,000 copies was sold at 5:30 o'clock, and demands for hundreds of copies during the evening had to be answered in the negative. 4,800 went to the regular subscribers of The Examiner, and the extra 1,200 were sold as quickly as they were run off the press. The Examiner regrets that the orders that came in Saturday night and that are still coming in for that matter cannot be filled, but it is impossible to supply any more copies of the edition. The number was one of the most ambitious of its kind ever published in Peterborough—containing as it did, 800 military pictures, and it is unfortunate that the great demand for extra numbers could not be met. Many friends of the soldiers pictured in the edition were anxious to get copies to send away. It may be possible that a number of citizens who have finished with their Saturday Examiner have no further use for the number. If so they can help those who were unable to get enough copies, by returning them to The Examiner Office.

93rd BATTALION TO GUARD LOCAL MUNITION FACTORIES

Word Received From Divisional Headquarters Authorizing the Placing of Guards Around Buildings Where War Munitions Are Being Manufactured---Twenty-three Men Joined the 93rd Battalion Over the Week-end ---To-day's Military News.

The men of the 93rd Battalion will in the near future have an opportunity of learning considerably about that part of military life known as guard duty, inasmuch as word has been received from Col. Hemming, the officer commanding the 3rd Division, authorizing the placing of guards around the factories in Peterborough, where war munitions are being manufactured. There have been so many fires, explosions, etc., in the United States factories employed on similar work for the Allies that it has been deemed advisable to safeguard the Canadian factories, although hitherto they have been, with a few exceptions, singularly fortunate as far as "accidents" of the kind are concerned.

Lt.-Col. Mills, the commanding officer of the 93rd Battalion, has communicated with the heads of the various firms in Peterborough, where shells are being manufactured, as to the requirements. The factories to be guarded will include the Canadian General Electric Company, the Wm. Hamilton Co., and the Peterborough Machine Company, while it is altogether likely that the power houses may also be protected by armed guards.

Recruiting was brisk for the 93rd Battalion over the week-end, twenty-three men joining the Peterborough City and County Battalion Saturday and this morning, while there are a number of others to be examined this afternoon. Eight of these men joined at Norwood, where Capt. Neilson has been recruiting, and they will be trained there. Capt. Neilson has thirteen enrolled and a number coming on this week. He expects 25 or 30 before the end of this week.

Of the fifteen who joined at the local Armouries over the week-end, eight of them were residents of Peterborough, indicating that in spite of the heavy demands made upon it, the city is still holding up its own in supplying men for the front.

The list is as follows:
Arthur Charman, Keene, Ont.
Richard Lewis, Indian River.
Jas. Melville DeLong, Peterborough.
Robert S. Irwin, 579 Homewood Ave.
Wm. Joseph Gadua, Park St. South.
Wm. Michael Hales, Burleigh.
John Oliver Taylor, 46 Ware St.
Bert Williams, Havelock.
Edward Thos. Williams, Havelock.
Albert Edward Giles, Havelock.
Thos. Edward Barnes, King George St.
Herb. George Rumany, 79 Smith St.
Arthur Jubb, Western Avenue.
Norman Clarke, 56 Victoria Ave.
Percy M. Brew, Warsaw, Ont.

The Protestant members of the 93rd Battalion attended divine service at the Salvation Army Citadel yesterday morning when a bright, impressive service was held. Appropriate music was rendered and the battalion was addressed by Adjutant and Mrs. McElhiney, whose remarks were closely followed by the officers and men of the battalion.

Sergt. E. Brown, of A Company, 93rd Battalion, leaves to-night for Norwood to assist Capt Neilson in the training of the Norwood detachment of the 93rd.

"THE GODDESS"

The Royal Theatre has secured for to-day and Tuesday a first installment of one of the world's most artistic films, "The Goddess," Scenario, by the celebrated writer, Governor Morris. Two reels of this serial to-day. Also six other reels, new to-day, of high-class films.

Reckless Auto Driver Made Good His Escape

LIEUT. ART. ACKERMAN
Peterborough boy in the 2nd Battalion who has been awarded a commission.

Struck J. J. Tierney of the Auburn Woollen Mills at the Corner of George and Antrim Streets and Drove Hurriedly Away.

INJURIES NOT SERIOUS

The driver of the automobile that struck down Mr. J. J. Tierney, 141 Antrim street, at the corner of Antrim and George streets on Saturday evening, and left him lying on the road seriously injured, has not yet been apprehended by the police.

Mr. Tierney has been employed as the boss finisher at the Auburn Woollen Mills and had come to Peterborough from a United States mill about a year ago. On Saturday evening he had alighted from a George street car at Antrim street on his way home from a shopping trip down town when he was struck by an automobile travelling south. It is stated that the driver of the car slowed up slightly, but apparently only to make sure that he had hit some one, for he immediately turned at Edinburg street and has not been seen since.

Dr. Moir who attended him, stated this afternoon that he expects Mr. Tierney to be around again in a few days. He received a severe blow over the right temple and his nose was injured, but there is no concussion of the brain as was first feared. But apart from the injuries, it is the nature of the case that has stirred up a feeling that every effort should be made to run down the individual driving the automobile. It is generally known that many autoists have been utterly ignoring the traffic by-law, especially that clause dealing with passing street cars that have stopped, unless they happened to see a bluecoat in the vicinity.

Judge Huycke expressed very strong views in regard to infractions of the by-law, and public opinion has been developed by numerous experiences reflecting the indifference of drivers to the rights of pedestrians. From the reports of this case it shows both callousness and cowardice, and in order that an exemplary precedent may be established it is hoped the police are successful in their efforts.

Police Sergt. Brown was in the vicinity of Antrim and George streets at the time of the accident and with several members of the 93rd Battalion carried Mr. Tierney, who was unconscious, to his home.

IS PROMOTED TO LIEUTENANT'S RANK IN THE C. E. F.

Arthur Ackerman, of Peterboro', Who Enlisted as a Private in the 2nd Battalion, Has Been Awarded a Commission.

REWARD FOR GOOD SERVICE

The many friends in Peterborough of Arthur Ackerman, the youngest son of Mr. B. F. Ackerman, who has been at the Front with the 2nd Battalion ever since the first Canadian Davision went to France, will rejoice to learn that he has been given a commission as lieutenant in the Canadian Expeditionary Force. Lieut. Ackerman, who is a brother of Capt. Chas Ackerman, was a sergeant in the 7th Regiment when the war broke out, and enlisted with the 57th detachment as a private. When the 2nd Battalion went to France, he had corporal's stripes, and soon after reaching the trenches his good work was recognized by his promotion to the rank of sergeant. After the big battles of the spring, he was appointed acting lieutenant, and recently attended the Cadet School at the General Headquarters of the British Expeditionary Force, where he was successful in passing the taste, and he is now a full-fledged subaltern.

Word has been received from him that he has been in London recently securing his officer's equipment. It is thought that he will still be attached to the 2nd Battalion, although possibly not to the same company as the rest of the Peterborough men.

His friends will congratulate him upon his promotion the more heartily because it was secured for consistently good service at the Front.

CORRECT SERVICE

Dr W. H. Lacey, B.O., has a recognized reputation for fair and honourable dealing. His Glasses are an honest quality truthfully represented, a reputation for accuracy in results and efficient service. See Him and See Better.—410 George Street (opposite Examiner Office).

MONDAY, DEC. 13, 1915

ERIN GO BRAGH!

To use an expressive familiar form of phraseology, Ireland and Irishmen have "cut a lot of ice" in this war. In recruiting they have come nobly to the front, and thus we have Irish soldiers, an important element in the fighting forces of the Empire, battling for what they have long battled, liberty. Irishmen have an historical reputation for fondness for a "ruction,' and an historical reputation for being the best and most dashing fighters in the world. And they have not lost, nor failed to live up to their reputation. It is no surprise to have announced in to-day's despatches that the Irish division that took part in the battle of Lake Dorian in the Balkans "covered itself with glory." It is officially announced that "the division is reported to have fought well against very heavy odds, especially the Connaught Rangers, the Munster Fusiliers, and the Dublin Fusiliers"; and that they "saved the situation," a feat that has been fetched off by Irish troops on many a stricken field in the past. These troops in the Balkans represented a country that the deluded Kaiser, when he madly decided upon war, counted upon as being upon his side and fighting his battles, Irish troops have, on the contrary, driven many a nail in the coffin of militarism and organized tyranny, and may be counted upon to drive home the last nail. Now more than ever we crown the Irish soldier with the wreath of valour and victory, and more heartily than ever cry "Erin Go Bragh!

POSTAGE ON SOLDIERS' PARCELS

In another column is found the detailed particulars of a most creditable and most desirable arrangement in reference to the postage rates on parcels sent by Canadians to Canadian soldiers on active service in either France or Flanders. It is especially welcome at this Christmas season when gifts are impressed with a larger importance, and impulse translates in terms of gifts the beautiful spirit and significance of the Christmas season. Though, perhaps, the announcement of the arrangement may come too late to have gifts, under the new postal rates, reach the trenches or camp on Christmas Day, the fact that the Christmas season extends to Epiphany, January 6th, will permit of the spirit of the season —the main thing—being deferred, too.

The Postmaster-General of Canada announces that he has made an arrangement with the British Government by which all sorts of parcels sent to Canadian soldiers in France or Flanders from any part of Canada will be sent at the same rate of postage as if they were sent from England. Details of the rates will be found in our news columns. It will mean a great advantage to the Canadian friends and benefactors of the soldier boys on service and a great saving in postage expenditure. Heretofore citizens have paid at the rate of 40 cents postage on a pound parcel sent to France—24 cents rate to Great Britain and 16 cents added for postal charges for forwarding to France, making the 40 cents rate. It will be well for those concerned to cut out from to-night's issue the schedule printed in our news columns and keep it for reference. It has heretofore been found necessary to repeat many times over items of information in relation to military matters before the public considered itself sufficiently informed. Preserving the schedule of rates referred to will be found a matter of convenience, hereafter; for there is nothing to indicate that the rates announced will not be permanent.

We all dread a bodily paralysis, and would make use of every contrivance to avoid it, but none of us is troubled about the paralysis of a soul.—Epittetus.

THE DOUBLE ENTENTE.

There was an effective entente-cordial, defensive, and offensive—between Great Britain and France before the war began, and it is now and has been nearly a year and a half in full effect and unbroken harmony. The chief racial elements in Canada, the English-speaking and the French-speaking, have almost had the same cordiality of co-operation and unity of sentiment. But unfortunately we have things in that matter not quite as they should be. We have a pharisaic section of our English-speaking population asserting its superior loyalty to the Empire and its institutions, and conducting pin-pricking criticism of their French speaking compatriots. On the other hand, we have a section, thank goodness a small one, of the French-speaking population disclaiming responsibility of Canadians to assist the Empire in its hour of need. Speaking at the Monument Nationale, Montreal, Sir Wilfred Laurier thus spoke of the duty of subordinating conflicting sentiments and opinions to the work of establishing in Canada between the two races, an entente, cordial and real:

"During my forty years of public life I have always proclaimed in all parts of the country that I was proud of my French origin, but at the same time I never denied, but always affirmed, my admiration for Britain and the institutions of Great Britain and held them superior to all others. I have long cherished the idea that some day these two great nations, France and Britain, would understand each other, that the one with its idealism and the other with its practical ideas should be at the head of civilization. I am glad that I have lived to see this entente cordiale, but it is far from being as complete as it might be, and I will admit that here in Canada it is less complete than it is in Europe. Here our different peoples have collisions of sentiment. Those who are real patriots should set themselves the mission of reconciliating and making these old divisions disappear. When our young soldiers come back from the Front—Desrosiers, Quintal, Deserres, and Asselin himself—they will have a sovereign duty to make these discords disappear."

Great as has been and will be the cost in life and substance of this war, it will be something small in the way of equivalent if it will have destroyed the discords that interfere with the complete homogeniety of our population in spirit and in sentiment, and consequently in national cooperation for the promotion of the national good. Men of both chief races who can in time of war rise superior to petty prejudices and trivial clash of sentiment and opinion, and fight side by side in the battle line for the triumph of the fruitful principles of national and international harmony, give an example to the respective home factions whose misguided actions tend to keep up, if not a barrier, at least a jarring element, an irritating break, like "sweet bells jangled out of tune and harsh," in the harmony that should reign supreme. In usual social intercourse, when we come to know each other better, we find ourselves lacking in many of the qualities which, largely fancied, kept us asunder and uncordial. May not and will not the closer acquaintance, the more intimate mutual knowledge our English-speaking and French-speaking Canadian soldiers gain of each other in the long lines of battle; and the more intimate knowledge of each other which our cooperation in this time of war is bringing, result in the death of the distrust that small factions of our peoples have cherished? Then with mutual recriminations silenced and a true and generous spirit of national cooperation engendered, Canada will come out of the white-heated crucible of this awful war purged of common faults of pin-pricking irritation—trifles in themselves, but leading to the calamity of division—equipped to meet and make use of new opportunities, and achieve new triumphs of national accomplishment and progress that are only possible with a solidly united and harmonious people.

DURATION OF WAR.

A speculative interpreter of Scripture has worked out a prophecy as to a three and a half years' duration of the war from the following passages in the Book of the Revelation. Here is his reasoning or calculation:

Thirteenth chapter of Revelation, eighteenth verse:

"Here is wisdom. Let him that hath understanding count the number of the beast; for it is the number of a man; and his number is six hundred, three score and six," which equals 666.

Six being the key number, is added to the numerical value (according to Greek numeration), of each of the following letters:

K—11 (11th letter alphabet) and	6	116
A— 1	6	12
I— 9	6	90
S—19	6	198
E— 5	6	66
R—18	6	186
Total number of the beast		666

Thirteenth chapter of Revelation, fifth verse:

"And there was given unto him a mouth speaking great things and blasphemies; and power was given unto him to continue forty and two months."

This gives the duration of the war as three and a half years i.e., ending February 1, 1916.

MARKING THE BATTLEFIELD GRAVES OF FALLEN SOLDIERS

Little is known or heard of, comparatively speaking, of the work being done at the front by the Graves Registration Commission, or the "G.R.C.," as it is familiarly called. Some account of the work has been given in the "Scotsman," and the writer says that the duty of the "G.R.C." is to register every British grave, with particulars as to position and identification marks, in addition to the name, number, rank and regiment of the occupant.

Every Saturday each chaplain, officer, or other person who has officiated at a burial is required by General Order to send by post all particulars to the head of the Commission. It is required by the same authority that every grave be marked so as to be easily identifiable pending the erection of a cross bearing all particulars. The course recommended is to write all details on a sheet of paper, then having placed it in a bottle carefully stoppered, to bury the bottle neck downwards in the filled-in-soil, so that only the bottom can be seen.

In a few days if the man's regiment does not take responsibility for marking the grave there comes a cross from the "G.R.C.," bearing the necessary particulars. It is thus possible to trace practically every grave, and to indicate in minimum time where men have been buried.

"But the G.R.C. does more. It is prepared to send a photograph of any grave to mother or wife or other near relative. In order to obtain such a photograph application has to be made to the chaplain attached to the man's unit, giving name, rank, and number, with the date of death.

"I was privileged (adds the writer) to be the means of obtaining some of these photographs, and can testify that they are satisfactory in every way. I confess that it is with a sense of pride in the humane feelings of the Army authorities that I have written this paragraph. They do not regard our soldiers as mere fodder for cannon. They remember that each is loved by some one, and do all that sympathetic organization can to soften the bitterness of grief.

THE ENLISTMENT RATIO OF CANADIAN TO BRITISH BORN

A discussion has been going on in the London Times regarding the number of Canadian-born soldiers in the ranks of the forces Canada has sent or is sending, to the war. The Times, in an editorial, lays particular emphasis on the claim that the proportion of Canadian-born now joining the ranks is much larger than at the beginning, and sees in this a proof that Canadians, born in the Dominion, "are realising as never before their citizenship of the Empire." The Times says it was not to be expected that men who were born in Canada should have the same immediate impulse as British settlers to hurry into the ranks, and the call to personal service was therefore slow to them but now they have heard the call and are answering it. It expresses gratitude for such a perfection of loyalty.

Lady Drummond, in a letter commenting on this editorial, takes the ground, as one of the Canadian-born that Canadians were not any slower that the British-born in Canada to feel the impulse to join the fighting legions, but that "family duties and obligations, and often business connections, made it impossible for many of them to leave on the instant, as the sons of Britain who had gone out to Canada of recent years could do."

Yet thousands of the Canadian-born were in the very first contingent, and Lady Drummond expresses the hope that in view of this, whatever "Little Canada" or "Little England" spirit remains, will die down for ever.

We must agree that Lady Drummond takes the more correct view. In the discussions on the composition of Canada's forces one point has all along been overlooked — and even Lady Drummond overlooks it. This is that when the war broke out there was a very large number of British reservists in Canada, and these were given the opportunity of joining the Canadian forces to give "seasoning" to them. Indeed, they were given the preference in recruiting, and rightly so. Seeing the large immigration from England it was only to be expected that a large proportion of British-born would flock to the Colours, and be only too glad of the opportunity to fight alongside Canadian friends and acquaintances. The British-born were needed as well as the Canadian-born. How better could they go than side by side with Canadians? But because they formed part of the Canadian contingents, it must not be inferred that they went because Canadians did not. They went with Canadians, "shoulder to shoulder."—Montreal Herald.

HISTORY AND AIM OF THE PETERBOROUGH CHORAL SOCIETY

The society was formed in January, 1912. At that time there was a branch of the St. George's Society of Englishmen in Peterborough, and it was at one of the meetings that the forming of a choral society was projected. A public meeting was called and the new society launched under the name of the St. George's Choral Society. The first concert was given in the Grand Opera House on April 23rd, 1912, and was a great success musically and financially. The following season, Handel's 'Messiah' was given on the 30th of April, 1913, and again in April the following year, another oratorio of Handel's was put before the public, namely, 'Judas Maccabaeus.' At the annual meeting held shortly afterward it was decided by a vote of the members to change the name to the Peterborough Choral Society, as by so doing it would broaden the scope of the society, as well as avoid confusion with the St. George's Anglican church, which had come into existence in the meantime. In the fall of the same year Judas Maccabaeus was repeated and proceeds were given to the Patriotic Fund, something close on $200.00 being handed over to the Patriotic committee.

The society is entirely undenominational and at the present time the membership is composed of singers from practically every church in the city, as well as several singers who do not belong to any choir.

The officers of the society are elected at each annual meeting and hold office for one year. The membership fee is $1.00 per annum for gentlemen and 50c. per annum for ladies.

Part of the constitution of the society reads as follows:

"This society shall be formed to promote the study and practice of good choral music. Residents of the city who follow things musical will be sure to have noted the upward tendency of the music given in the various church choirs during the past few years. Apart from difficult works like the 'Messiah,' there have been lesser oratorios and cantatas given by different church choirs and friends. One of the causes which has brought this about is without doubt the increased reading ability obtained through constant practice in reading which members of the Choral Society get in studying these works, thus making it possible for them to read with ease music which otherwise would have seemed rather difficult. In putting on these classic oratorios the object of the society is not to make money, but to give to Peterborough that which the large cities have, but which in a smaller city like ours can be given only by a society which has the support of the whole of the musical public, as the expense is so great. It might be well to mention that the members of the society as a body, or individually, are always willing to give their services to any charitable or patriotic organization to assist in raising special funds for their need.

It is to be hoped that the public will give to the society its hearty support in its latest oratorio, Handel's "Messiah," on Tuesday night, which will be given in St. Paul's Presbyterian church.—Com.

A Big Concert At The Grand

A treat is in store for the music-lovers of Peterborough on Friday night of this week when the band of the 93rd Battalion, assisted by vocal and other talent, principally from the ranks of the 93rd, will give a special concert in the Grand Opera House in aid of the Band Fund. A high class programme will be presented by the band, which has been strengthened materially, and vastly improved since the last time they were heard in concert. Selections from "The Bohemian Girl," "Mariana" and other similar numbers will be presented by the band under the direction of Bandmaster Hughes. The admission will be 25c. to all parts of the house, and tickets may be had from members of the band.

A GRAPHIC PICTURE OF A BATTLE

General Headquarters, France.—It was in May, just six months ago, that the Notre Dame de Lorette ridge fell into the hands of the French in the course of the great offensive then our Ally then made in conjunction with our thrust at Festubert. From the 9th to the close of the month the armies of General Foch were incessantly engaged in fighting of the fiercest description for the ridge, which was finally torn from the Germans by sheer weight of artillery and the incomparable dash of the French infantry. It dominates the whole of the surrounding country-side, jutting out into the plain of the Scheldt in a long spur, with little clumps of trees thickly clustered in its gullies.

A walk of several kilometres over very slippery ground brought us to the lower slopes of the ridge. The whole fact of the slope up to the summit was a maze of old and new trenches, dug out of the white chalk, enmeshed on every side by a complicated network of barbed wire, French and German. The debris of the May fighting was still strewn thickly in every direction, and the whole picture, seen under the lowering sky of a November day, was most desolate.

Huge holes, half filled with stagnant water, marked the bursting of some of the many thousands of shells that the French poured into the position before sending the infantry forward to the assault. In some the bones of dead men were floating, here a skull, there the part of a leg, the foot still in the jackboot of the German soldier. Everywhere were articles of equipment; German helmets, all with the badges and spikes removed, German knapsacks with the fur backing, broken bayonets, smashed rifles, encrusted with rust and dirt.

School Teacher—"Why is a certain part of the church called the altar?" Willie—"Because it is where people change their names."

Dog Hero of Austerlitz.

In the annals of the French army Mustache is still a celebrity. Mustache was one of the dogs used in the Italian campaign when Napoleon was first consul. He saved the French army from a night surprise and annihilation. Later he tracked and captured a spy who had secured valuable information.

But this dog's crowning achievement was at the battle of Austerlitz. The standard bearer of the regiment had just fallen dead. Mustache's teeth and an Austrian soldier's hand grasped the tattered banner simultaneously. Mustache flew at his enemy's throat and bore him down. Then, seizing the flag, he carried it back to the regiment.

Napoleon gave Mustache the highest decoration for his valor. He met a soldier's death not long after this, racing forward beside the flag, leading the regiment in a furious charge.

Curious Street Names.

The list of curious street names is inexhaustible. Bermondsey possesses a Pickle Herring street. Near Gray's inn there is to be found a Cold Bath square. Most of the Nightingale lanes and Love lanes are hidden ironically enough in the slums of the east end.

But for really bizarre street names one should go to Brussels. The Short Street of the Long Chariot, the Street of the Red Haired Woman and the Street of Sorrows are remarkable enough to catch the least observant eye. The Street of the One Person is, as one might guess, considerably narrower than Whitehall. But the cream of Brussels street names surely belongs to the Street of the Uncracked Silver Cocoanut. This in the original appears as one ponderous thirty-six letter word. —London Chronicle.

An Artist's Struggles.

Professor von Herkomer, the famous painter, had such a struggle to gain a living in his early days that had it not been for his inexhaustible stock of patience and self confidence he would probably have abandoned art entirely. He sold his first picture for 2 guineas and later on earned for a short time a couple of pounds weekly for a woodcut which he supplied to a comic paper. This modest salary coming to a stop, he was at his wits' end to know what to do. He applied to a troupe of minstrels for an engagement as zither player, but in vain, and then took to designing carpets. For some years he battled with poverty, achieving no success until he obtained employment on a weekly illustrated journal.—London Globe.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

AUNT NAN'S MISSION

By M. QUAD.

[Copyrighted, by Associated Literary Press.]

Being she had never married, and being she had reached the age of forty-five, most of the people of the village of Millville spoke of Miss Spooner as Aunt Nan, and she raised no objection. She had an income, and she lived alone. It was said of her that she was a disappointed woman. She was, but not in the sense that she had loved and lost. So far as any one knew she had never loved at all, though several widowers had cleaned their muddy feet on her doormat and tried to interest her in affairs matrimonial. Just what was the matter with Miss Spooner was that she was a woman with a mission, and did not know exactly what that mission was. Up to the age of thirty she had thought it was to convert the heathen of China and Africa, but the returns were so uncertain that she had finally decided that she was on the wrong track. Then it dawned on her to take up the temperance question, but here she was handicapped. Old Sol Pritchard was the only one in the village that got drunk, and his wife said that she would rather have him come home drunk than sober, as he broke fewer dishes.

There is nothing more discouraging than feeling that you have a mission and having that mission dodging you and keeping you in suspense. The only thing that can be done, however, is to wait. Miss Spooner waited, and at length her mission hove into view. It was in the form of a tramp. It called at her house for something to eat. She set it down at the table and bade it fill up. While it was doing so she ran into a neighbor's to see if that neighbor couldn't spare an old coat, and when she returned the tramp had departed; also her watch and chain and other things.

Miss Spooner was justly indignant. She gave the alarm, the fellow was overhauled, and before night he was in jail at the county seat, six miles away, on a three months' sentence. The justice of the peace, the constable and others applauded her action, and for two or three days she felt that she had done her duty. Then the still small voice began to whisper to her. She had tempted the wayfarer. He had probably been driven to trampism by misfortune. He might have been an honest man up to this time. In fact, she made a dozen other excuses for him, and all at once it dawned on her that here was her long sought mission. There would be more joy over saving one tramp than in sending a million tracts to the heathen. She recalled that the man looked lonely and downcast, as if he realized that the world was against him, and she wasn't quite sure that he didn't have tears in his eyes as he sat down to the spread.

You probably know how conscience works when it gets out of leading strings, and it is useless to relate that within a week Aunt Nan was asking admission to the county jail. She had a friend in town and had driven over to tell her all about it and to stop for a few days. She began with the tramp by begging his pardon. He would have been no tramp at all if he hadn't taken his cue from this. He pleaded sudden impulse and stoutly asserted that he had turned about to restore the property when arrested. It was the only theft he had ever committed. He had been poor, but honest.

There was a second visit and a third. The tramp grew more mellow at every visit. He was ready to and did promise everything asked of him, including truth, sobriety, industry, economy, ambition and excelsior. Then Aunt Nan went home and enlisted the aid of her minister in the mission. They worked for a pardon, but failed to get it. No one else seemed to have a spark of sympathy for a downtrodden man who wanted to climb up. Then came a mental struggle in which the minister did not participate. It was all Miss Spooner's secret. She wanted that tramp out of jail that he might lose no time beginning a new life.

When Miss Spooner visited the jail again she carried a couple of files with her, and they were left there. She had convinced herself that her mission was greater than the law. It took the tramp two nights to file through the bars, but on the third night, as the spinster sat alone in her house with swelling heart, he entered by the back door. She was expecting him. She was to give him $10 to go far away and make a new start. He was to keep her in his thoughts as he climbed up and write her once a fortnight. The money was ready for him, as well as a package of provisions. She was giving him sisterly advice as to his future conduct when all of a sudden she was thrown to the floor. Before she could scream a second time there was a gag in her mouth, and then her hands and feet were tied, and she was helpless.

Then the tramp hummed a cheerful tune as he began a search of the house. He got her jewelry again; he got $90 from a bureau drawer; he got her Sunday dress and her silver spoons and forks. She had some currant wine down cellar, and he drank three bottles and sat down beside her and delivered a brief lecture on missions and ended by calling her an idiot. Then he walked out and went over and stole the minister's horse and buggy and drove away. Three days later Aunt Nan called on the good man to ask:

"Parson, do you really believe I had a mission?"

"If you did you made a fool of it!" was his blunt reply as he thought of his lost horse and buggy.

PARTRIDGES FOR SALE!

They Are to Be Had Under Cover in All the Cities.

"Good evening, sir—what would you like? I'd recommend the smelts, sir." When the spotless-aproned waiter uttered the above in a smirky stage whisper at a well-known central restaurant to the companion who had persuaded him to stay downtown for evening dinner the astonished citizen "looked eight ways for Sunday." He happened to be perfectly aware that his friend never partook of fish of any sort, an unusual idiosyncrasy in which he shared himself. His friend "Charley'd" the waiter and had returned an amiable "good evening" from the lady cashier, so it was plain that he was on familiar terms.

"Make that order two, Charley," pronounced the habitue. But it seems that the latter had not fully departed from his senses, like his acquaintance feared. "We're in rare luck," the other nudged closer to gleat, "it's partridge."

By the gracious laws of the land, partridge—meaning both the red-drab-brown, haughty-stepping, ruffed or ruffled grouse, also his cousin of backland Ontario, known as the Canada grouse or spruce partridge—may not legally be shot, snared, or otherwise taken into your possession before October 14. But yet in a local restaurant, to be truthful—in dozens of them, here was this delicacy of the epicure's table boldly masquerading under a "fishy" disguise several days beforehand. The supply was no stingy one, for each order presently appeared crowding a generous plate, with extended wing and thigh, some plump breast, and underneath all this rich odorous brownness loomed the highly savored dressing—one-half a fat partridge each. Price? Scarcely more than an ordinary meal of roast beef or prosaic ham and eggs.

Of course the fact is that the illegal sale of game goes on each season all around us; one has only to know the ropes and be unscrupulous enough to take advantage. Answer the questions: Why do staid churchgoers smuggle? Why do boys rob orchards? Why do blind pigs flourish? Then you know the causes prompting people who otherwise live exemplarily to become outlaws in the partridge season.

Representations made to the Ontario Government that this finest of our native game birds was in dire danger of extermination led to legislation by which for three seasons, up to the fall of 1910, partridge shooting was prohibited in toto. Thereupon Mrs. Partridge got busy to such good purpose that the rules were relaxed and hunters were permitted to go out after the marvelously multiplied broods; but it was still declared illegal for partridge to be exposed for sale. Such is the law to-day. There have been four years of this attempt to curb the pot-hunter, who does not hunt for pastime or for sustenance, but for profit, and Canada is in a fair way to continue his nefarious bird-murdering until there will no more be the brown chap of the mossy bush, whose thunderous whirring of the wings and dart-like flight has so often thrilled the delighted soul of the real Ontario sportsman.—C. M. C. in Toronto Star Weekly.

Smokeless Powder.

Smokeless powder dates back some fifty years, but it was not until about 1886 that it attained its real efficiency and sprang into general use. It must be understood that even the best of this powder is not absolutely smokeless. It is not smoky enough, however, to "do any harm," and as compared with the old powder may well be called "smokeless."

A CURE FOR BRONCHITIS

We Have Been Selling in Peterboro for Many Years a Remedy We Guarantee

Please read the following letter and we promise if you buy a bottle of Vinol from us and are the least bit dissatisfied, we will cheerfully return your money.

Woodstock, Ill. "I suffered from bronchitis, had a very bad cough and a pain in my chest, was weak and tired all the time. It seemed almost impossible for me to go on with my work. I tried different remedies without benefit, also cough medicines, but my druggist recommended Vinol, and it gave me almost instant relief. Its continued use cured my bronchitis and built me up so that I feel like a different man." Charles Botts.

The reason that cough syrups fail in such cases is because they are palliative only, while Vinol removes the cause, being a constitutional remedy in which are combined the healing elements of fresh cods' livers, together with tonic iron and beef peptone. It strengthens and revitalizes the entire system and assists nature to expel the disease. Our faith in Vinol is shown in the above offer.

World's Oldest Industry.

The pearl fisheries of Ceylon are said to be the oldest industry in the world. For over 3,000 years the pearl oyster harvest has been gathered by the natives, who, skilled in diving, have handed down the industry from one generation to the next. Pearl fishing in Ceylon today is somewhat of a speculation. The greatest care is taken lest when the shells of the bivalves are opened any of the precious gems be lost or stolen. A very strict watch is kept over the natives who are employed in this kind of work, but in spite of the greatest precautions some of the smaller stones are frequently concealed. The refuse from the shells is very carefully examined subsequent to this first examination. Even the dried dust of the oyster is carefully sifted.

Grazed in the Fog.

It is not usual for a ship on the high seas to elect to cast anchor on the deck of a passing steamer, but that is what a four masted schooner did once in the Atlantic. The two vessels grazed in the fog, and the "catted" port anchor of the schooner caught in the steamer's deck "by a fluke." It fastened to an engineer's stateroom in such a manner as to bar his exit, but fortunately the chain parted just as the room was being ripped into fragments. The schooner followed the steamer to its destination to recover her anchor.

AN HONEST MAN'S THE NOBLEST WORK OF GOD

Special Anniversary Services at Knox Presbyterian Church —Rev. R. McLeod, of Ingersol, Delivers an Inspiring Message

The fifth anniversary of the new Knox Presbyterian Church was fittingly celebrated yesterday by special services conducted by the Rev. Mr. McLeod of Ingersoll, a young preacher of promise, who ingratiated himself into the hearts of those who were fortunate enough to be present.

One cannot enter this imposing edifice without marvelling at the phenomenal growth of the church. Its beginning truly was humble enough, having been housed first in a stable (on the east side of Aylmer Street between Charlotte and King Streets), but it was mothered by two noble women, the late Mrs. Jas. A. Hall and Miss Charlotte Dickson, and ably assisted financially by another woman, whose life has meant so much to Peterborough, the late Mrs. Nicholls, until now it stands as a living monument to their untiring zeal and the unselfish efforts of a few willing workers from St. Paul's.

In 1893 the present property was purchased. In 1903 the Sunday School building was erected, and on the first of January, 1907, the present congregation became an independent organization, having been conducted before that date as a mission of St. Paul's. The corner-stone of the new church was laid April 17th, 1910, and the opening ceremonies took place on the 10th of December of the same year.

Yesterday completed five years of splendid progress, and the congregation look forward to years of unlimited opportunity. The preacher for the day was the Rev. Mr. McLeod of Ingersoll, who delivered two inspiring sermons. His subject in the morning was "God's Workmanship," as found in Ephesians 2, 10: "For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God had before ordained that we should walk in them."

Said he, the most sublime act of God's creative power consisted not in fashioning the starry heavens, the glory of the world, or the infinite grandeur of the mighty oceans, but in taking character, a human life, broken by sin, and creating that anew, breathing into it spiritual life. Truly "an honest man's the noblest work of God"—a man or woman created in the image of God, who has been dedicated to the service of Christ. The greatest and noblest thing is the spirit of Christ incarnate in a man or woman.

The workmanship of God has been marred, however, sadly marred. Something has gone wrong with the universe; the times are out of joint; the battlefields of Europe are deluged with the noblest blood of the land; the fair fields of Flanders and France are sadly scarred; the world is filled with sorrow; the beauty of the world has been marred. Something has been going on in recent years, a spirit which has forgotten the supreme thing in life. Man has been degraded by the forces of sin, the most potent of which might be the liquor traffic, which has for its aim and purpose the marring of Gods work. The question is, Can it be restored?

Only Christ can restore the world. "I am come that they might have life and that they might have it more abundantly." Again He says: "I am the good shepherd," and farther on refers to the ravages of the wolf. He is the good shepherd seeking to preserve the life of the nation. Wolves are abroad: Kings whose subjects are made to toil that they may enrich themselves; the arch traitor, the Kaiser, whose destructive work has caused millions of broken hearts over loved ones slaughtered on the altar of selfishness to satisfy the lust of a few war lords.

But Christ can restore. "I saw a new heaven and a new earth." We look for a new heaven and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness. This war can only end in the vindication and glorification of Jesus Christ.

Continuing the idea of transformation, he said, Christ can take a weak, useless man and solidify his character and make him strong and valuable in His service. Peter, the impulsive, sometimes cowardly man, became the supreme hero of the faith of Jesus Christ. He can not only develop our potential powers, but He can give us new powers for greater service.

Christ restores completely. His work is a marvel when we consider the material He has to work with. Truly the noblest work of God is the restoration of a man or woman, marred by sin, into a devoted worker for Christ.

Florence Nightingale, the greatest of nurses, risking her life on the field of battle, and Edith Cavell giving her life for her country, kindle the imagination of the world. God restores men and women into the image of God, giving them a new outlook.

In conclusion, the preacher exhorted his hearers, as they entered on a new year of church work, to dedicate themselves afresh to Christ, the master workman.

Autoists Were Heavily Fined

Magistrate Dumble Imposes Two Separate Fines of Fifty Dollars

"A drunken man is incapable of driving a deadly thing like an automobile," said Police Magistrate Dumble in this morning's police court. The foregoing remarks were addressed to William Thompson of Lakehurst, who pleaded guilty to a charge of driving an automobile while in a state of intoxication. The court emphasized the statement with a fine of fifty dollars and one week in gaol. Thompson said he could produce the fine in half an hour, but was unwilling to spend a week in gaol, as home ties in the way of a large quantity of farm stock demanded his attention. The Magistrate reduced the sentence to a fine of fifty dollars.

A similar sentence was imposed on his companion. Chief Thompson said the two men took turns in driving the car complained of. "It will do the whole establishment good," commented the Magistrate, when he learned that he was employed in a local garage.

AN "AT HOME" AT ST GEORGE'S RECTORY

An "At Home" by the ladies of St. George's Church was held at the rectory on Thursday afternoon and evening. A large number of the members of the congregation were present, and enjoyed a social time. An informal programme of music was given. This included selections by some members of the 93rd Band, as well as vocal numbers by Misses Price, Bryant, Jubb, and Mr. Walter Farr. Miss Gladys Joyes contributed a recitation.

Dainty refreshments were served and altogether a very delightful time was spent.

Suicide Epidemic Among Germans On Riga Front

PETROGRAD via London, Dec. 13—Another epidemic of suicides is reported among the German forces in the vicinity of Dvinsk by prisoners captured in that region, according to the Birzheviya Vedomosty, an afternoon daily newspaper.

Nine officers, including the commander of a battalion, are said to have ended their lives within a period of twelve days. Cold and the hardships of the campaign are alleged to be the cause.

Polish and Serbian landstrums captured from the Austro-German forces along the southern front report that a new alignment of Austro-Germans has been removed to forage food and stores from the captured territory at points near the frontier.

SAINT LUCY

Is Commemorated This Day—A Sketch of the Life and Death of This Virgin-Martyr

Written for the Examiner by Frank Russell

How many of the women and girls of this city who have been baptized by the name of Lucy, know anything of the martyr after whom they have been named?

Lucy, is, of course, the English form of the Italian and Latin Lucia, signifying light.

Lucy Not a Popular Name.

The name, Lucy, somehow, does not appear to be a popular one, although it is to be found in all modern languages whether as Lucy, Lucia, Lucille, Lucette, Lucie or Lucinda.

Whether popular or otherwise, this name, however, will go

Down to Posterity,

for it has been immortalized both by Donezetti in his never-to-be-forgotten Italian opera "Lucia di Lammermoor," as also by the greatest of Scottish novelists—Sir Walter Scott—whose charming romance, "The Bride of Lammermoor," makes Lucy his heroine. Lucy, the daughter of Sir George Ashton, was required by her relatives to marry a neighbouring grandee. She, however, was secretly betrothed to Edgar, the Master of Ravenswood, between whose house and her father's there was an ancient feud. The latter had occasion to go abroad. The tongue of evil gossips declared that her lover was false to her—the old, old, story of spiteful, malicious, or jealous interference in love affairs. Eventually she was persuaded into marriage. Edgar turns up—alas! too late—and Lucy kills herself on the wedding-night. This is only a very brief, and poor, epitome of a romance, well worth reading.

Who Saint Lucy Was.

Saint Lucy, whose day is commemorated as on this day, by the whole of the Catholic Church — Anglican, Roman and Greek—was a Virgin and Martyr.

She was born at Syracuse, in Sicily, about the year of our Lord 283. She was the daughter of rich and noble parents. Her father, who died in her very early years, was a Roman, but her mother, Eutychia, most probably, judging from the name, was a Grecian. For many years this lady suffered from a haemorrhage; consequently she made a pilgrimage to the famous Shrine of St. Agatha, at Catania. There, in fact, she was cured, and her daughter Lucy, then persuaded her to carry out her pet object and distribute a very considerable portion of their wealth among the poor.

She Offended Her Betrothed.

This action so angered an unworthy individual to whom Lucy, greatly against her wishes, was betrothed, that he denounced her as practising Christianity to the Governor of Sicily, one Paschasius. This occurred in the year 303 at a time when the Emperor of Rome—Diocletian—was carrying on a fierce persecution against the Christians. She was condemned to be subjected to shameful outrage, but she stood immovable, and no force could remove her from the spot where she stood. Faggots were then heaped around her; these were set on fire, but again she was saved in a miraculous manner, even boiling oil and burning pitch had no power to hurt her.

At the end she met her death, being beheaded by the sword. Before her death she foretold the punishment of the Governor Paschasius, the speedy ending of the persecution, and the end of Diocletian's reign. By her death she won her crown of virginity and martyrdom.

She Was Greatly Venerated.

There is no doubt as to the great veneration shown to St. Lucy by the Early Church. Her name is one of the few female saints mentioned in the Canon of St. Gregory, who composed special prayers for her. She is also mentioned in both prose and verse. The venerable Bede also wrote her history in his "Martyrology."

Her Remains.

For four hundred years her remains lay undisturbed in Sicily, until that island was captured. The Saint's body was then transferred to Italy. Lated on, in 972, the Emperor Otho removed them to Metz, where they were laid to rest in the Church of St. Vincent. Her head seems to have travelled about, for we read of it being presented, in the year 1578, by the Venetians to King Louis, the Twelfth, of France, by whom it was deposited in the Church of Bourges.

In Art.

Many paintings represent her bearing her eyes in her hand, or on a salver; also with the point of a sword protruding through her neck. Some artists have represented her as blind, but nothing reliable appears in his history to justify this notion. She is mentioned in a great many works, and an ancient inscription, discovered at Syracuse, indicates her festival.

A Curious Legend

regarding St. Lucy is, that her lover complaining to her that her beautiful eyes haunted him day and night, she cut them out of her head, and sent them to him, begging him no longer to molest her but to leave her to pursue a life of devotional exercises. It is added, that as a recompense for this act of self-sacrifice, her eyes were restored to her by Almighty power, when they were more beautiful than ever.

In consequence of this tradition St. Lucy is frequently implored in intercession by persons who are afflicted with opthalmic troubles.

"Stuck on St. Lucia's Thorn"

Is an expression, more or less, in vogue. It signifies on the rack, in torment, annoyed, much perplexed. The "thorn" referred to is in reality the point of the sword thrust through the Saint's neck, as depicted in most of the paintings of St. Lucy.

Cervantes, (in Don Quixote), makes use of the expression—"If I don't recruit . . . I shall be stuck on St. Lucia's thorn."

MRS. POST ACCEPTS $6,000,000 SETTLEMENT

Daughter Gets Bulk of Cereal Food Manufacturer's Estate.

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., Dec. 11.—Mrs. C. W. Post widow of the Battle Creek cereal food manufacturer, announces that she has agreed to accept $6,000,000 cash for her rights in the Post estate. In addition, she will retain ownership of valuable real estate here and at Santa Barbara, Cal.

Mrs. Marjorie Post Close, daughter of C. W. Post, will receive the bulk of the estate, including the cereal company's plant here and the Post company's cotton manufacturing plant at Post City, Texas. The daughter's share, it is understood, will be about $20,000,000.

Suit to determine the ownership of the Post properties recently was started here. According to Mrs. Post as the result of the amicable settlement, there will be no litigation.

BUTTER AND FAT CARDS.

Ordinance Regarding Germans' Consumption Passed by Federal Council.

BERLIN, Dec. 11. — The Federal Council has authorized municipalities to issue butter and fat cards, similar to the bread cards which have been in use for several months, to regulate the consumption of these articles. The ordinance making this provision, which becomes effective on Jan. 1, also contains regulations under which it will be possible to reserve the cheaper butter and fats for the poor.

The commission organized by the Council to equalize the distribution of the butter, supply is authorized to require large producers to sell part of their output, up to 15 per cent. of the total for resale to municipalities where shortages exist.

Police Participated In a Raid

Premises Occupied by Joseph La Vasseur Were Raided on Saturday Evening

On Saturday evening, Chief of Police Thompson, accompanied by a number of his men, also License Inspector Stewart, visited the premises occupied by Joseph LaVasseur, at 418 George street, and seized a quantity of liquor. The names of a number of young men found on the premises were secured. The case will come up tomorrow morning for hearing.

HAVE DONE MUCH USEFUL WORK

Annual Meeting of the Berean Bible Class of Knox Church

The annual meeting of the Berean Bible class of Knox church was held on Dec. 9th at the home of Mrs. Roger, 309 Park street, when the following officers were elected for the coming year:

President—Mrs. Cruikshanks.
Vice-President—Miss L. Fair.
Secretary—Mrs. Humpage.
Assistant—Miss Libby.
Treasurer—Mrs. Hillier.
Teacher—Mrs. Roger.
Missonary committee —Mrs. Laing, Mrs. Trussler, Miss Libby.
Membership committee— Miss Gillies.
Visiting committee— Mrs. Hillier, Mrs. Lyburn and Mrs. Chambers.
Flower committee— Miss Conquest, Mrs. Foster.
Substitute teachers— Mrs. Trussler and Miss Barclay.

The report for 1915 shows that the class has done very effective and useful service. Several cases of distress were attended to, the class giving boots and rubbers, etc., to the amount of $10 for needy ones.

A donation of $6.00 was given to the Red Cross funds for respirators for the soldiers.

During the last six months the class met one evening of each week at their several homes to sew for the soldiers and as a result the Red Cross have benefitted to the extent of: Personal property bags, 445; operation stockings, 43; towels, 119; wash cloths, 10; handkerchiefs, 228.

The material for the above was given by the class members and donations from friends.

The class has given $14.34 to the Sunday school and $19.54 to the class funds.

TO CHECK A COLD.

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine keep the cough loose, allay the inflammation, and so prevent it spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. S. M. Moore, Shortreed, B.C., writes: "I wish to state my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it cured a cold which a friend said would soon put me in the grave."

NOT BREAD ENOUGH FOR CHRISTIANS IN TURKEY

SALONIKI, Dec. 11.—In Constantinople sugar is 40 cents a pound, but to buy it one must have a certificate signed by a doctor. Moslems can buy bread, but there is not always enough for Christians. Parafin is $5.60 a tin; at Beirut the price is $10 a tin.

Recently 100,000 pairs of boots were requisitioned by Germany, as there was a scarcity of leather in the Fatherland. One could not buy a pair of boots in Constantinople for $10.

The Vote On Church Union

Lakefield Churches Vote in Favour of the Measure

The vote on church union taken at the Lakefield and North Smith Presbyterian Churches shows that quite a number did not vote and only 139 votes were cast. The vote stood 79 for and 31 against union. The vote on church union in Burns Church, Hilverton, resulted as follows: Elders for 9; against, 5; members and adherents for, 38; against 8.

SUNDAY SERVICE AT ASSEMBLY HALL

The inquiring young lawyer of Luke 10, 25, was part of the subject of the address in the Assembly Hall last night. Three outstanding points were noticed. Living in the days when the Son of God was "made flesh and dwelt among us" suggests the lawyer's opportunity; willing to justify himself in verse 29, brings out "the lawyer's mistake"; while verse 52 of chapter 11 pronounces his doom. These three points characterise all who in this present dispensation of grace live and die "without Christ."

The speaker then went on with the interesting story familiarly known as "The Good Samaritan." Turning his back upon Jerusalem, "the city of the great King," and heading for Jericho, "the city of the curse," the traveller becomes a striking picture of the human family travelling since the fall, with backs to heaven and faces toward hell. Falling a victim to violence on the road, stripped and left half-dead, the unfortunate man still further illustrates the total depravity of the human heart. Representatives of the law, "holy, just and good," coming along at this juncture in the persons of the priest and Levite, and passing by on the other side, but illustrates one side of the truth of Romans 8. 3, "What the law could not do in that it was weak through the flesh," while the other side, "God sending His own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh and for sin condemned sin in the flesh," is fittingly illustrated by "a certain Samaritan as he journeyed came where he was." Doubtless being a Jew, were conditions normal, the man would have resented the treatment received, for "the Jews have no dealings with the Samaritans"; but circumstances had removed all pride and he becomes a willing recipient of proffered mercy. Thus the truly penitent sinner, "guilty before God," with "mouth stopped" like "the publican who would not lift up his eyes to heaven, but smote upon his breast, saying, God be merciful to me a sinner," is "justified before God," and provision is made for safe keeping "in the inn," v. 34, until "I come again." "Jesus is coming his saints to release." All are cordially invited next Sunday evening at seven o'clock.—Con.

Appeal Heard In Toronto

Litigation Arising Out of Will of Late Robert Hamilton Estate

The following appeal was heard Saturday in the Appellate Division of Osgoode Hall, Toronto:

Re Robert Hamilton Estate.—R. R. Hall (Peterborough) for W. F. Hamilton. B. D. Hall (Peterborough) for Royal Trust Co. J. A. Warren, K.C., for Annie S. Hill. Appeal by William Fortye Hamilton from order of Lennox, J., of November 4, 1914, refusing to construe will on ground that it had been sufficiently construed by previous order.

Judgment: The appeal should be allowed. The appellant should have his costs were it not that he has omitted to furnish the court with the necessary documents; we had to apply to counsel on the other side for them. We have more than once spoken of such neglect, and the appellant should not be allowed costs. The trustee will have its costs out of the fund, otherwise no costs of this appeal. It may be that the respondent will be advised to apply for leave to move by way of appeal from the Master's report or take other proceedings to be relieved from the effect thereof and of her deed. We retain this judgment for thirty days to allow such a motion to be made or proceedings taken and until the termination of such proceedings if taken or disposal of the appeal if allowed on application within the time limited above.

30,000 Aliens Held On the Isle of Man

DOUGLAS, Isle of Man., Dec. 13.—There are almost 30,000 aliens of military age interned on this island, all men, and they are being supported by the government at an approximate cost of ten shillings each weekly. Elaborate camps, with modern sewage systems, have been constructed, and a beginning has been made in establishing workshops, where idleness can be turned into industry. In time all the interned aliens may be brought here There are almost 4,000 at Alexandra Palace in London still. There are no longer any interned at Frimley near Aldershot.

There are still many thousands of Germans and Austrians who have not been interned, and all have a chance of appearing before a tribunal established for the purpose of deciding whether internment is desirable. When interned they can communicate with their home governments through the American Embassy, which still maintains two men at the former home of Prince Lichnowsky, in Carlton Terrace. For many months these two men have been Mr. Edward G. Lowry, of New York, and Mr. Leland H. Littlefield of Providence.

The agitation calling for the wholesale internment of enemy aliens, which a part of the London press carried on most vigorously last year, has now died down, and there appears to be no general criticism that the Home Office is not handling this difficut problem fairly and successfully.

GOES TO NURSE HER FIANCEE

Margaret Clougherty to Join Soldier Wounded at Looe.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—One of the cabin passengers who sailed for Liverpool on the White Star liner Adriatic was Miss Margaret Clougherty, who resigned her position as X-ray nurse at the Hospital for the Ruptured and Crippled on East Forty-second Street to go to England to nurse her fiancee, who is convalescing from a wound he received at the battle of Loos

She was born in Roundstone, County Galway, and met her intended husband, Richard P. Clarke, at Gardner, Mass., where he was engaged in business as an accountant.

Mr. Clarke was born at Concord, Mass., of British parents, and when the war started he went to Canada and enlisted in the First Artillery Brigade of the First Canadian Regiment. The wedding was to have taken place last Spring, but was deferred on account of the war.

FEAR HALTS GREEK BLOW AT ALLIES

By Dr. E. J. Dillon.

ROME, Dec. 9.—Greece's present position toward the Entente Powers may be likened to that of the dog which barked when about to commit an offense and would fain bite its master, but being in fear of the whip had to content itself with snarling.

Surliness and pin-pricks are its present characteristics, which have their roots in King Constantine's engagements toward Germany coupled with his powerlessness to carry them out.

For it has become practically impossible for the part assigned to Greece in the well laid Balkan scheme of the Central Empires to be played at this juncture. And it has become impossible solely because the Entente Powers have at last borne in upon the King the reality of their resolve to adopt drastic measures in case any action of a disloyal character is begun or attempted.

Declares Greece Trembles.

It would be unfruitful to enumerate the measures already conditionally decided upon. The statement of the broad fact must suffice, that Greece is now convinced and condemned to unprofitable and irksome innocuousness. She believes and trembles.

But her rulers seem still resolved to show their teeth and put little spokes in the Entente's wheel when ever they can do so with impunity.

I to-day received a communication from one of the few Greeks who clearly discern the chief landmarks in the political situation in the Balkans. By dint of intimation he affirms the allies will probably obtain from the Skouloudis Cabinet the minimum of what they require in Greece, but will be able to hold it only by intimidation maintained to the very end.

No assurances they may extort will have any intrinsic worth; therefore they cannot be relied upon even for one hour. Their value will continue to be derived from the allies' ability to enforce the claims to which the compact may entitle them.

Not only the Germanophile press, but the Government organs manifest a degree of animosity toward Britain which becomes a ruthless enemy rather than a benevolently neutral power.

It is well to remember these things when reading announcements of forecasts of accord between Greece and the allies and listening to assurances that Constantine alone is to blame for misleading a chivalrous race.

Summing up, I should say, that although the minimum Entente demands may be extorted from Greece and she may be cowed into innocuous passive resistance, it will be impossible without serious risk to trust her promises and erroneous to consider the military situation otherwise than grave.

OFFICERS ARE ELECTED BY L.O.L. NO 50

That prosperous young lodge, the Duke of Manchester, L.O.L No. 50, held its annual meeting and election and installation of officers for the coming year on Thursday night, 9th December. There were present a large number of local brethren and also a number of visiting brethren After the transaction of the business the lodge presented Wor. Master, Bro. J. H. Spence with a Past Master's Jewel and a short address, which shows the high esteem he is held in by the brothers of No. 50. After this the election took place. Past County Master Bro. J. C. Waldie acted as installing officer for the evening. The following are the officers for the ensuing year:

Wor. Master, Bro. J. H. Spence, re-elected; Dpputy Master, Bro. H. S. Delahaye; Chaplain, Bro. A. Armstrong; Rec. Secy., Bro. Geo. L. Dodds; Fin. Secy., Bro. Wm. Anderson; Treasurer, Bro. C. H. After the Brothers-Elect had been installed, there were a few short speeches from the visiting brethren and also from the brothers elected. Dainty refreshments were served, after which the meeting was suitably closed by the singing of "God Save the King."

BOYD'S BUFFALOS HAVE DEPARTED

Bobcaygeon Loses One of Its Claims For Distinction

Bobcaygeon, December 11.—All the distinguishing features that gave our burgh a unique place, and marked us as superior to such dead level common place communities as Fenelon Falls, Coboconk and Rosedale, will soon be gone. We still have the most euphonious name, Bobcaygeon, meaning beautiful forest, a name so attractive that all who hear it keep rolling it under their tongue, so melodious that all who hear it are at once seized with an uncontrollable desire to see the place until it has become the Mecca of all North America. We still have the canal in such a glorious state of dehapidation that no other place along the Trent Waterway can hope to dispute our supremacy. We are yet the home of the good, the beautiful and the true. We still have a number of sidewalks, cute sidewalks, so unsafe, that once seen are never forgotten. But many things are gone. Curfew bell is no longer rung, but not so some envious outsider said, 'Because it disturbed the sleep of the citizens. Adolf Smiff's pen is rusted, his muskrat calls no longer to tell us what the weather will be, and now the buffalo that roamed Big Island and scared the tourists, are gone, too. Two carloads to Scott, Sask., to the Government Experimental Farm. Alas!

KAISER GOING TO WATERLOO

AMSTERDAM, via London, Dec. 13.—Emperor William will stop in Brussels from December 19 to 22, according to the Belgian correspondents of Dutch newspapers.

He will also inspect the neighbouring parts of Belgium, including the field of Waterloo, it is said. Special police already have arrived at Brussels to act as a guard for the Emperor.

FERDINAND'S INQUIRIES BROUGHT NO RESULT

A Parable Dealing With the Proper Method of Going A-wooing

Ferdinand was a marriageable young man. He could not help his name. That was fate's legacy. Neither could he help an ingrained shyness, a flaming, ferocious modesty. That was the dower of adolescence. He knew that he should follow the example of other young men and become, for some fair creature, a "gen'l'man friend." How to go about it was the question. He had heard of three unattached young women whose attractions were satisfactory. Which to choose? Delicately he inquired in various quarters. Billy Parsons liked one. His sister Nell liked the second. Ferdinand's mother liked the third. Me made other inquiries. None of the three could get a clear majority. Each was pretty, wise, and good. Expert opinion could no further go. Then a great thing happened. Ferdinand met a wise man. He inquired of this paragon which girl was the most desirable. "I cannot tell you," said the wise man. "Why don't you get acquainted and use your own judgment?"

This tale about Ferdinand is a parable. Many people in this country read with exceeding great interest. In the opinions of various musicians concerning pianos they have used. They balance the testimony of Boggs against the testimony of Baggs, and contrast them with still other testimony by Biggs. They do not understand that testimony is sometimes procured as an acknowledgment for value received. Even if it were always sincere, the way to learn about pianos is not to hear about them, but to hear them, to get acquainted. You are invited to the office of J. O. Fife, 841½ Water Street, to meet an aristocrat of the piano race — the Gourlay piano, Canadian made by Canadian experts. Get acquainted with the Gourlay and find out the meaning of tone-quality, durability and beauty of design.

PRINCE OF WALES CHANGED FROM BOY TO MAN BY A YEAR OF WAR

Young Heir to the British Throne Has Won Golden Opinions From His Superiors and the Respect of Men in the Trenches by His Unflagging Devotion to Duty and His Courage Under Fire

LONDON, Dec. 1.—It is just a year ago to-day that the London Gazette announced the Prince of Wales had been appointed an aid de camp to Field Marshal Sir John French, thus giving to the country the first intimation that the King and Lord Kitchener had granted the royal young subaltern's often repeated prayer that he should be allowed to go to the front. As a matter of fact the Prince had landed in France when this notice was published and was on his way to take up his duties at general headquarters, so that he now has been on active service for a year, relieved only by some few "leaves," on one of which he brought home the commander-in-chief's despatches.

The Prince was gazetted a second lieutenant in the First battalion of the Grenadier Guards, the senior infantry unit in the empire, on August 12, a week after the war began. Only a few months earlier he had attended his first Court; he had welcomed the King and Queen of Denmark when they came to England in the preceding May, while a few weeks prior to the start of the war he had presided at his first public dinner and laid his first foundation stone.

The Prince held the rank of lieutenant in the senior service when he performed these functions, but he could scarcely be described as an active officer. Immediately he became a guardsman, however, he entered on his duties with the utmost zest and enthusiasm. The Prince's work with the Officers' Training Corps at Oxford helped him quickly to become an efficient subaltern, and it was a bitter disappointment to him that when his battalion went to France he was not allowed to accompany it.

But the reward came in due course, and he arrived at the war zone just as the British expeditionary force was mourning the loss of Lord Roberts. Two weeks later he met the King on the latter's arrival to inspect the troops of the Allies who had stopped the German dash on Paris. The young aid de camp already had seen the sterner side of war, and in company of his father he obtained a wide insight into the conditions at the front. Nearly a year later he was able to convey the King to various points of the Allies' line, and then, when His Majesty's trip was brought to a close by his accident, it was the Prince who hastened home to assure the Queen there was no danger, although the King's escape had been an exceedingly narrow one.

Apart from these semi-ceremonial tours with his father the heir apparent, who received his second star soon after he went to France, has carried out all the tasks of an aid de camp, experiencing the dangers and the discomforts of war time— and earning golden opinions alike from the famous Field Marshal whom he serves and from the humblest man in the ranks. Devotion to duty has been the keynote of the Prince's year of service at the front, and in that year he has changed from a very boyish boy to a man. He already has received his first war medal—the Croix de Guerre, which the French President conferred on him during the King's last trip to the front—and he has been mentioned in despatches.

"His Royal Highness," wrote Sir John French a few months ago, "continues to make satisfactory progress. During the battle of Neuve Chapelle he acted on my general staff as a liaison officer. Reports from the general officers commanding corps and divisions to which he has been attached agree in commending the thoroughness with which he performs any work intrusted to him. His visits to the troops both in the field and in hospitals have been greatly appreciated by all ranks. His Royal Highness did duty for a time in the trenches with the battalion to which he belongs."

This cold, formal picture of the future sovereign of the British empire is elaborated in many letters from the trenches. Frequently he passes along the network of glorified ditches by which the British troops have barred the enemy's advance for the last year. Whether shells are passing overhead or not makes no difference to the smile with which the officer Prince greets the guardians of these trenches. Through a periscope he examines the German line, listening to the explanations of the situation given by the officers in command at the particular section. There is no attempt to prevent the Prince from getting too near the firing line; indeed, it is doubtful if he would submit to any manoeuvres to keep hid out of the danger zone, but the picturesque story that he had a narrow escape fror death at Loos is devoid of truth.

The Prince's automobile is well known all along the British lines and plays a large part in the many narratives of his unassuming kindness. He has often overtaken wearied soldiers on the roadside and picked them up and carried them to their destination, many of the men being ignorant of the identity of the pleasant young staff officer who has befriended them in so practical a manner. One of the "Tommies" helped along in this way was soon chatting in regular soldier fashion with the two officers who had picked him up, and in a gush of confidence eventually displayed a photograph of the "girl he left behind him."

In reply to an inquiry whether he carried any similar mementos of home, the younger of the officers remarked smilingly, "Well, I've got my father's photo with me, and I'll make you a present of it if you like." The soldier's surprise was turned to a confused amazement when his companion took a sovereign from his pocket and placed it in his hand.

Behind the lines the Prince is just as popular, for he spends much of his spare time in inspecting the hospitals and the recreation rooms of the men, going about unobtrusively. When sports meetings and football matches are arranged he often is to be found looking on, and in fact he takes a keen interest in all that concerns the troops.

SENTENCED TO ONE YEAR IN THE REFORMATORY

George Solmes of Belmont Township, Convicted of Criminal Assault—The Jail Surgeon's Report

MAGISTRATE'S REMARKS

George Solmes came up for sentence before Magistrate Langley in connection with the serious charge made against him by the parents of a girl near Havelock. Mr. George W. Hatton, the Crown Attorney, appeared for the prosecution, and Mr. Joseph Wearing for the defence.

Mr. Wearing said that while he did not wish to minimise for one moment the seriousness of the crime, he did wish to bring before His Worship some facts with regard to the prisoner which might mitigate his punishment. He was a man who had had very little opportunity for proper development. The circumstances of the case were such as should call for some leniency considering the fact that the young man had had very poor opportunities for proper moral training and also because of the fact that his faculties were not altogether bright. Justice should be done undoubtedly but it should be justice tempered with mercy. The principle which governed English judges was to take all the circumstances of any particular case into full consideration.

Mr. Hatton, on behalf of prosecution, said that this was the kind of crime that should be stamped out and that there was no excuse for any man getting into such a position as the prisoner now found himself. He did not think that very much mercy should be shown any man who is guilty of such a crime, and he asked the Magistrate to give the prisoner a sentence that would deter others from being guilty of the same thing.

Doctor's Report

The following letter from Dr. J. A. Morgan, Jail Surgeon, was then read by His Worship:

"I went up to the jail and made an examination of George Solmes, as suggested by you, and he informed me that he was left an orphan at the age of fourteen, and at that time had to shift and look after himself. I also found that he had scarcely any education, and had only reached the part second book at school.

"I discovered, too, that he had a sunstroke at the age of 18, and was unconscious for three days. About a year ago he was kicked by a horse in the face and has not really recovered from the effects since.

"I do not consider him to be a man possessed with normal intelligence, and I think that his injuries have had the effect of making him perhaps less intelligent than he otherwise would be."

His Worship spoke in very strong terms with regard to that class of crime. He said that under ordinary circumstances no man guilty of such a crime need hope for mercy from him. He said that as far as was in his power this class of crime would be stamped out in the County of Peterborough. However, this case called for some leniency, first because to representations which had been made to him through the prisoner's counsel showing that up to the present time his record had been good and mainly on account of the letter which he had received from the jail surgeon. He spoke very strongly to the prisoner, stating that he had narrowly escaped a long sentence, together with the lash, and that as a matter of fact it was only the jail surgeon's letter which really saved him. He said, however, that he felt that he should take this into consideration, and under the circumstances he imposed a sentence of one year in the Ontario Reformatory.

In trying to get up in the world some men use their friends as a stepladders.

One thing at a time, and that done well, is a very good motto, as many can tell.

If man were as wise as he thinks his wife thinks he is what a wonderful world this would be.

THE opportunity to save as much as $150 on the purchase of a Piano or Player-Piano is drawing to a close. In the beginning we notified the public that we would allow this remarkable co-operative saving to but 50 families. This is the limited number of members we can accept.

Remember! Club is Limited to 50 Members

We have no need to urge you to join—it is a matter for you to decide. Understand, however, that the savings and privileges of this Club cannot be had after it is closed. It is the most unusual opportunity ever offered in this city. In cash savings, in quality of the instruments, in low prices, and in protective advantages it excels any other club ever organized by any one.

Shrewd buyers have, of course, recognized this fact and have put in their applications.

When This Club is Closed You Must Pay Full Time Prices, Here and Elsewhere

You must buy on the regular terms, much higher than the Club prices; you must be content to do without all the exceptional Club privileges.

You must do this because you kept putting off making your application—because some one else took the place which we were powerless to save you.

Make your own choice—a few memberships are left—take one at once, pay your $1.00 membership fee and then select your Piano or Player-Piano any time before Christmas, or let the opportunity go.

Naturally we have small interest in urging either action, since the Club offers so many remarkable opportunities to save money.

THE FIRST OF THE TWILIGHT MUSICALES

The first of the series of winter Twilight Musicales was held at the Conservatory of Music Hall Saturday afternoon when a large number of music lovers heard a splendid programme of Christmas music. The Conservatory Orchestra was heard in two splendid selections, one a medley of Christmas airs that was particularly well enjoyed. Miss Ida Sanderson's rich contralto voice was never heard to better advantage than in her solo "Ngiht of Nights." Miss Richardson sang very sweetly "The First Christmas Morn." So insistent was the applause, she responded with an encore.

Mrs. Wilmot, of Belleville, who is in the city for a few days, very kindly consented to sing at the musicale. She possesses a wonderful voice of wide range and sweetness of tone. Her number "Nymphs and Flowers," displayed it to advantage, at the conclusion of which, she received such an outburst of applause, that she gave an encore that was equally well enjoyed.

A LOCAL VOCALIST, A TORONTO SOLOIST

Mr. T. J. Palmer, A.R.C.O., of Toronto, is one of the foremost organists in Canada.

As organist of the Metropolitan Methodist Church, Toronto, he is known to all by the splendid organ recitals he gives every Saturday afternoon where every programme he presents is of the highest calibre both musically and educationally.

He is fortunate in having at his command one or the finest instruments in Canada, this combined with his great ability as a performer produces splendid effects.

He was formerly organist of the Pariah Church in Elgin, Scotland, so he and Mr. John Allan, the conductor the "The Messiah," were near neighbours in the old days. Mr. Palmer is giving an organ recital in Lindsay to-night, and in Belleville on Wednesday. Mr. Palmer, after hearing Miss Dorothy Allan, the soprano soloist in "The Messiah," sing last week in Toronto, engaged her as soloist for one of his organ recitals at the Metropolitan Church in January.

MATERIAL REDUCTION IN COST OF PARCELS

Canadian Government to Forego All Postal Charges as Far as Their Conveyance in Canada and Across the Atlantic is Concerned on Parcels Addressed to the Canadian Troops at the Front.

The Post Office Department at Ottawa, has issued the following statement:

The Honourable T. Chase Casgrain, Postmaster General of Canada, has been successful, as a result of negotiations entered into with the Imperial Postal Authorities, in effecting an arrangement with the British Government, whereby parcels from Canada for Canadian soldiers in France and Flanders will be carried at the same rate of postage as applies to parcels from the United Kingdom for the Expeditionary Forces on the Continent; that is:

For parcels weighing up to three pounds, 24 cents.

For parcels weighing over three pounds and not more than seven pounds, 32 cents.

For parcels weighing over seven pounds and not more than eleven pounds, 38 cents.

This means a material reduction on the cost of parcels, and it is hoped it will be a source of satisfaction to the Canadian public. This reduction has been brought about by Canada foregoing all postal charges for the conveyance of these parcels in Canada and on the Atlantic.

The public are reminded, however, in accordance with the circular issued by the Department recently, that until further notice, no parcel can be sent weighing over seven pounds.

Lt.-Col. Mills marched at the head of the 93rd Battalion for the first time yesterday morning, when he was in charge of the church parade to the Salvation Army citadel.

A new recruiting scheme was uncovered Saturday when a travelling recruiting office made its appearance on the down town streets. The "office" was the big van of the Peterborough Fuel and Cartage Company, decorated with flags and appropriate banners. Inside were chairs, a table and an oil stove. The outfit attracted a lot of attention Saturday. The scheme originated with Lieut. Quakenbush, and was carried out by Lieut. Crisp, the 93rd's machine gun officer and Lieut. de Puyjalon.

Capt. Cecil Arnott of the Strathcona Horse, who went to the front with the First Canadian Contingent, is expected home on leave for Christmas. Capt. Arnott is convalescent from an attack of appendicitis. He sailed for Canada on Dec. 10th.

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 10.—"I do not think that a single one of us should go to a baseball, hockey or football match as long as this war lasts," declared ex-Controller Wanklyn, adviser to Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, Pacific Railway Company, at a recruiting rally here last night.

"These men have manhood, physique and ability that would be of great use at the front, but they have something lacking inside that they do not realize the appeal now being made to them."

The Kingston Standard says Lt. G. S. Newlands of the 14th regiment, and Lt. J. H. Patton of the 15th regiment, have been transferred to the 109th battalion. Lt. Newlands has been attached to the 93rd Battalion of Peterborough, and Lt. Patton to the 109th Battalion, Lindsay.

KINGSTON, Dec. 11.—As stated yesterday, Col. Hemming has been authorized to place a guard on the Locomotive Works, and all on all other buildings in his division used for the manufacture of munitions. This will mean a big increase in guard duties all over the 3rd division, as there are many places now making munitions that will have to be guarded. The guard will be mounted the beginning of the week.

The Belleville Ontario says: Picton is looked upon as an excellent centre for recruits for the new Battalion. Thursday night at a reception to Ptes. S. Young and G. White of the 2nd battalion, held in the armouries, five soldiers from the front were on the platform—Capt. Ackerman, Peterborough; Sergt. Sandford, Sergt. Aichison and the two Picton boys. The armouries was packed to the doors. Addresses were given by Capt. Ackerman, Sergt. Sandford, the two Prince Edward boys and Lt.-Col. Adams. The patriotic spirit ran high and enthusiasm was rife. Mr. A. J. Cundick, Chairman of the Prince Edward Patriotic Speakers' League, presided.

Lieut. Max Hamilton, who is attending the Provisional School of Infantry at Kingston, was home over the week end. He will likely be appointed to the 93rd Battalion when he has completed his course.

Sergt. Cook Wride of the 93rd Battalion, was home from Kingston for the week end. He is attending the School of Cookery at Kingston.

Major Cameron, A.M.C., who is in charge of the health of the men of the 93rd Battalion, has established a hospital in the signallers' orderly room in the armouries.

The canteen of the 93rd Battalion is to be moved into the stores room of the 57th Regiment.

So rapidly are the recruits coming into the 93rd that the sleeping accommodation at the armouries will soon be taken up. The large rooms are all occupied now and part of B company are sleeping in the company rooms.

DEPARTURE WOULD BE GREAT LOSS

At a largely attended meeting of the congregation of the Murray Street Baptist Church held yesterday morning after the morning service, the following resolution was unanimously carried:

"Having learned from the public press that a western church has recently unanimously called our pastor, and believing that Rev. Mr. Webb is peculiarly fitted for the work in Peterborough, and knowing that his work has been a decided success so far, and that he is looked upon as our Convention and Association, and a strong man and a leader of men in that his removal from Peterborough would be a great loss to us and to the Baptist denomination in Ontario, it is therefore resolved,

"That, the members of Murray Street Baptist Church having learned of the invitation extended to our beloved pastor by a Winnipeg church, again desire to place on record our gratitude to our Heavenly Father for having permitted him to lead us over a period of years, and our keen appreciation of his many qualities which have endeared him to this congregation and to others, and to express the hope that on mature consideration of the whole matter he may be led to the conclusion that his work is in this place, and that he will continue as our pastor;

"And it is further resolved that we pledge our individual and united support to our pastor in the various church activities."

Prominent members of the church expressed their regret at the possibility that Rev. Mr. Webb might decide to accept the western call.

YESTERDAY AT ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

The offertory number at evensong in St. John's Church was very kindly given by Mrs. Wilmot, of Belleville, who has been visiting in the city the past week. The number selected was Frances Alliken's "The Lord Is My Light," and Mrs. Wilmot's beautiful voice gave out a delightfully impressive rendering. Some years ago Mrs. Wilmot sang the air from Haydn's Creation, "With Verdure Clad," in St. John's, and the pleasing memories of that performance have not faded with the years.

At the morning service the offertory number was finely rendered by Miss Kathleen Moore, a young soprano of great promise. The selection was "Comfort Ye My People," from "The Messiah," a number telling of Messiah's coming, and specially suitable for this season.

People are apt to forget that the first talking machine was made out of a rib in the garden of Eden.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

MANY STARS ON THE 40th BATTERY TEAM

TORONTO, Dec. 9.— Coach Jimmy Murphy is going to experience much difficulty in selecting a team from the large number of good players available for the 40th Battery senior O.H.A. team. For goal there are three candidates, Laughlin of St. Paul's, Janes of Peterborough, and Corbould of Orillia, with little to choose between the latter two. For the defence there will be McNab, the Orillia boy; Jack Gooch, captain of last year's Toronto Victorias; Ernie Lacigne, of Midland; and Pethick of Peterborough, all good boys.

"Lovey" Jupp and McDonald, the Orillia players, will likely be the selection for the wings. "Connie" Smythe of last year's Varsity juniors champions will probably play centre. Making the selection of a rover will be difficult. Butterfield, the Orillia and Preston payer, on past performances will be a keen contender for the position. "Mawk" McKenzie is another worthy candidate. Lavigne is also a good rover, where he played for several seasons with Midland and acquitted himself creditably.

McNab is a good man defensively but fails to display enough speed when on the aggressive, which difficulty can easily be overcome, and he will then be invaluable to his team. Butterfield has not yet turned out to practice, but will be on hand next week. Corbould is another who has yet to put in an appearance, but he will don the pads shortly.

Although very few of these players have had experience in senior company, they are really of senior calibre, and the khaki-clad boys who are quartered here will have a team worthy of staunch support. The Battery team will no doubt have a large local frollowing also. Several of the players are well known locally, and the patriotic spirit which is foremost at the present time will also gain them a host of followers.

There are several other players from various points turning out regularly with the 40th for practice and will be available if required. They are not so well known, but may improve with practice and displace some of the others who now appear fixtures.

WESTERN HOCKEY STARS HAVE JOINED COLOURS

Winnipeg, Dec. 9.— The 78th Battalion is now anxious to enter a team in the Patriotic hockey series to be contested in Winnipeg. Monty McKenzie, former star Kenora player, is the prime mover of the scheme. He claims there are several good puck chasers in the 78th, and thinks they could put a seven on the ice that would make the other teams travel the limit. In case they were not successful in being allowed to enter a team from the 78th Monty will suggest to the officials in charge of the Patriotic series to accept a team of soldiers picked from all battalions except the 61st.

Of the players of note in the 78th there are.

Harry McKenzie who is heralded as being about the best player in amateur hockey circles. Harry has been transferred from the 52nd and is now taking up an officer's course in Winnipeg. He played with Melville last winter but broke into the hockey limelight with Kenora.

Monty McKenzie played on the defence for Kenora for many years and helped that place win several championships.

Mike Mitchell played goal for Portland in the Pacific Coast League, last winter. He is a professional at present but the 78th expects that he will be reinstated for the Patriotic series.

Harry Hilliard the centre player of Kenora is expected here any day.

There are several other players available who are not known to the public.

In case the 78th and other battalions were allowed to enter on team, the following players would be in line if needed:

Bob McCutcheon, captain and cover point of last year's Melville team.

Stan Jackson, played goal for the Winnipeg Vics last winter.

Jack Verner, right wing player of the Winnipeg seniors two years ago.

Brock Henry, played left wing for Winnipeg last winter.

Bert Nason, played centre for Winnipeg intermediates during the past season.

LINDSAY TO HAVE A JUNIOR O. H. A. TEAM

LINDSAY, Dec. 11.—At a meeting of the management of last year's Junior O. H. A. team on Friday, it was decided to again enter the Junior O.H.A. Although one or two of last year's players are absent from town, the management has rounded up some really excellent substitutes, so that a strong team will represent the town this year on the ice. The officers of the club are.

President—C. Squires.
Vice-President—A. G. Simpson.
Secretary—F. J. Carew.
Treasurer—R. Butler.

Lindsay has not been grouped as yet. Group 2, S. Lockington, Port Hope, convenor, meets at Port Hope. The teams in the group are: Cobourg, Peterborough, Bowmanville, Port Hope, Oshawa, Campbellford.

BILLETS IN WAR-STAINED FRANCE

(BY A SUBALTERN.)

Billets occasionally form a vexed subject out at the Front.

Regiments coming into a town watch each other closely to see which secures the best billets, and if one regiment gets better quarters than the other on two occasions running, the brigade billeting officer is looked upon with suspicion and suspected of being engaged to the sister of the adjutant of the rival regiment. Even generals have been known to smile less genially at each other because one occupied a chateau while the other lived in the home farm.

Billets are partly a matter of arrangement, partly a question of "bounce." The general commanding the division decides where his different brigades are to billet in accordance with tactical consideration. Each brigade then sends on a billeting party in advance to the area selected. The party is supervised by the brigade billeting officer, who allows areas to the different regiments. One billeting officer will discover a reason why his regiment should not be allowed the town sewage works, and why it would be better if some other regiment were put there. Or the billeting officer of another regiment will "jump" a nice private house just outside his area, and get his officers installed in it before the regiment in whose area the house properly belongs discovers what he has done. By this time it is probably late at night, possession is nine points of the law, and the officers of the regiment that has been robbed lie down too tired to grumble, in an outhouse.

Plenty of Beds.

As a general rule, when a regiment marches into a village where it is only going to billet for one night the men are put in barns and hay sheds. In this way they can be kept together by platoons, easily assembled in case of alarm, and the actual disposal of them takes far less time than going from cottage to cottage and putting a few in each. In even the smallest villages in France there is nearly always a good supply of barns and hayloffs. The men find hay and straw good enough lying after a trench, and probably prefer it to the bare floor of a cottage. Officers sometimes lie down with the men and sometimes seek a cottage bedroom. Most of the beds in French cottages have a tier of at least three mattresses, so that taking two, and laying them on the floor, three people can make themselves comfortable in one bedroom.

By customary etiquette the captain of the company has the bed and the subalterns lie on mattresses on the floor; where there are only subalterns in the company, they fight for the bed.

Tommy is Welcomed.

In the early days of the war the French peasantry nearly all remained in their villages, even though the latter were quite close to the firing lines. The peasants are invariably hospitable and cordial to the British soldiers in a way which our troops who have fought in France can never forget. Not a murmur have I ever heard from a farmer as a platoon of mud-soaked Tommies tramped into his hayloft, pulled the hay about to make themselves comfortable, and lay down in it. Perhaps the hay represented the farmer's savings for the year and capital for the next. But the French peasants seem to give of their all to the British Tommy as gladly as if he were their only son. Our men return the hospitality with gifts of tins of bully beef and lend a hand with the farm work, milking the cows, and so forth.

I do, however, remember one rather amusing story of an example the French people give us. It is a true story, and though people reading it may lift their eyebrows incredulously, there are some still living who were with me on the occasion and can vouch for it. I and two brother officers had gone into a village near our trenches on the Aisne to forage. We found a small farm, where we could buy cider and eggs. We decided to boil and eat the eggs in the farmer's kitchen. He put the fire at our disposal, and stood by his door while we ate the eggs sitting round his table. I noticed he seemed a little surly. We talked with him and asked him about the Germans, who had been through the village before us, and our own troops. He said that some officers of the German staff, who were passing through, had commandeered his kitchen for the night. We asked him if our troops behaved well towards the peasantry, and he said that they did. Then we asked about the Germans. He grew enthusiastic. The German staff officers, he said, were most perfect gentlemen. When they sat down to dine the night they were in his house they asked him to join them at the table. We looked guiltily at each other, for we had finished the eggs and left him standing by the door.

The Brutal German.

This if, of course, a very mild exception. As a rule the general tale told by the French people is of roughness, and sometimes of brutality, at the hands of the invaders. I shall never forget one house in which we billeted when we were following in German footsteps after their retreat. It had been commandeered by the officers of a German regiment as their billet. They had ransacked every thing, carrying away with them blankets, pillows, and everything they could lay hands on. There was hardly a complete piece of crockery in the house, and even the owner's few books and private letters had been torn out of bookcases and drawers and strewn over the floor.

In one village we went through I found an old fellow who remembered 1870. He had been in the village then when the Germans had overrun France, and he remembered their coming through quite well forty-five years before. He said that this time their conduct was much more brutal than it had been in 1870. As he spoke the tears were running down his cheeks. He pointed mutely to his barn, which stored the few possessions that he had, and which a 17in. shell had reduced to a crumbling ruin. This may well have been the luck of war. But what of his wife? She, he said, lay dead on her bed. He did not say how she had died. It was indeed hard to follow his patois; but we gathered that she had not been strong, that some Uhlans had billeted in the house, that they had taken too much drink, and that she had died of fright.

Billets lead to much argument; they often are a source of humour; but there is also the other side of them, the ever-present point of view of the poor inhabitants whose homes are so ruthlessly transformed into "property" for the stage of war.

Sodality Received 35 New Members

Thirty-five new members were received into the Sodality of the Blessed Virgin of the Sacred Heart parish at an impressive ceremony last night. Practically all the members were present, their number making the reception the more imposing. His Lordship Bishop O'Brien addressed the Sodality, speaking of the beauty of a life modelled on that of the Blessed Virgin.

RUSSIA HAS LARGE SURPLUS OF GRAIN

Petrograd, via London, December 11.—The Ministry of Finances has presented to the Council of Ministers a summary of the economic situation in Russia. The grain harvest for the current year, the summary states, was 512,000,000 poods (a pood equals 36 English pounds), about 250,000,000 bushels above the five year average. Counting grain carried from the previous season Russia had available for the current year 4,765,000,000 poods of grain and potatoes, equalling about 1,177,000,000 bushels, the excess of the available surplus over 1914 amounting to 700,000,000 poods, equalling about 385,000,000 bushels.

Deducting the probable consumption of the country it is estimated that the new available surplus will be about 1007,000,000 bushels. Reports regarding the winter crops are of the most favorable nature.

Alluding to the statement, the financial position of the population is shown by the growth of the savings banks deposits. October's figures of these deposits showed the reaching of the high water mark, with deposits of 74,000,000 roubles, as against 32,000,000 roubles in October, 1914. Since the beginning of the war, it was announced that the savings of the people have increased 490,000,000 roubles and now amount to 2,400,000,000 roubles.

In spite of the loss of revenues because of the prohibition of the sale of spirituous beverages and a diminution in imports, amounting to 650,000,000 roubles during the last fiscal year, the decrease in ordinary revenues, the statement says, amounted to only 400,000,000 roubles, increases in revenues from other sources swelling the total. During the first nine months of the current year Russia imported products to the amount of 640,000,000 roubles. Her exports during the same period, it was announced, amounted to 547,000,000 roubles.

BASKETBALL.

Two good games of basketball scheduled to be played tonight at the Y.M.C.A. The first game begins at 8 o'clock sharp, and is between the Collegiate and the Veterans. The second game is between the Bankers and Excelsiors. The public are cordially invited to these games.

Some Foreign Coins.

The franc was formerly called livre (pound), though the connection with any special weight is not evident. The name of the German coin, mark, meaning a weight of eight ounces, was formerly in general use in Europe. The name of the Italian coin that corresponds with a franc (lira) also means pound. The coins in present use in Spain have their names from other sources. The five peseta piece is called escudo (shield). Peseta, the name of the small coin representing the monetary standard, means simply "little piece." Ruble is from the word meaning "to cut" and was so called because originally the coin was made with an ornamental edge.—London Telegraph.

MR JOS. JERVAIS, FORMER PETERBORO BOY WOUNDED

Among the former Peterborough boys at the front the name of Mr. Joseph Jervais who joined the 1st Contingent in Montreal, may be remembered by some of his former friends in this city. Before moving to Montreal about twelve years ago he resided on Romaine street. He held a fine position with Goodwins Limited in Montreal. Injured in one of the first division's engagements he has recovered and is back at the front again. The information received about him was not in detail, but it will suffice for his old friends.

ECONOMIC PRESSURE ON GERMANY.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—Great Britain intends to inflict all economic pressure possible upon Germany in an effort to bring the war to a victorious end, Lord Robert Cecil, Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, declared in the House of Commons this afternoon. His statement was to a query about the commercial agreement just negotiated between Great Britain and Denmark.

ALLIED FORCES FREE TO MOVE.

SALONIKA, Dec. 3.—A satisfactory agreement was reached today by the Anglo-French and Greek military authorities. It calls for the free movement of the expeditionary forces between Salonika and the Greek frontier.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—(Special cable).—German wireless statements that two divisions of British troops were annihilated in the retirement from Serbian territory was vigorously denied the British War Office, who declared in an official report to-day that the retirement was perfectly orderly and the losses comparatively small. The retirement was made for strategic reasons, said the newspapers today, and our people can be assured that the Allies in the Balkans will sooner or later be in a position to make good their temporary loss of territory. Canadian army medical corps hospitals at Salonika are doing valorous work in caring for the heavy contingents of Allied wounded arriving hourly from the fighting front. Nearly one hundred Canadian nurses have arrived at Salonika from Malta and Egypt, where they were stationed temporarily.

ALLIES EVACUATING SERBIA.

ATHENS, Dec. 13.—Bulgarian advance guards have reached the Greek frontier at several points in their pursuit of the retiring Anglo-French. Their movements, according to Salonika despatches this afternoon, are being closely watched by the Greek military. No official statement obtainable here as to what course the Government intends to follow if the Bulgars cross the border The evacuation of Serbian territory by the Allies proceeded rapidly throughout yesterday.

After withdrawing from Gievgeli and Doiran, the expeditionary forces shortened their line until it extended but a few miles parallel to the frontier, and less than five miles from the border. It is believed here that the Allied forces will withdraw entirely from Serbia before night.

JAPANESE PRESS DENOUNCE YUAN SHI KAI.

TOKIO, Dec. 13.—The Tokio press to-day, in indignant articles, denounced Yuan Shi Kai's acceptance of the Chinese throne, declaring he had openly flouted Japanese advice and urged that Japan make proper representations.

NEW YORK, Dec. 13—In his wireless message to the rulers of all the belligerent nations, Henry Ford said his peace party had no idea of intruding on the affairs of nations, but desires to use their best efforts to bring about peace. Then he adds:

"Therefore, we do earnestly entreat you and the rulers of all other warring nations to declare an immediate truce; let the armies stand where they are. Then let our negotiations proceed so that the soldiers may be delivered from another bitter winter in the trenches, and sent back to their labour and their firesides. As there is no other way to end war, except by mediation and discussion, why waste one more human life for the sake of humanity."

LONDON, Dec. 13.—That portion of the press commenting to-day upon the American note to Austria, admitted that strong language was used, but inquired why same tone was not employed when the United States addressed Germany on the Lusitania incident.

"The Ancona note would be more impressive to the outside world had it been addressed to a power capable of injuring the American Republic, not to the latter's ally, from whom America can have nothing to fear," said the Daily Express.

The Chronicle expressed the same vow, but added:

"Nevertheless, we congratulate the President on his novel vigour."

BERLIN, via Wireless, Dec. 13.—German and Austrian subs., since the beginning of the war, have sunk 508 enemy and neutral vessels, with a total tonnage of 917,819, it was announced to-day.

ALLIES TAKE OVER SALONIKA CUSTOMS HOUSE.

ATHENS, Dec. 13.—As part of the Greece-British agreement, the Anglo-French forces to-day took over Salonika Customs House.

ST. PAUL'S ANNOUNCEMENTS.

The annual meeting of the Fraser Mission Band will be held this evening at eight o'clock in the Guild room. A full attendance is requested. Those having mite boxes are asked to return them.

The mid-week service will be held on Wednesday evening at eight o'clock.

The annual offering for the poor of the congregation will be taken up next Sabbath morning.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mrs. D. C. King will not receive until the New Year, and then on the first Tuesday of each month.

Mr. John Laing, Toronto, representative of the Montreal Star, spent the week end with his parents, Cedar street.

Mr. Matthew Jamieson has returned home after an absence of about a year spent with the Bartlett Lumber Co., Michigan.

Mrs. J. T. Lawrence of Toronto, who has been visiting her sister, Miss White, 548 Gilmour street, has returned home.

The friends of Mrs. R. J. Kidd will be pleased to learn that she has sufficiently recovered from her illness to be removed to her own home, Benson avenue, yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Harry Long has returned to the city from his agricultural estate, Irma, Alberta, and will probably spend the winter here. He reports the crops in his vicinity as surpassing all possible expectation. "I never saw such crops in my life."

WEDDING BELLS

KING—REED.

A pretty military wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride's father, on Saturday evening at 6 o'clock, when Pte. Ernest Chas. King of the 83rd Battalion, was united in marriage to Miss Hilda Helen Reed, daughter of Mr. Chas. Henry Reed of this city. The ceremony was performed by Capt. (Rev.) James Rollins, of the 83rd Battalion. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Marjorie, while the best man was Pte. Percy Schwair of the 83rd Battalion.

OBITUARY

ARCHIBALD JOHNSTON.

The death occurred this morning of Archibald Johnston at the residence of his son-in-law, Mr. Robert Meharry, 505 Cros street. Deceased was a widower and was well known in Harvey township, where he resided for a number of years

Funeral announcement later.

CORNELIUS HOLLAND.

The death occurred yesterday afternoon at four o'clock of Mr. Cornelius Holland at his late residence, 596 Chamberlen street at the age of seventy-eight years. The late Mr. Holland was born in County Cork, Ireland, but came to Canada sixty years ago, during which time he had resided in this city. He was highly esteemed by a host of friends who will regret to hear of his death. His wife, three sons and five daughters are left to mourn his loss. The sons are Messrs. Dan and Thos. of this city, and James of Quebec. The daughters are Mrs. M. Flood, Edmonton, Mrs. J. Flood, Le Duc, Alta., Mrs. J. Kelly, Guelph, Mrs. Finny, Peterborough, and Sister Scholastica of the Community of St. Joseph.

The funeral will take place on Tuesday morning at nine o'clock from his late residence, to the Sacred Heart church. Interment in St. Peter's cemetery.

CLARENCE GORDON THOMPSON.

The many friends of Plumbing Inspector Peter Thompson and Mrs. Thompson will sympathize with them in the death of their second son Clarence Gordon, who passed away at Cleveland yesterday after a short illness from pneumonia. The late Clarence Thompson who left Peterborough some eight or nine years ago was one of the first to see the possibilities in the moving picture craze and became successfully identified with the motion picture industry so that at the time of his death he was the manager of the Victor Film Company of Cleveland. His brothers were also successful in the moving picture field.

The deceased is survived by his parents, in Peterboro, four brothers, James, Stanley, Newton and Louis residing in Cleveland and five sisters, Jennie, Grace and Caroline in Toronto and Sarah and Winnie residing here.

The funeral will take place in Toronto where his mother is just now.

DIED.

THOMPSON.—On Sunday, 12th December, 1915, of pneumonia, at Cleveland, Ohio, Clarence Gordon Thompson, manager, "Victor Film Company of Cleveland," second son of Mr. Peter Thompson, 349 George street, in the 30th year of his age. Burial at Toronto.

Contributed To the Fund

A notable contribution to the Patriotic Fund is the aggregate sum of nearly $400 received from the wives of soldiers in response to a letter sent out by Adjt. McElhiney during the recent campaign. It was thought that they would desire to show their appreciation of the generosity of the citizens by making some contribution, no matter how small, as an expression of their gratitude for what the Fund has meant to them, and the many letters received with the committee's cards testify to the fact that the soldiers' wives are appreciative. Quite a number of them subscribed one dollar a month during the coming year, and this morning's mail indicated that there may be others wishing to give something who may be a little belated. The following are excerpts from a few of the letters, and their tenour will doubtless favourably impress the citizens who have made up the Fund:

"I certainly am very thankful for the money I have received from the Patriotic Fund."

"I am very glad to help the Patriotic Fund with a dollar a month."

"I am sure it has been very kind of the people to give it to us, and it has been a real help to me."

"I certainly am thankful for the money I have received from the Patriotic Fund."

"I am sorry that I am not able to give more than sixty cents a month."

Anglo-French Forces Have Conducted a Brilliant Retreat From Serbia

Are Now Falling Back Upon Previously Prepared Positions Around Saloniki—Losses Are Camparatively Small

ROME, Dec. 14.—Athens despatches received here to-day announced that the Anglo-French forces have conducted a brilliant retreat from Serbia and are now falling back upon previously prepared positions around Saloniki. Losses are comparatively small. This news, coupled with the announcement that the Allies will continue the Balkan campaign and send reinforcements to Saloniki, has evoked enthusiastic comment from the Italian Press. The Rome newspapers now print Athens despatches expressing every confidence that the Allies will have no difficulty in maintaining Saloniki. One correspondent stationed at Saloniki telegraphed that a small Bulgarian force actually had advanced five miles into Greek territory. Military authorities here have no confirmation.

THE ANCONA INCIDENT.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—Confidential negotiations between Austria and the United States to reach a settlement regarding the Ancona incident, were being attempted to-day. Both in Washington and Vienna the official and personal "conversations" were proceeding, supplementing the note sent by this Government By this method both governments hope an avenue of amicable adjustment may be found. Germany's probable influence upon Austria's action was indicated by a conference with Baron Zwideink and Ambassador Von Bernstorff.

BODY EXHUMED AT ORILLIA INQUEST

ORILLIA, Dec. 14.— The body of Charles Lawrence Emms, who died at Coulson, ten miles west of Orillia, September 7, was exhumed at the cemetery here, and an inquest opened before Coroner John McLean. Crown Attorney Cotter conducted the inquiry, and three witnesses were examined.

The evidence went to show that a neighbour, Walter Scarlett, had gone into deceased's stable and found him lyin gon the floor unconscious. Emms' brother, Edward, was cleaning a horse in the next stall, but, it was alleged, appeared unconcerned at the injured man's condition, and said the mare had kicked him. Witness carried the injured man to the house with the assistance of the younger Emms, where were his mother and another brother, Walter, who, it is said, had been seen walking from the stable to the house a few minutes previously. They both, it was alleged, appeared unconcerned when the injured man was brought in. Emms died ten minutes after the doctor arrived. Jacob Black testified that deceased had told him his (Emms') brother John had threatened to murder him. The inquest was adjourned till December 29th, when the report of the autopsy will be presented.

Doubts Germans Can Force The Dvina River

PETROGRAD, Dec. 14.— The Germans in Persia are seeking to divert the attention of the Russian Army of the Caucasus, according to the Russky Invalid, and cause it to scatter its force over a large front in order to allow the Turks to throw a part of their troops into the Mesopotamian campaign to save Bagdad.

The Retch expresses the belief that the plan of the Germans to force the Dvina River while it is frozen over is not practicable, as the winter is extremely rigorous, with heavy snow, which hampers the movement of motor vehicles and prevents the transport of sufficient munitions.

PATRIOTISM SHOWN BY DURHAM COUNTY

PORT HOPE, Dec. 13.—During the past several months campaigns for the Canadian Patriotic and Red Cross Funds have been going on in the county of Durham. With the completion of the canvass in Manvers township, which raised $5,800, a total of $77,000 has been raised from 24,000 people, which is over $3 a head. All of this money has been contributed voluntarily by individuals, and does not include what has been voted by County or Township Councils. Every municipality in the county is represented, with the exception of the village of Newcastle, where a campaign to raise $2,000 will be put on very soon. Hon. T. W. McGarry and Sergt. W. Arthur, 15th Battalion, will speak there at a big rally Monday night. Speakers and organizers of the Speakers' Patriotic League assisted in the campaigns.

The populations and the amounts raised by the various municipalities are as follows: Townships—Cartwright, 1,300 population, $4,200; Cavan, 2,070, $5,100; Clarke, 2,100, $7,000; Darlington, 2,500, $11,000; Hope, 2,600, $4,700; Manvers, 2,600, $5,200. Towns —Bowmanville, 3,200, $20,000; Port Hope, 4,700, $10,000; Millbrook, 800, $2,900. Total, 77,100. In the case of Port Hope the amount raised was for the Red Cross Fund alone.

TWO TINY TOTS IN A TOY SHOP

Little Denny Was Almost Beyond Hope in the Eyes of His Elder Sister, Aged Six

She was six if she was a day; she had a little fat black in a little black coat and her wisps of red hair matched her red tam-o'shanter. In her firm hand she held a struggling boy about a year younger, and they were getting into the elevator at a big department store and making for "toys."

Children are not allowed, unaccompanied by guardians, in most large shops, but such was her air of responsibility, of decorum that it would have been a bold floorwalker who dared to question her.

Nor, evidently, was it her first visit. The boy, still held in leash, ran in front and made straight for the space devoted to Santa Claus, his reindeer and his sleigh, piled with toys.

There was a background of fir and cedar and a huge Christmas tree, but the pair sat down before the fascinating old fellow in the red robe, his long white beard, holding his big whip, and from his face the small boy did not turn from worshipping in solemn adoration.

Roumanian Demands On Russia, If Met, Will Swing the Nation to the Entente

Country in Position Where Both Sides Need Her Army and Tsar Has More to Offer in Payment Than She Can Hope For From Austria-Hungary.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—That the prospects of Roumania taking sides with the Entente Powers are better now than ever they have been since Italy joined the Entente is the subject of an interesting article by that well informed writer, Mr. Waclaw Czerniewski, in the Daily Graphic.

"The reason," he says, "lies in Balkan developments. Italy and Russia attract more attention than other nations at this moment. But while Italy can send troops through Albania, and with the fall of Gorizia have an open way to Trieste and Fiume, Russia has a more complicated task. Roumania is affected by nothing but her own natural interests, and through Roumania only can Russia successfully attack Bulgaria and Turkey.

"This particular importance of Roumania has made Austrian and Russian diplomacy compete in their endeavour to win Bucharest. We must admit that the position of Russia was very difficult. After the Russo-Turkish War in 1878 Russia committed a great injustice, a political crime even, by the annexation of a Roumanian province, Bessarabia, in spite of all the services which Roumania had rendered to Russia during the war. Fortunately relations between Russia and Roumania have gradually improved, largely as the result of the policy of the present Russian Emperor. The Tsar and King Charles of Roumania exchanged first visits in 1896. Relations between the two courts are now so satisfactory that a marriage between one of the Tsar's daughters and the Crown Prince of Roumania has been discussed, and the Russian Imperial family paid a visit to Roumania not long before the outbreak of the great war. It is quite possible that the Tsar sought to recompense the injustice committed by his grandsire, and to give Bessarabia as a dowry for his daughter. Bessarabia, be it said, did not bring many benefits to the Russian Empire. She became a nest of reactionaries of the lowest possible character. She sent to the Duma its most reactionary member, Mr. Purishkevich, and sad and humiliating events have occurred within her boundaries. In the capital of Bessarabia, Kisheneff, there was perpetrated by a debased mob an infamous massacre of the Jewish population.

CENTRAL POWER'S DIPLOMACY.

The diplomacy of the Central Powers, no doubt, counted on the support of the King of Roumania as being a member of the House of Hohenzollern. Every endeavour in this direction is being made, and relatives from Berlin are constantly visiting the Roumanian King. However, King Charles has proved to be much more independent of personal influence than King Constantine of Greece. The sympathies of the Roumanians toward the Allies, particularly toward the French, and their hatred of the Germans are far stronger than those of the people of Greece. During the Franco-Prussian War public opinion in Roumania was so bitterly against the Germans that the position of their King was threatened and revolution nearly broke out. Only the attitude of the army and the tact of the King saved the new Roumanian dynasty from collapse. The Roumanians soon appreciated the good of their King, who is guided by the interests of his people.

"In tribute to the importance of the Roumanian position Austria and Russia laid offers before the Roumanian government in the course of their negotiations. When Russia occupied almost all Galicia the Austrian government offered for Roumanian help the Bukavina, consisting of 4,000 square miles of area with a population of nearly one million, and Bessarabia (after the war), consisting of 17,600 square miles, with a population of about 2,500,000. The Russians offered the Bukovina, which was then in their hands, and Transylvania (21,000 square miles and 3,000,000 population).

It will be noted that Russia's was the better offer. Austria promised two provinces which at that time were both in possession of the Russians; Russia offered provinces one of which, namely, Bukovina, was then actually conquered by her. Roumania insisted on Russia giving her also Bessarabia for an active part in the great war on the side of the Entente Powers.

"At that time Roumania's help was not essential, and the Russian government hesitated. Now the position of Roumania is altered; her importance for both sides is growing. Although the military situation of Austria has improved the dual monarchy cannot offer more than she did last spring. The Hungarian government will never agree to give up Transylvania to Roumania, as this province represents one-sixth of the Hungarian area and about one-seventh of its population. On the other hand, Russia can afford to offer also Bessarabia, which is but one-five hundredth part of the entire Russian empire and one-one hundredth and twentieth part of the area of European Russia, while the population of Bessarabia represents about one-seventy-second part of the Russian population.

"Nor is this all. Roumania realizes that the future aim of the Austrian policy is to reach the Black Sea coast. The Black Sea is the only natural sea for the Dual Monarchy. The main Austrian river system, the Danube and its tributaries, of extreme importance for Austrian commerce, has its outlet in the Black Sea. Thus, apart from the fact that the population of Transylvania is mainly Roumanian, the possession of this province is essential to Roumania as a defensive barrier against attacks from Austria and Hungary.

"The war may bring a great future for the Kingdom of Roumania. Her area may be 56,000 square miles and her population 14,000,000; and if she receives also a part of Bulgaria, as some Russian politicians calculate, her area will be almost as large as that of Italy, and her population almost as numerous as that of Spain. In this effort of the Roumanian nation to obtain a great future lies the main guarantee of her friendship and her joint operations with the Powers of the Entente."

Across the room was a creche; also a wonderful and beautiful thing. The infant Jesus in the manger, the mother in her blue robes, St. Joseph, with his staff, and three kings resplendent.

The children had been perfectly still for fifteen minutes looking at Santa Claus, when the little girl whispered to the boy. He squirmed, struggled, but she was too much for him. She dislodged him from his seat dragged him to the creche, and with motherly, Irish piety, pressed him on his knees.

Reverently she described the holy group, then would incite devotion from a more human motive.

"See the cow, Denny; you mind the cow we used to milk last summer at the farm when we went on the fresh air? See the goat, Denny; you mind the goat in our alley? It's his pitcher." But Denny whined and pulled and pulled to be back again to his idol.

The little girl looked up. Her sigh was that given by every woman since the beginning, for every man for whose soul she holds herself responsible.

"Denny," she said, "Denny likes Santa Claus better than he likes God."

LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA.

"My nerves were very bad, and I could not sleep at night, nor could I control my arms or legs." writes Mrs. Robert Bustard, Maxwell, N.B. "Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cured me of what I believe was the early stages of locomotor ataxia or paralysis. I cannot describe what I suffered, but now I am entirely cured."

NOT TO DEMOBILIZE BUT TO ABANDON SALONIKA

LONDON, Manday, Dec. 14.— Greece will not demobilize, but will withdraw all her troops from Saloniea except one division, according to the Times' Paris correspondent. This, the correspondent adds, is the result of the negotiations at Athens, and the Entente allies have decided to vigorously prosecute the Salonica enterprise.

A despatch from the Times from Athens says the embargo on Greek shipping has not yet been raised and that Greek grain shipments continue to be held back in the Entente allies' ports.

"In the event of the allied troops being forced into Greek territory they will be pursued," says the Athens correspondent of the Morning Post, "not by Bulgarians, but by Austrian, German and Turkish troops, in order not to arouse Greek public opinion. For this purpose Turkish troops, said to consist of three divisions, have already joined the enemy forces at Giewgeli and Doiran."

AUSTRIAN HOPES ALLIES WILL WIN

Says Teutonic Militarism Must Be Crushed For All Time

CHICAGO, Ill., Dec. 14.— "I have six nephews in the Austrian army, and the Italians have swept over my native town in Austria, but my fondest hope is to live to see the Allies stamp out Teutonic militarism for all time. It would set back the world a thousand years for the Kaiser and Emperor Francis Joseph to have their way. In the name of civilization and humanity they must be crushed."

This statement was made to the Herald reported by Dr. Joseph Kucher, of Westwood, N.J., who has been at the Bismarck Hotel, this city, as the guest of Mr. Julius Kessler & Co., distillers, of New York city.

"I was on my way to Austria to engage in Red Cross work," continued Dr. Kucher, "but had to turn back because I could not get safe conduct through Italy. I hope my nephews all will be taken prisoners, although it is not their fault that they are fighting for the nefarious cause of the Kaiser. I have no doubt the Allies will win because England's resources are too great for Germany and Austria to overcome."

Very Effective Method For Banishing Hairs

(Modes of To-day.)

At very little cost any woman can rid her face of hairy growths if she will use the delatone treatment. This is made by mixing some water with a little powdered delatone. This paste is spread upon the hairy surface for two or three minutes, then rubbed off, and the skin washed, when every trace of hair will have vanished. No harm results from this treatment, but care should be used to buy real delatone.

Many of the very newest frocks are all in one piece, with no clearly defined waist-line, except for a narrow ribbon or belt laced through slashed, slightly holding in the fullness. Perhaps we may expect a return of the Princess mode.

Purely Personal

As regards habits of living, that, of course, is purely a personal matter with each of us.

But some folks go on for years wondering what causes their nervousness, heart flutter, billiousness headache and various other ailments.

A frequent, though often unsuspected cause, is tea or coffee drinking. This, because both tea coffee contain a powerful, habit-forming drug, caffeine, (from 1½ to 3 grains to the average cup) which, taken regularly, finally drifts many into ill health.

Think it over.

Of course, it's your own affair. If you can go on drinking tea or coffee and feel no evil effects, why—bless your heart, keep it up—but there are hundreds of thousands who have quit tea and coffee and now use

POSTUM

---the pure food-drink

They know from the better health that follows, that freedom from the drug, caffeine, in tea and coffee makes life brighter and happier.

Postum is made of wheat and a bit of wholesome molasses—has a rich, snappy flavour and some genuine nourishment. It contains no caffeine or other harmful element.

Postum comes in two forms. The original Postum Cereal requires boiling; Instant Postum is soluble. A level teaspoonful in a cup of boiling water makes a delicious drink—instantly. Cost per cup is about the same for both kinds.

Personally, the change to Postum is a little thing to do. The benefit is great.

SINS OF THE FATHERS

By GEORGE A. FARKER

[Copyright, ... by American Press Association.]

From an old manuscript:

I was born and reared on the coast of Norway. Until I was twenty years old I had never been in a town, and then only in a small village. My associates were untutored people, and I received but the elements of education. Nevertheless they seemed to look upon me as superior to themselves. Whether that was because I bore the marks of having been born of superior stock or that my name was English I did not know. My father died when I was ten years old, and I remembered him as always with a pale look on his face, which was reflected in my mother's. When I grew older I asked her why my father and she had always appeared sad. She could not bring herself to tell me the reason, and I remained in ignorance.

When I was twenty my mother died, and I resolved to leave the desolate place where I had been born and seek a more active field. Before going I made inquiries of a neighbor concerning my parents' sojourn in these parts and was told that they had come there several years before my birth and had for a time lived as gentle folk, but subsequently they dwelt as did their neighbors. My father had from his coming appeared to have a cloud on his mind. My mother had told me before her death that a sum of money had been put in a bank for me at the nearest town, and, going there, I claimed it and took passage for England.

On my arrival in London I went about looking for work. Going into the office of a merchant for the purpose, he asked me my name. When I told him he looked up at me in surprise.

"Where were you born?" he asked.

I told him all I knew about myself. He regarded me with compassion and gave me employment.

At intervals when introduced to a person I was regarded with a certain interest or curiosity—I could not tell which. I noticed that such persons were always of superior education. No illiterate person ever manifested any especial interest in me. Sometimes these people who did would turn away from me with apparent disgust, while others regarded me compassionately. One day I asked my employer for an explanation of the mystery that hung over me. After thinking some time he told me that it would be better for me not to know it. He advised me to change my name.

I tried to be contented to remain in ignorance, but the secret weighed upon me, and I longed, yet dreaded, to know it. Finally I decided to try another country, thinking that whatever it was hung over me would not be known there. America seemed the most inviting ground, and I went to New York, reaching there shortly before the breaking out of the second war with England. Registering at a hotel, the clerk looked up from my name to me in astonishment.

"Well," I exclaimed, irritated, "what is it?"

"What is it? Why, nothing. Will you go to your room, sir?"

I found in America that more emphasis showed that dreaded interest in my name than in England, and a different interest. On being introduced to me most persons showed a repulsion though many strove to conceal it. I burned with a desire to know what it all meant; but, remembering the advice of my London employer, I refrained from asking, and no one offered to enlighten me. To occupy my mind I went to a library to read. There I stumbled on the secret.

The wisdom of the advice given me by my former employer was now apparent. Under an assumed name I enlisted in the American army to fight against England. I knew now that, though I had been born abroad, America was my native land. I turned to do some important work for her, to die for her on the field of battle.

There were no important engagements except that at New Orleans, which was fought after peace was declared. As I had entered the army, a private, I came out a private. Under my assumed name I went into business and prospered.

Then I fell in love. I had vowed that I would never bring a child into the world to suffer the blight under which I suffered, and I strove to crush the natural longing that had taken possession of me. My sufferings were tenfold what they had been before. Meanwhile it was evident that I had won the heart of the girl I loved. It was essential that I should explain my conduct toward her. I told her my secret.

She loved me all the more, from pity, that I suffered from another's fault. She reminded me that each successive decade would carry me and mine farther from the original transgression and that my successors would feel it less than those of my own generation. Persuaded by this view, I asked her to marry me. I continued to live for a time under my assumed name, but when I joined the side of emigration setting westward I resumed my own.

This is my secret. In the Revolutionary war an officer of great merit and prominence on the patriot side turned traitor, attempted to deliver to the British an important strategic position and sold to the enemy. Living in England, where he was despised, he brought up a family. My father, one of his descendants, shrinking from the stain, went where he would be unknown. He must have been an especially sensitive man, and I doubtless have inherited his disposition.

DID THE EARTH SPLIT.

Savage-Landor Declares It Did, Like a Baked Apple.

Deeply interesting is the theory advanced by that intrepid explorer, A. Henry Savage-Landor, who believes that our system of detached vast continental areas was originally formed by the crust of the earth splitting from pole to pole, for all the world like the skin of an over heated baked apple. May be this is true. Way back in the prehistoric ages, when there existed animals of strange forms and really as large as the present circus side-show bargain would have us believe they have in dinky tents to be awe-stricken viewed for the small sum of a dime, the earth may have split open like a pea pod and mixed things up generally. It is just possible the rush of ocean to fill the gaps would have caused no more disturbance of the earths' regular orbital movements than the explosion of gas which sends the griddles of a cook stove through the roof and leaves the legs intact on the kitchen floor may be said to discard the stove. Quite likely, however, such a cataclysmal event in the musty past would at least have caused the dinosaurus to stretch their bloomin' necks in a vain search for the back lot when they awakened and started out for their morning meal.

But this is Savage-Landor's little joke. He started the argument, so let him have his say. That sets his mind at rest on the subject, and you can believe it or go fishing, just as you like. To support his theory, the explorer cites likeness of feature, language, habit, and state of development between South American tribes and those of the lands over the seas. Some day he hopes to go further into this matter.

"On that expedition through the wilds of central South America," says hot-foot Henry, "I was able to collect further evidence that a theory I had long held as to the present shape of the earth was correct. I had never believed in the well known theory that a continent, now submerged, once existed between America, Europe and Africa—in other words, where the Atlantic ocean is now.

"Here is what really happened. The earth at one period changed its shape—when, is merely guesswork and is of no consequence here—and the crust of the earth—not the core, mind you—split into two great gaps from pole to pole, with a number of other minor fissures. In other words, the earth opened just like the skin of an overheated baked apple. The African and American continents, as well as Australasia, with New Guinea, the Celebes Islands, the Philippine Archipelago, and China, which before that event formed part of one immense continent, thus became divided, leaving North and South America isolated, between the Atlantic and the Pacific—which were, then, one only, also formed.

"It is easy, by looking intelligently at a map, to reconstruct the former shape of the world. You will notice that the most western portion of Africa fits exactly into the gap between North and South America, while the entire African coast between Dakomey and the Cape Colony dips perfectly in all its indentations and projections, into the coast line of South America.

"The shores of western Europe in these days were joined to North America and find to-day their almost parallel and well-fitting coast line on the east coast of the United States and Canada. On the opposite side of the world, the western side of South America, the same conditions can be noticed, although the division of the two continents (America and Asia) is there much wider. Fragments were formed, leaving innumerable islands scattered in the Pacific ocean, half way between the actual continents of Asia, Australia, and America.

"A mere glance is sufficient to show how well Australia fits in along the Chilian and Peruvian coast, the great island of New Guinea along most of Peru and Ecuador, and the west coast of the Central American Isthmus. The Philippine Islands probably in those days lay alongside of Guatemala, while California bordered on Japan."

Youthful Chancellors.

No one would call Mr. McKenna even middle-aged as far as appearance (but for a certain baldness) or energy is concerned, but he ranks fairly high among the more recent Chancellors in this respect. Mr. McKenna is under fifty-two. Gladstone produced his 1853 Budget at the age of sixty-three, Mr. Lloyd George was forty-six, and Mr. Austen Chamberlain forty-one.

Lord Sherbrooke was under fifty when first appointed Chancellor, but his actual performance as a financier came ten years later, and at the time of the 1836 Budget he was not far short of sixty. Disraeli was forty-eight when he produced his unlucky Budget in 1852. On the other hand, Sir William Harcourt, though Chancellor for a few months in 1886, brought in his first great Budget when nearly sixty-six, and Lowe was fifty-eight in 1869, Mr. Asquith was fifty-four in 1906, and Mr. Goschen was fifty-six in 1887.

Expert Goes West.

William Southworth, of the Ontario Agricultural College, has been appointed as plant breeder and lecturer on forage crops at the Manitoba Agricultural College. Mr. Southworth is not a graduate of Guelph, but is the product of a Scottish college. He is recognized as a specialist in the science of plant breeding. His main object here will be to develop a variety of corn for fodder, which can be sown late in May, after danger of frost has passed, and be ready for the silo in ample time in the fall. His work at the college will be largely in the laboratory and in the experimental plots.

Ownership of Deserts.

The national government virtually owns all our deserts, although in Texas the state owns all the public lands. It is probable that eventually the desert lands will pass from public ownership into the hands of private owners by allotment of areas, the size of which will be relative to their productiveness. For it must be realized that whereas in a well watered region five acres may be enough to support a family, anywhere from 500 to 10,000 acres may be needed to support a family in the deserts. It is all a matter of water supply, for water is primarily the basis of land utility and value, as it is the prime means of subsistence of all living things, whether plants or animals.

An Old London Paper.

On Sept. 6, 1680, a special number of the London Gazette was issued, the reason being, as described in its first paragraph: "The ordinary course of this paper having been interrupted by a sad and lamentable accident of fire lately happened in the city of London, it hath been thought fit for satisfying the minds of many of his majesty's good subjects, who must needs be concerned for the issue of so great an accident, to give this short, but true, account of it."

The first number had been published on Nov. 14, 1665, when the court was at Oxford on account of the great plague, and the paper was therefore called at first the Oxford Gazette. With its twenty-fourth number, however, it became the London Gazette, by which name it has been known ever since.

Quickest, Surest Cough Remedy is Home-Made

Easily Prepared in a Few Minutes. Cheap but Unequaled

Some people are constantly annoyed from one year's end to the other with a persistent bronchial cough, which is wholly unnecessary. Here is a home-made remedy that gets right at the cause and will make you wonder what became of it. Get 2½ ounces Pinex (50 cents worth) from any druggist, pour into a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Start taking it at once. Gradually but surely you will notice the phlegm thin out and then disappear altogether, thus ending a cough that you never thought would end. It also loosens the dry, hoarse or tight cough and heals the inflammation in a painful cough with remarkable rapidity. Ordinary coughs are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, winter coughs and bronchial asthma.

This Pinex and Sugar Syrup mixture makes 16 ounces—enough to last a family a long time—at a cost of only 54 cents. Keeps perfectly and tastes pleasant. Easily prepared. Full directions with Pinex.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol, and is famous the world over for its ease, certainty and promptness in overcoming bad coughs, chest and throat colds.

Get the genuine. Ask your druggist for "2½ ounces Pinex," and do not accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

Boys and Playgrounds.

I do not know if any brother will [illegible] teach a boy to be honorable and straight-dealing, after a chance to play with dishonorable boys [illegible] be done—must [illegible] to cheat him, and he is "down" on the boy that does not play fair; he will establish standards of conduct which we must maintain in the community and particularly in our great cities. If there is one thing that we need more than another it is the constant emphasis among our citizens of that spirit of fair play, that willingness to forgive and [illegible] that lack of consideration in victory which we identify with sportsmanship and which is learned best of all in childhood upon the playground.

A Singular Marriage Custom.

The Maroh have a very curious and somewhat dangerous marriage custom, which one would think would be more honored in the breach than in the observance. The husband, surrounded by a bodyguard of twenty or thirty young men, smitten his wife home on his back in a scarlet cloth and desperately assaulted the whole way by a number of girls. Sticks and stones are hurled at the bridegroom, who in the coming friends with his bride can hardly be considered a very happy man, for the mate amazons often inflict serious injuries whilst he carries to the grave. It may be that among the lady pursuers are some of the bridegroom's former "flames," who turn the mock attack into downright earnest to avenge slighted love.

Musical Musicians.

The Shakuhachi players of Japan are a privileged class of itinerant musicians. Their instrument, a kind of reed oboe, enjoys what is perhaps a unique distinction, it having been adopted as a unit of measurement, a fifth of a sun, or about two feet. A peculiar headdress, something like an immense peach basket hat, serves as a cool variety of mask, permitting the wearer to see without being seen—a decided advantage to such people as have come down in the world and are undeserving of publicity. It also serves as a further distinctive feature of this class of musician to those who do not read the descriptive matter which is hung in front of each player.—Wide World.

Giants and Dwarfs.

In the seventeenth century all the abnormally large and small folks of Austria were assembled in Vienna in response to a whim of the empress. As circumstances required that all should be housed in one building, there was a fear that the imposing proportions of the giants would terrify the dwarfs. But the dwarfs teased and tormented the giants so that these overgrown mortals complained with tears in their eyes, and as a consequence sentinels had to be placed to protect the giants from their pygmy persecutors, for the smallest men had the biggest brains and the longest tongues.—London Telegraph.

The Difference.

Mrs. Dash—The idea of Mrs. Rash having society aspirations! Why, her father was a peddler! Mr. Dash—Yes, she's entirely too forward. She ought to hang back until people have forgotten it. Now, if your aunt, my dear, it was your grandfather who was a peddler.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

How He Did It

By LOUISE ADA ROSS

There were two things Frank Trowbridge excelled in, but before naming them it is better to give the information that Frank's whole front name was Frances and she was a girl. The two accomplishments were flirting and athletics. She lived in summer on a lake ten miles long by three to six miles broad and could beat any other girl near it rowing, sailing, swimming, diving, fishing and any other sporting accomplishment fitted for women. The boys were all in love with her.

Frank wasn't unconscientious as to making believe that she reciprocated their affection, at least to a slight degree, but nothing definite could be got out of her by any of them. Charlie Wiggins, who was a year or two older than the rest of them and consequently harder for her to manage, was a cool sort of a chap, and it bothered her because she couldn't tease him as she teased the others. Near the end of a summer she had half promised to be engaged to half a dozen fellows and feared she would be obliged to be serious with some one of them. Charlie came up from the city for a two weeks' vacation. It struck Frank that by giving him the most of her time the others would drop out of the race, thinking that he was the lucky man. Then when they found they were mistaken she could accuse them of having deserted her.

Charlie fell into the trap very easily; but, though he didn't let Frank know it, he had no mind to fall out. With her permission, to say nothing of encouragement, he devoted himself to her till just before the time when he must leave. Then he laid his own trap.

"Frank," he said, "that little single sticker your father gave you in the spring is a dandy, isn't she?"

"She can beat anything on the lake."

"Except my Gertrude."

"H'm! Your Gertrude's a tub. By the bye, who's she named for?"

"That's a secret."

Frank slowly raised her long lashes and gave him a look.

"You think she can beat my Polly, eh?"

"I'm sure of it."

"I'll bet you a pound of candy against"—

"Nonsense! Do you suppose I race for trifles?"

"What stakes would you race for?"

Charlie didn't reply for some time. Then he said: "I'll race my Gertrude in a wind fair for both two miles up and two miles back, if you'll kiss you marry me; if you win I marry"—

"Whom?"

"My boat."

"I know what you mean. You'll marry this mysterious Gertrude."

There's no knowing by what feminine process Frank made up her mind to accept the challenge. She certainly hadn't the slightest doubt that the Polly could sail around the Gertrude in circles, the latter being notoriously the most sluggish boat on the lake. But she was a trifle jealous of this unknown Gertrude, and Charlie was to marry her if he were beaten. Be this as it may, the race was made up to take place on the first day there was a sufficient breeze. Frank was to sail the Polly and Charlie the Gertrude.

On the day of the race there was a breeze varying from 4 to 10 knots. Charlie gave Frank permission to inspect his boat, which she did, but Charlie declined to inspect the Polly. Most of Frank's acquaintances as well as many others were on hand to see the race, but no one knew the stakes. All expected that it would be a walk-over for Frank.

A designated starter fired a pistol, and when the boats sailed over the line another was fired, indicating that the race was on. As was expected the Gertrude dropped astern of her rival from the first. But when the former had got over half and the latter three-eighths of a mile the Gertrude ceased to lose. The Polly topped the stake boat a quarter of a mile ahead, when the Gertrude began to make a slight gain. This was astonishing, for she didn't carry any more under a fresher breeze, indicating she didn't get one. She was not long in catching the Polly and not much longer in pulling ahead of her, though this at first was hard to tell, for Wiggins passed a hundred yards to his lee. This was considered very good of him, since his boat did not blanket his rival.

Meanwhile the breeze had lost nearly half its force. But while this made a great deal of difference in the speed of the Polly it did not affect that of the Gertrude. The latter sailed on, slowly gaining on her rival, coming in an eighth of a mile ahead. The winner was received with no especial demonstrations, for sympathy was all with the lady. But what was lost in rooting was made up in surprise. Wiggins remained in his boat till Frank came in beside him, blushing like a peony, at which every one wondered. Charlie stepped into her boat and handed her ashore, saying as he did so:

"Ladies and gentlemen, I take both pride and pleasure in introducing my fiancee."

The half dozen gentlemen who were present were crushed, and Frank wished she were at the bottom of the lake.

"How did you do it, Charlie?" she asked that evening when they were consulting about an engagement ring.

"I bored a hole in the bow and one in the stern, with a pipe between them. With my feet I pumped water from the bow and drove it out at the stern. See?"

"I think I do."

Vanity Tickled.

During the early excesses of the French revolution a rabble of men and women was rioting in the streets of Paris. Lafayette appeared and ordered a young artillery officer to open fire upon them with two cannon. The officer begged the general to let him try first to persuade them to withdraw.

"It is useless to appeal to their reason," said the general.

"Certainly," answered the officer, "and it is not to their reason, but to their vanity, I would appeal."

The officer rode up to the front of the mob, doffed his cocked hat, pointed to the guns and said:

"Gentlemen will have the kindness to retire, for I am ordered to shoot down the rabble."

The street was cleared at once, for none could brook the idea of being classed with the scum of the city.

The Eternal Conflict.

Society is nothing more than a continuation of the conflict of nature under the guidance of intelligence. It is vain to hope for any amelioration of society from the prevalence of an intellectual education. Culture of the intellect supplies new weapons for use in the conflict and may render it less rude in appearance, but cannot change its nature. . . . Doctrines and creeds are forms; the will supplies their contents. Just as a vehicle may convey substances having wholesome or injurious or indifferent properties, so any system of thinking—theological, social or political—may be made to bear any purport, good or bad. To try to shape opinions so that they may not be made subservient to any evil purpose is all labor in vain.—Schopenhauer.

LEADING THE WORLD.

Canada is Now at the Head of the Wheat-exporting Countries.

No other single article of food has so much importance for civilized races as has wheat, and in war-time when a country's food is in danger the chief anxiety turns on the wheat supply.

The United Kingdom is the greatest buyer of wheat in the world, and any serious rise in the prices of wheat, flour, and bread means great distress for the millions who hover near the poverty line, says a writer in The Toronto Star Weekly.

As a result of this the efforts of the immense British navy is ensuring regular food supplies is very largely focussed on guarding the conveyance of the immense quantities of wheat which the British Isles require.

It has been absolutely essential for her national existence that England should have a navy powerful enough to keep the food routes open no matter what combination of naval powers is pitted against her.

One reason for England's alliance with Russia is that Russia is the greatest wheat producer in the world. But the United States is England's principal source of supply, accounting for one-third of her entire consumption. Canada comes next, with India third, Argentina fourth, and Australia fifth.

One of the causes advanced for the increased price of wheat in England this year is the failure of the last Australian crop. If Russia had had a free passage through the Dardanelles or a warm water port this deficiency would have been made up. And it is also very likely that another cause is the activity of the German submarines.

Canada last winter and in early spring planted an extra 7,688,000 acres of land in wheat to take care of the Mother Country's needs. It makes for the largest wheat shipping country in the world and has brought to her activities that are unprecedented.

The romance of Canada as a wheat country is one of fascination. And further romance lies in the transportation problem of getting No. 1 hard from the Peace River, say, over the 5,000 miles of blossoming prairie and briny deep, to its destination, which, like as not, is Liverpool.

When Canada woke up and found she had the biggest falls in the world at Niagara she had proved nothing except her luck. But when to-day she can confidently assert that in Port William and Port Arthur she holds the world's greatest grain ports with an elevator capacity of 43,200,000 bushels, she has proved her worth. For she made that port herself out of raw backwoods and concrete.

During the 1913 season of navigation 222,544,596 bushels of grain passed through the twin ports. During the same period Duluth-Superior handled little more than half that quantity and Chicago less than a quarter.

CURES CATARRH, BRONCHITIS BY SWIFT CERTAIN METHOD

Thousands of drug fiends have been started on their downward course through Catarrh snuffs containing some habit forming drug. If you suffer from a cold, sneezing, use a sensible treatment like Catarrhozone. It heals and soothes, brings relief at once, cures thoroughly. In bronchitis and throat trouble no doctor can do better than perscribe Catarrhozone. Try it—see what wonders it works—what power it possesses. Different from the old way,—you inhale Catarrhozone. Get the dollar outfit which includes the inhaler and is guaranteed. Smaller size 50c; sample size 25c; at all dealers.

A Slight Difference.

In "A Rambler's Recollections," Mr. Alfred Capper relates a delightful story once told him by Sir Herbert Tree. "You remember," said Sir Herbert, "my Japanese play some years ago? Well, when I took it off His Majesty's I sent it on tour. Now it happened that a certain town was billed very profusely with this play and with the announcements of another play equally, if not, indeed, even more popular than my own. And both were announced as appearing on the same day, at the two chief theatres in the town.

"On this Sunday before the production, the day on which the provincial companies always travel from town to town, there was quite a crowd gathered to witness the respective arrivals of the two companies, who were due to travel by the same train. Well, the train steamed in, amid the great but subdued excitement of the waiting crowd, and my" (mentioning a certain famous, and, be it added, very stately and pompous actor-manager) "descended from his saloon, where he had been traveling in great state, a coquettish lady reporter stepped briskly up to him with pencil and note-book ready in her hand, and said she, with the painted and affected accent of Upper Tooting, 'I beg your pardon, sir, but may I ask, are you "The Barrier of the Gods" or "The Worst Woman in London"?'"

A Question of Etiquette.

It is not generally known that King George is an excellent billiard player, and once, when he was Prince of Wales, he visited some naval yards and in the evening entered a billiard-room for a quiet game.

When the marker was told that Prince George was to be one of the players, his self-possession forsook him altogether. Stepping up to an officer who was present, he cried in a whisper loud enough to be distinctly heard by the Royal visitor:

"Excuse me, sir, but do I call 'im yer Royal 'Ighness or 'Sgt. Taller'?"

HE COULDN'T LIE.

Colonel George Ham Had Always Been Trained to Tell the Truth.

There are two things that anyone who goes to Montreal should not miss. One is Colonel George Ham, on whom the sun never sets and nothing else would ever presume to. The other is luncheon at the Montreal Club, where every day they have 21 different kinds of cold dishes, says George Miner in a recent article. The dining-room is on the top of a tall building next the Bank of Montreal, and in the middle of the room is an enormous table groaning under every kind of cold food that was ever invented—cold spoons, fowl, fish, game, and entrees in most tempting profusion and prodigality. There are always just 21 different kinds, no more, no less. I imagine the members suffer from 21 different kinds of dyspepsia also.

All except Colonel George Ham. He doesn't suffer from anything. He has a strong constitution, but no by-laws. Everybody in Montreal knows him. If he don't know them. He is always the same. Always happy, for he is the apostle of good nature for the Canadian Pacific, and it's part of his job. He even always dresses the same, in a suit of gray tweed, which he himself describes as being "neat, but not speedy." Sometimes the pants are tight under the arms.

Once the colonel was travelling across the continent with a very distinguished and titled person, and occupied the upper berth in the same stateroom. The D. and T. P. begin to snore like a dustless cleaner and the colonel, when he could stand it no longer, reached down and gave the sneezer a slight pressure under the chin. The snoring ceased and a grumpy voice asked:

"What time is it?"

Colonel Ham told him it was 3 o'clock. Half an hour later the snore was louder than before. The colonel reached down again.

"What's the matter?" growled the D. and T. P. "Can't you let me sleep?"

"My father used to tell me," answered the colonel, "never to go to sleep with a lie on my conscience."

"I don't give a hang about your conscience."

"Well, I told you just now it was 3 o'clock. As a matter of fact, it was 3:15."

"Oh, go to ——!" retorted the D. and T. P.

What's in a Name?

Rev. Dr. E. A. Chown, General Superintendent of the Methodist Church in Canada, relates that he recently officiated at the opening services of a church in the Canadian west—the only Methodist church with a Presbyterian name, for it is called Knox Church.

It seems that the Presbyterians built it and did not keep it going. The Anglicans took it over, but did not find it possible to keep the church alive. Then the church came into the Methodist possession, and the residents insisted on retaining the name of Knox. "Sign of church union," says Dr. Chown.

The Cocoa Bean.

The cocoa is a native of Venezuela. It is a pod bean the size of the first joint of the finger, six or eight of these beans to the pod. The wet beans are shelled from the pods and then fermented in heaps for six days until cured. During this ferment heat is developed that will cook an egg, so it is said. The cocoa bush begins bearing at five years, grows into a tree, thirty feet high, and, like the olive, the older the tree the better. The beans hang from the trunk and the under side of the limbs, sticking out on stems.

Colored Oysters.

Although he had never before been inside a big city hotel, Uncle Sol was determined to keep the fact a profound secret.

The old gentleman carefully watched his nephew and imitated him in all of his actions and manners.

"Have some oysters, uncle?" asked the nephew.

"Don't care if I do."

"What'll they be?"

"Oh, most any kind, I guess."

"I'll take a few blue points."

With a careless wave of his right hand and a patronizing look at the waiter Uncle Sol exclaimed:

"I'll guess I'll take a few and open."

An Economical Wife.

"A friend of mine," says a clever mathematician, "had occasion to open my shirt drawer the other day. She came to me, saying, 'My, but you are extravagant! You have eleven shirts, and only half that number of collars! How did you happen to buy so much wash silk?' My answer surprised her. My husband works in a bank and must wear clean linen. He is partial to silk shirts, but as soon as there is the least break near the collar they are thrown away.

"Shortly afterward I appear in a new silk shirt, for the rest of the shirt is perfectly good. He is a large man, and there is not the least trouble in getting the waist from the shirt. Sometimes I vary them by putting on a plain collar and cuffs.

"You will find that when using this plan you do not mind at all how many new shirts the men of the house choose to buy. You will even suggest to them that a certain shirt in the window would look well on him—and, incidentally, on you."

Not Guilty.

Marcus Pickney had been arrested through the activities of his 200 pound Scotch wife, and the pair were facing the judge.

It seemed that Pickney was a shiftless, no-account, lazy man, with a strong disinclination to honest toil. Moreover, he was in the habit of coming home "corned" and beating his thrifty better half. It was on the occasion of the last of these episodes that she had brought about his arrest.

After patiently hearing testimony the judge said:

"Mrs. Pickney, it seems to me that this is a case where prosecution is possible for non-support."

"Oh, your honor," wailed the excited woman, "they can't bring that up on me! I've took in washin' and giv' him what you might say 'was fine livin'' ever since we was married. No; he can't accuse me of that, judge."

THIS SCHOOL GIRL HAD BAD FAINTING SPELLS

Was Weak and Run Down. But Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Made Complete Cure

The most critical time in a girl's life comes during the school age, when she is impelled by rivalry to put forth her best efforts in studying for examinations. At the time she should have healthful outdoor exercise and abundance of fresh air, to keep the blood pure and rich, she is confined to her studies. Is it any wonder that she becomes run down in health and suffers from headaches, indigestion, loss of appetite and spells of weakness or fainting?

The case described in this letter is a good illustration and you can read here the splendid results of using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to help through this critical period.

"While attending school my daughter became weak and very much run down. She was frequently troubled with bad fainting spells, and nothing we tried seemed to do her any good. We were advised to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and did so with most satisfactory results. I am pleased to tell you that after using five boxes of the Nerve Food she was completely cured, and has no return of the fainting spells."

This statement is certified to by Mr. Hamilton Houston, Justice of the Peace.

The reason Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is so effective in cases of this kind is because of its extraordinary blood-forming influence. By adding an abundance of rich, red blood it strengthens the action of the heart, revitalizes the exhausted nerves and builds up the system in every way.

The appetite is restored, digestion improves, you rest and sleep well, and the new vigour and energy is felt in every organ of the human body. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is doing wonders for men, women and children whose systems have become weak and run down. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto

MAN WITH ACID INDIGESTION LEARNS WHAT TO EAT

PHYSICIAN: "Eat meats, fruits, vegetables, nuts, graham bread and any other plain foods you like and take a little bisurated magnesia after each meal."

PATIENT: "But, doctor, I've tried moderate, plain meals and they cause distress, belching, sour stomach, bloating and headaches."

PHYSICIAN: "You have nothing but hyper-acidity—excess acid secretion in the stomach—and the plain bisurated magnesia will neutralize the excess acid and stop all trouble."

PATIENT: "Is bisurated magnesia harmless?"

PHYSICIAN: "Absolutely."

NOTE—The bisurated magnesia is a palatable, inexpensive, antacid which can be purchased at any druggistore. It gives immediate relief in all cases of sour stomach, acid indigestion, and other troubles due to hyperacidity. And most ordinary stomach disorders are due to excess acid. Nearly every body is subject to attacks of acid indigestion because nearly everybody eats too many foods, eats too hastily, and has an occupation which prevents living the active, natural, outdoor life that Nature intended. So bisurated magnesia is needed to help nature restore normal digestion. A teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water should be taken after each meal. As there are several forms of magnesia be sure to ask for bisurated magnesia.

MOSTLY HARD WORK.

Life of Comptroller Fortescue, Retiring From Mounted Police.

One of the chief regrets of Comptroller Fortescue, now about to retire from the Royal North-West Mounted Police of Canada, with whom he has served for over 40 years, when interviewed here, is that in spite of his long service and the distinction that he has attained, he has missed practically all the romance and adventure that the public are apt to associate with the "riders of the plains."

"My work has been almost entirely in the offices at headquarters," said he. "The rounding up of Indians and outlaws and the active work of keeping order has been for others, and I don't want to tell other men's stories."

Comptroller Fortescue said that he joined the police in 1873, when the force came into existence, and was one of the original party that came out West to Winnipeg nearly a dozen years before the laying of the railway. The main business of the force was, curiously enough, the protection of the Indains, who were being exploited by the white traders and being demoralised by the whiskey, which was the traders' chief stock-in-trade for the bartering of furs.

In the first year he was out in the West, however, Constable Fortescue, as he then was, was taken ill with typhoid and was invalided to the East. As a man familiar with the work of the force was then needed at headquarters, Constable Fortescue was taken into the office, and there adventure, as far as the future comptroller was concerned, came to an end, for though the rise of the young constable to supreme control of the famous force is not without romance, the work in which he was engaged, as Comptroller Fortescue remarked, does not lend itself to the telling of stories. The comptroller is now in his 71st year.

HOLIDAY AILMENTS

How to Avoid Condition Brought About by Overeating.

Plenty of Vigorous Outdoor Exercise Will Help Digestive Organs Assimilate Food—Better Than Doctor's Prescription.

By IRENE WESTON.

SO MANY people habitually feel more or less out-of-sorts for the few days following Christmas that Christmas ailments have come to be recognized as a necessary aftermath of the festivities.

Of course, the children will always overeat themselves, if they were not allowed to eat all sorts of indigestible things, they would feel they were being cheated out of half the joy of the gay Christmas season. As a matter of fact, it is not the children at all who make up the bulk of sufferers from Christmas complaints. It is the grown-ups who, simply through carelessly neglecting to subscribe to one simple rule of health, frequently find themselves more or less unhappy inside, and more tired and run down physically at the end of the Christmas holidays than before them.

Of course, children do overeat themselves more often than grown people. They rejoice, however, in the possession of powers of recuperation which grown-ups, even in the prime of life, can only look back on with envy. Too much plum pudding, too many sausages with turkey, too many sweets between meals, may bring on a sharp digestive upset, but in a few hours all traces of it have disappeared, and the one-time sufferer is soon eager for more of the rich foods which caused him pain.

With grown people, after-Christmas ailments are not so much due to indiscriminate eating of indigestible foods as to an utter neglect of any precautions to adapt their systems to the new conditions which reign during the Christmas holidays.

Take the case of the average father of a family who leaves all office work behind. How does the change affect him? In the first place, the dull monotony of his days is broken in upon and his brain can relax from the high pressure of the office. This much, of course, is a change in the right direction. All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy physically as well as mentally. At the same time, however, staying at home has drawbacks of its own, for it means less exercise, which in its turn should suggest a cutting down of the food supplied to the body.

Too much food and too little exertion are almost certain to upset the digestion and clog up the various organs whose duty it is to separate the waste matters from the good in the food we eat and rid the body of those poisonous products.

The remedy is perfectly simple. There is no need to stint yourself of the good things of the table. Eat, drink and be merry, within fair moderation, of course. However, you must help your digestive organs by taking plenty of vigorous outdoor exercise.

A two hours' walk before the midday meal, a round of golf or some other outdoor game with the children in midafternoon, and a brisk two-mile walk in the half-hour before the evening meal will be found worth more than any amount of doctor's prescriptions directed towards relieving the first symptoms of biliousness, the mental irritability, disturbed sleep, sour taste in the mouth, loss of appetite, etc., which are such a common aftermath of the Christmas holidays.

Under the Mistletoe

By M. P. Heatherington

(Copyright, by Western Newspaper Union.)

It was an ideal Yuletide. The sweet notes of church chimes throbbing out melodiously, "Peace on earth, good will to men," announced it; laughter, smiles, gay greetings among the street crowds emphasized it. Two men going in the same direction, strangers one to the other, yet oddly mutually involved in a fateful circumstance of the hour, unconsciously lessened their gait to catch the final notes from the distant belfry.

He in advance, swarthy, evil-eyed, bearing a neatly covered box under his arm, uttered an ugly, sinister chuckle.

"Before that hour strikes again—this!" he hissed malevolently rather than uttered, and he tapped the box and strode on, grim with some profound purpose.

The man ten paces behind him, young, handsome, neat, but none too fashionably clad, carried a thin, square package suggesting a canvas, for his was an artist's face, and he was an artist—Chase Merwyn.

Had he spoken his heart's thought he would have whispered softly:

"Before this hour strikes again I shall have said good-by to all I love."

He of the sinister semblance strode on and turned into a fashionable residence thoroughfare. Unconsciously like a shadow, the other kept almost even pace with him. Under an arc lamp Chase Merwyn paused to look over the package he carried. His objective point was a mansion, a dazzling place of light and luxury, and before it the sinister-looking man had halted a poorly-dressed fellow struggling along without an overcoat, and blue and pinched with the cold.

The twain were conversing and the man with the box handed it to the other, pointed to the doorway of the mansion and passed on. His messenger proceeded up the steps, which Merwyn mounted also. It was in time to see a servant open the door and to hear the other say:

"A present for Mr. Worthington; to be opened tomorrow."

"Oh, of course that," smiled the servant, taking the box. "I will place it with the other gifts. Ah, Mr. Merwyn," and the servant stepped aside to admit him.

"For Miss Worthington," said Merwyn, handing his gift to the other. His gift was a picture he had painted, and with it was a letter.

* * * * * * *

Slowly Merwyn descended the steps. He paused for a few moments on the pavement to take a last look at the home that held so much for him. A slinking figure approached him from the shadows.

"Mister," he stammered, "I'm poor and I need the gold coin the man gave me for delivering a box to that house tonight, but—"

"Ah, I remember!" observed Merwyn, recalling man and circumstance. "A gold coin is so rare for a trifling service," resumed the other, "that I was suspicious. Then again I didn't like the face of the man who gave it to me; I followed him. He met some others like himself. I heard him laugh over an explosion about midnight."

"Great heavens!" ejaculated Merwyn, comprehending, and was up the steps in a flash.

"Quick! Quick—open!" he cried to the servant, just setting the chain on the inside.

"The music room!" uttered Merwyn excitedly and hurried thither, turned on the light switch and made a dash for the table. He remembered the shape and size of the box. His eyes made out one corresponding to it.

Merwyn gave it a fling through the window, there was a flash, and outside a detonation that shook the house. Some flying object thudded against his head and he fell to the floor.

It was Christmas day when he opened his eyes. He lay upon a couch pulled directly under the chandelier. Daylight was streaming into the room. The wrecked window frame was barricaded. His head was bandaged, and seated at a little distance was Esther.

"Oh, I am so glad!" she cried as she noticed that his eyes had opened. "The surgeon has just left, and papa—he says you saved us all and that you are a hero! And the beautiful picture you intended for me—it was riddled with window glass, but—I found the letter. Why did you write so sadly?"

"Because—because I feared to write all the truth," Merwyn confessed.

"The man who warned you told us enough to have us guess the truth," spoke Ethel, confusedly changing the subject, and then she followed the glance of Merwyn. His eyes rested on the mistletoe right over his head.

"Why this is Christmas morning, sure enough," fluttered Esther, "and we are the first—"

"Ethel," spoke Merwyn irresistibly, "I love you!"

His arms were lifted towards her and a world of pleading was in his longing eyes. She did not hesitate. Their lips met that strangely beautiful Christmas morn—under the mistletoe

WHEN BLOOD IS POISON.

The blood must be filtered, otherwise the liver is overworked, and becomes torpor ate are poisoned. If the kidneys fail also. By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you get both these filtering organs working right, and also ensure healthful action of the bowels. For this reason these pills are an ideal family medicine. They cure biliousness, constipation, chronic indigestion and kidney disease.

WITH THE WITS.

Wireless Train Control.

Since experiments were made some two years ago on a small scale with the Preutice system of wireless train control on the Hampton Court branch of the London and South-Western Railway, modifications have been introduced to bring it into conformity with British railway conditions, and experiments on a larger scale are now being carried out.

The purpose of the apparatus is to prevent a train from running past a signal at danger, and its salient feature is that there is no mechanical connection between the track and the engine. A copper wire carrying a high frequency current runs along the line midway between the running rails, and is divided into sections corresponding with the ordinary signal sections, the arrangement being such that when a train enters one section the current is cut off from the section immediately behind it.

The receiver on the engine consists of a length of copper wire directly over the track wire and about 12in. above it. If the track wire is alive, as it is when the section is clear, the waves picked up from it by the receiver are caused to hold the brakes of the engine and train in the off position and to indicate by a semaphore in the engine cab that the line is clear. But when the engine enters a "dead" or danger section, an audible signal is sounded, the semaphore goes to danger, and the air brake is automatically applied by gravity.

Eggs.

The earliest Scriptural mention of eggs as a food is found in Job vi. 6: "Is there any taste in the white of an egg?"

Men are born to succeed, not to fail. —Thoreau.

Unselfishness is the key to Christmas happiness.

ENVIOUS.

"Do you ever wish you were a girl?" asked the visitor.

"Only at Christmas time," answered the boy.

"Why do you wish it then?"

"Because of the stockings they wear."

Cultivating the Christmas Spirit.

"Alas!" sighed the moody man, "there is no gladness for me in this joyous season."

"Tut-tut!" said the optimist. "Surely there is a ray of sunshine for you, as there is for all of us if we but look for it."

"No," replied the moody one. "I have not a single friend and no relatives with whom I am on speaking terms."

"Cheer up, then," advised the other, with a shade of envy in his tone. "Can't you be glad because you will not have to buy any Christmas presents?"

ZANZIBAR CLOVES.

East Indian Workers Largely Employed in Industry.

In his annual report for the year 1914 by the Resident of Zanzibar, he points out that eight or ten years ago all the earthen vessels employed for the storage or carriage of water were imported from India.

Since then potters from India have settled in the town of Zanzibar and in several villages in the south of the island and manufacture these vessels, as well as flower pots, etc. The earthenware cooking pots which are used so much by natives and Indians have always been and are still being made only by Swahilis.

There are about 25 to 30 Indian gold and silver smiths, mostly from Cutch, who are employed in making native jewelry, coffee pots, sword handles, and a number of other curios.

The clove industry dates from 1818, and in 1860 an output of about seven million pounds in weight had been attained. In 1872 the plantations of Zanzibar were devastated by a hurricane, and consequently most of the trees in the island date from that time. The average output of recent years has been about 14,000,000 lb. The largest crop was that of the season 1911-12—yielding 28,000,000 lb., of which Pemba contributed 20,000,000 lb.

It is stated that the main drawbacks to European exploitation have hitherto been the unhealthiness of the islands, which renders living in the interior practically impossible for whites, the absence of roads, and the lack of labor. Of recent years, however, sanitation has made great progress, and has been accompanied by a corresponding improvement in the health of the European population.

The missions, which have been established for a long time, cannot be said to have made their influence very widely felt in this respect. This may be attributed to the unfortunate isolation in which the trained native artisan has been called upon to work. The Indian opposition has been too strong for him, and he has quietly disappeared from an unequal contest.

Fishing is done by natives in galawas, or dug-out canoes with outriggers, which generally go out with one rising tide and return with the next. The greater part of the fishing is done with hooks and lines. Nets of various primitive sorts are used, but only near shore or inside reefs. Fishing traps in the shape of large baskets are also employed, and in many villages fishing stakes, which last for about six or eight months, are erected.

Of late years a class of fishermen, mostly from Diu (Portuguese India), have settled in Zanzibar, bringing with them their own dug-outs. They are hard working people and are fast supplanting the more indolent native.

Famous Echoes.

Among the most noted echoes is that heard from the suspension bridge across the Menai Strait. The sound of a blow from a hammer on one of the main piers of the structure is returned in succession from each of the cross-beams that support the roadway and from the opposite pier at the distance of 576ft., in addition to which the sound is many times repeated between the water and the roadway at the rate of twenty-eight times in five seconds.

Outside Shipley Church, in Sussex, is an echo which repeats twenty syllables in the most remarkable manner.

The famous echo at Woodstock, when awakened, answers no fewer than fifty times.

In the Whispering Gallery of St. Paul's Cathedral the faintest sound is faithfully conveyed from one side of the dome to the other, but cannot be heard at any intermediate point.

In Gloucester Cathedral a gallery of an octagonal form conveys a whisper 74ft. across the nave.

IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

Take Salts to flush Kidneys neutralize irritating acids

Kidney and bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter the acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation, and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in avoiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist, and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralise the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders, caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink, which quickly relieves bladder trouble.

Wars and Words.

The wars with Spain in the sixteenth century enriched the English language with many new words. To them, as Logan Pearsall Smith has pointed out, "we owe the Spanish words 'embargo' and 'contraband' and the Dutch word 'freebooter.' Among other Dutch or Flemish terms that were perhaps brought back to England by soldiers in their campaign in the low countries may be mentioned 'furlough,' 'cashier,' 'league,' 'sconce,' 'onslaught,' 'drill' and 'domineer.' 'Comrade' is a Spanish word, but seems to have been a soldiers' term learned in the low countries, and 'forlorn hope' is a military phrase, being the Dutch 'verloren hoop,' in which 'hoop' means a troop and is cognate with our word 'heap.'"—London Chronicle.

Great Scheme.

"I'm going to marry a girl ten years older than I am," says the philosopher of folly, "so that I can catch up with her by the time I'm fifty."

The busy man is troubled with but one devil, the idle man by a thousand. —Spanish Proverb.

Would Wake Up With Smothering Spells.

There is nothing that brings with it such a fear of impending death as to wake up in the night with that awful sense of smothering. The terrible smothering, choking up and sinking feeling is caused by the heart and nerves being in a deranged condition, and calls for prompt relief.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the only remedy that can give prompt relief and effect a complete cure in all cases of such severity.

They strengthen and invigorate the heart, tone up the nervous system, and the trouble which is the cause of so much fear and anxiety becomes a thing of the past.

Mrs. Wm. McElwain, Temperance Vale, N.B., writes: "I am not much of a believer in medicines, but I must say Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are all right. Some years ago I was troubled with smothering spells. In the night I would be sound asleep, but would wake up with my breath all gone, and think I would never get it back again. I was telling a friend of my trouble, and he advised me to use Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. He also gave me a box which I tried, and I had only taken a few of them when I could sleep all night without any trouble. I did not finish the box until some years later, when I felt my trouble coming back. I took the rest and they have cured me entirely."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

CHILD'S KIMONO.

By Anabel Worthington.

Little girls as well as women have found out the comfort of the kimono. This garment is suitable for the little miss who attends boarding school and also for the one who is at home, for both are obliged to pass through corridors and passages where it is draughty and in any case where other members of the family are encountered.

This kimono may be made full length to serve as a wrapper or shorter to be used as a sacque. Each half is in one piece, with the closing in the centre of the front and with a seam down the centre of the back. The sleeves are short, but it is easy to lengthen them when the pattern is placed upon the material, as a thirty-six inch width allows plenty of extra goods beyond the edge of the sleeve in the pattern.

Such fabrics as challis, cashmere, outing flannel and many light colored novelty goodsone are used for these garments and the use of a bright colored ribbon as a trimming for the free edges will make it youthful and childlike.

The kimono pattern, No. 7,401, is cut in sizes 4, 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Medium size requires for long kimono 4¼ yards of 36 inch material with ⅛ yard of 27 inch contrasting goods to trim.

This pattern can be obtained by sending to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

Greece Has Entered Into An Agreement With the Allies

Officially Announced From Athens That Greece Will Demobilize 50 Per Cent. of Her Troops Under an Agreement With the Entente Powers—Feeling Between Allied Troops and Greek Forces is Increasingly Friendly and if the Bulgarians Invade Grecian Territory They Will Be Attacked.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

ATHENS, Dec. 14.—Athens officially announces that Greece will demobilize fifty per cent. of her troops under an agreement just entered into with the Allies.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—The Daily Telegraph this morning publishes a special despatch from Salonika, which reports that the commanders of the Greek forces there, in addition to despatching troops to other vital points, are assisting in every way to transform the port into a formidable one for the Allies. Moreover, nearly all despatches agree that while the Greeks may permit the Allied forces to settle scores with the Austro-German troops, if the Bulgarians, who continue to boast that they will hold Monastir permanently, invade Greek territory, nothing can stop the Hellenic army from attacking the hereditary foe. It is learned from excellent sources that the feeling between the Greek troops and the Allies is increasingly friendly, and that the soldiers of King Constantine are eagering awaiting the word which will give to them the chance to fight the Bulgarian army.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—Germany apparently has no intention of permitting Greece to grant any further concessions to the Allies without a vehement protest. Reuter's correspondent at Athens says German diplomats already have taken steps, which are likely to add considerably to Greece's difficulties if pressed. No official communication issued thus far at Athens regarding the exchange of views between German and Greek diplomats, but Greek officials admit the situation is becoming more delicate.

SYDNEY, N.S., Dec. 14.—The coastal steamer Senlac, owned at this port, with a cargo of live stock from Charlottetown, caught fire this morning, and burned to the water's edge.

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—Great Britain's action in mobilizing her American securities for trading purposes in the United States was generally applauded by the New York bankers to-day. They hold that this move not only would relieve the economic situation in England that might have become serious, but that it would also prove of great benefit to American industries. It was the general belief in financial circles that the British Government, in purchasing American securities from English holders, is preparing to establish new credits in this country and secure one huge loan or several loans. Of the estimated two billions worth of American securities held in Great Britain, practically all are railroad and other "gilt-edged" securities. New York bankers said they would be glad to take them to exchange for credits needed by Great Britain. There is little or no prospect that the American securities market would be affected by the transfer.

THE COURAGE OF THE SERBS

Mrs. Walter Roger, Park Street, received a letter from her sister, Miss Wallis, a nurse, with a Canadian hospital, in Paris, in which she tells her of a conversation with an English nurse who had recently worked among the Serbians. Speaking of her talk with this nurse she says:

"She is most enthusiastic about the Serbs. They are so extraordinarily simple and courageous. She told of a man of 22 years who had both legs amputated. When he was well enough they wrote for his parents to come and take him home, so his father of 60 came down the mountain with a little hand cart. "Now my son is home, and can no longer fight," he said, "I will go and take his place."

GUN EXPLODED AND YOUTH WAS SEVERELY INJURED

Leonard Newham, Son of Mr. and Mrs. John Newham, of Smith, Had Right Hand and Arm Badly Hurt

WAS OUT HUNTING

As a result of a double-barrelled gun which he attempted to discharge, exploding, Leonard Newham, the fourteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Newham, Smith Township, about ten miles from the city, is now lying in Nicholls Hospital severely injured. The thumb of his right hand was completely severed. A large piece of bone in the arm above the wrist was shot away, and the cords and blood vessels of the arm were badly injured. Owing to a great loss of blood, the young lad was unconscious for some time.

Went Shooting.

In company with some friends the unfortunate lad went to the woods for a hunt on Saturday afternoon. James Bell, son of Mr. Harry Bell of Smith, had loaded the gun rather heavily with white shot. Leonard Newham took it from him and in attempting to discharge it the firearm exploded, the boy getting the contents in the hand and arm. The gun was blown to pieces.

At the time of the accident the boys were three miles from Mr. Newham's home. One of the company was despatched to Lakefield to secure a doctor, while the others secured a conveyance to remove the injured boy to his home.

When Dr. Fraser of Lakefield reached the boy he at once saw that he would have to be removed to the hospital. After temporarily dressing the wounds the trip was commenced to Nicholls Hospital. Four doctors were required to attend the injury. The youth was in an unconscious condition for some hours, following the accident. At noon to-day he was reported to be doing nicely.

FINE PROGRAMMES ARRANGED FOR CONCERTS OF THE 93rd BAND

Peterboro's Overseas Band Will Give Two Entertainments in the Grand Opera House on Friday and Saturday of This Week—Major Hamilton Here To-day—Battalion Has Strength of 450—To-day's Military News.

The 93rd Band has arranged a most attractive programme for their two concerts in the Grand Opera House on Friday and Saturday of this week, the proceeds of which will be in aid of the band fund. In addition to seven numbers by the band there will be instrumental and vocal solos, among those contributing to the programme being Lieuts. Raymond and Bailey. A feature of the band's programme will be the descriptive number, "Under Freedom's Flag," a grand selection of national airs of the allies. Selections from "Faust" and "Maritana" and two overtures, "Bohemian Girl" and "Le Diadem" are other sterling numbers that will be given by Bandmaster Hughes' organization. The admission will be 25c. to all parts of the house on either night and it is expected that bumper houses will greet the khaki-clad musicians. Following is the programme:

March, 'Fillmore Triumphal'—Band.
Overture, 'Bohemian Girl'—Band.
Song, 'Heroes and Gentlemen' — Lieut. Raymond.
'Cello solo, 'Melody in F'—Pte. T. Smith.

Selection, 'Faust'—Band.
Song, 'Selected'—Mr. T. Stratton.
Overture, 'Le Diadem'—Band.
Descriptive, 'Under Freedom's Flag' —Band.
Grand selection of national airs of the Allied Forces.
God Save the King.

TO-DAY'S ORDERS.

The following Battalion Orders by Lt.-Col. J. Mills, Officer Commanding 93rd Overseas Battalion, C.E.F., were read to-day:

Headquarters,
Peterborough, Ont., Dec. 14, '15.

1—Duties—

Orderly Officer for to-day—Lieut. S. J. Raymond.
Orderly Officer for to-morrow—Lieut. F. S. Dupuy.
Orderly Officer for Thursday—T. W. B. Marling.

2—Parades—

Wednesday—
6.30 to 7.00—Physical Training.
8.30 to 10.00—Squad Drill, Sects. 36—46.
10.00 to 10.30—Orderly Room.
10.30 to 12.00—Extended Order Drill
2.00 to 4.30—Route March.

3—Strength, Taken On—

The following men having enlisted are taken on the strength of the 93rd Overseas Battalion, C.E.F., and posted to the Companies placed opposite their names from the dates mentioned:

John Moss "A" Co., Dec. 13th, 1915:
Thos. Edward Barnes "A" Co., Dec. 14, 1915.
William M. Hales, "A" Co., Dec. 14, 1915.
Philip Leo Russell, "A" Co., Dec. 14, 1915.
George Joseph Russell, "A" Co., Dec. 14, 1915.
Richard Lewis, "B" Co., Dec. 11, 1915.
Wm. Carl, "B" Co., Dec. 13, 1915.
Norman Clarke, "B" Co., Dec. 14, 1915.
Arthur Charman, "B" Co., Dec. 14, 1915.

Orderly Officers—

Owing to the limited accommodation, Orderly Officers will not sleep in the Barracks when on duty. They must, however, leave their last duty as late as possible. They will be permitted to go to their quarters for all meals

Transfers—

Sergt. Hawthorne having been transferred from the 33rd Field Battery C.E.F., is taken on the strength of the 93rd Overseas Battalion C. E F., from December 8th, 1915.

Telephones—

Company Commanders and officers in command of details will forward as soon as possible the number of the telephones of all Officers to the Battalion Orderly Room. Any change of numbers should be reported at once

Sanitary Conditions—

It has been brought to the attention of the Officer Commanding that some men are violating the sanitary orders posted in the rooms, by spitting in the rooms and in the pails set aside for use of fire protection. This is a filthy habit and will not be tolerated, and the D. C. O. or man who sees another committing this nuisance is as guilty as the offender if he does not report the matter to his superior.

Leave of Absence—

The Commanding Officer has been pleased to grant leave of absence as under:

Lieut. J. G. Quackenbush from Retreat 23rd inst. until 8.30 a.m., January 3, 1916.

Capt. R. S. Muir, from 23rd inst., 1915, to Dec. 28th, 1915.

Cleaning Rifles.

Musketry Regulations:

It is noticed that some confusion in instruction has arisen regarding the use of the pull-through. Paragraph 93 Musketry Regulations 1909 (Reprint 1912) advises the use of boiling water as described in paragraph 101. If this is not available fouling may be removed by the use of flannelette, and if this is not satisfactory the use of the gauze may be necessary.

It should be generally recognized that the use of the gauze is liable to destroy the life of a barrel (see paragraph 90, M.R., Pt. I) and this means "cleaning should not be employed unless absolutely necessary. It will be found as a general rule that a free use of flannelette and oil will prevent rust and the gauze should only be used when ordered by an Officer or a non-commissioned officer who understands the care of arms.

Conduct at Tables—

Loud and boisterous conduct must cease at the dining tables when the men are at their meals. Drumming or playing with knives, forks, or spoons, must be discontinued; also it should be always borne in mind that the manners of the men at the tables is a fair indication of the morale of the men and it must be always remembered that the men are at a parade, and the conduct should be just the same when dining as it would be on the Commanding Officers' parade, and it is hoped that no further complaints will be received.

J. Mills, Lt.-Col.
Officer Commanding 93rd Battalion
C. E. F.

Another pair of brothers have enlisted in the 93rd Battalion. Yesterday the two brothers of Pte. Wm. Russell joined the Peterborough battalion, so that there are now three Russell brothers as well as three Windovers in the battalion. Altogether there are nineteen pairs of brothers in the local overseas unit.

Major Hamilton, the assistant Director of Supplies and Transport for the 3rd Division is paying an official visit to the 93rd Battalion to-day.

Lt.-Col. Mills of the 93rd Battalion held a consultation this afternoon with Mr. E. G. Patterson, superintendent of the Canadian General Electric Works in regard to the guards which are to be placed around the C.G.E. A definite announcement in regard to this work will be made to-morrow.

Armourer Sergt. Geo. Grange and Corp A. E. Lacey of the 93rd Battalion, leave on Thursday for Kingston to take up a course in connection with armourer's work. They will go to Quebec for a further course after finishing at Kingston.

Yesterday's heavy snow fall did not interfere with the training of the men of the 93rd Battalion, who carried out their usual routine on the parade ground.

Pte. Leo Burt of No. 4 platoon has been detailed for duty as hospital orderly.

Sergt. W. J. Lemay is orderly sergeant, and Corp. Geo. Milton orderly corporal for this week.

The 93rd Battalion has now two Russians on its strength. One has been a member of the battalion since it was first organized, and another, Pte. J. Merek, who was born in Lublin, Russia Poland, was taken on the strength yesterday.

$300 FINE IMPOSED ON JOSEPH LA VASSEUR

Accused Who Was Charged With the Illegal Sale of Liquor Was Not Present This Morning When the Case Was Called—Warrant Issued For His Arrest.

THE EVIDENCE

Joseph LaVasseur was fined three hundred dollars in this morning's police court. Accused was convicted of illegally selling liquor on Saturday evening last on the premises formerly occupied by the Marlborough Club at 413 1-2 George street. LaVasseur did not answer when his name was called in court this morning. A warrant was immediately issued for his arrest. In default of payment, LaVasseur will have to serve three months in gaol.

A number of frequenters gave evidence relating to the modus operandi of the establishment conducted by LaVasseur. Four pool tables were located on the third floor. It was here that the frequenters in question were located when the police entered the premises on Saturday evening last. A number of empty glasses were found on one of the tables. At first the men declined to reveal their identity, but relented when they were removed to the police station. They subsequently made a statement, which was duly signed and attested to in the presence of Chief Thompson. Two of the men claimed to have paid LaVasseur twenty-five cents for a couple of drinks. One youth, who gave his age as eighteen, admitted being under the influence of liquor when the raid was made.

Confiscated the Liquor.

The police visited the second floor, which was occupied by La Vasseur and his wife. Here they found a number of cases containing bottled lager. On one of the cases was the remnants of an old label, which bore the address of a married woman residing in Galt. The latter is a local option town. The tumblers and the empty bottle, out of which the men was supposed to have been served, was also put as evidence.

License Inspector Stewart gave a detailed account of the raid. His story was corroborated by Chief Thompson.

GOVERNMENTS NEGOTIATING

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 14.—Negotiations are proceeding between the Federals and the Provincial Ontario authorities in connection with the lease and disposal of water powers on the Trent, Welland and other canals in the Province. Premier Hearst and Hon. Howard Ferguson have been negotiating for the Province, and Hon. Messrs. Cochrane, Hazen and Doherty for the Federal Government. The Dominion Government has constructed the canals, but the water powers are claimed by the Province. It is therefore claimed that in regard to leases already granted by the Dominion Government half the revenue will revert to the province.

BADGE FOR THOSE REJECTED FAVOURED BY JUDGE HUYCKE

In His Address to Grand Jury This Afternoon Wherein He Emphasized Need of Co-operation in Recruiting For 93rd

ONE CASE FOR JURORS

The only civil action before the General Sessions of the County Court, which opened this afternoon with Judge Huycke presiding, was postponed until a date to be agreed upon in January. In this case Harvey Township ask for an injunction to restrain Garrett P. Galvin from using part of what is claimed to be a public highway, and which the municipality states the defendant has fenced in. It crossed Lot One on the 16th Concession. A claim for damages for trespass is made by the defendants. Peck, Kerr and McElderry represent the plaintiff, and Mr. D. O'Connell is counsel for Mr. Galvin. Mr. O'Connell was out of the city, and Mr. Peck stated that they had agreed upon a postponement with the Court's permission.

The personnel of the Grand Jury is as follows, with Mr. Oke, foreman:

Richard Andrews, Asphodel.
Wm. Beatty, Harvey.
Geo. Bathgate, Peterborough.
Felix Brownscombe, Peterborough
Theodore Crawford, Lakefield.
Walter McKee, North Monaghan.
James McDonald, Peterborough.
Peter Nicholls, Smith.
W. J. Oke, Peterborough.
Ward Patterson, Havelock.
John Renwick, Otonabee.
Isaac Sage, Smith.
Howard Smithson, Otonabee.

The Judge's Address.

His Honour Judge Huycke made the customary address to the Grand Jurors regarding their duties. In the investigation of the public institutions he requested that particular inquiry be made into the circumstances which have necessitated the holding in the jail since November 2nd, of a boy of sixteen years, who has been committed to an asylum for the insane. It was not proper that he should be held here for that period, although there may be palliative conditions which, however, should be pointed out. The jail calendar shows thirteen prisoners, most of them for light offences.

Judge Huycke mentioned the absence of Sheriff Hall, who is confined to his home as the result of an accident he sustained a short time ago.

Certain phases of the war situation recived special attention from His Honour, who remarked that he had no intention of complaining, but although Peterborough and Canada, as a whole have done well in their contribution toward the prosecution of the war, we have not begun to equal what the Motherland has done, nor what our Allies have done, nor even the sacrifices of our sister Dominions within the Empire. Certainly our

MARVELLOUS MUSIC

Wonderful Russians Extraordinary Inspiration

Leo, Jan and Mischel Cherniavsky have created an impression in Canada that will undoubtedly leave its effects for many years to come. It has been said by the critics, that no artists in the history of Canada have ever created such enthusiasm and such interest in music. They have probably done more to stimulate music in Canada than any twelve great artists that have visited the Dominion.

The Melbourne "Age" of June 23, speaking of the Cherniavskys, says:

"The clever trio, the Cherniavsky brothers, Leo, Jan and Mischel, violinist, pianist and 'cellist all gave proof of their musicianship. A few years ago they were regarded as wonder-children, but now they have entered the ranks of mature artists, and must be regarded as such. To an audience that comprised a large section of the "popular element" the chamber music of Tschaikowsky and concertos for violin by Paganini and Liszt must have come as an unexpected experience. Jan Cherniavsky made a great impression. His interpretation was marked by an admirable grasp of the essential spirit of the rhapsodic music, and also by the brilliance of his technique. He was recalled several times, and added Paderewski's Minuet and a Toccata by Leschetitzsky as encores. Mischel Cherniavsky chose for his 'cello solos a beautiful Cantabile by Cupid, Popper's "Arlequin" and as the extra numbers the latter composer's Papillon and the Broken Melody (Van Biene). The early promise of Mischel Cherniavsky is being amply fulfilled, and the future will hear more of him. Leo Cherniavsky gave a spirited performance of Paganini's violin concerto No. 2 in D major—the wolf written cadenza being from the artist's own pen. In the early portion of the programme, the Cherniavskys gave an enjoyable rendering of Tschaikiwsky's A minor trio in which collectively and individually they were heard to advantage, the sensitive and delicate work of Leo Cherniavsky being particularly noticeable.

These young geniuses will give one concert to-night at the Grand Opera House.

HOOT AND FIGHT.

In the Italian Chamber of Deputies, a member making a speech in denunciation of the submarine murders, mentioned the name of Emperor William. The entire Chamber hooted the name of the imperial reprobate. This may seem a childish exhibition of splees, but when to hooting, the Italians add the most plucky and successful fighting of the war, it is quite excusable. And it may do the Kaiser good—help to further show him that he and his cause have earned the scorn and condemnation of the civilized world.

"THIS GLORIOUS UNDERTAKING"

"When the war started what should have been the attitude of the Liberal party? I have already told you that the Liberal idea was a passion for right and justice. Britain to-day is fighting in Europe for these ideas. Britain did not seek this war, but rather sought to avoid it, and she could have avoided it if she had wished to accept the shameful proposal of Germany. But she did not do so, and to-day she is fighting for the independence of Belgium and for the integrity of France and to save civilization. This is why I declared that I would support the Government of Canada and that Canada should participate with all her forces in this glorious undertaking."—Sir Wilfrid Laurier at Montreal.

SAVING AND GIVING.

While not desiring to carpingly criticise Hon. Mr. Asquith's government, his formal declaration of its decision to not reduce the salaries of members of parliament as a measure of economy, hardly seems in keeping with the Premier's appeal for economy on the part of the people. One may not know the personal position of the members of the British Parliament. It is known, however, that many of the members have little private means, while others have superabundant financial resources. Many of them may be liberal supporters of war funds of various kinds; and confiscating their salaries might be working an injustice and involve greater sacrifice than the generality of the people are called upon to make or do make. There are, perhaps, many who might surrender all, or a good share of, their official salary, for war fund purposes, as might do many members of the Canadian parliament.

There are many cases in Canada in which the private means of the member requires no indemnity to secure him against loss in the discharge of his public duties. In such cases it does not seem too much to ask that they surrender a part or all of their sessional indemnity of $2,500 per session to the Patriotic or Red Cross Funds. We are told of one member of Parliament who gives the whole of his sessional indemnity to the Red Cross Fund. Here is an example for others to follow. If it were practical to have this done all around the sum thus available for patriotic purposes would be a great one. If every member of parliament should, as we are told one has done, surrender his whole sessional indemnity to the Red Cross fund, the result would be an addition of $565,000—220 members, at $2,500 each. If to this were added the salaries of nineteen ministers, at $7,000 each, we should have added $133,000, and should have a total of $698,000.

It may seem unreasonable to ask this and nobody does ask it. It would be a great sacrifice in some cases, but in scores of others it could be done without any sacrifice. Even if there were sacrifices it would be only what thousands of others are doing who are no more called upon to make sacrifices than members of parliament, who, in their representative capacity should represent the spirit of the people in this as in other things. When, as is done in Peterborough, wives and mothers of soldiers at the front, contribute to the Patriotic Fund—surrender part of the benefits they are entitled to derive from it, surely it would not be an extravagant request to ask that members of Parliament and of Legislatures should fall in line to a greater or lesser degree.

DANGER OF RECKLESS DRIVING.

Are Peterborough citizens to continue to be subjected to the danger of accident and death from reckless drivers of both autos and horse-drawn vehicles? Yesterday the newspapers recorded two instances in which citizens were seriously injured by drivers of an auto and horse vehicle, respectively. That there were not two men killed was due to good fortune and not to the drivers, themselves. That these two men had a disregard for human life is shown by the fact that after committing their crime neither of them stopped to see what injury he knew must have been committed.

In this way they escape detection, and cannot be brought to account; and in this way the authorities are responsible for the injury or loss of life that may ensue. It is declared that the traffic by-law is shamefully disregarded, and, for some reason, not strictly enforced. That the by-law is disregarded we can all see for ourselves how the speed limit is exceeded and other requirements of the traffic by-law disregarded; and that the law is not enforced is evident from a statement made by a citizen to the effect that he heard an auto driver who was caught red-handed, so to speak, in a breach of the traffic by-law by a city policeman, defy the officer to prosecute him. He admitted that he was going down George street at twenty miles an hour, but that he "had something on" the policeman, and the latter dare not arrest him. Another, a chauffeur has been driving a car without a license, and when asked for one by the police he defied them to arrest him or prosecute him—he also had "something on" the policeman that paralyzed his action when the lives and safety of citizens were involved. If such things can be it is time they were remedied. How reckless drivers can have such a hold on the law that it is afraid and powerless to act, is difficult to understand.

There is, with the law enforced to the letter, enough opportunity to drivers of autos and vehicles to endanger life and limb. The speed limit is constantly exceeded, and it is too high—ten miles an hour on George street. The driver of a horse-drawn vehicle proceeding at ten miles an hour on George street would be, or should be, arrested for furious driving, and he would be no greater danger to pedestrians than an auto driven at a like speed.

Another dangerous practice is turning corners at high speed. When all parts of a street are used for crossing such a driver is liable, on turning a corner at high speed, to strike somebody down. Altogether there is too much reckless driving of autos. Some drivers seem to think that they have sole right on the street. They see a pedestrian crossing the street in front of them. Though the law gives pedestrians the right of way, the driver does not slacken speed, but drives recklessly on—if the pedestrian does not get out of the way, and is hurt, that is his look-out.

Attention should be effectively given to the danger to the limbs and life of the public through recklessly conducted street traffic. So far nobody has been killed; but every day we see narrow escapes, and some of these days a human life will be sacrificed to the spirit of disregard of the safety of the public. Not only the public demand it, but decent drivers of autos who have some regard for human life, do not wish to be included in the general condemnation passed upon the few reckless persons that are a constant menace to the safety of life and limb.

THE NEW NOTE.

It has been slow in coming, but better late than never. Too long have our publicists referred to Canada as "helping the Motherland in her hour of need." The "defence of Canada" is the new and correct note for our military activities. Laurier, Lemieux, Casgrain and Papenaude have recently used it in Quebec, and now comes Hon. P. E. Blondin, suspect because of some unwise utterances in 1911.

Blondin tells Quebec: "Ruin is at our doors. War is in our midst. It is a war without a din of cannon at our borders, but war nevertheless."

Those of us who said this months ago mostly got laughed at for our pains. We were silly alarmists. The new note requires sounding in Ontario as well as in Quebec. We have got to get down to the real business of war. — Ottawa Free Press.

The Relation of the Banking And Financial Interests To Canada's Present and Future

Wherever it is read, Mr. H. V. Meredith's address, as President, at the annual meeting of the Bank of Montreal, will inspire confidence in the financial situation of Canada. At the same time the banker's note of caution was not wanting. He said that, despite the war, the trade of the Dominion had been well maintained both in volume and in character. The favourable trade balance now established and steadily increasing gave good ground for confidence. The oversubscription of the domestic war loan evinced at once the patriotic spirit of the people and their ability to bear the financial strain of the war. Largely owing to the strength of the banking position the country was equal to the demands upon it without curtailing the supply of credit and capital for business purposes. Mr. Meredith suggested that the conversion of floating into fixed capital might be carried to dangerous lengths but The Daily News believes that the banks will loyally support Mr. White's proposal to create a growing British credit in this country so that the greatest possible contracts for war munitions may be secured for Canadian plants.

Passing to the future, Mr. Meredith said: "After the war, a readjustment of trade conditions is to be expected. The flood of wealth which has attended the export of munitions and war supplies must of necessity be largely curtailed, and a new set of problems will have to be faced. As I have said on former occasions when I have had the pleasure of addressing you, if economy be exercised to meet the increased burden of taxation, of which we must bear our share, and the production of exportable articles increased to the utmost extent, to protect our gold supply and minimize our borrowings, and if we keep strong in working capital, then no matter what difficulties the future may have in store for us, we can look forward to them with a degree of complacency. Our agricultural resources and undeveloped wealth will enable us to bear the strain which may be imposed upon us, and we shall in the end come safely through the period of economic unheaval and world-wide conflict — with a larger debt, it is true, but with our ability to meet it unquestioned and our economic position not seriously impaired."

In order that there may be no failure here timely action must be taken by the Government and by business interests, acting in concert. This was the message which Hon. Robert Rogers gave to the country in his Winnipeg address. We must organize before the war is over to shorten the period of industrial readjustment that will follow the cessation of war orders and to continue the business of the nation on a prosperous basis. As Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor has said, the extent to which the development of the Dominion can be accelerated depends largely upon the rate of increase which can be secured in our farming population. This also is a question to which the Government must turn its attention, so that Canada may reap the largest possible benefit from the heavy emigration which is likely to take place from Europe on the conclusion of peace.—Toronto News.

Bagdad the Fencing Ground of Diplomats

Is the Dominant City of Ottoman Empire

"Bagdad, as the fencing ground of generations of the most skilful of European diplomats and secret agents, and as one of the most important strategic centres in the Near East, forms the subject of a bulletin just issued by the National Geographic Society, which sketches the great political and economic advantages of the ancient capital of the Mohammedan world, upon which the soldiers of Great Britain are slowly closing. The bulletin reads as follows:

"Bagdad is the dominant city of the eastern part of the Ottoman Empire, yielding little in importance to its great sister metropolis upon the Bosphorous. As Constantinople is the guarding heart and brain of Turkey in the west, so Bagdad is the strength of the Empire's eastern defense. Within its boundaries are the administors, the officers, the supply depots, and the bureaus for organization, operation and supply, which constitute the backbone of defense in the whole Mesopotamian division of Turkey.

"The ancient city, moreover, lies upon the natural line of communication between Persia and the West, and between the West and the Persian Gulf. Three ancient caravan routes, one from Khorasan, another up the Euphrates into Syria, and the last up the Tigris into the Armenian plateau and to the Black Sea behind it, were the elements of Bagdad's trading strength in ancient times. To-day, its importance is almost wholly bound up in the potential wealth of its surrounding plains, watered by the Tigris and the Euphrates; where among earth's earliest civilizations dawned, flourished, decayed and shrank into oblivion; and in its dominating position upon the lines of communication between India, Persia and the West.

"Bagdad the Magnificent is now a decaying city, and the years that have rolled by since Turkish overlordship first began, for Mohammedan lands of the Near East have seen it sink slowly in importance as a mart for international trade, as a station on the path of the rich merchandise caravans from the East and the West, and as the center of a land of abundant harvest. It is still, however, the second city in the Empire, and its loss to the Turk would be relatively almost as great as the loss of Chicago would be to the United States. But more than this, the nation of the West controlling Bagdad, would control the whole fruitful area between the world's two most historic rivers;—the Tigris and the Euphrates—would dominate the Persian Gulf; and would exercise a powerful influence in the affairs of Southern Persia. Thus an English conquest here, would place the empire's northern frontier about India beyond the peril of attack.

"Bagdad has awakened during recent years, and has given its strength to schemes for reclaiming the vast waste areas about it by irrigation. It planned the expenditure of $120,000,000 for the reclamation of 12,500,000 acres, and as an immediate project, it decided upon the reclaiming of a tract of more than 3,000,000 acres. A new order of things began for the time-burdened city in the few years before the outbreak of the war, and hints of the nervous, keen, hasty, modern life of the West were multiplying. The restless beat of the American oil engine was replacing the more deliberate ways of the donkey and heat-oppressed human. Oil wells were sunk in the Karun River region, south of Bagdad, and American well drills were employed. Oil refineries were built here, and modern Bagdad contemplated industries for the manufacture of native materials supplied with this fuel. Before the discovery of oil Bagdad's industry was hampered by the exorbitant prices which coal brought in this region so distant from its source of production —$15 and $20 per ton. Bitumen and asphalt lakes and springs around on the northern reaches of the Tigris, and promise riches to a future Bagdad.

"The city has a population of about 200,000, and is governed by a Pasha who is assisted by a council. The Pasha comes from Constantinople. There is some difference between the ruling Turks from Constantinople and the native Arab population of Bagdad, as the Turks are Sunnites and the Arabs are Shi'lites. Their religious difference has many times prevented harmonious co-operation between the Turk and the Arab.

"The city does an annual trade in normal times in imports and exports of about $15,000,000, buying oil, cheap cottons, shoes and other western manufactures, and selling hides, wool and dates. Germany, England and Russia have been the strongest dealers in diplomacy and commerce at Bagdad.

"The city lies about 500 miles from the Persian gulf following the course of the river. The Tigris, like the Danube, is the great water highway of an agriculture country; and it is the main artery of Bagdad's external traffic. It maintains, in times of peace, steam communications with its port toward the Persian gulf by means of one British and one Turk line of steamers. Steamer service on the Tigris ends at Bagdad, though sailing vessels ascend much higher up the river. Two lines of telegraph, one British and one Turkish, formerly connected this city with Europe, while, to the west the Euphrates furnished a water highway through many hundreds of miles to the northwest. Bagdad and Teheran, for years diplomacy's chief Near Eastern theaters of strategic endeavor, have been places of keenest interest to the foreign offices of England, Russia and Germany. In these two cities, the one the second city of the Turkish Empire and the other the capital of the decaying Persia, the great game of eastern politics was fought at close range with all the dexterity, which the great Empires could bring to bear. There, thus, attaches to an invasion of Bagdad, an importance far beyond the importance of the city's wealth or its military value."

NOT WHOLE PANE OF GLASS IN GORIZIA

GORIZIA, Dec. 13.—The city continues to be bombarded by the Italians. Every night several hundred shells drop in it. Of the 2,500 houses every one has been struck, and 1,500 have been badly damaged. Not a single church has escaped. There is not a whole pane of glass in the town. Everywhere you see heaps of debris one story high. Since the Italians shot the municipal gas works to pieces the city has been without light at night. Gorizia resembles that accursed black city of Maupassant's novel.

A 30.5 centimeter shell has just fallen before a coffee house, and the street has been turned into a yawning hole. The coffee house, which had long been closed, became strangely alive. The six pressure make the billiard tables dance; the billiard cues rattled from their racks; the red and white ivory balls struck against one another as if ghosts were playing.

Two streets from here is the grewsome "Square of Human Blood." There a heavy shell struck and, like a wild beast, tore men and women to pieces, and blood flowed in the gutters. The dead are no longer there, but small pools of blood remain, and in one lies a single head—all that is left of a man.

The Italians have killed 100 persons in Gorizia and seriously injured 120. Many hundreds have been hurt. The Italian Government wanted success at any price for the opening of Parliament. That is why the defenders of the Gorizia Bridgehead never refer to the fourth Isonzo battle by any name except the Parliament battle.

At present Oslavia is the hottest point of the fighting. There an almost regular routine is observed. First, the Italian attack; second, they take a part of a trench; third, there is a night counterattack; fourth, in the morning the trench is again in our hands.

Only a few hundred persons remain above ground in this city, formerly of thirty thousand. The old Gorizia no longer exists; nevertheless its former inhabitants are slowly returning. Daily fresh shells fall on the city, and daily more people come back. They are no longer inhabitants of old Gorizia, for they have founded a new city underground. Its inhabitants now number three thousand. They do not live in houses, but in cellars and in catacombs like the early Christians, where a pathetic primitive communism binds them together.

Not only the citizens, but the whole of official Gorizia as well, has crowded underground. The entire city Government has retired into the cellars. Here is a whole row of subterranean offices. Entering, you almost fall over a writing table and a straw seat. That is the Bureau of Finance. A straw stack lies near by. That is where the Finance Director sleeps.

Immediately adjoining is the Police Headquarters — table, stool, wash basin, robes, everything, in a space two yards square. To the right is another table. That is the Division of Sanitation. Here sits the chief municipal medical officer and the City School Inspector. Another table is the Municipal Building and Tenement Department. A smaller table is the Department of Charity and Census Bureau. Near by is a real treasure, a typewriter and behind a female stenographer, the only one on the premises.

Then follow the mail, bookkeeping, cashier's offices, and kitchen, for a well-regulated city government, for a well regulated city government, must have its own kitchen.

A straw mattress belongs to the inventory of every "office." Officials are not only working and resting, but sleeping there.

Gorizia has burrowed underground, but the cellar life has quickly developed a humor of its own. As I asked after a certain office, the official said that it had been burned down, but unfortunately the fire could be very quickly put out, so that many useless records were saved.

BABIES SCARCE IN CALIFORNIA

Only Six of Ten Mothers in Three Big Towns Have Over One

OAKLAND RATE LEADS

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Dec. 13.—According to figures presented at a meeting of the infant morality conference in the County Medical Society's library only six or ten mothers in San Francisco, Oakland, and Los Angeles have more than one child, while only one mother in 100 in the three cities has more than ten children.

These figures were supplied by George D. Leslie, chief of the bureau of vital statistics.

More Babies in Oakland.

Tabulations of the births in the cities mentioned for the first ten months of 1915 said Leslie, indicate that of every 100 mothers forty have but one child, twenty-five have two, thirteen have three and seven have four.

Oakland has a higher percentage of mothers who give birth to two or more children than either San Francisco of Los Angeles.

Lower Infant Mortality.

Infant mortality has been decreasing for several years. The rate is greater for boys than for girls. In San Francisco it is 82 per 1,000 births, in Alameda county 85 and in Los Angeles 75.

The infant mortality is highest in the counties of southern California, other than Los Angeles, with 113, and next in the interior counties with 91.

What Thin Folks Should Do To Gain Weight

Good Advice For Thin, Undeveloped Men and Women

Thousands of people suffer from excessive thinness, weak nerves and feeble stomachs, who having tried advertised flesh-makers, food-fads, physical culture stunts and rub-on creams, resign themselves to life-long skinniness and think nothing will make them fat. Yet their case is not hopeless. A recently discovered combination of assimilative agents has made fat grow after years of thinness, and it is also unequalled, judging from reports, for repairing the waste of sickness or faulty digestion, and for strengthening the nerves. This remarkable preparation is called Sargol. Six strength-giving, fat-producing assimilative elements of acknowledged merit have been combined in this preparation, which is endorsed and used by prominent people everywhere. It is absolutely harmless, inexpensive and efficient.

A few weeks systematic use of Sargol should go far to produce flesh and strength by correcting faults of digestion and by supplying nourishing fats to the blood. If not, every druggist who sells it is authorized to return the purchase price. Increased nourishment is obtained from the food eaten, and the additional fats that thin people need are thus provided. All leading druggists supply Sargol and say there is a large demand for it.

While this new preparation has from reports given splendid results as a nerve tonic and vitalizer, its use is not recommended to nervous people unless their wish to gain at least ten pounds of flesh.

If you find a druggist who is unable to supply you send $1.00 to Sargol Co., 76 St. Antoine St., Montreal, and a complete ten days treatment will be sent you postpaid

WAR TAX GOUGE MAKES HOLLAND WISH FOR PEACE

THE HAGUE, via London, Dec. 10.—Though Holland is determined to remain outside the conflict which rages so furiously around her, she nevertheless is affected deeply in many ways by the war. The principal effect is an economic one. Her working masses have a harder struggle to live and her prosperous classes are taxed more heavily.

Owing to circumstances beyond her control Holland has been compelled to increase taxation all round. To understand what this means to the Dutch taxpayers one must remember that at all times they are very heavily burdened with direct taxation, levied upon them in a variety of ingenious and curious ways.

Rijksinkomstenbelasting.

The heaviest tax a Dutchman has to pay is the income tax demanded, not that by the state, but by the community or city in which he lives. Speaking in round figures, and only approximately, a man in receipt of 2,000 guilders a year (1,500) will have to pay about $75 in this one income tax alone.

This is not at all a bad slice out of his earnings. But he cannot by any means pocket the rest and enjoy life without further molestation. No sooner has he paid the first than there comes another demand.

This is the "Rijksinkomstenbelasting," or state income tax. On this head a smaller sum is demanded, the state contenting itself with dipping less deeply into the purses of the people.

No Chance to Escape.

There is no chance of escaping either of these taxes for those whose incomes are fixed. Employers are bound by law to deliver up the figures relating to those they employ.

The man who makes his income in various ways, at odd times, and in odd sums, and who is his own master to the extent that he has control of what is not entered in books before it passes to his pockets, is the man who possibly escapes the full force of the "belasting."

That there are such men seems certain, for a former member of the Dutch government has said that if all paid according to their full incomes the rate of taxation could be reduced from the present 5¼ per cent. to 3 per cent. At present a man earning $1,500 a year will pay between $150 and $200 in direct taxes.

A SERVICE OF INTERCESSION IS PROPOSED

The following open letter has been addressed to the ministers, office-bearers, members and adherents of the Presbyterian Church in Canada:

Although the General Assembly has not given any instruction to its Moderator touching the subject-matter of this brief open letter, I think it highly proper, in the present circumstances of the Empire, earnestly to recommend that, throughout our Church, we devote the first Sunday in the New Year to the service of Intercession in behalf of the supreme National and Christian interests involved in the terrible war forced upon us, and upon our Allies. Other Churches in the Motherland and in Canada are taking such action. It is most desirable that this united and dutiful supplication to God should be as wide as possible. It will not fail of eminent blessing to the sacred cause so near the hearts of the people. And Sunday, beginning the week of Prayer, well befits the urgency and the opportunity.

M. Maggillivray,
Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church.
Kingston, Ont., December 9th, 1915.

EARL OF DERBY, BOSS RECRUITER, WHALE OF A MAN

Radiates Energy on his Job of Supplying England with More Soldiers

LONDON, Dec. 10.—The Earl of Derby, the man who is directing the greatest recruiting campaign the world has ever known, who is trying to save England from conscription, which would bring, if it were adopted, a blush of shame to every English cheek, is "a whale of a man."

He came suddenly into the room at the war office to say something about recruiting to a small group of American newspaper correspondents. The room, which was a large one, was crowded from that moment.

Lord Derby's physical bulk crowded it, but most of all the room was suddenly filled with a personality, a man who is doing now a great thing, and one who seems to be marked for still greater things, for if this recruiting scheme succeeds he will be a great political figure.

Two Life Ambitions.

It is said he has two ambitions, one to win the Derby, the great racing classic which an ancestor instituted, and the other to be prime minister of England.

He has never done either, but if his recruiting scheme is a success, his chances of achieving one of his great aims will be great.

Lord Derby is another bit of evidence. He is an engine. You can imagine him as a steam-roller or a thrashing machine. When he came hustling into the room he gave the impression that in his office next door he had just polished off three or four days' work since morning, and from what his subordinates tell of his methods and activity he probably had

He Radiates Energy.

His face is big and round, like his body. His hands are the hands of an aristocrat, coming from generations who never toiled, but they are firm and strong, with a powerful grip, a cordial clutch which seems to mean what it says. His eyes are large and dark and keen, and upon occasion they twinkle.

His whole bearing is one of energy and you can imagine him as a great politician. In the present crisis he is proving that that is just what he is, for he is making a splendid impression with all classes, high and low, which is a difficult thing for a politician to do in England.

Lord Derby told about the organization he has perfected, how the men of the nation are approached, how they have been divided into groups, beginning with the young single men and going on up by classes to the married men. He pointed out that it was the duty of every man from 19 to 40 to offer his services to the state.

"Up to forty years, three hundred and sixty-four days, in fact," said Lord Derby, "for we are counting a man still 40 until he is 41. That's what he does himself—claims to be 40 until his 41st birthday, so we do, too."

DANCE OF THE KILKARE KAMP

The dance committee of the Kilkare Kamp have sent out the invitations for their dance which promises to be one of the best of the season. One of the novelties of the evening will be a moonlight dance. Music will be provided by a first-class orchestra. Refreshments will be served by the Canadian Kitchener League. The officers of the Kamp are patrons of the event, as all the members of the club are in khaki. As their regatta last summer was a notable success, they can see no reason why their dance should not be as successful, as all the members are unsparing in their effort in that direction.

THE TOWNSHIP OF MANVERS RAISED $5,300

The Township of Manvers, in a recent campaign on behalf of the Red Cross Society and the Canadian Patriotic Fund, raised $5,300, a really splendid showing for this township. Speakers from the local Speakers' Patriotic League addressed the meeting in connection with the campaign.

THE SPIRES OF OXFORD.

By W. M. Letts.

I saw the spires of Oxford
As I was passing by.
The gray spires of Oxford
Against a pearl gray sky.
My heart was with the Oxford men
Who went abroad to die.
The years go fast in Oxford,
The golden years and gay.
The hoary colleges look down
On careless boys at play.
But when the bugles sounded war
They put their games away.
They left the peaceful river,
The cricket field, the quad,
The shaven lawns of Oxford
To seek a bloody sod—
They gave their merry youth away
For country and for God.
God rest you happy, gentlemen,
Who laid your good lives down,
Who took the khaki and the gun
Instead of cap and gown.
God bring you to a fairer place
Than even Oxford town.
—From the Westminster Gazette.

"Feed Hens Sour Milk If You Want Them To Lay in Winter

EAST AURORA, Dec. 13.—Eggs, as produced by the average farmer, are no longer a by-product in agricultural districts, in the opinion of Professor R. G. Moseley, of Cornell, who has been placed at the head of the local poultry bureau. The matter of producing fresh eggs for winter markets has became a science, and one that is paying a big profit to farmers and poultrymen.

Professor Moseley's mission to this district is to teach farmers and poultrymen how to make hens show a greater profit, and in order to accomplish this end winter eggs is one of the few channels to be employed in order to fatten up the credit side of the ledger.

"It is a mistaken idea," said Professor Moseley in a talk to poultrymen, "to suppose that if you throw your hens a few quarts of corn twice a day, that they will fill your egg basket. Cows, in order to produce great quantities of milk, are fed systematically, the feed changed at intervals, and the animals given careful attention at all times. Now, this same rule holds good with hens."

Too little attention is given to feeding sour milk to hens in the opinion of Professor Moseley. This product of the farm, available to nearly all, is universally fed to the swine, when the results from chickens, fed upon it, will discount any profits from pigs two-fold.

"I can say to farmers and poultry men, unhesitatingly, feed sour milk, then more sour milk, if you want winter eggs," said the Cornell instructor.

A good feed mash, moistened with milk, is one of the greatest egg producing rations. Sour milk can be bought here at several stations for from 2 to 3 cents per gallon and its worth is far above this figure. One of the biggest chicken supply houses in the United States (Park & Pollard), has this to say about the feeding of sour milk to poultry. "There may be a better feed for laying hens than sour milk, but we have never heard of it to this time."

Nearly all of the bakeries in this section of the country are now selling quantities of stale bread for chicken feed, and this product mixed with sour milk makes one of the very finest feeds for poultry and results show that the purchase of these two commodities is a highly paying investment for any poultryman.

Those interested in the poultry industry hereabouts will give the "Bread and Milk Diet" for laying hens a thorough tryout in response to Professor Moseley's instructions.

"It's a poor rule that don't work both ways." "Well, try telling a mother that she looks so like her daughter that you cannot tell them apart. And then try it on the daughter.

A beautiful answer was given by a little Scotch school girl. When her class was examined she was asked: "What is patience?" Her reply was, "Wait a wee, and dinna weary."

Mulligan:—"An' why do you want to sell yer nightshirt?" Finnegan—"Sure, an' what good is it to me now, whin I've me new job iv night watchman, an' slape in th' day toime?"

"Remember, Bangs, we are depending on your baby to cry lustily in the third act. Do you think he'll do his part?" Actor Father—"He ought to. He's been rehearsing every night for months."

"Well, may I hope, then, dearest, that at some time I may have the happiness of making you my wife?" "Yes, I hope so, I am sure," she replied; "I am getting tired of suing fellows for breach of promise."

Bob—"That boy of yours is a fine, tall lad, Jack, you should be proud of him." Jack—"I ain't though." Bob—"No! How's that?" Jack—"Why, he is eight inches taller than I am, and his mother insists on cutting his trousers down to fit me."

The Ten Commandments For Christmas Giving

Thou shalt love the giver of the gift because he has sent the gift.

2. Thou shalt remember first the very young and the very old.

3. Thou shalt buy within thy means, remembering the spirit of the gift and not the value.

4. Thou shalt not become a party to the mere exchange of gifts. Let thy heart go with each and every greeting or present thou sendest out.

5. Thou shalt make such gifts as thy skill may warrant, inasmuch as the work of thy hands gives added value to the offering.

6. Thou shalt tie up no bitter remembrances with a gift, but only peace and good will.

7. Thou shalt have thy gifts ready several days before the time of delivery, that the immediate days before Christmas may be filled with peace and happiness, and not with turmoil and frenzy.

8. Thou shalt seek the abodes of the poor and friendless with such wholesome gifts as may cheer and nourish their hungry bodies and hearts.

9. Thou shalt not gush over thy gifts. Thou shalt show thy gratitude in more sincere ways.

10. Thou shalt, at earliest opportunity, give written or verbal thanks for such kindness as thy friends may have bestowed upon thee at Christmas.

Belgium Refutes German Defence And Proves Germany the Aggressor

Tells of Britain's Efforts to Avoid War and Proposal For Conference on Serbia—Even France Sent Forces to German, Not to the Belgian Border.

AN IMPORTANT REJOINDER

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Asserting that the blame for the outbreak of the war in Europe has been historically established and that the facts cannot be altered by fragmentary documents now issued by the German Government, the Belgian Government, through its Legation at Washington, to-night issued a statement making formal response to the document recently issued by the German Government containing extracts from portions of many dispatches written by Belgian diplomats to the Belgian Foreign Office.

The text of the Belgian Government's rejoinder to the German Government is as follows:

"The German Government has just published (Nov. 20) some extracts from a small portion of the many dispatches written by Belgian diplomatists to the Belgian Foreign Office. It is impossible to form a just opinion as to the views of Belgian diplomats from these fragments of their letters; the unpublished documents might put the matter in an entirely different light, or might show that these diplomatists had entirely changed their views.

"However that may be, and whatever may be the more or less authenticity of the extracts published, it is impossible to understand how the views of the individuals, as expressed in these extracts, can in any way change the actual facts which were the causes of the present terrible conflict. In making a great publicity campaign in regard to this fragmentary correspondence Germany is trying to distract public attention from other diplomatic documents wherein are found the real causes of the war set forth with the utmost clearness and precision, namely, in the diplomatic correspondence published by the various powers.

"Germany tries to prove that for more than ten years there had existed a coalition against her, the conspirators being England, France, Russia, and Belgium, and that these countries let loose the dogs of war upon her when they thought the propitious moment had arrived—that is to say, in the summer of 1914.

"The truth of the matter is that up to the last moment England tried to avoid war, and that she proposed a conference of these interested powers to settle the Serbian question. When Belgium was invaded by Germany, England could not send a single soldier to help the Belgians. This in itself is sufficient refutation of Germany's claim that England had formed a coalition against her ten years previously and had chosen the hour of attack.

"Germany alleges that France had joined the coalition against her and had conspired with the Allies to attack her; yet at that moment France had withdrawn her troops ten kilometres from the German frontier to avoid any possible provocation for war. Moreover there was no French army on the Franco-Belgian frontier, and it was more than ten days before the French could come to the aid of Belgium.

"Russia also is accused by Germany of conspiring to select the hour of attack; yet Russia even at the last moment proposed to Germany that the Serbian affair be submitted to the Court of Arbitration at The Hague.

"What shall we say then? Was it Belgium that wanted war? Evidently not. Germany herself has proclaimed the innocence of Belgium. The Chancellor of the German Empire declared publicly in the Reichstag that, in attacking Belgium, Germany was acting in contravention of the law of nations. The German Minister for Foreign Affairs admitted to the British Ambassador that the only reason for invading Belgium was that the route through Belgian territory was the shortest and easiest way for the German Army to attack France.

"The history of the war shows how little prepared the Allies were for this conflict. On the other hand, Germany defeated all the efforts to maintain peace. She refused the conference proposed by England. She rejected the Czar's proposition to lay the matter before The Hague Court of Arbitration. She acknowledged that her invasion of Belgium was undertaken only for the purpose of attacking France, the German pretext being that France had the 'intention' of passing through Belgium, whereas, in fact, the French troops were so far from the Belgian frontier that it required ten days for them to come to assistance of Belgium.

"Germany, who claims to have been treacherously attacked, while thinking no evil and while living in peace and quietness, threw into Belgium over night a million and a half of troops to attack France. In the opinion of all the war correspondents, Germans as well as others, the world had never before seen such a formidable war machine nor one so powerfully equipped. This wonderful machine was, in reality, the result of forty years of preparation for the purpose of imposing upon Europe the autocratic regime of German militarism.

"All the German publications in the world cannot change these facts, which are now part of history."

This means that Peterborough has sent 3,000 packages of tobacco to the boys at the front. The cards from our first shipment should start to come in to Peterborough about Monday, Dec. 20th, as the tobacco would arrive at the front about Nov. 25th. Contributors should remember that it takes approximately two months for the cards to return and our first shipment left Peterborough Oct. 18th.

Help us keep up a continuous supply—contribute monthly.

AUSTRIANS SET FREE 25,000 PRISONERS

BERLIN, (by Wireless to Sayville, L.I.) Dec. 14.—Twenty-five thousand Austro-Hungarians who had been made prisoners by the Serbians were set free by the Teutonic forces during their drive through Serbia, a statement issued by the Overseas News Agency to-day says. Many others died during epidemics and the fate of still others is unknown.

"Serious fears are entertained regarding missing prisoners," says the news agency, "since Bulgarian officers have alleged that Austro-Hungarian prisoners were mercilessly treated by the Serbians during the campaign, the Serbians leaving them without food, and even killing prisoners in several instances. It has not been learned, however, whether the offences alleged were committed by irregulars or by roving bands."

It was Sidney Smith who said that three penny-bits were introduced for no other purpose than to enable Scotchmen to be generous.

SUPPLIES FROM LADIES OF GEORGE STREET CHURCH

The ladies of the George street Methodist church sent the following supplies to the Red Cross Society, Kingston, to be forwarded to the Queen's University Stationary Hospital, Cairo, Egypt. Some of the Peterborough young men and nurses are there:

- 34 dressing gowns.
- 12 day shirts.
- 16 pairs of pyjamas.
- 10 surgical shirts.
- 125 towels.
- 40 pillow slips.
- 12 sheets.
- 42 face cloths.
- 8 ring cushions.
- 35 many tailed bandages.
- 7 comfort bags.
- 6 hot water bags
- 1 box of old linen.

Any contributions or supplies for this work may be sent free of charge to Dr. J. O. Connell, "Old Medical Building," Kingston, Ont., where the Canadian Red Cross Society repacks and sends by direct route to the hospital at Cairo.

60 pairs of socks were also sent to "Field Comforts," to be distributed among the soldiers in the trenches.

(Mrs.) E. M. Freeman, Secretary.

Lord Vernon, Recently Killed at Front, is Missed in England

LONDON, Dec. 11.—Love sick maidens there are many over the death of poor Lord Vernon, who was only 27. One of our foremost society girls is looking a wreck, though she does struggle to go about and sell programmes.

His mother was an American, a daughter of Mr. Francis S. Lawrence of New York, and is a widow of the seventh baron. Her second son, the new peer, is called Francis after his Yankee grandfather.

The Vernons have Norman blood in their veins, and, though the late peer was autocratic enough in some things, he was a born Bohemian in others, because he said his own set were so often wanting in brains and a sense of humor.

I'm sure there never was a young man who was nicer to all women that he was in a sort of a courteous, brotherly way which some misunderstood. He was passionately fond of getting up amateur theatricals and one or two of his friends once played him a rather unkind practical joke when organizing a company to perform "Romeo and Juliet."

NEW YORK AND EAST COAST IS STORM BOUND

Examiner Special:

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—Greater New York and the entire east coast awoke to-day storm-bound. Trains were stalled in snowdrifts, and wire communications interrupted. Little relief was foreseen during the morning by weather bureau, and it was predicted that the day would bring north-west gales, more snow and a decided drop in temperature. The N.Y.C. had no word from any point outside Manhattan regarding the trains from Chicago or other western points. Heavy casualties are feared as a result of the storm. Twenty persons were injured, some seriously, at Otisville Station, N.Y., when an Erie passenger engine ploughed through a crowd crossing the tracks to board a train. In New York city a number of persons were struck by automobiles and other vehicles while forging their way through an ankle deep coat, of slush that filled the streets. Relief organizations and city charitable departments were out early to aid thousands of snow-bound families.

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—The Storm King still rages around New York, and fears are expressed in shipping circles that heavy damage may have occurred among vessels on the high seas. Cable and telegraph communication with the outside world is very scant. Scarcely anything has been received over the Atlantic cables to-day.

Gain which is made at the expense of reputation should rather be set down as a loss.—Latin Proverb.

I could not live in peace if I put the shadow of a wilful sin between myself and God.—George Eliot.

FURNITURE SELLING ON A NEW MODEL

A PLAN IS SUGGESTED FOR MARKETING FINE MAHOGANY BUFFETS.

In every community there are scores of housewives whose dinners are a delight. The reputation of each of these ladies stands high. One, perhaps, has a neat talent in the production of an entree, another can conjure a pudding out of the vast cosmos of the commonplace, another can perform miracles with custards and jellies. Now let us suppose that the principal furniture dealer in the community sends to each of half a dozen of the most distinguished hostesses a noble mahogany buffet. He declines payment. "No," says he, "you are a housewife of distinction. You have both technique and temperament in the art of cookery. Diners-out flock to you like the moth to the flame. It is for me a sufficient distinction to have my buffet in your dining-room. All I ask is, first, that you write me a testimonial, declaring that you have found my buffet superbly designed for dinner-giving, and, second, that when you have a party to dine you will mention in a most casual way that the Nesselrode is Nessel-ing on Munchison's mahogany buffet."

When the furniture dealers adopt this method of doing business they will have a precedent. Members of the piano trade have followed such a system. Instruments not infrequently have been supplied free of charge to eminent musicians either at their homes or at their studios, in the belief that such 'sub rosa" gifts will have commercial value to the manufacturer.

No Gourlay Piano is sent out in this way. Wherever a Gourlay is found it is either on rental or has been purchased in the ordinary manner. The Gourlay, Winter & Leeming Company from the beginning of their manufacturing activity some twelve years ago determined to have no part in such unbusinesslike forms of advertising. They make the Gourlay piano, admittedly an instrument in the first rank. They do not give it away or lend it. They sell it, and because of the high merit of the piano more and more Gourlays are sold with each succeeding year. Call at the House of Service, 188 Yonge street and see the Gourlay piano.

Knicker—"Does Jones understand the purchasing power of a sovereign?" Bocker—"Yes; what troubles him is the purchasing power of his wife."

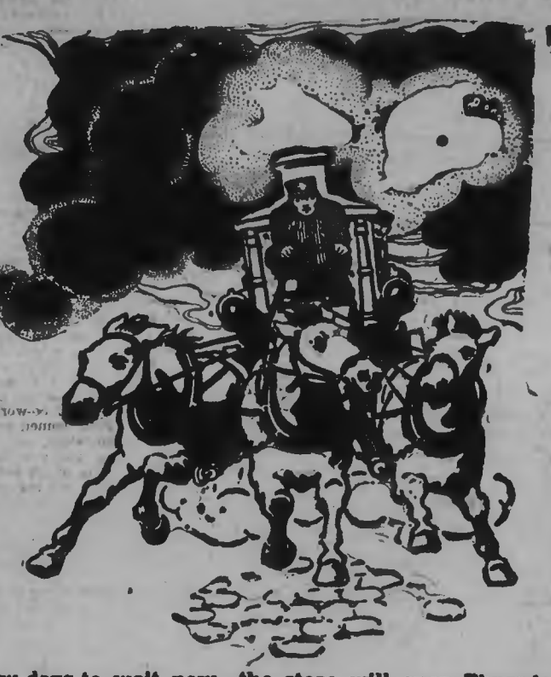
FIRE SALE



Only a few days to wait now—the store will open Thursday morning, December 16 to usher in a bargain event that we do not believe has been or will be equalled in this city. Ever since our fire, we have been busy carefully sorting out the good merchandise from the too badly damaged to be useful. Prices have been ruthlessly reduced, former prices and even costs having been virtually ignored.

Watch for our opening announcement quoting prices and mentioning in partial detail some of the great bargains to be obtained during this sale.

Put off all Christmas gift buying for women until this sale begins. Come here and buy gifts for every woman on your list—you'll save a remarkably large sum of money if you do.

Free Treatment For Soldiers' Families Has Been Abandoned

At a meeting of The Peterborough Medical Society held in the Public Library, Dec. 13th, 1915, a revision of the professional attitude taken at the beginning of the war was decided upon. At that time the members of the Medical Profession in Peterborough generously proposed to give free medical treatment to the families and dependents of soldiers on active service. During the course of the past year, it has been found that while the number of families receiving free treatment has greatly increased and the demands upon the profession correspondingly enlarged, many of the dependent persons and families entitled to free treatment, are in receipt of larger and more constant incomes than before the war, and therefore will be subject to no hardship or make no sacrifice from having the advantages given by the doctors withdrawn.

It was, therefore, decided that after December 1st, 1915, the arrangements made to give free medical treatment to the wives and dependents of soldiers on active service, will lapse and that medical attendance upon such persons will be subject to the charge of the usual fees.

ANNUAL MEETING OF W. M. S. OF ST. PAUL'S

The 39th annual meeting of St. Paul's Women's Missionary Society was held on Friday afternoon, Dec. 10th, in the Lecture Hall. The attendance, which included a number of visitors from other city churches, was large.

Miss Dickson presided, and after devotional exercises the different reports were presented.

The financial statement was presented by Mrs. McKee, the treasurer, and shows total receipts for year to be $1,024.50.

The "Fraser Mission Band" report, read by Miss Cameron, shows a balance of $243.

The "Faithful Workers' Mission Band" reports a good year in every sense of the word. The total amount contributed was $103.42.

Mrs. Russell, who with her late husband, the Rev. Norman Russell, laboured in India for a number of years, where they were largely instrumental in introducing industrial work in the schools in their mission field, addressed the meeting, and at the close a hearty vote of thanks was tendered the speaker by Mrs. Allan, seconded by Mrs. Suckling.

Officers For 1916.

President—Miss Dickson.
1st Vice-Pres.—Mrs. Roger.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Mrs. Pogue.
Secretary—Mrs. Harstone.
Treasurer—Mrs. McKee.
Lit. Secretary—Miss Laura J. Davidson.
Stranger's Secretary—Miss L. Best.
Librarian—Miss Ferguson.
Organist—Mrs. Logan.
Members of the Executive — Mrs. Turner, Mrs. Yeaman, Mrs. Munro, Mrs. Mowat, Miss Flora Davidson, Mrs. Graham, Mrs. Shook, Mrs. Meredith, Mrs. Connal, Mrs. Nelson.

Annual Report of St. Paul's W.M.S. For 1915.

To the President and Members of St. Paul's W.M.S., we beg to submit the following report:

In presenting the 39th annual report of this Auxiliary, we desire to make the foreword one of thanksgiving to the Master whom we serve, for the blessings granted us as a society, and as individuals. In the midst of great upheavals in almost the whole world, and the sorrow and sadness which surround us to-day we have been unhindered in the prosecution of our work, which shows steady advancement.

Little change marks the programme of this year's work from that of former years, meetings being held regularly every second Friday of the month throughout the year, with the exception of August, the average attendance being 26. Mrs. Griffith, who with her husband, Dr. Griffith, has laboured in Honan, China, since 1903, addressed our annual meeting held last December, and in her sympathetic way brought the works and needs of our 'sisters in China' very near to the hearts of her hearers.

The day of special prayer for all missionary work was observed at our January meeting. The whole membership uniting in definite prayer for God's guidance and blessing is a source of strength and a fitting preparation for beginning the work of the New Year.

The literature secretary reports 105 subscribers to the Messenger. This list has not grown since last year ann we especially commend this magazine to the members as a source of information regarding the work, knowledge being a prime necessity for effective service. The 'Interior' was sent to our missionaries in India as usual. The 'Text-book,' 'The Child-in-our-Midst,' has been used and much good has been accomplished by papers written and read by different members from month to month.

A meeting of the Executive was held in January at the home of Miss Dickson to arrange the Programme committee, also the 'Watch-Tower,' a new feature on our programme, which will be a material benefit if heartily endorsed by the members.

An interesting report of the annual Provincial meeting held in Hamilton May 4th, 5th and 6th, and a synopsis of the addresses given at same meeting, were read by Mrs. Mason and Miss Best at our May meeting. Reports from Presbyterial meeting held in Knox church June 1st and 2nd were presented at the June meeting by Mrs. Robt. Hall and Mrs. Turner.

This year we forwarded clothing for a boy 15 years of age, and other supplies to the 'Birtle Indian School.' As on former occasions the response was generous, a cash donation of $6.90 and a bale valued at $60 being the contribution. These supplies are a most important factor in the success of our work in the hospitals, mission schools, and needy mission fields throughout the west, bringing joy and comfort to a great number of people.

The secretary being absent, we regret being unable to give a report from the 'Stranger's Department,' which is as yet in the experimental stage. The secretary either alone or with a committee co-operates with the minister in service to the stranger locally. There are wide possibilities in this labour of love for the stranger, and we hope to be able to give a good report in this connection in the future.

Our Thank-offering meeting was held in October. This seems a suitable time, as the ruling spirit of the autumn-tide should be thanksgiving. Mrs. Horne of Cobourg, gave a most helpful address, taking as her theme, "Lessons From the War," emphasizing the thought that sacrifice and service should be the first principles in life. This year when there are so many extraordinary demands by reason of the gigantic struggle in which our Empire is engaged, it is no small matter for gratitude, that the offering is the largest in the history of the society, the total amount being $621.30. We desire to express our sincere appreciation of this spirit of liberality, which is an evidence of the sincerity of purpose, and quality of heart, prompting these gifts.

We are pleased to report an increase in our membership, which now numbers 146, and we hope every woman in the congregation not identified with the work will consider this matter seriously.

This year we again mourn the loss of beloved fellow workers, who have been called to higher service. The late Mrs. Robt. Innis, our honourary vice-president, was a charter member and for 18 years filled the office of treasurer most acceptably. She was a woman of great force of character and prominent not only in the society, but in every department of church work.

The late Mrs. Crosby was an interested member and attended the meetings when health permitted.

Miss McEwen was a life member, but of late years, being frail of body, was unable to take any active part. he possessed rare qualities of heart and mind, and always evinced keen interest in every good work, her life being a source of joy and comfort to all with whom she came in contact.

Mrs. Clinkscale, another life member, was an interested member and faithful co-worker. The lives of these good women remain with us as an inspiration, and we extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved friends. The rank of the veterans are thinning and we must get new and young recruits. We also extend our warmest sympathy to those who have suffered bereavement, owing to this cruel war, and share in the anxiety of those who have loved ones over the sea or are preparing to go.

Realizing that it is the individual work in the society that will bring it up to the highest standard, we desire to thank all who have laboured so faithfully, thereby contributing to the success of the year's work.

May the trying times through which we are passing deepen the sense of our responsibilities, and the spirit of self sacrifice shown by our brave men, which is the profoundly impressive thing about the war, come to us as a challenge to more faithfulness in service, enabling us to get a vision of the enlarged opportunities which will confront all missionary effort at the end of the war. May our faith be strengthened, for God still rules the world, and out of seeming evil is able to bring forth great and lasting good.

P. Harstone, Secretary,
St. Paul's Women's Missionary Society

Anniversary Tea And Concert At Knox Church

Successful Affair Held Last Evening —Address By Local Clergy—The Programme of Music

In connection with the fifth anniversary of Knox church, a tea and concert was held last evening in the church hall. A large number of people partook of a splendid supper provided by the ladies. Appetizing viands were in abundance, and the wants of everyone were carefully attended to by energetic and obliging waitresses. While supper was being served, a programme of music was rendered by the orchestra of the 93rd Battalion, under the direction of Sergt. Leader.

After all had enjoyed the bountiful repast, the chair was taken by the pastor, Rev. J. A. McKenzie, who extended a hearty welcome to all present. During the evening addresses were given by Rev. Mr. Pogue of St. Paul's church, Capt. Rollins of the 93rd Battalion, Rev. Mr. McConachie and Rev. J. R. Webb of the Murray street Baptist church, in addition to the following musical numbers:

Piano duet—Misses Mabel Penrose and Kenyon.
Song—Mr. Coleman.
Song—Miss Hanson.
Violin solo—Miss Laura Logan.
Song—Miss Mabel Penrose.
Quartette, "Sweet and Low"—Misses Kenyon and Williamson, and Messrs. Anderson and Kenyon.

Before dispersing, the audience sang "Auld Lang Syne" with their late pastor, Rev. Mr. Keith, now in Edmonton, and the soldiers of the congregation in France and England, specially in mind, and the National Athem.

The children of Knox church will be given a tea this evening.

Voice of The People

LET THERE BE LIGHT.

To the Editor of The Examiner.—

Sir.—We all remember that on the night that Peterborough's new and excellent lighting system was turned on, the Mayor used the words, "Let there be light!" Since that night half the new lights have been turned off. I think, Mr. Editor, that on nights when the soldiers turn out for patriotic purposes all the lights should be turned on to help make a better demonstration and indirectly assist enlistment.

Patriotism.

A "POVERTY" SOCIAL AT ALL SAINTS' HALL

Th: All Saints' A. Y. P. A. Held a Very Successful "Sochul" Last Night

Last evening the young people of the A.Y.P.A. of All Saints' Church gave an entertainment in the All Saints' Parish Hall, before a good attendance. Mr. J. Worth officiated as Chairman, and announced that the affair was designated a "Poverty" Social. This accounted for the fact that a large majority of the audience, as well as those taking part in the programme, were clad in garb such as they would be sorry to be seen in on George street on a sunny afternoon. Women and girls in cottage bonnets, aprons, and calico gowns, some of which wouldn't even find a resting plac in a rummage sale, let alone a junk shop.

The programme was opened by Mr. J. Worth, who effectively contributed, as a pianoforte solo, a selection from "Il Trovatore." Mrs. Connelly followed with a recitation which evoked such applause as to render an encore piece necessary to quiet the demands of the audience. Miss Worth then pleased her listeners by her rendering of a vocal solo. Mrs. Rathbone followed with a serio-comic song, so well rendered that the demands for an encore were simply ear-piercing. Mrs. Rathbone courteously "obliged." Messrs. Ott. and Howard Cransfield earned great applause, and an encore, for their mandolin duett.

At this point one of the audience found a nickel on the floor; being a fairly honest man, he handed it to the chairman, who asked for an owner, and it was surprising to see how many suddenly discovered that they had lost a coin valued at five cents.

Then came on a quintette of young ladies who sang "A Michagan Chorus," in which one of the great features seemed to be the crowing of a rooster. This just brought the house down. Then there came an interval during which the aroma of coffee caused a tickling sensation at the back of one's palate.

Then came a contest. Each person was supplied with a slip of paper provided with a heading such as "What is your opinion about women," "Want Ad," "Letter to the Editor," etc., etc. In connection, each contestant had to write something in reference to the subject of the headline. These were all read out by Mr. Sisson, and particularly amusing were some of the remarks. It may be mentioned that in the "Want Ads" a number of young ladies semed to think their great want was a husband. But, then, marriageable men are a scarce commodity in this burgh.

Then came "Trial by Jury"—Not Gilbert and Sullivan's, but trial before Mr. Injustice Sissons, and a jury of five women! So you may guess how much justice was meted out! Members of the audience were haled before this court; if they didn't go peaceably, well they were lugged in by a "cop." It was amusing to see the brawl, between the respected Rector of All Saints, and policeman Cransfield No. 18; they even rolled on the floor, but, as usual the Church Militant came out on top. Ladies were tried (?) and fined for wearin engagement rings, for feathers in their hats, for casting goo-goo eyes at the men, for not being dressed in "poverty" clothes; for flirting with the sex, etc. This scribe was sentenced to six months' "hard" labour for the iniquity of wearinp a clean collar, and for a crime he doesn't know how to commit, viz., flirting with a fine young lady. Other men were mulcted for breastpins, ties, or watch chains. Altogether the fun was fast and furious, while the costumes were fearfully and wonderfully made.

By this time coffee and cakes Ad lib. were in evidence. Glory! The poverty-stricken ladies took upon themselves the menial task of waiting on us mere men, and we enjoyed it! Then the singing of the National Anthem, "God Save the King," brought a very jolly evening to a close.

A glance at the attached "rules" governing the evening will show that fines could be levied on pretty well anything:

Capt. Neilson of the 93rd, who is on recruiting duty in the Norwood district, was in Peterborough yesterday and returned to Norwood last night. Capt. Bygott, of Lakefield, also on the 93rd staff, was also a visitor at the armouries yesterday.

It is expected that the issue of winter caps for the men of the 93rd Battalion will be here in a short time. Fur caps are not to be issued to the Canadian troops this winter. A heavy cloth forage cap being used instead.

BERLIN, Via Wireless, Dec. 14.—Pursuing the fleeing expeditionary forces down the Vardar Valley, the Bulgarians cut off a body of French troops from the English and slaughtered large numbers, according to an official statement received here to-day. Among the French prisoners is the commander of a battalion. It is reported the pursuit of the Allies is continuing.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—The version of the Bulgarian official statement of December 12th, received here from Sofia, says that the city of Gievgeli, in South-Western Serbia, near the Greek border, is in flames.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—Amsterdam despatches to the London papers this afternoon asserted that twenty-six women were wounded, ten seriously, in a butter riot at Cologne yesterday. Mounted police charged the rioters, it was stated.

CANADIAN WHEAT SAVES BELGIUM

LONDON, Dec. 14.—It is interesting to note in connection with the study of the war from an economic point that the price of bread in Belgium is the same as it is in England. Bread of the best quality made from flour, ground from Canadian wheat, has been kept at the level price and unaffected by war, through the good offices of the Belgian Relief Committee.

This committee received a large share of its wheat and flour from Canada through the generosity of the Canadian people, shipped from the Canadian committee's headquarters in Montreal, and its allotment is so regulated that there could be no advance in the price to the people. Of course, a large part of the bread is actually distributed free to those who have no money — for the committee sees that all have sustenance —but in such cases the commune either pays, or gives an obligation to pay, for the bread at the standard price.

Will House Names Be Taxed?

It is not known whether Mr. McKenna is disposed to consider the idea, but the suggestion, made in all seriousness in England, that fancy names for houses should be taxed, has met with the approval, at any rate, of the postal authorities. It is proposed that the tenant of a private house bearing a fancy name instead of, or in addition to, a number should be made to take out a license each year at a cost of £1. The reason why the postal authorities are so much in favor of the proposal is that this practice of house-naming causes them a great deal of trouble.

In the suburbs houses are now built for sale rather than to be let, and a purchaser having paid £350 or £400 for a house, usually has a fancy for bestowing some picturesque name on the house. It is pointed out that many of the occupiers would prefer to pay a tax sooner than give up the pleasure of speaking of their little home by the name painted upon the garden gate.

Why Do We Shake Hands?

Why do widows wear caps? This is one of the things that every woman does not know. It is not because caps make them look pretty and interesting. It is because when the Romans were in England they introduced the custom of shaving your head as a sign of mourning. Of course, women couldn't let themselves be seen with bald heads, so they made themselves caps.

So, though the hideous custom has passed, the caps remain.

Why do ladies break a bottle of wine on the ship they are christening? This is another of the things that every woman does not know; but the real reason is enough to make their blood curdle. In the days of sacrifice to the gods, it was customary to get some poor victim when a boat was being launched and to cut his throat over the prow, so that his blood baptised it.

Russia's Reserves.

The reserves of the Russian Territorial Army which have been called up are stated to number no fewer than 3,000,000 men.

The distinguished-looking lady stepped from the train, and was making for the station exit when a polite porter rrushed after her, touched his cap and exclaimed "Hansom Miss?" "Yes, very," she quick-wittedly replied, as she passed on with a disengaging smile.

O.H.A. SCHEDULES TO BE DRAWN UP

The schedule for this group of the intermediate O.H.A. will be drawn up to-night at a meeting called for in the Oriental Hotel at 7 o'clock. The teams to be represented will be the Cobourg, St. Michael's, Campbellford, the 93rd Battalion and the Peterborough Electrics. J. P. Bond of Peterborough is convener.

A change has been made in the Junior grouping and the district will be composed of Campbellford, Lindsay, Belleville and Peterborough. F. D. Craig is convener of the group and has called a meeting for Thursday morning at 9.30 o'clock at the Empress Hotel.

Deserted Wife Has 13 Children

ST. THOMAS, Ont., Dec. 14.—Frank White, a railroad news agent, who has been living in St. Thomas for the past six months, was arrested on the charge of wife desertion by wife No. 1 from Dunkirk, N.Y. White went by the name of Smith in St. Thomas and has a wife and two children living with him here. He married wife No. 2 in Woodstock, where he resided for some time previous to coming to this city. Wife No. 1 has 13 children, six of whom are under ten years, the youngest being born a month after he deserted her. The case will be heard before Magistrate Maxwell the latter part of the week.

Anniversary Banquet Held By Sons and Daughters of England

Lansdowne Lodge Assisted by the Ladies Held Successful Evening Last Night—Programme and Toast List — Forty Members of the Lodge Have Joined the Colours.

The annual banquet of Lansdowne Lodge, Sons of England, was held last night in their rooms, which were appropriately decorated for the occasion with flags and bunting. The presence and assistance of the Daughters of England contributed largely to the pleasure and success of the evening. After the banquet a toast list was honoured with Mr. E. A. Peck presiding. The toast to the King was honoured in the usual way, and the following were also proposed: "The Motherland," proposed by Mr. C. F. Kitney and responded to by Mr. J. Kennett; "The Canadian Forces at Home and Abroad," proposed by the President of the Society, Mr. Adam Frick, with Captain J. H. Burnham responding; "The Ladies," proposed by Mr. R. Waram, and responded to by one of the ladies.

An enjoyable musical programme followed. Mr. Peck delivered a fine address as chairman, and the other numbers were a quartette by the Messrs. Hartshorn, solo by W. Farr, recitation by Mrs. Thomas, trio by Messrs. Hartshorn and Smith, solo by Mr. Lee, trio by Messrs. Hartshorn and Smith, and quartette by Messrs. Hartshorn.

Altogether the evening was a fine success, the speeches in connection with the toasts striking a deep note of patriotism. Forty members of Lansdowne Lodge have responded to the call to the colours. A vote of thanks moved by Mr. Wilfrid Shiner and seconded by Mr. D. Runnett, was tendered to all those who took part in the programme, and who otherwise contributed to the success of this anniversary banquet.

Capt. Burnham's Remarks.

In the course of his remarks Mr. Burnham dwelt upon what he said was the most important fact connected with the hitherto so-called British Empire that could possibly have been imagined and yet it had come about so quietly that few people knew it, and still fewer appreciated it at its true value. He referred to the establishment of a general or common citizenship known as British Empire Citizenship, by which citizens in any part of the Empire became citizens of all parts of the Empire. This Act was passed in the House of Commons of Canada in 1912-13. Previous to that a conference with Sir Robert Borden, acting for Canada, had been held at London, at which all the Dominions were represented, and it was there laid down that if the Dominions would consent to adopt the standard and requirements of citizenship in the United Kingdom for their own Dominions it would be possible to establish this general British citizenship. The various delegates returned home and had the Acts passed. These were all approved of and to-day there is no such thing as an Englishman, an Irishman, a Scotchman, a Canadian or Australian living under different laws of citizenship and really being strangers to each other in that particular. There has been since 1912 an absolute equality of citizenship throughout the whole Empire, and whilst the boasted superiority of each part of the Empire will continue to amuse people at banquets and increase their national pride, nevertheless this former superiority assumed by one part towards another now no longer exists. A Canadian going to England is a British citizen. An Irishman going to Australia is a British citizen. He immediately steps into all the rights of franchise and all the privileges of British citizenship and of local citizenship. This tremendous stride towards the solidarity of the Empire was made without noise and it is extraordinary that it should have occurred almost upon the threshold of a time when that solidarity was most required and when it was to be most severely tested. The speaker said that he himself had probably nothing English left about him except his name, but that he had attended many banquets such as this, where the national characteristics of each part of the Empire had been duly praised. He had attended Scotch banquets where it would appear that Scotland was the greatest place in the Empire, and he would like to see a man attend an Irish banquet and not admit that Ireland was the greatest spot in the world. These things, however, in the face of the Imperial citizenship to which he referred, sank into insignificance. It marked an area of development and unification such as had never been accomplished before.

BUSINESS AS USUAL AT THE TIZ-IT THEATRE

Owing to an accident in the Moving Picture Machine of the "Tiz-It" Theatre, and the inability of the owner to secure the parts in the city the theatre was closed yesterday. The necessary repairs have been made to the machine and the theatre will be open as usual to-day. Mr. Peters regrets the closing of the theatre for the day, but it was unavoidable as he was unable to secure the services of any one in the city who could repair the machine for him.

HOCKEY PRACTICES NOW UNDER WAY

Electrics Practised Last Night and 93rd Battalion Team Will Take the Ice To-night—All Junior Players Who Want to Try For a Place Are Invited Out To-morrow Night

King Hockey entered into his own last night at the Brock street rink, when the Peterborough Electrics held their first practice of the season. There was a good squad of junior and intermediate players out, although there was only a short notice given of the practice, and a number of the players did not know the ice was ready. No line-up was attempted, but the squad had an hour's good warm-up under the watchful eye of Coach Billy Breen. Among the intermediates out were Bryden, Bailey, Montgomery, Jimmy McMartin, Evans, Walter Jackson, of last year's juniors, Alonso Coughlin, brother of "Jerry," and several others, while W. Montgomery, Rowe, and E. Smyth were among the juniors out. There will be another practice to-morrow night between 7 and 8 o'clock.

The Electrics have decided to have a junior team as well as an intermediate team and all youngsters in Peterborough who want to try for a place on the team are invited out. There are only two of last year's juniors available this year, so there are lots of opportunities. Of the juniors of a year ago only Goalkeeper Legrow and Lornie Rose of the forwards are left. Harold Morrow is with the Canadian remounts in France, Harold Knapman is with the 33rd Battery at Kingston, "Buck" O'Connell is in New York, and Long, Smyth, Jackson and Richardson have passed the junior age limit. However there is a big crop of promising youngsters and they should all be out to-morrow night.

The Soldier Team.

The fans will get a chance to see Peterborough's soldier team, the 93rd Battalion, in action to-night at Brock street rink, as the khaki clad lads will take the ice for their first practice between 7 and 8 o'clock. The 93rd have some very promising material and should give a good account of themselves. Among the players available are Lieut. Dupuy, who for three years was captain of the King's College team, one of the best known amateur organizations in Nova Scotia; Lieut. Quackenbush who played with the crack Ottawa Aberdeens, Lieut. Snider who played the game in Regina, and also in the east, Lieut. de Puyjalon, who played in Ottawa, Pte. Robert Emery, last year with Parry Sound, Pte. Cook, a goalkeeper from Fenelon Falls, Ptes. Leo Burt, Stanley Staples, R. Micks and Jack Tutton, who played with Port Hope, Pte. Blewitt of Lakefield, Lieut. Widdifield, Ptes. S. Andersson, Dick Wedlock and other local men. With Pte. Walter Miller, the Wanderer and N. H. A. player as coach, and Sergt. Doug. Loomis, late physical director of the St. Catharines Y.M.C.A., and Pte. Ed. Dillon, for many years trainer of the Peterborough Hockey Club, to look after the training of the team, the 93rd should be fit when the bell rings, especially as their military training will leave them in good shape. The 93rd are assured of a big following in Peterborough. The band of the 93rd will be at all the soldier games and the 93rd will also form a Rooters' Club.

HOCKEY

Coach Billie Breen would like all promising young hockey players to turn out for practice with the Peterborough Electric Junior team. Come on, boys, bring your skates and sticks and by and by make the team. Practice to-morrow night, 7 to 8 o'clock.

Booze and Baseball Don't Go Together

John Barleycorn, says Hugh S. Fullerton, is not a reliable pinch hitter in a game of baseball. John may sit on the bench, but his turn rarely comes, and it apepars as though he must quit the diamond entirely. Mr. Fullerton, in Farm and Fireside, gives figures covering the results of "moderate drinking" on athletics. The ill effects physically on athletes have long been recognized and the practice of drinking has been denounced by trainers, but to make his case stronger, Mr. Fullerton leaves out the hard drinkers and considers only the "bottle-of-beer man who thinks that what he takes can not possibly hurt him."

Efficiency, which business men conjure with these days, has a large place in the training of a baseball team. If a player is efficient, he keeps up his batting average; he is ready in an emergency. If he is undependable, he is inefficient, and if he is inefficient, out of the game he goes. Inefficiency is John Barleycorn. "Booze and baseball," it is said, can not keep together. Mr. Fullerton has examined the records and batting averages of 32 moderate drinkers and 24 players who did not drink. After 11 years only two of the original 32 drinking players are on the diamond, while eight of the 24 nondrinkers are still playing. Furthermore, only five of the drinkers are prosperous, as opposed to 14 of the nondrinkers. Six of the drinkers are down and out, eight are dead and one is missing. Only three of the nondrinkers are either dead or failures.

While the fan may not care greatly what has happened to the player of 11 years ago, he ought to be interested in the game of the present-day player. The onndrinkers, says Mr. Fullerton, have won more games, stolen more bases and kept up a better batting average. At the beginning, the more brilliant players were the drinkers. They had a finer batting eye, and sturdier legs for the bases. But as they drank they lost place. The non-drinkers of only moderate ability slowly gained. In 1901, for example, the batting average of the drinkers was .246, while that of the nondrinkers was only .228. Last year the non-drinkers had .262 and the drinkers only .220. The writer of the article does not take into account the drunkards. He attempts to show that the "moderate" drinker fails to live up to standard, even when naturally possessed of greater ability.—Indianapolis News.

New York Has Skating Craze With Society Leading Way On Runners

Revival of Great Winter Pastime Spreads Rapidly in the Metropolis and Whole Country Has Caught the Cue.

EVERYBODY'S DOING IT

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—They said the ice skating fad was going to hit us this winter, and it has. Like one of those comets that keep coming and coming—a big snowball of a comet. It has hit society as a snowball hits a silk hat. It has come so suddenly and with such force as to knock a lot of persons right off their pins, but the beginners, especially the women, show no symptoms of cold feet.

In fact, you won't go far wrong in giving to each member of the family a pair of skates for Christmas, to say nothing of the butler and the maids. Never did a craze strike New York so suddenly or from odder angles. It is like one of those freak hurricanes, and this one is blowing the skirts of the city as never before. The men in the stores where the most skates are sold say they were all stocked up early in the season, but that the rush to buy began sharply about two weeks ago.

A thorough-going skating enthusiast of years standing, like Mr. Irving Brokaw, for instance, who has been the leading exponent of the sport in society, will tell you that the great skating vogue is only the coming into its own of a fine, vigorous sport particularly adapted to this climate and people. But others who have been watching it and are amazed at the suddenness with which it has taken hold assert broadly that there are two more pointed reasons:—The skating clothes that women wear are novel and becoming. The sport is a fashionable diversion of society.

There is a general impression that Charlotte and the other graceful skaters at the Hippodrome first revived interest in skating. The ice dancing of Miss Gladys Lamb and her associates at Castles in the Air helped start it. And the fashion shows at St. Nicholas Rink—"oh, how lovely I might look in that rose pink muffler and knit cap," and all that sort of thing.

Charles B. Dillingham, manager of the Hippodrome, and Mr. Brokaw got together and with the aid of Mrs. Brokaw and Mrs. Dillingham gave a skate dancing tea on the ice stage of the Hippodrome two weeks ago which for novelty had the outside edge on anything that has been done yet this season. Since then even the elephants have wanted to skate and have tea, and two little teacups have been chasing Mr. Dillingham all over the place, asserting that they wanted skates under them not saucers.

Vogue Starts with a Rush.

Anyway, with a rush New York has started to skate. Perhaps the men are taking it calmly: The rush however, describes the case of the women. The leading sporting goods stores are swamped with customers. They pay as high as $25 for the skate and shoe combination.

Hundreds of well to do women have bought and are buying skates who never had on a pair before in their lives. Fat women, too. The serpentine eight, as performed by experts, looks easy to them. They may have doubts about the Philadelphia spread-eagle grapevine, but pshaw! they learned to "tawngo" two years ago, and surely that must be more difficult than skating, which can be done by any boy with a pair of red mittens, a pond in the barnyard and a pair of skates at one-fifty by mail order.

Why worry, anyway? At the St. Nicholas rink of an evening there are so many persons skating, so close together, that no one can fall down. You fall against some one else. Beginners should try to fall against stout persons. Even if it does save you a tumble, it is no pleasant thing to be impaled upon a sharp elbow.

Of course the chief thing at first is selecting the proper costume. Skating costumes take several inches off the bottom of a woman's skirt and about a generation off her age—a canary yellow sweater and cap, say, with a brown muffler and skirt of the same hue. They have them for men, too, for country skating. Trust a rose pink sweater or muffler to make the tired business man look like a beamish boy on his first frolic.

The Skating Face Has Developed

Skating faces have already developed. Have you seen the glassy eyed, fatuous smile on the woman beginner whose blade bound feet are slipping, ever slipping? She lurches and leans heavily upon the arm of the instructor and the fatter she, the more lean upon him. But she will succeed. It is not really difficult after one gets going around and around.

So far there are few places to skate, with thousands wishing to join in the pastime. There will be other places. The Biltmore Hotel management to-morrow will open the Italian terrace of the hotel, with an ice surface in the court adjoining, for skating teas. The costly work has been going on night and day. Managers of some of the other large hotels are just waiting to see how "strong" the fad really will be.

Some of the dealers already view with alarm a possible shortage in the supply of skates owing to the unprecedented demand. They say that so much steel is being used in the manufacture of munitions that there might be serious difficulty in arranging for additional manufacture of skates.

Prominent Men Take up Sport

Prominent men have taken up Skating. Mr. Cornelius K. G. Billings, who was one of the guests at the first Hippodrome skating tea, on a Sunday afternoon, said then, "I haven't skated for thirty years." He promptly ordered a pair of skates and skates made specially for him, and they were delivered last week. Mr. Oliver Harriman is a very good skater. Many of the middle aged men of the Tuxedo colony have kept up their skating each winter, and it is no novelty for them. Moreover they are building all kinds of new rinks for ice sports at Tuxedo.

Mr. Vincent Astor, who permitted his skating to lapse in the last few years, has renewed his interest. Mr. Erskine Hewitt, like Mr. Brokaw, is an expert fancy skater, so is Mrs. Brokaw. Customers in stores ask for skates "like Mr. and Mrs. Brokaw wear." In Boston Miss Eleonora Sears, expert in skating as in other forms of athletics, is leading a revival of skating.

At the St. Nicholas Rink there are so many women every night, that when they sweep on the ice at closing time find a peck of hairpins in the ice dust or artificial snow. This same condition became a positive menace to Charlotte and the other dancers at the Hippodrome. So active are these young women that hairpins fairly fly from their bobbing heads during their ice dancing.

Father Knickerbocker Puts 'Em On.

Father Knickerbocker surely has his skates buckled on, and he has a lady on his arm. The tango girl is still here, but this winter Father Knick's new girl is the skating girl, with cheeks aglow and unruly locks peeking out from beneath the becoming knit cap, or tam o' shanter. The once well known "debutante slouch" is something of the past. One can skate and slouch at the same time. It is head up, chest out, hips back.

If she has been skating much she has learned to waltz on skates, and to glide gracefully to a rag step tune. Of course the "skate dancing" is the aim of all, but everybody cannot be a Charlotte, who can turkey trot on skates to ragtime music, which is most difficult. Some of the young women of society have already attained that point in their skating art. Most skating girls will learn it, too.

Thus there will be the skating girl, her skating mother and grandma already taking an interest. There will be need of more than one skating man in the family.

Of course some of the skating population will be black and blue. As for the effect of the skating fad upon women's fashions in sport costumes, it is already marked. Before midwinter the old fashioned bustle may once more become popular. Now, if ever, is it's chance. A good, bouncy bustle would help the beginner a lot.

KNOX CHURCH BOYS HAVE HOCKEY CLUB

Organize for Season and Will Have Team in City League

The boys of Knox Church have organized a hockey club for the season and will have a team in the City League if there is one formed for boys under 18 years. The officers elected are as follows:

Hon. Pres.—Mrs. R. M. Waddell.
Hon. Vice-Pres.—Rev. J. A. MacKenzie.
President—H. J. McCannon.
Sec.-Treas.—Mr. M. Clark.
Manager—Mr. R. Hillier.
Chaplain—Rev. Mr. MacKenzie.
Committee to attend City League meetings—Messrs. Doughty, Montgomery, Jackson and R. Hillier.

One of the most important of the many modern philanthropies is the free dental dispensary. Many cities have established such institutions and Rochester is well in the lead. The free dental dispensary will check the decay of individuals' teeth and keep many mouths in such condition that they will not breed disease.—Rochester Post.

Simple Enough.

A manufacturer of some patent compound gave him the information and an analytical chemist one day [illegible] bottle containing an unwholesome looking mixture.

"I would give $20," he said to know what would make the water and oil in this mixture separate."

The chemist looked at the bottle.

"Very well," he said; "write out your check."

"Check!" the other echoed.

"Yes, your check for $20. You say you are willing to give that, and for that price I am willing to tell you what will make the water and oil separate."

The visitor hesitated a moment and then wrote a check for the sum named. The chemist carefully deposited it in his pocketbook, and then quietly dropped into the liquid a pinch of common salt. Instantly the water and oil separated, and whether the client was satisfied or not, he had got what he wanted, and he had paid his own price for it.—London Tit-Bits.

What Memory Is.

The correct way to increase the productivity of the memory is to link every new thing with an understood thought already in hand. Merely to memorize the Bible and thus to be able parrot-like to speak it "by heart" is not memory. Intelligently and emotionally to appreciate and understand one psalm or proverb is memory. To know where to put your finger on the right verse or passage of the Bible on your table is practical and useful recollection. Dictionaries, directories, encyclopedias, indexes and reference books do the mechanical part for you. Reason, association, adaptability and the perception of relationships are better than much Latin and more Greek, however beautiful and instructive these may be in themselves.—Exchange.

The Marriage Vow.

The dull boy in the class unexpectedly distinguished himself in a recent history examination. The question ran, "How and when was slavery introduced into America?" To this he replied:

"No women had come over to the early Virginia colony. The planters wanted wives to help with the work. In 1619 the London company sent over a shipload of girls. The planters gladly married them, and slavery was introduced into America."

The Planets.

Taking our earth as standard, the two planets nearer the sun—viz. Mercury and Venus—are designated as inferior and the five which are farther from the sun than the earth—viz. Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus and Neptune—are termed superior. All established and accepted by astronomers, Mercury is 35,951,105 miles from the sun; Venus, 67,198,000 miles; earth, 92,894,800; Mars, 141,542,400; Jupiter, 483,313,340; Saturn, 886,108,900; Uranus, 1,782,742,060; Neptune, 2,786,764,300.

A Real Santa Claus.

Santa Claus, I hang for you,
By the mantel, stocking two,
One for me and one to go
To another boy I know.
There's a chimney in the town
You have never traveled down.
Should you chance to enter there
You would find a room all bare.
Not a stocking could you spy,
Matters not how you might try.
And the shoes you'd find are such
As no boy could care for much.
In a broken bed you'd see
Some one just about like me.
Dreaming of the pretty toys
Which you bring to other boys.
And to him a Christmas seems
Merry only in his dreams,
All he dreams, then, Santa Claus,
Stuff his stocking well, because
When it's filled up to the brim
I'll be Santa Claus to him!

LINEN SHOWER WAS A SUCCESS

On Friday evening, Miss Verna Zealand entertained at her home, 300 Maitland Avenue, the "Whatsoever Class" of the Charlotte Street S. S., of which she is a member, also their teacher, Mrs. P. Wright, and a few other friends. The home was nicely decorated with the class colours—red and green. The young hostess escorted her guests to the drawing-room, where the following programme was given:

Vocal solo—Miss Verna Zealand.
Piano solo—Miss Alebrta Rehill.
Violin solo—Miss Elva Jackson.
Vocal solo—Miss Greta Gilles.
Piano solo—Miss Richardson, sister of Miss Ada Richardson.
Vocal solo—Miss Ada Richardson.

After the programme all gathered in the dining room, where the young people presented Mrs. Carter (nee Miss Ethel McCracken) a bride, formerly of the class, with a linen shower, the many beautiful articles being the admiration of all present. Mrs. Zealand served dainty refreshments, assisted by four young men. After singing several patriotic songs all joined in singing 'God Save the King,' the guests said good-bye, all having spent a delightful evening.

Hardly Possible.—C. H. Spurgeon was once asked—"Could a man play the organ and be a Christian?" "Yes, I think he could." Spurgeon replied, "but I'm not sure about his next-door neighbour."

THOSE PEERLESS CHRISTMAS GIFTS

The Celebrated Steinway and Nordheimer Pianos

The holiday announcement of Mr. Frank Whitehouse, district representative for the Nordheimer Pianos, which appeared in the Illustrated Christmas Examiner last Saturday, contained an important omission. It should have read "Nordheimer and Steinway Pianos." The omission of the celebrated Steinway pianoforte, for which Mr. Whitehouse is also the local representative, was unfortunate, as the name of this instrument had a direct bearing upon the high claims set forth in the announcement. The Steinway and the Nordheimer have each a rank of their own, which have stamped their qualities upon the musical world, and either of which would make "a regal gift" at Christmas.

Street Railway Rink Opens To-night

Skating Commences Earlier This Year Than Last—Toboggan Slide Will Be Ready the End of the Week

While there has been skating on the canal for about ten days past, the first skating, as far as the public rinks are concerned, is announced for to-night. The Street Railway rink will be open this evening for skating and the Brock street rink is announced to open to-morrow evening. Skating is considerably earlier this year than last.

The toboggan slide at Jackson Park, it is expected, will be ready by the end of the week.

GREETINGS FOR PETERBORO SOLDIERS

Boys on Active Service are not Forgotten by the city

"We who believe that right shall win
And world-wide discord cease;
Still bear above the battle's din
The silver bells of peace."

With hearty season's greetings and hope for an early and complete triumph from the citizens of Peterborough, Canada. — William Buller, Mayor.

The foregoing message is being sent to every Peterborough soldier on active service. It was prepared in the form of a Christmas greeting card at the instance of the City Council and is a seasonable reminder to the boys who are at the front or on the way.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

The regular monthly meeting of the Peterborough Board of Health will be held this afternoon at four o'clock. The report of the year's work will probably be submitted to the Board.

Finance Committee.

The Finance committee of the City Council will meet on Wednesday afternoon at four-thirty o'clock, when a number of matters connected with the department will be dealt with.

WITH OTHER MUNICIPALITIES.

Two candidates are now in the field for the mayoralty in Brantford. The newest man to take the field is Ald. J. H. Minshall, who bases his claims on seven years' service in the City Council. Ald. T. B. Ryerson is also in the field.

Chatham Raised $92,000.

Chatham contributions to the Canadian Patriotic Fund now total $92,000. Fifty thousand was asked.

women have done nobly, and after all why shouldn't they for the outcome of the war means most to them. Belgium women have even assumed the labour of towing the scows in their waterways, thereby relieving numbers of horses to drag cannon.

The recent returns showing the success of Lord Derby's recruiting plan was a source of gratification. Judge Huycke continued, and coming near home he reminded the Jurors that it was their duty to stir up the people of their respective communities to a full realization of what the present requires of them. They should help those who are sent into the county to get recruits, and should also encourage young men whose consciences tell them they should go. Of course there were exceptions, young men who were really needed for farm work and others physically unfit. He was inclined to the proposal that the men who have been turned down should be given a badge to show that they had offered themselves. But in addition to these there are hundreds of young men in the city and county who can be spared and who should go. There are young men loafing around billiard and pool rooms wasting their time who should be in khaki. It was also hard to see able men doing work that could be as well done by women, and His Honour mentioned as an example, clerks who sell gloves to ladies and perform similar work.

More Men in Normal Schools.

The increased number of men in the Normal Schools this year, Judge Huycke pursued, did not speak well for the vigor and verility of our young men. He made the suggestion to those who are on school boards that when they receive applications for made teachers they demand two certificates, one for their ability and experience, and the other a certificate of rejection from military service. About half the Peterborough Battalion has been filled up and five hundred more men should be obtained during the next month or so, half from the city and half from the county. Judge Huycke asserted that it was the duty of every person to see that the Battalion was filled up.

Only One Grand Jury Case.

Ther is only one case for the Grand Jury's consideration. Joseph Gould, of Asphodel, is charged with assaulting a little girl whose home is in Hastings.

The Grand Jury returned a true bill of indecent assault against Joseph Gould and the petit jury was then selected.

WEDDING BELLS

HUNTER—PURDY.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. (Albert) Hunter returned on Friday from their wedding journey, and have taken possession of the beautiful new and modern residence, completely and elegantly furnished for occupancy, on Elmdale Farm, South, North Monaghan.

The wedding was quietly celebrated in Lindsay at high noon on Wednesday, December 8th, at the Methodist parsonage, Rev. A. H. Going, B.A., performed the ceremony that united in the holy bonds of matrimony J. Albert Hunter of Elmdale, North Monaghan, and Winifred Purdy of Bobcaygeon.

The happy couple are to be warmly congratulated by their many friends for they are both worthy of the happiness which it is hoped will mark the wedded life upon which they enter under such happy auspices. The bridegroom, Mr. Albert Hunter, is well known, being a member of the well-known and highly respected Hunter family, North Monaghan and one of the best known and most enterprising delivering dairymen of the county. He is exceedingly popular among his city clientele, the largest in the city, on account of his promptitude of service, cheerfulness, and obliging disposition. The bride, Miss Winifred Purdy, was a teacher in North Monaghan, where she gained great respect, due to her high character both as a teacher and lady.

Mr. and Mrs. Hunter enter upon matrimonial life with everything in their favour; and with more than usual justification their friends can, as they do, extend heartiest wishes for happiness and prosperity.

CARTER—McCRACKEN.

The wedding took place at 7 o'clock Monday evening, December 6th at the Charlotte street Methodist parsonage of Ethyl M. McCracken, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis McCracken, this city, to Mr. Francis J. Carter of Peterborough, and son of Mr. and Mrs. Watson Carter of Smith. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. P. Wilson, B.A. The bride who was prettily attired in blue silk with pearl trimmings and rosebuds, was attended by Miss Grace Carter, sister of the groom, who wore a gown of white. Gunner McCracken of the 33rd Battery, brother of the bride, supported the groom.

The Bible class, of which the bride was a member, with their teacher, Mrs. P. B. Wright, witnessed the ceremony, and presented the bride with a beautiful bouquet of roses. The class also presented the bride with a linen shower at the home of Mrs. Zealand, Maitland avenue on Friday evening last.

OBITUARY

CHARLOTTE FRENCH.

Death has removed another of the old landmarks of Ernestown in the person of Charlotte French, relict of the late James Thompson, who predeceased her eleven years ago. Mrs. Thompson passed away at her old home near Odessa on Tuesday, 16th inst., after a short illness, surrounded by her family, who tenderly ministered to her every need. Fifty-nine years ago she came as a bride to the old home, casting in her lot with the many pioneers of Ernesttown. She was known for her many estimable qualities of mind and heart, beloved by all who had the pleasure of her acquaintance. Her end was peace. In religion she was a Methodist. Three daughters and one son are left to mourn the loss of a loving mother. They are: Mrs. McCoy, Peterborough; Mrs. Young and Mrs. D. Snider, Ernesttown, and Donald, on the homestead. A brother and a sister also survive: Wesley French, of Cedar Springs, Michigan, and Mrs. Connoly, Yarker. Deceased was in her eighty-first year. Rev. Mr. Barnnes, Odessa, conducted the funeral service at the house the following Thursday. Her remains were placed in Mill Haven vault to await interment later at the Union cemetery beside those of kindred dust. The many assembled to pay their last token of respect to the high esteem in which she was held. — Kingston Whig.

Germans Have Notified Greece That They Will Pursue Anglo-French Troops to the Sea

Work on An Entrenched Camp at Saloniki is Being Carried Out Rapidly---British Retreat to Rsove---Bulgars With Artillery Reported to Be on Greek Soil.

80,000 IN ENEMY'S ARMY

LONDON, Dec. 15.—Reuter's correspondent at Athens says that the retreat of the Allies is being effected as rapidly as the transportation of war materials to the neighbourhood of Saloniki permits.

Work on the construction of an entrenched camp is being carried out rapidly.

The German allies have served notice upon Greece that they intend to "pursue the Anglo-French forces to the sea" unless the allies are disarmed upon Greek soil by King Constantine's troops, according to advices from Rome.

Germany and Bulgaria disavow responsibility for any damage done to Greek property by the fighting upon Greek soil.

The British forces are reported to have retreated to Rsove, in Greece, which is a railway junction, and from which a spur railway line runs in a south-westerly direction joining the Saloniki railroad about fifteen miles north of that city.

Bulgars in Greece.

There was another line of retreat possible, but Bulgarian troops were reported to be driving into Greece in great numbers to cut it off.

Bulgarians with heavy supplies of artillery were reported to be advancing toward Gumenie, 12 miles over the Greek line. At this point the railway line from eastern Greece and Bulgaria joins the Belgrade-Saloniki line.

An Athens despatch says that the Anglo-French force which retired from the Doiran and Gievgeli entrenched about five miles inside the Greek frontier, their retirement having been covered by a few battalions which stopped the Bulgar pursuit on Sunday.

80,000 in Foe Army.

Saloniki despatches to the Times say that 80,000 Austro-German and Bulgarian troops are being concentrated between Monastir and the Greek frontier.

Official advices from Berlin and Sofia show that the heaviest of the fighting for the past few days has centred around Lake Doiran and the Vardar Valley. The French have been holding the left end of the allied line. The British have been holding the right, and a mixed force of French, British and Serbians have been maintaing the centre. By the loss of Gievgeli and Doiran the allies have had to contract and shorten their line.

Gievgli Burned.

LONDON, Dec. 15.—A Bulgarian official statement of Dec. 12, received here from Sofia, says that the city of Gievgeli, in southwestern Serbia, near the Greek border, is in flames.

THERE IS A VAST ARMY of men and women who really never know what it is to enjoy sound, vibrating health—who would be surprised to suddenly gain that exhilarating vitality that robust health brings.

Literally thousands without any particular sickness live in "general debility", as the doctors call it—have headaches, are tired and indifferent. To all such people we say with unmistakable earnestness—"Take Scott's Emulsion after meals for one month and allow its rare oil-food to enrich and enliven your blood, quicken your circulation, stimulate nutrition, and aid nature to develop that real red-blooded life that means activity, enjoyment, success."

Scott's Emulsion is not a drug, but a pleasant food-tonic—free from drugs. One bottle may help you.

TURKS' ATTACKS BOTH REPULSED

Forces in Mesopotamia Shelled the British Base at Kut el Mara.

LONDON, Dec. 15.—Turkish forces in Mesopotamia shelled the British base at Kut El Amara for three days and then delivered two attacks, both of which were repulsed.

A LULL IN THE BATTLE.

ATHENS, Dec. 15—Official despatches to the War Office to-day reported a lull in the battle along the Serbo-Greek border, and declared that no large force of Bulgars had yet crossed the Greek frontier. Small scouting parties that advanced over the border in pursuit of the allies, immediately withdrew, it was stated, upon discovering their mistake.

MARRIAGE AND LONG LIFE

In the "twelve commandments" which Dr. Arnold Lorand of Carlsbad Baths, Austria, lays down for a long life he says:—"Get married, and if a widow or widower marry again. A study of the lives of patriarchs proves the wisdom of so doing."

Another important factor is to avoid weakened, overworked, run-down conditions, and our local druggists, McDermid & Jury and E. L. Payne have a rare combination of the three oldest tonics known in Vinol, which they guarantee will create strength and restore vitality in all such cases, or return your money.

German Troops on the Way to Constantinople To Quell Disturbances

Teutonic Restrictions Are Not Appreciated by the Turks —Italy Will Land a Large Army on the Albanian Coast —Allies Have Tightened Blockade of Greek Port and Greece is Protesting.

ALLIED SQUADRONS ARRIVE

GENEVA, Dec. 15.—Two divisions of German troops have left Sofia for Constantinople to quell disturbances caused by German restrictions.

LONDON, Dec. 15.—Rome despatches say Italy will disembark eighty thousand troops on the Albanian coast in the near future.

LONDON, Dec. 15.—Premier Asquith's promised result of Lord Derby's recruiting campaign has been postponed until next week.

LONDON, Dec. 15.—General Smith Dorrien has been placed in supreme command of the African forces.

PARIS, Dec. 15.—Allies are sending new expeditions to the Kameroons and German East Africa.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 15.—A German civil engineer named Koolbergen confessed he was promised pay to blow up munitions ships and destroy Canadian railway bridges.

ATHENS, Dec. 15.—Allies have tightened the blockade of Greek ports and Greece is protesting.

ROME, Dec. 15.—Large squadrons of British and French fleets have arrived in the harbour of Saloniki.

No Peace Until Victory Is Won, Say Women of France

PARIS, Dec. 13.—The National Council of French Women, after deciding not to take part in any international political congress during the duration of the war, has issued the following manifesto:

"The German women are making demonstrations for peace. We mothers, wives, daughters, and sisters who have not lost, but have given up all that is most precious to us, must make demonstrations for war.

"We must not let a word of peace be uttered until our dear dead are avenged, our country liberated, and a great victory achieved. We do not want war for war's sake; we want war for the sake of peace.

"French women, love and be worthy of your country! If we cannot give our blood, let us give our hearts and souls."

ADMITS HE FISHED BUT NOT FOR FISH

Mrs. Caswell Insists That Because of Husband's Last Trip She is Entitled to Divorce.

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—Mrs. Eva N. Caswell has heard many fish stories from her husband and seen the fish to prove them, but the last one made her sue for a separation in the Supreme Court. She admits that he went fishing, but not for fish.

Robert E. Caswell, the self-styled disciple of Isaak Walton, said he felt as if he could get a bite if he went fishing the morning of August 27, 1915, his wife asserts. Would she fix up his togs and wish him fisherman's luck? She would. She did. She says she pinned the legs of his fishing trousers together and packed them away in his kit. She bade him goodbye and awaited his story.

Caswell returned with no fish, but much proof, Mrs. Caswell says, for he dragged out his togs and suggested that she have the fish scales removed. There were scales on the trousers, but the pins were still there. Mrs. Caswell says she said that she knew he went fishing, "but for some purpose that did not apply to fish."

Caswell knows all about risks as an insurance adjuster, Mrs. Caswell says, which may be why he risked the loss of her love by "being attentive to other women." He first was cruel to her and then stayed out nights, and told fish stories which she brands as complete fabrications.

He denies that he did not go fishing for fish every time he said so, and seeks a divorce, naming a William Goodwin. She says she knows Goodwin "only slightly" and that her husband has locked her from her home at times, once making her stay in the street with a sprained ankle. Justice Giegrich permits her to have $7 a week pending trial. Goodwin denies Caswell's accusations.

A WORD OF GRATITUDE.

"In justice to humanity I want to tell you that I was a great sufferer from itching piles and have found Dr. Chase's Ointment the best treatment obtainable," writes Mr. Fred Hinz, Brodhagen, Ont. "It gives instant relief and I can recommend it to any sufferer from this dreadful disease."

TRYING TO RE-ESTABLISH GERMAN PARCELS POST

Burleson Takes Steps to Open Channel for Mail to Teutons.

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—The re-establishment of parcels post service with Germany and Austria is occupying the attention of Postmaster General Burleson, according to Edmund von Mach, who on Saturday sent packages of first-class mail to Germany by way of Scandinavia, containing food.

The citizens' committee is exerting itself to the utmost to reopen the parcels post service to Germany so that food may be shipped without paying the almost prohibitive first-class postage on it.

The service was suspended on Nov. 15 by the government shortly after the Holland-American line had refused to take shipments on the ground that the mail service had been interrupted by the English authorities because food was reaching the central powers through this medium.

Postmaster General Burleson told a subcommittee of the committee that he had taken immediate steps to open new channels to re-establish the parcels post to the central powers, Professor von Mach said.

"I know that President Wilson himself was very much concerned when he was shown the actual figures of the milk supply in Germany and Austria and told what the milk blockade meant to the babies and little children of the central powers.

FIELD COMFORTS ARE APPRECIATED BY THE BOYS AT THE FRONT

Now that our troops in France are called on to face another winter campaign, the question of "Field Comforts" becomes one of great importance. The Government issues cover only indispensable necessities, and if these were not supplemented, the lot of the soldier on outpost duty for days and nights at a time would be intolerable.

If the war were a matter of brief campaigns in which rapid decisions were reached, the soldier could easily submit to temporary privations, but when as is the case in the western arena, the troops are continually on outpost duty with its constant strain and fatigue, their efficiency would suffer if they were not provided with some of the necessities of civilized existence.

Field comforts thus are not luxuries but rather necessities. The supply of them is of military importance. Those who through the National Service Committee co-operate with the War Contingent Association is supplying "Field Comforts," are in every sense of the word assisting the country in its military task.

The greatest incentive to public generosity in this respect is the gratitude of the soldier. The files of the War Contingent Association in London contain thousands of letters from the trenches containing heart expressions of appreciation for the supplies which have been forwarded from Canada. These letters are from officers of every grade as well as from privates. In the great freemasonry of the trenches all soldiers have a common bond of indebtedness to the civilian population which is solicitous for their welfare.

These supplies are distributed by the quartermasters of the various regiments, who are consequently in a position to know how they are appreciated. These officers have sent many letters expressing the satisfaction of the men with what has been sent.

These are a few expressions of opinion from our troops in the field:

"Allow me to express the appreciation of the N.C.O.'s and men of this unit for the frequent issues of extra comforts we receive from you."

"We all appreciate the gifts of tobacco, cigarettes, etc., you have sent us, which tend to show that we are not forgotten by the people at home."

"Please accept the thanks of a few grateful Canadians."

"If you could see," says one, "the happy smiles and sincere expression of the men in the ranks, you would feel amply rewarded for the labour and expense you have donated to so worthy a cause."

"Thanks to your welcome parcels," writes another soldier, "all the boys are in the best of health, and Gott Strafe the Huns when we are introduced."

Even the highest military authorities unbend their dignity to acknowledge field comforts with cordial thanks. "The socks you sent," says a major, "are greatly appreciated."

"I want to thank you," writes a colonel, "on behalf of myself and all my men."

The secret of the success of this Canadian association is to be found in its organization. The secretary, Mr. Colmer, is in constant touch with the Canadian troops at the Front, finds out just what article is wanted, and forwards it at once. Tobacco, chewing gum, stationery, insect powder, soap, are a few of the things in demand.

The importance of Field Comforts can scarcely be exaggerated. The additional fact that these supplies are heartily appreciated by the soldiers, should encourage the public to lend generous support to the work which the National Service Committee is carrying on in behalf of the women of Canada.

TWO GREEK LANGUAGES

One Spoken by the Educated, Other by the Masses.

There exists now in Greece a linguistic condition of affairs around which centres a controversy at once comic or tragic; for there are in Greece two languages, or, rather, the one language in two forms—one written by the newspapers, spoken by the educated classes, and used in parliamentary debates and in public documents, including the Scriptures, the circulation of which is regulated by law; and the other a vernacular used by the masses of the people, containing many words of foreign origin, especially Turkish and Italian, arising from those periods of foreign occupation, with a much simplified grammar, and rarely reduced to writing, except for private communications. The former is the cultured tongue; the latter the popular idiom; and between the two there rages a merciless warfare, in which fanatical students of the university have lost their lives, ministers their portfolios, a Metropolitan of Athens his mitre, and the sweet-faced queen-mother much of her former popularity.

To Have Smooth, White, Soft Skin All Winter

Does your skin chap or roughen easily in this weather or become unduly red or blotchy? Let me tell you a quick, easy way to overcome the trouble and keep your complexion beautifully white, smooth and soft the winter long. Just get an ounce of ordinary mercolized wax at the nearest drugstore and use a little before retiring as you would cold cream. Upon arising, remove the coating with cooling water. The wax through some peculiar attribute, feeds off the rough, discolored or blemished skin. The worn out cuticle comes off just like dandruff, only in almost invisible particles. Mercolized wax simply imitates Nature's work. Used as required it keeps the skin constantly free from devitalized scarf skin and only the healthy, young looking skin is in evidence. It's the best treatment known for weather-beaten, aged, muddy, freckled, pimpled and all unbeautiful complexions.

Some skins wrinkle easily in winter. There's an excellent remedy in a harmless wash lotion made by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in 1-2 pint witch hazel. This will quickly eradicate every line.—The Woman Beautiful.

How One Farmer Solved Problem

Incorporated His Farm at $100,000 and Gives Stock to His Children

Middle-West Stock Raiser Shows How to Keep Boys on the Farm.

The old problem of keeping the boys and girls on the farm has been solved in a novel and interesting manner by John McCallum, a middle-west farmer, whose plan is described by Charles Frances Reed in Farm and Home.

John McCallum was born in Scotland, and it was only by hard work that he had made a fortune for himself, and possessed a stock farm which covered 1,800 acres. He was a breeder of Percheron horses, Shorthorn cattle, Duroc Jersey hogs, and Oxforddown sheep, and he was justly proud of the products of his farm. His land and stock business must remain intact, and yet he knew that his nine growing sons and daughters were becoming restless—they would soon be wanting their own—and he must supply it for them.

McCallum thought it over for several days, and then one afternoon he paid a visit to his lawyer in a nearby town. It was a most satisfactory visit, and he came home with a smiling face—for he was sure that he had found the way for which he had searched. The very intact had given him an answer.

The following morning after breakfast the whole family assembled in the front room and the father laid before them the plans of a scheme which would give them all a share in the farm—and which created at once a spirit that meant success. Each one of the children had a definite activity to be responsible for, either the buying of supplies, the care of stock, or the running of the home. They knew that they would have a full share of the profit of their labours.

John McCallum had incorporated his stock farm, dividing it into shares and giving each child a portion. The capital was $100,000, divided into blocks of stock of which Mr. McCallum kept enough to give himself the controlling president of the corporation, his eldest son was appointed general manager, the second was voted the position of vice-president, while one of the other boys was made secretary and treasurer. When these posts were filled the stock was granted to the different members of the corporation. The girls were assigned to the different departments about the house, the buying, the overseeing of the cooking, and the other household duties, and the boys were given other divisions of the farm work.

One boy took over the care of the cattle, another the horses, one the hogs, and the fourth the sheep. Each person has supreme authority over his or her portion of the work, and the others are powerless to interfere unless as a board they should find that a certain department was doing damage to the general welfare of the corporation.

The plan as the president of the corporation outlined it was that each year the sons and daughters would buy some of his stock, so that in time they will have purchased all of McCallum's stock and be absolute owners of the farm.

The children set to work with a will, and it was a new zeal that helped them, for they were working for their own benefit. Inside of a month many of the small leakages that had been eating into the profits of the place had been stopped by ideas which originated with the different superintendents.

NOTHING LIKE IT FOR COLDS

Mrs. Holland Ferguson, Sheffield, N. B., writes: "Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has cured my children and myself of severe colds. We are never without it in the house. There is nothing like it for colds and throat troubles and it is so soothing" and pleasant to take, my children would drink a whole bottle if they were permitted."

Use More Honey And Less Sugar
Expert's Advice

BRIDGEBURG, Ont., Dec. 14.—W. B. Angle, the well-known apiarist of Fenwick, this county, has just issued a memorandum concerning the uses to which farmers may put honey.

Apiarist Angle says: "There are various kinds of honey, and likewise various flavours and colours. The colour may be divided into three classes, white, amber and dark. Of the white honeys, there are the clovers, especially the alsike, sweet clover, alfalfa, Canada thistle, raspberry, apple and cucumber, and of the amber honeys they are golden rod, wild sunflower, heartsease, aster, Spanish needle, milkwood and poplar. Of the dark honey there are but two great samples, buckwheat in America and heather in Europe.

"There are what we might call three classes of honey, viz., cob, extracted, and candied honey.

"Every person of any intelligence knows the result of excessive use of cane sugars and the best sugars. The consumption of sugar in the United States in 1865 was 18 pounds per man, woman and child. In 1913 it was 86 pounds. Since people have been eating more sugar, diabetes has been more common.

"Honey would be just as hard on the system as sugar were it not that it is already inverted and ready for assimilation by the system when taken into the stomach. Hence the great value of honey in preventing fatigue, for it requires very little energy to assimilate it, while sugar has to be inverted first before it is ready for assimilation, and it is this process of inversion that breaks down the kidneys.

"Honey has the property of readily taking up moisture, and it is this property that makes honey so valuable in cooking, as well as the fact that it gives an added flavour to pastry. Honey, when used in cooking cakes, etc., keeps them moist and fresh, due to the fact as stated before, that it takes up moisture from the atmosphere.

"That is why the biscuit companies buy large quantities of honey. One Buffalo biscuit company has been known to buy 70 carloads of honey in an order. Of course, that is only one instance, for all of the fancy cakes bought at the grocery stores have honey in them. Were it not for honey in them they would not keep fresh so long.

"Owing to the fact that honey takes up moisture so readily, it should not be kept in a damp place. It should always be kept in a warm, dry place, for when it is kept in a damp place it will get thin and sour."

Unsightly Pimples
Covered His Face.

All diseases and blemishes of the skin are caused by the blood being in an impure condition.

You cannot make a good complexion from the outside; you must get to the seat of the trouble. You must make the blood pure and rich by taking a medicine that will drive out all the impurities and poisons from the blood; one that drives out everything from the system that is the cause of these unsightly skin eruptions.

The best blood cleansing medicine on the market to-day is Burdock Blood Bitters; a medicine that has been used with the greatest success for the past forty years; a medicine you don't experiment with when you buy it.

Mr. Lennox D. Cooke, Indian Path, N.B., writes: "I am writing you a few lines to tell you what Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. Last winter my face was covered with pimples. I tried different kinds of medicine, and all seemed to fail. I was one day to a friend's house, and there they advised me to use B.B.B., so I purchased two bottles, and before I had them taken I found I was getting better. I got two more, and when they were finished I was competely cured. I find it is a great blood purifier, and I recommend it to all."

B.B.B. is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

GERMANS FREED 25,000 CAPTIVES OF SERBIA.

BERLIN, Dec. 13. — Twenty-five thousand Austro-Hungarians who had been made prisoners by the Serbians were set free by the Teutonic forces during their drive through Serbia, a statement issued by the Overseas News Agency to-day says. Many others died during epidemics, and the fate of still others is unknown.

"Serious fears are entertained regarding missing prisoners," says the news agency, "since Bulgarian officers have alleged that Austro-Hungarian prisoners were mercilessly treated by the Serbians during the campaign, the Serbians leaving them without food, and even killing prisoners in several instances. It has not been learned, however, whether the offences alleged were committed by irregulars or by roving bands."

BREAKS THROUGH ICE FINDS DEAD BODY

Discovery Leads Rochester Authorities to Suspect Foul Play.

ROCHESTER, Dec. 15.—As Lawrence Sears, 14 years old, broke through the ice in the Erie Canal near Clyde, he came in contact with a dead body. The body was drawn ashore, and later identified as that of James Vanderpool, a prosperous farmer, of 68 years, living near Clyde, who disappeared from his home on 18th November.

A large bruise on the back of Vanderpool's head, such as might have been inflicted by a club, and the absence of a wallet containing $125 in bills, which Vanderpool was known to have carried with him when he left home, lead the authorities to suspect foul play.

KEEP THE BOY BUSY.

(Seattle Post-Intelligencer.)

As fast as athletic sports, public playgrounds and the outdoor life have been popularized they are still far from keeping the spirited youth busy. The boy of to-day, and indeed the girl, are bumpin dynamos of energy, and many of them evidence a great amount of energy not properly directed. The growing business of the juvenile court and of general juvenile delinquency indicate this condition. Also the recent celebration of Hallowe'en was not at all reassuring to those who desire the best interests of the boy.

In the circumstances, the "rough" boy is generally not so much to blame as the parents who fail to properly direct him. Carrying a heavy load of "steam" without disposition, the boy is capable of making himself a nuisance to the community, and a kill-joy to his family, besides interfering with his future success in life, by the acquisition of habits that will be liabilities instead of assets.

If there is one duty to parents it should be that of keeping the boy busy. The simple turning of the boy into the street is shirking the parental responsibility, and a harvest of trouble often follows in after years.

The boy is worthy of the special thought and care of parents at the impressionable and formative period of his life. Street life invites "hoodlumism." The boy should be kept busy out of school hours with some amusement pastime or occupation that will improve his mind and body and fit him to take his place in a world in which sound minds in sound bodies are the attributes of success.

Their Respective Regiments.

Pat and Sandy were discussing the merits of their respective regiments, and each one was of the opinion that their own was the best. "Why," said Pat, "when our colonel is dismissing us he says to the officers, 'Fall out, gentlemen!'" "That don't count for much," said Sandy. "If our colonel said that all the regiment would fall out!"

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

HIS NARROW ESCAPE.

By JOHN G. ARMSTRONG.

[Copyright, ..., by American Press Association.]

When I was twenty-five years old I passed a crisis in my life at which I shudder today, though it happened forty years ago. For two hours I was suspended, so to speak, between a life of comfort and a prison, and the two hours ended with five minutes between life and death.

This is how it happened:

When the Union Pacific railroad was building I was taken up by one of its most influential directors with a view to preferment. The only position he could secure for me at first was paymaster, but promised if I proved worthy to do better later on. My work was to go over the line as far as completed in a pay car and pay off the employes. Well, on one of these trips I reached Julesburg, then the terminal, though Laramie was to be made the terminal in a few days. I paid off at Julesburg, having between $4,000 and $5,000 left for the force at Laramie, and I was to go there the next morning.

To kill time I went over to a hotel near the station, where I found a number of men playing poker. I sat down to watch the game and had not done so very long before I observed that none of the players seemed to know very much about the game. I had a hundred dollars of my own in my pocket besides the money I was to pay off with at Laramie. I had played poker a good deal for small stakes with my friends and was considered by them as an adept at the game. It occurred to me that I might as well take some of the money that was passing to and fro between these men, and—well, I finally took a hand.

I was what they were playing for, and they continued to play for me till they had got my hundred dollars. Then came the temptation to recoup with the company's money. A gambler and the loss of nearly all of it. I knew by this time that the men were card sharpers and were cheating me. But I knew also that to accuse any one of them would bring on a row that would expose me. As to fighting them with their own weapons, cheating, if I did so and was detected I would get a bullet in my brain.

A terrible situation like this doesn't usually affect one at the time as it does after it has passed. Though I have for years looked upon it with horror, at the time my feelings did not get the better of my equanimity. I presume this was because I realized that to keep my head was my only chance.

There was $4,500 in the pot, or just the amount I had lost. On the previous hand I had picked up several cards that had fallen on the floor, and slipped one of them up my sleeve. I was so desperate that I pushed it to cheat and if I did not win the big pot on the table let the others see that I was cheating and get a bullet in my brain. When my hand was dealt me there were two kings in it. I drew three cards, one of them being a king. The card I had picked up off the floor was a king. I had given up an ace, so no one could hold four aces. The only hand to beat four kings was a royal flush, a pretty hard hand for any one to purposely make up while being watched. If I could get in my four kings I could save myself. But what would I do with the extra card? I was desperate, as I have said, and resolved to trust to luck to get rid of it without detection. A device occurred to me. Drinks were coming on, and, seeing some sandwiches on a counter waiting to be sent out to another party, I called for one of them. As soon as I had secured it I uttered an exclamation and looked fixedly through the open doorway. Every man turned his head, and I slipped my extra card into the sandwich. When the men turned I was eating bread, meat and card altogether.

I won the pot, but one of the party, looking at me fixedly, said, "Stranger, what'd you see when you sang out so suddenly just now?"

My success gave me confidence, and I kept my coolness, but I could think of nothing probable for a reply. "I thought I saw a friend of mine," I replied, "out there whom I supposed to be in Chicago."

"Are you sure you ain't got a deck up your sleeve or somewhere?"

"What do you mean?" I replied, bristling. Rising, I shook my sleeves and turned my pockets inside out, showing that no card could be concealed on my person. Then, scooping up the pot, I said:

"Gentlemen, I have been accused of cheating, and I will play no more. I am loser by about $75, so that I have a perfect right to quit."

Though I knew my life hung in the balance, nothing could equal the relief I felt as I turned squarely away and walked out of the house. They doubtless felt sure I had purposely directed their attention from myself while I cheated, but I had not been detected, and the difference was the difference between life and death.

It would be impossible to describe my feelings as I walked to my car. Horror, relief and go many other emotions were mixed that I didn't know whether I walked, staggered or slid. When I reached my car I threw myself on my bunk and shook like a leaf in the wind.

The crisis passed, I was sure never to be caught again. I was rapidly promoted, became one of the principal officers of another road and have had a successful life.

Music of the Spheres.

The rising and the setting of the sun clearly prove that this globe is carried round in the space of twenty-four hours in an eternal and never ending circuit, and with incredible swiftness. I am not able to say whether the sound caused by the whirling about of so great a mass be excessive and therefore far beyond what our ears can perceive, nor, indeed, whether the resounding of so many stars, all carried on at the same time and revolving in their orbits, may not produce a delightful harmony of incredible sweetness. To us, who are in the interior, the world appears to glide silently along both by day and by night.—Pliny.

Cause of the Coolness.

"It would please me very much, Miss Stout," said Mr. Mugley, "if you would go to the theatre with me this evening."

"Have you secured the seats?" inquired Miss Vera Stout.

"Oh, come now," he protested; "you're not so heavy as all that!"—London Telegraph.

MRS. LYON'S ACHES AND PAINS

Have All Gone Since Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Terre Hill, Pa.—"Kindly permit me to give you my testimonial in favor of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. When I first began taking it I was suffering from female troubles for some time and had almost all kinds of aches—pains in lower part of back and headaches, and pressing down pains. I could not sleep and had no appetite. Since I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound the aches and pains are all gone and I feel like a new woman. I cannot praise your medicine too highly."—Mrs. AUGUSTUS LYON, Terre Hill, Pa.

It is true that nature and a woman's work has produced the greatest remedy for women's ills that the world has ever known. From the roots and herbs of the field, Lydia E. Pinkham, forty years ago, gave to womankind a remedy for their peculiar ills which has proved more efficacious than any other combination of drugs ever compounded, and to-day Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is recognized from coast to coast as the standard remedy for women's ills.

In the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., are files containing hundreds of thousands of letters from women seeking health—many of them openly state over their own signatures that they have regained their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; and in some cases that it has saved them from surgical operations.

Success of a New Remedy for Backache, Kidneys, Rheumatism.

"Dear Mr. Editor—I suffered for years with backache. Last March I tried "Anuric" and have used this new kidney medicine recently discovered by Dr. Pierce, and it was wonderful the way it eased the pain and gave me rest in such a short time. I have tried several medicines, but "Anuric" is the only one that gave satisfaction. I feel it my duty to recommend "Anuric Tablets" to any one who suffers as I did.
(Signed) Mrs. MARGARET E. SNIDER.

"NOTE: Folks in town and adjoining counties are delighted with the results they have obtained by using "ANURIC," the newest discovery of Dr. Pierce, who is head of the INVALIDS' HOTEL and SURGICAL INSTITUTE, in Buffalo, N. Y. Those who started this day with a backache, stiff legs, arms and muscles, and an aching head (worn out before the day began because they were in and out of bed half a dozen times at night) are appreciating the perfect rest, comfort and new strength they obtained from Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets. To prove that this is a certain uric acid solvent and conquers headache, kidney and bladder diseases and rheumatism, if you've never used the "Anuric," cut this out and send ten cents to Doctor Pierce for a large sample package. This will prove to you that "Anuric" is thirty-seven times more active than lithia in eliminating uric acid—and the most potent kidney and bladder corrector. If you are a sufferer, go to your best druggist and ask for a 50-cent box of "Anuric." You run no risk for Dr. Pierce's good name stands behind this wonderful new discovery as it has for the past half century for his "Golden Medical Discovery," a general tonic made from roots with pure glycerine which makes the blood pure, his "Favorite Prescription" for weak women and "Pleasant Pellets" for liver ills.

Afflicted with Lame Back

THREE YEARS AGO
COULD NOT SWEEP THE FLOOR.

Women are coming to understand that weak, lame and aching backs from which they suffer so much excruciating pain and agony are due to wrong action of the kidneys.

The kidneys are overtaxed—given more work than they can do, and when the back aches and pains it is hard for a woman to look after her household duties, for no woman can be strong and well when the kidneys are out of order.

On the first sign of any weakness in the back Doan's Kidney Pills should be taken. They go right to the seat of the trouble; cure the weak, aching back, and prevent any serious kidney trouble liable to follow.

Mrs. L. Goodhew, 683 Manning Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "I take great pleasure in writing you, stating the benefit I have received by using Doan's Kidney Pills. About three years ago I was terribly afflicted with lame back, and was so bad I could not even sweep the floor. I was advised to use Doan's Kidney Pills, and before I had used one box there was a great improvement, and my back was completely cured. I highly recommend 'Doan's' for lame back."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

DOMESTIC TANGLE IN ARTIST COLONY

Robert Carlton Brown, of Grantwood, N.J., is Sued For Divorce.

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—Robert Carlton Brown, formerly a member of the artist colony at Grantwood, N.J., has been made defendant in an action for divorce by Cornelia Lillian Fox Brown. The proceedings were begun a month ago, but the Sheriff's office could not prevail upon Mr. Brown to cross over to New Jersey to accept service. Mr. Brown is a stock broker in the Wall street district. His attorney last evening succeeded in having Mr. Brown cross the Edgewater ferry to meet the under-sheriff.

Miss Aileen Perry, whose address is given as No. 17 East Fifteenth street, Manhattan, is named as corespondent. The Browns were married at Madison, Wis., in 1909. They have two children, Cornelia, aged four, and Robert, Jr., three.

The Brown home is one of the most attractive in this colony, and Bohemian life is said to have prevailed there for two or three years. On the top of the home is a roof garden, where many entertainments and social gatherings were held.

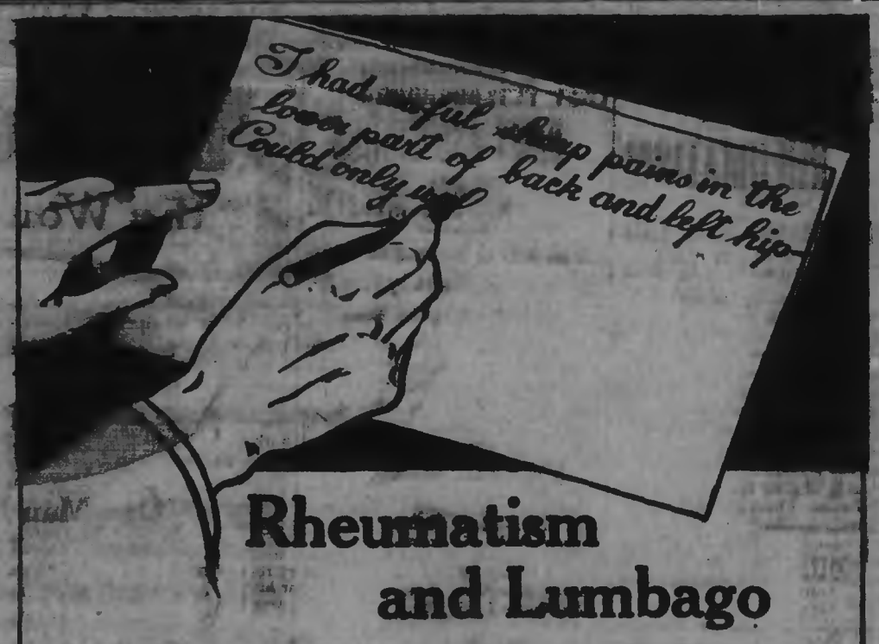
"This is a private matter between my husband and myself and in which the public should have no concern," said Mrs. Brown, "and I can't understand how the information became public."

Sergeant — "Any previous experience?" Elongated Erbert—"Experience? Why, I'm a born soldier. I had three brothers in the Boer war, a father and uncle in the Mutiny, grandfather in the Crimea and my great-grandfather helped Wellington at Waterloo."

$1,000 Reward Forfeited If Remedy Fails

We hope this notice will reach the eyes of people who are troubled with constipation and bowel trouble. Dr. Hamilton's Pills have been guaranteed to cure any case within three days, and the above reward will be paid for any case resisting this greatest of all remedies.

No prescription ever written could surpass Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. For years they have been curing the most obstinate cases of constipation, biliousness, headaches and sour stomach. Here is your chance to test Dr. Hamilton's Pills. If they fail—your money back for the asking. Be sure you get the yellow box, and insist on being supplied with only Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut, 25c. at all dealers



Rheumatism and Lumbago

Mr. Wm. Parker, 105 Cayuga street, Brantford, Ont., tells in the following letter of his remarkable experience with Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills:—"My doctor treated me for some time for Sciatica, Rheumatism, Lumbago, but to no purpose, for I had to lay off work. The visiting officer of Sick Benefit called to see me and advised the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, stating that he had been cured of the same trouble by their use. I asked the druggist about them and he recommended them highly. Not being satisfied with this, I went back to my doctor, and when he said they were good I began their use. The promptness with which they enlivened the action of the kidneys and bowels was wonderful, and it was not long before I was rid of all my trouble. I had awful, sharp pains in the lower part of my back and left hip, and was so bad that I could only walk by hanging on to a chair or the wall. My wife had to lace my shoes. Only those who have had this ailment can realize the way I suffered. I am writing this letter to let people who have my trouble know of these pills. You are at liberty to use this letter, and if anyone interested will call or write to me I will give every detail."

When you have pains and aches put Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to the test. By enlivening the action of liver, kidneys and bowels they cleanse the system of all poisons, and thereby remove the cause of rheumatism, lumbago and other painful diseases.

One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

Italians Fighting For Italy Alone

Interested in Balkans Only So Far As War There May Favor Italy's Aggrandisement.

ROME, Dec. 10.—Premier Salandra made a speech at Turin the other day in which he said two words that summed up Italy's purpose in the present European conflict—"national aspirations." These two words are worth remembering by any one who wishes to understand Italy's role in the present conflict, and how it differs from that of England, France, Russia, and the other parties to the great struggle.

First and foremost of these aspirations is to get back Italy's two lost provinces in the north—Trent in the west and the rich strategic country north of Venice, sweeping around the head of the Adriatic down to Trieste. These two provinces are the Alsace and Lorraine of Italy. But Italy's national aspirations do not end with getting back her lost provinces. Just across the Adriatic lies Istria, that great stretch of country which used to be a Roman province and later was part of the Venetian Republic. Italy does not forget that this valuable shoreland along the Eastern Adriatic was once Italian, and national aspiration feels that it should again be Italian. And beyond that lie the Aegean Islands and the route to the East, with Italy as the great power lying nearest this dazzling field, and the great power having the largest coast line on the Mediterranean. In this, too, Italy does not forget that old Rome was mistress of the East and West, and that a Roman Emperor, Constantine, founded Constantinople and gave it his name. These aspirations are vaguely defined, and are not a distinct part of the present national aspiration movement, but they all go together in the popular hopes and dreams of an expanding and greater Italy.

How far Italy will go into the Balkan campaign will depend upon how far the leaders think it will contribute to their policy, of Italy's national aspirations They will not go into it as France has gone, to save Serbia. In fact, Italy's interests do not tend toward building up a strong Serbia, for Serbia, like Italy, has her aspirations for control of the eastern coast of the Adriatic. Greece, too, is a small rising power of the Eastern Mediterranean which might some day check Italy's aspirations of becoming again the great power dominating power of the Eastern Mediterranean. So that there has been no marked enthusiasm in Italy about entering the Balkan conflict. The military leaders, like General Cadorna, Commander in Chief, have strongly opposed any participation, saying Italy's road lay to the north—the rescue of her two lost provinces.

Allied influence has been strong from outside, however, and a landing in Albania or a movement toward Macedonia may bring Italy into the Balkan theatre of war. But in that case it will be because participation in the Balkan struggle holds out one more prospect for realizing Italy's national aspirations in the territorial upheavals finally resulting from the struggle now going on in the Balkans.

TORTURED BY RHEUMATISM

Sunday School Supt. Tells How "Fruit-a-tives" Relieved

TORONTO, ONT., Oct. 1st, 1913.

"I have lived in this city for more than 12 years and am well known. I suffered from Rheumatism, especially in my hands. I spent a lot of money without any good results. I have taken "Fruit-a-tives" for 18 months now and am pleased to tell you that I am well. All the enlargement has not left my hands, and perhaps never will, but the soreness is all gone and I can do any kind of work. I have gained 35 pounds in eighteen months."

THREE AIRMEN HOME-BOUND.

PARIS, Dec. 13.—The American aviators, Liems. William Thaw, Norman Prince, and Elliot Cowdin, will sail to-morrow for New York on eight days' leave.

According to the rule of the French Army, all "permissionaires" have the right to spend the full period of leave at home; but the authorities were staggered when the Americans coolly averred that their homes were across the Atlantic. However, army rules admit of no comprpomise, so eight days for the voyage each way were added.

The aviators must report to the French Consul on landing, and take the first boat for France eight days later.

Throw Away Your Eye-Glasses!

A Free Prescription

You Can Have Filled and Use at Home.

Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye-strain or other eye-weaknesses? If so, you will be glad to know that there is real hope for you. Many whose eyes were failing, say they have had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says after trying it: "I was almost blind; could not see to read at all. Now I can read anything without glasses, and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy without glasses but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time, and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto. Fill a two ounce bottle with warm water, drop in one Bon-Opto tablet and allow to dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time. The Valmas Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail if your druggist cannot.

Dairy Meeting.

On Saturday, December 18th, in the Town Hall, the General Institute and Dairy Meeting will be held. All interested in the dairy industry, including owners of factories, creameries and makers, will have the opportunity of choosing a person to represent the district on the Board of Directors of the Eastern Dairymen's Association. Addresses will be given by the Institue speakers, also by Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., of Peterborough; Mr. G. G. Publow, superintendent of dairy instruction of Eastern Ontario, and Mr. R. W. Ward, district dairy instructor.

Mrs. Watts, formerly of Clinton, will address a meeting of the Women's Institute in the office of the Department of Agriculture at 2 o'clock p.m.

A joint meeting will be held in the evening at 7.30, in the Town Hall.

At the regular meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of the Methodist Church on Wednesday afternoon, Mrs. (Rev.) Irwin and Mrs. William Spence were made life members by the members.

Miss Mabel Andrews spent the week-end at Pontypool, a guest of her brother, Mr. G. Andrews, who is attending Victoria University, and who is in charge of the services in the Methodist Church at that place.

Mr. Herbert Knox, son of Mr. Wm. Knox, South Dummer, who is attending the University in Toronto, has had to return home on account of breaking his collar-bone while engaging in some sports.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Davidson have been visiting their daughter, Mrs. A. Anderson, Keene.

Miss M. Kirkpatrick was in Peterborough on Saturday.

Lt.-Col. Johnston, of Peterborough, was in town last week.

Miss M. Holcombe, who spent the last few months in Peterborough, has returned home.

Mr. B. W. Squire and Mr. Thos. Morrison are in the field for Reeve.

Miss M. Martin, of Peterborough, was in town last week.

Mrs. Adam Patterson spent Saturday in Peterborough.

Mr. Sam. Girven, of Orillia, has been in town for a few days visiting old friends.

Rev. I. Snell, of Hastings, preached in the Methodist Church on Sunday.

Miss Una Duffield spent the week-end with friends in Peterborough.

Miss Josephine McNichol has returned home from Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Squire, Havelock, spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Harper.

Mrs. E. C. Cuffe was in Peterborough on Saturday.

Miss Gladys Stephens, of Hastings, is visiting Miss Evelyn Beavis.

Mr. Wellington Kingsley has returned home from the West.

Mr. Keith Waters, of Belleville, is home on account of illness.

Mr. Verner McNeely, who is attending Albert College, was home on Monday.

High School Concert.

The High School students held their annual concert and "At Home" in the Town Hall here on Monday night. The concert was the "Four Bostonians," presented by the Maple Leaf Lyceum Bureau, and was thoroughly enjoyed by the large audience present. The High School concerts for the past few years have been under the auspices of the same bureau.

The selections rendered by the soloist and violinist were much appreciated, while the elocutionist gave some amusing and also instructive numbers.

At the conclusion of the concert the "At Home" was held. The High School students and several others of the young generation waited to enjoy the promenades. The cadet corps looked quite smart in their new khaki suits, while among the girls the red and green was predominant.

The evening's entertainment was a success in every way, seventy dollars being cleared for patriotic purposes.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural colour and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Everybody uses this old, famous recipe, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampon a sponge or soft brush with it, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

Lakefield Items of Interest

HEAD STUFFED FROM CATARRH OR A COLD

Sage Cream Applied in Nostrils Opens Air Passages Right Up.

Instant relief—no waiting. Your clogged nostrils open right up; the air passages of your head clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffling, blowing, headache, dryness. No struggling for breath at night; your cold or catarrh disappears.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic, healing cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothes the inflamed or swollen mucous membrane and relief comes instantly.

It's just fine. Don't stay stuffed-up with a cold or nasty catarrh.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SHIRT WAIST.

By Anabel Worthington.

7420

The plain tailored waist is the one which will give most service and it is especially liked to combine with simple skirts for street wear. Such a model as the one shown in the illustration is suitable not only for the materials usually employed for waists but for many of those used for dresses, of which it may form a part.

This waist has no trimming except the ornamental tab on the breast and the collar which edges the open neck. The loose sleeve is gathered at the wrist, where it is finished with a pretty turnback cuff.

The waist is cut with quite a bit of material below the waistline and this is tied neatly down with a tape, or it may be cut off and the waist finished with a band.

Taffetas is much liked for waists of this character and the novelty stripes and plaids always show better in a plain model than in any other. If something that washes be preferred there are numbers of beautiful stripes in voile which will wash like cambric, and these can be made up with a substantial lace insertion at the armhole and also down the front.

The waist pattern, No. 7,420, is cut in sizes 34 to 44 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 2 yards of 36 inch material with ¾ yard of 27 inch contrasting goods to trim.

This pattern may be obtained by sending ... to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

SIX RANCHMEN ARE MURDERED

Yaqui Escape With 200 Mules Taken From Mexican Farms—Villa Planning Drive.

TOPOLOBAMPO, Mex., Dec. 15.—Yaqui Indians, who have been raiding the American settlement in the Yaqui valley, have departed, according to reports received, driving off 200 mules loaded with grain from American-owned ranches. The mutilated bodies of six Mexican laborers employed on one of the ranches were found.

Four hundred Mexican cavalry left Esperanza for the Yaqui valley, 12 miles distant, but camped for the night after reaching Providencia, a half-way point, and have not been reported as arriving at the troubled district.

The United States cruiser Raleigh, which was ordered by Admiral Winslow here on the flagship San Diego, to proceed to Tobari bay, has arrived there and a division of destroyers has reached Guaymas, where the cruiser Denver is now anchored.

You May Enjoy Your Meals

If You Will But Equip Your Stomach With the Right Means to Handle the Food

If you go into a restaurant, cafe or hotel, where all your environments, the lights, dazzling linen and bustling woman, seem to foretell of a pleasant meal, your stomach should not revolt when you read the menu card.

Heavy steaks, soups, oysters, entrees, salads, etc., should hold no terrors for the healthy stomach and they do not.

A small box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets placed in your vest pocket will be sufficient guard against the mad revels of a worn out stomach.

A tablet taken a few moments after a copious meal will remove any ill effects of food from your stomach and you may eat as generously as those about you.

One of these little tablets will of itself settle all questions of indigestion for that meal and will place your stomach and digestive organs in a better condition for the next.

Your blood will be enriched and the depleted gastric fluids will be rebuilt.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are natural, active, digestive agents who give to the gastric juice the elements they lack, which ease the stomach, remove irritation and enrich and stimulate the blood.

All of these statements may be verified if you will take but a little of your time to prove them.

Every druggist carries Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets in stock and will tell you of their merit. These tablets sell for 50c per box, or send us your name and address and we will send you at once by mail a trial package free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 214 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

PART OF THE GREEK ARMY IS BEING WITHDRAWN FROM SALONIKI TO-DAY

Only 12,000 Soldiers to Be Left There is the Report From Athens--Greek Socialists Anxious to See Greek Soldiers Throw in Their Lot With the Allies--Austria Said to Be Ready to Comply With the Demands of the United States in Regard to the Ancona Case.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SALONIKA, Dec. 15.—The partial withdrawal of Greek troops from the vicinity of Salonika under an agreement with the Anglo-French will begin late to-day. Twelve thousand Greek troops will remain there.

PARIS, Dec. 15.—The Greek Socialist party has issued a manifesto, declaring that neutrality should be discontinued and Greecian troops at once placed at the disposal of the Allies to fight the German invaders.

ATHENS, Dec. 15.—King Constantine has developed influenza, and has been ordered to take a complete rest from State affairs.

LONDON, Dec. 15.—That Austria will yield to the demands of the United States, made in the Ancona note, was reported in the dispatches from Swiss points. It was stated that a meeting of the Austrian Cabinet was held yesterday to consider the American note.

PARIS, Dec. 15.—The citizens of France were to-day answering the statement of the German Chancellor that proposals for peace must come from the Allies. Thousands of men and women from all classes were flocking to subscribe to the new loan to continue the war. To-day was closing day for subscriptions. Long lines formed outside the post offices and the shops of the tobacconists, where subscriptions were being received in Paris. There was every indication that the loan would prove a great success.

BERLIN, Via Wireless, Dec. 15.—Responsibility for the continuance of the war must rest with the Allies, Dr. Karl Helfferich, Imperial Secretary of the Treasury, told the Reichstag, in discussing Germany's finances to-day.

"We stand like rocks in the soil of their home country," said Dr. Helfferich, "and on the columns of the British Empire are written in glowing letters the same words as on Belshazzar's Palace."

BERLIN, Dec. 15.—Dr. Karl Helfferich, Secretary of the Imperial Treasury, in a speech to-day in the Reichstag, in support of the bill for a supplementary war credit of 2½ billion dollars, estimated the total cost of the war to all belligerents at $80,000,000 a day, of which Britain and her Allies pay two-thirds.

LONDON, Dec. 15.—Lord Alverstone, former Lord Chief Justice of England, and one of the strongest friends of America in English public life, died to-day at the age of 72 years.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—Great Britain has granted the safe conduct of Captains Boy-Ed and Von Papen, of the American Embassy.

PARIS, Dec. 15.—(French Official Communique).—"There was fighting with hand grenades in the Artois district and in the sectors of Roclincourt and of Chantecler Farm. Between the Oise and the Aisne heavy French shells caused the explosion of a depot of German munitions at a point to the north of Puisalenin, in the region of Tracey Le Val."

PARIS, Dec. 15.—The war has cost France on an average more than eight million dollars a day since its beginning, according to the statements presented to the Chamber of Deputies to-day. At present, however, it is estimated that the war is costing France well above ten millions a day.

BERLIN, Dec. 15.—Four Allied aeroplanes, including one battle plane, with two motors, were brought down by German anti-aircraft guns, the War Office announced to-day, during raids on German territory.

PORT HURON, Mich., Dec. 15.—The Northern Navigation Company's steamer Majestic was burned at her dock at Point Edward, Ontario, to-day. The Majestic carried grain, freight and passengers between Fort William and points on the lower lakes. She was the smallest of the Northern Navigation Company's fleet. The origin of the fire is unknown. The burning hulk of the Majestic floated down the river and set fire to the big lake liner Saronic.

PEACE JITNEY ARRIVES.

LONDON, Dec. 15.—The liner Oscar II., carrying Henry Ford's band of warring peace advocates, arrived at Kirkwall to-day.

A GOVERNMENT TRAIN WRECKED AT ARMSTRONG

Passenger Train De-railed North of Fort William—Some of the Passengers Hurt But Details Are Still Vague

A WRECK AT IGNACE

Examiner Special:

WINNIPEG, Man., Dec. 15.—A Canadian Government railway passenger train enroute from Winnipeg to Toronto, was derailed this morning at Armstrong, north of Fort William. Some of the passengers were injured, although few details have been received.

A Canadian Pacific wheat train was wrecked to-day at Ignace, 200 miles east of Winnipeg.

CHEERY LETTER HELPED WOUNDED STRANGER

LONDON, Dec. 15—Lieut. Reid, son of the Agent-General of the Province of Ontario, who recently became attached to the 26th Battalion, of New Brunswick, at the front, writes to his father in London, saying he has had his baptism of fire. The weather at the front has been cold, and mud has been hindering the operations.

A Canadian woman in London who has undertaken to correspond with lonely men at the front has received a card of thanks from a Western Canada non-com., who relates how a letter he received helped to cheer up a comrade who was beside him in the trenches severely wounded and greatly while awaiting removal. Being somewhat perplexed as to how to relieve the tension, the non-com. read the encouraging letter which he had from the Canadian woman, and it had the desired effect.

BROCK ST. RINK OPENS TO-NIGHT

Big Season is Expected Under New Management This Year

The skating season at Brock street rink will open to-night and there promises to be a record opening night crowd as there is a splendid sheet of ice ready. The Brock street rink is under absolutely new management and new ownership this year and the season is expected to be one of the most successful in the history of the rink, inasmuch as many innovations are to be introduced during the season. Clubs wishing to secure the rink for practise games should see Mr. Waram or Mr. Glover at the Examiner office.

WEDDING BELLS

KING—REED.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Reed was the scene of a pretty military wedding on Saturday evening, December the eleventh, at six o'clock, when Pte. Ernest Charles King of the 93rd Battalion, was united in marriage to Hilda Helen Reed of this city. The ceremony was performed by Capt. (Rev.) James Rollins of the 93rd Battalion.

The bride, who was given away by her father, looked charming in her wedding gown of silk, with bridal veil and orange blossoms, and carried a large bouquet of white 'mums. She was attended by her sister Marjorie, who looked pretty in cream voile. The groomsman was Pte. Percy Schwair, of the 93rd Battalion.

Under a large-sized bell, banked with flags and evergreens, the bridal couple received the congratulations of their many friends, after which all sat down to a sumptuous wedding repast. The bride received many pretty and useful gifts, among them being a lovely set of black fox furs, the gift of the groom.

TO THE CITIZENS OF PETERBOROUGH

At the close of the three-days' canvas in aid of the Patriotic Fund the Committee of the Fund and the organization behind it desire to thank all who took part in the magnificent movement, and who assisted in gaining such results.

To the Press of the city, who most loyally and faithfully gave the reading columns of the papers in most ample extent to further the campaign, and to make the campaign a success. Officials from headquarters state, what may well be the fact, that no papers in the Dominion have given such liberal and efficient assistance. Their good work is a credit to themselves, and an indication abroad of the enterprise of Peterborough. Again, gentlemen, thanks.

To the workmen, the solid bulk of our citizens for a most handsome contribution amounting in bulk to many times the amount subscribed last year. It is taken that there is a recognition among the men that each should bear a part of the expense of the war, and that the families of soldiers shall not want in the absence of the head of the house. The committee was most mightily encouraged as the returns came in from the several shops, factories and stores. Each a fine contribution to combined effort.

To the Team Captains and Team-mates who worked so faithfully and amicably in friendly rivalry to roll up the magnificent totals. Their generalship and enthusiasm was reflected in the energy with which the canvassers went into the work and dredged the city in the interests of the Fund. This Able Hundred deserve the commendation and praise of all for their self-sacrificing work, and may they long stand well in the eye of the community.

To the employers and managers of factories and shops, for permission where accorded to interview the man and solicit subscriptions, and particularly to those who interviewed their men and secured favour for the Fund. The confidence of the employer in the justness of the cause left no doubt in the mind of the employee that a contribution should and would be made. In case of doubt the assurance of the employer would and did have weight.

To the Peterborough Patriotic Chorus and its able conductor for the efficient assistance at the meeting in the Opera House. The service of the chorus added another attraction to an already good bill of fare. The chorus may consider that the appreciation of the meeting as expressed in applause is its best reward. And, as well, the vocal soloists who contributed to the programme.

To the officers, band and men of the 93rd Battalion, who turned out and added importance and interest to the demonstration in the evening of the day of the mass meeting. A corps that will give so good an account of itself in the field as it does on the training ground. Peterborough's own battalion.

THE COMMITTEE OF THE PATRIOTIC FUND.

SHOULD BE BUMPER HOUSES FOR CONCERTS BY THE 93rd BAND

High-Class Programmes Arranged For the Grand Opera House For Friday and Saturday Night--Bandsman Gilbert Has Joined the 93rd--50 Recruits Wanted Before Christmas Day--To-day's Military News.

The next attraction at the Grand Opera House is one that promises to be one of the most popular of the season, and that is the appearance of the splendid Band of the 93rd Battalion, assisted by a number of other artists, in two popular concerts, on Friday and Saturday night of this week. The tickets are now on sale, and will no doubt be in demand. The Band is offering a splendid programme, a list of high-class numbers that will show the citizens of Peterborough that in the 93rd they have an organization to be proud of. Interspersed with the numbers by the Band will be vocal and instrumental solos. Altogether the entertainments promise to be among the most enjoyable of the season. The proceeds are to go to the Band Fund to help pay for the new instruments which are expected the week after next. The citizens of Peterborough should encourage the efforts of the Band with two bumper houses.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 15.—Promotions announced were as follows: To be Major-Generals, Brig-Generals Hodgins, T. Benson, Henry Smith, and John Carson. To be Brigadier-Generals, Colonels Logie, Sir John Gibson, Hon. James Mason, and E. W. Wilson.

The cablegram in this morning's paper telling of the exploint of Lieut. Graham and Lieut. Ince of the Royal Naval Air Service, the latter a Canadian aviator, who but recently qualified, will be read with great interest in Peterborough. Lieut. Ince is a son of Mr. Wm. Ince, of Toronto, the senior partner of Perkins-Ince, who have a branch here. Mr. Ince, Sr., is well-known among the curlers and business men of Peterborough, who will congratulate him upon his son's exploit.

One of the privates of the 93rd is responsible for the following parody sung to the tune of "My Little Girl":

Oh Kaiser Bill, we want you only,
And we long for you each day;
And Billy dear, we're going to get you,
Though you're many miles away.
We'll make you wish that you had never Promised Belgium you'd be true;
So Billy dear, we're getting ready,
And you're coming after you.

To-day was pay-day for the men of the 93rd Battalion—always a welcome event for the men in khaki.

The barrack hospital at the Armouries was occupied for the first

Sir Sam Hughes' Emphatic Language

Minister of Militia Says the W. C. T. U. Wouldn't Believe Any Better Than the Soldiers If As Many of Them Were Bunched Together

WAR LORD IS ANGRY

TORONTO, Dec. 15.—Speaking at a meeting of the Ward 4 Conservative Association in Broadway Hall last night, Major-General Sir Sam Hughes expressed in a characteristically straight-from-the-shoulder manner his opinion of people who criticize Canadian soldiers.

It was when describing the gallant deeds of the boys from Canada at the front that the Minister of Militia and Defence struck out at their traducers. When he advocated a proper militia system for Canada and set about encouraging the cadet movement and again when he claimed that the men trained at Valcartier during the first six weeks of the war were amongst the best trained soldiers ever sent out by any country Sir Sam said he was told it was "hot air." St. Julien was the answer to that. He then proceeded to vividly depict this great battle where the Germans used gas for the first time and where Calais and Paris and London were saved through the gallantry of the Canadians, though outnumbered many times. There the Canadian Highland Brigade and the regiments with it won imperishable glory. He particularly mentioned the Montreal Highlanders, which he described as one of the finest regiments in the world.

Next to them was the Royal Montreal Regiment led by Colonel Frank Meighen, a multi-millionaire who had given up the luxuries, his great wealth and high position in business and social life enabled him to enjoy, to take his place in the firing line. And with them also he was proud to say, in Toronto was the gallant old 48th, commanded by Colonel Jack Currie, one of the bravest soldiers and the most slandered man in Canada. "I am taking this opportunity," said Sir Sam, "of replying to the cowardly, sneaking, whispering, slanderous scoundrel or scoundrels who have been trying to traduce Jack Currie for not doing his duty in the trenches. Jack Currie stood in the trenches all day and night until only 180 of his men were left—until he was ordered out of them by my son who was brigade major. Another man farther down the line was mistaken for Jack Currie, but that other man also had a perfect right to be where he was. It ill becomes any craven coward who stays at home to criticize any man at the front, much less slander a good, honest man like Jack Currie."

Very Little Intemperance.

From his reply to the critics of Col. Currie, Sir Sam passed to the criticse of the soldiers in general. There were lots of people in Canada, he said, who were ready to find fault with the boys, but he had watched them carefully and was proud of them. He believed the men at the Exhibition Camp, though drawn from cases living under conditions entirely new to them, were as law abiding, sober, moral and generally good fellows as their comrades who were knocking about Toronto in mufti. "I'll compare them with any class in the Dominion of Canada without exception," said Sir Sam. "These boys out there at the Exhibition Grounds are nobly doing their duty, and I defy these dear, sweet, darling creatures, the W. C. T. U., to behave themselves better if as many of them were bunched together. There may be an odd man occasionaly intoxicated, but I must resent any hints that drunkenness is prevalent. The percentage of men found intoxicated has been less than four per thousand. It is surely absurd to call that intemperance. Let these people go to the front and see these poor fellows there standing up to the trenches all day in mud and water, and they would realise what they are enduring and be less eager to criticize."

JOS. GOULD WAS ACQUITTED OF SERIOUS CHARGE

Jury Returned Verdict of Not Guilty After Being Out Thirty Minutes —Faced Indecent Assault Charge

JUDGE HUYCKE AGREED

After half an hour's deliberation the jury which heard the evidence in the case of Joseph Gould, charged with indecent assault on a six-year old Hastings girl, returned a verdict of not guilty at noon to-day. Judge Huycke concurred in the acquittal, stating that there was no legal evidence to justify a conviction. Mr. G. N. Gordon conducted the defence, assisted by Mr. Humphries of Campbellford, and County Crown Attorney the prosecution. The jury was composed of the following:

William Quinlan, Douro.
Joseph Roseborough, Smith.
Thos. Flood, Jr., Ennismore.
Ernest Reid, Peterborough.
John Pilling, Peterborough.
Josiah Blewitt, Smith.
Fred Bowen, Peterborough.
A. D. Ormiston, Havelock.
A. E. Runnells, Peterborough.
W. J. Stillman, Smith.
Rolliel Stookdale, Harvey.
Geo. Ruth, Peterborough (foreman.)
Joseph Gould, 47 years of age, resides near the village of Hastings. The alleged indecent assault was said to have occurred on October 20th, the little girl in the case being but six years old. The general ter mesault in its ordinary meaning conveys the idea of action, which was lacking in this case. It was more of the nature of an illegal indecent exposure. Character evidence in favour of Gould was given by Reeve Walter Foulds and John E. Wiloox of Hastings, also by P. McQuade, Sam Heatherly, Fred McKee and Jos. O'Grady, farmers residing near Hastings. Judge Huycke observed that these men had stated that Mr. Gould's reputation was regarded as a good one in his community, and His Honour expressed the hope that Gould would so live that his character would be unspotted in the future.

May Build a Number of Shacks

Provision Made For the Treatment of Spinal Meningitis and Smallpox

Mr. G. H. Duncan, chairman of the Board of Health, Dr. C. H. Amys, Medical Officer of Health, and Ald. A. A. McIntyre, have been delegated to secure estimates on the cost of two or three shacks to be constructed close to the Queen Mary Isolation Hospital, where they will be available in case of an outbreak of spinal-meningitis or smallpox. The idea originated with Dr. Amys, who brought the matter up at yesterday's meeting of the Board of Health. He said the Board had a balance of approximately five hundred dollars. One or more shacks could be erected at a cost of probably one hundred dollars each. The necessary supplies for these could be obtained whenever required from the hospital, and the same staff could supervise the work. Dr. Amys said it was necessary that the city should provide against a possible outbreak of either one of the virulent diseases named, especially now that a battalion is located here. Each shack would contain four beds and other necessary equipment, and would be under the control of the Queen Mary Hospital staff.

PUBLIC HEALTH INTERESTS.

Time was in the history of Peterborough when the Board of Health, was not taken seriously; when even it didn't take itself seriously; when it was a mere formal concession to the requirements of the law; when it was a body without a soul, so far as active interests in its supposed duties was concerned. But of late years there has been a great change; and the question of the public health has become a live one, taken to heart by the Board itself and enlisting the active cooperation of capable and alert officials. In all ways the Board of Health and its duties have become active factors in the civic life instead of a mere negative formality.

At the annual meeting of the Board last night two important reports were presented that reflect the results of the activity and interest of recent years in the matter of health preservation and health promotion. The report of Dr. Amys, Medical Health Officer, reveals a very gratifying condition of sanitary interests, and illustrates and emphasizes the value of the application of advanced medical science, and sanitary vigilance. His report is well worthy study. A partial analysis of the mortality paragraph indicates that our city is a wholesome place to live in, the very first consideration in appraising the desirability of residence. When our death rate is considered as chiefly by persons liable to die anyway—from old age and independently of sanitary conditions—we have a tribute to the high standard of public health. When the majority of deaths are of persons in advanced years and of infants under one year, there is cause for congratulation. The freedom from fatal contagious diseases is also highly satisfactory; and, when to absence of epidemics of this kind is added the fact that not a single death occurred during the year from the ordinary contagious diseases, we have reason to be well pleased.

In regard to contagious diseases, Dr. Amys' remarks regarding the failure to placard premises where they occur, are worthy of all heed. Failure of families thus affected to placard the houses is criminal inhumanity. A family with a contagious disease in its home that neglects the legal requirement of placarding, or removes placards, is guilty of a great inhumanity. Their conduct in this regard that exposes sound persons to disease that may cause death, is as unpardonable as would be the act of leaving food known to be poisoned within reach of children. The condemnation in this regard extends to some of the doctors who are less excusable, for they know better. Their neglect to report all cases of diseases, as required by law, is unpardonable, and they should be effectively disciplined for such a neglect of duty.

Though these and other things prevent the realization of ideal health conditions, yet we have reason to be well pleased with the generally satisfactory condition of the public health and of our sanitary conditions.

In this regard the report of Sanitary Inspector Spence is illuminating, as much of the good result achieved is due to his intelligent activity in discharge of duty. There has been a very decided improvement in sanitary conditions since he entered upon his work four years ago. He has fully justified his appointment, and if, as is pretty sure to be the case, he receives the cooperation of the City Council and Board of Health, much more will be accomplished. That his work is no sinecure is indicated by the report, which shows that during the year he has made 3,360 calls and inspections, an average of ten for every day in the year, not counting many visits and inspections not reported. It is only by constant vigilance that good results can be accomplished, and we are assured of this, a circumstance that adds to the satisfaction we are entitled to feel over the sanitary conditions and care of the supreme matters of civic concern—health and public sanitation, in its direct influence upon the health of the people.

COMPARATIVE RECRUITING.

A comparison of what the various parts of the Empire have done in the way of furnishing soldiers for helping in the war may be made for other purposes than a foundation for reproach—to stimulate a wholesome spirit of rivalry. In a speech at Simcoe, Mr. N. W. Rowell, Ontario Liberal leader, presented a summary and comparison of what had been done in the way of recruiting by different parts of the Empire. He gives figures, sponsed by cable, and covering actual facts, as to enlistment up to December 1st.

The percentage of the total under-arms to the total population is given, as follows:

France, 11 per cent.; Great Britain, eight per cent.; South Africa (for the German South African Expeditionary forces) 5 1-2 per cent.—of European population; New Zealand, 4.15 per cent.; Australia, 3.57 per cent., and cent; Australia 3.57 per cent. and Canada 2.37 per cent. Canada had, according to official figures 189,000 men under arms at home and abroad, on December 1st. It was pointed out that if Canada had as many men in the ranks for every hundred of the population as other countries she would have, upon the percentage basis of the countries named, the following number of men enlisted—on the 11 per cent. basis of France, 880,000; in proportion to Great Britain's enlistment, 640,000; South Africa's rate would have given Canada 440,000; New Zealand's rate, 332,000, and on Australia's 3.57 per cent. basis, Canada's total would have been 286,000.

Here we see that Canada, in proportion to her population, has not enlisted as many men as France or Britain or some of the colonies. In France there is compulsory service; Great Britain being the senior partner, with the largest interest, and being closer to the scenes of war, and the population much denser, would be expected to lead. The other dominions of Canada must be judged on their merits, and it seems clear that we have not done as well in recruiting as any of these countries, coming, however, a close second to Australia. This condition is a challenge to Canadian manhood, and should stimulate recruiting. It is to be said for Canada that it seems the interest in recruiting is increasing and we have yet a good chance and good prospect of showing that we can improve our relative standing in the matter of recruiting. It is not said by way of invidious comparison, but it may be remarked that in the actual test of war and actual fighting Canadian soldiers have shown themselves so plucky, resourceful, and, in every way, dependable, that it is no extravagance to claim that much of what, according to statistics, Canadian soldiers lack in number—quantity—they make up in quality. Nevertheless it is "up to" the young manhood of the greatest of the overseas Dominions to come forward, and by prompt and plentiful enlistment, minify or remove the comparative disparity that figures seem to show exists between us and the other Dominions.

CANADA FINDING HERSELF.

A few months ago and nobody in Canada thought any big undertaking could be accomplished here without going to Great Britain for the money with which to finance it. Now the situation is reversed and we are helping Great Britain to finance her biggest undertaking. The war, among other things, has enabled Canada to find herself.—Winnipeg Telegram.

"IF GERMANY CONQUERED."

"If the Germans conquered they would have their hand on the whole world; there would be only the German power in Europe; only two in the whole world—Germany and the United States. Would the position of these two to each other be that of peace No; it would be war. Certainly Germany would not be ready at once but its preparations would continue with the domination of the world in view. If this happened the United States would be obliged to become a military nation. I will go further. If Germany triumphed in this war, the United States would regret her neutrality in this war."—Sir Wilfrid Laurier in Montreal.

WHY ASHAMED OF HIM NOW?

The Toronto News, whose good angel, the Hon. Frank Cochrane, brought Bourassa into Northern Ontario four years ago to talk for Borden and against Laurier, is now doing its best to "wish" Bourassa on the Liberal party. In the column of special correspondence headed "Letters of an M.P." the News says that should an election be held Liberals "count on heavy gains through the enemy vote of Germans, Austrians, Turks, and French-Canadians of the Bourassa-Lavergne type." Tory campaign funds were used to circulate Bourassa's paper, Le Devoir, in 1911. Why should the Tory paper be ashamed of him now? He has not changed.—Globe.

HOW SOME GALLANT OFFICERS WON VICTORIA CROSS REWARD

British officers have suffered conspicuously in this war. Because they lead their men and share their hardships and dangers. And a few examples of how the Victoria Cross, the highest mark of favour for gallantry and sacrifice in action, is won, are here given:

Temp. Lt. George A. Maling, M.B., R.A.M.C.—Most conspicuous bravery and devotion to duty during the heavy fighting near Fauquissart on September 25. Lieut. Maling worked incessantly with untiring energy from 6.15 a.m. on the 25th till 6 a.m. on the 26th, collecting and treating in the open under heavy shell fire more than 200 men. At about 11 a.m. on the 25th he was flung down and temporarily stunned by the bursting of a large high-explosive shell, which wounded his only assistant and killed several of his patients. A second shell soon after covered him and his instruments with debris, but his high courage and zeal never failed him, and he continued his gallant work single-handed.

Temp. Second Lieut. Arthur J. T. Fleming-Sandes, 2nd E. Surreys—Most conspicuous bravery at Hohenzollern redoubt on September 29. Second Lieut. Fleming-Sandes was sent to command a company which at the time was in a very ciritical position. The troops on his right were retiring, and his own men, who were much shaken by continual bombing and machine-gun fire, were also beginning to retire, owing to shortage of bombs. Taking in the situation at a glance, he collected a few bombs, jumped on to the parapet in full view of the Germans, who were only twenty yards away, and threw them. Although very severely wounded almost at once by a bomb, he struggled to his feet and continued to advance and threw bombs till he was again severely wounded. This most gallant act put new heart into his men, rallied them and saved the situation.

Temp. Second Lieut. Rupert P. Hallowes, 4th Duke of Cambridge's Own (Middlesex Regt.)— Most conspicuous bravery and devotion to duty during the fighting at Hooge between Sept. 25 and October 1. Second Lieut. Hallowes displayed throughout these days the greatest bravery and untiring energy, and set a magnificent example to his men during four heavy and prolonged bombardments. On more than one occasion he climbed up on the parapet, utterly regardless of danger, in order to put fresh heart into his men. He made daring reconnaissances of the German positions in our lines. When the supply of bombs was running short he went back under very heavy shell fire and brought up a fresh supply. Even after he was mortally wounded he continued to cheer those around him and to inspire them with fresh courage.

Major (temp. Lt.-Col.) Angus F. Douglas Hamilton, Reserve of Officers, Commanding 6th Cameron Highlanders—For most conspicuous bravery and devotion to duty when commanding his battalion during operations on September 25 and 26, on Hill 70. On the 26th, when the battalions on his right and left had retired, he rallied his own battalion again and again, and led his men forward four times. The last time he led all that remained, consisting of about fifty men, in a most gallant manner and was killed at their head. It was mainly due to his bravery, untiring energy and splendid leadership that the line at this point was enabled to check the enemy's advance.

Captain Anketell M. Read, 1st Northamptons — Most conspicuous bravery during the first attack near Hulluch on the morning of September 25. Although partially gassed, Capt. Read went out several times in order to rally parties of different units which were disorganised and retiring. He led them back into the firing line, and, utterly regardless of danger moved freely about encouraging them under a withering fire. He was mortally wounded while carrying out this gallant work. Captain Read had previously shown conspicuous bravery during digging operations on August 29, 30 and 31, and on the night of July 29-30 he carried out of action an officer, who was mortally wounded, under a hot fire from rifles and grenades.

time this morning, with Pte. A. Frost as the first patient.

The 93rd Battalion Hockey Team will not play a game until the 10th of January. Many of the officers and men will be away over the holidays, so that the 93rd were given a late starting date in the Intermediate Schedule.

The officers of the 93rd Battalion would appreciate a Christmas box in the shape of 50 recruits before Christmas day. A half hundred new soldiers would bring the strength up to 500. January 1st was the date set for reaching that number, but the recruits have been coming in so well that the officers are anxious to reach the mark a week ahead of schedule, and get away to a good start in the new year.

Bandsman Harry Gilbert, the former trombone soloist of the 57th Regimental Band, and who has been transferred from the 39th Battalion C.E.F. to the Band of the 93rd Battalion, reported for duty this morning. Bandsman Gilbert will be a valued addition to the 93rd, as his ability as a trombone player are well known.

FENELON FALLS, Dec. 14.—Pte. J. H. Dundas, of Royal Montreal Rifles, first contingent, who came through the battle of Ypres and was wounded in Festubert in April, has arrived home, and was given a hearty reception by the citizens if his home town. He was met at the station by the detachment of the 109th Battalion in training here, and escorted to the Town Hall, where speeches were made, and Pte. Dundas was presented with a purse and an address of welcome.

Captain J. E. Fenning, rector of Bracebridge and Orono Anglican Churches, has joined the 136th Durham battalion, now being organized.

Rev. E. W. Pickford, Anglican clergyman of Brighton, has been appointed chaplain of the 139th Northumberland Battalion.

PORT HOPE, Dec. 14.—Colonel Arthur Williams Chapter I.O.D.E., of which Mrs. R. A. Mulholland is regent, has opened in the Bank of Toronto Building commodious club rooms for the men of the 136th Regiment. The rooms have been handsomely decorated and furnished by the ladies. Rev. J. A. Elliott presided at the formal opening, when addresses were delivered by the chairman and Mayor H. T. Bush.

KINGSTON, Dec. 14.—The officers of the 146th Battalion have been provisionally appointed as follows: Officer commanding, Lieut.-Col. C. A. Lowe, 14th Regiment; second in command, Lieut.-Col. F. S. Ferguson, 42th Regiment; adjutant, Capt. C. J. Kane, 4th Regiment; assistant adjutant, Lieut. E. J. Purdy, 14th Regiment; quartermaster, Capt. James T. Sutherland, No. 3 C.A.S.C.; medical officer, Lieut. W. Hale, A.M.C. One of the captains is R. J. McClelland, city engineer, of Kingston.

Lieut. Gordon Matthews, son of Mr. T. F. Matthews has been attached to the staff of the 93rd Peterborough Battalion. He reported for duty yesterday.

The hospital room at the armouries has been fitted out with beds.

The 57th Regiment's stores are being removed in order to make room for the canteen of the 93rd Battalion. The company room hitherto used as a canteen is rather small for the purpose.

There is quite a noticeable showing of active service ribbon in the 93rd Battalion. Among those who wear the ribbons are Lieut. Marling, Sergt.-Major Miller, Sergt. J. Playford, Sergt. J. Hawthorne, Sergt. C. Jay, Pay Sergeant Abraham, Corp. E. Payne, Corp. Clappinhon, Pte. P. Tobin, Pte. J. G. Jay and Pte. J. Foster.

Lt.-Col. Stewart, Inspector of Supplies, and Major Hamilton, A.D.S.T. for the 3rd Division, were in Peterborough yesterday, and inspected the supplies of the 93rd Battalion.

In the list of his staff officers announced by Col. Dearman, officer commanding of the new, 120th, Hamilton Battalion, appears th name of Capt. Wilfred Fortye, Paymaster, son of Mr. R. H. Fortye, 338 Downie street.

The Kingston Whig says: Word received from the front states that Lieut. G. M. Huycke, who went over seas with the draft from the 33rd Battery, is at the front. He is the first officer of the drafts to be detailed for duty in France. Lieuts. Wallbank McLaren, McLaughlin, Latchford and McCallum are still in England.

The public is advised in giving credit to a soldier that a soldier's pay cannot be garnisheed, nor can it be stopped by the officers for the payment of any debts he may have contracted.

The following letter was just recently received by Mrs. W. G. Westlake, 870 Bethune street, Peterborough, from Bombardier B. H. Blanchard, who up to a year ago was on the editorial staff of Farm and Dairy:

No. 58, George Ward,
H. M. Queen Mary's Royal
Naval Hospital.
Southend-on-Sea, Nov. 20, 1915,
Essex Co., England.

Dear Mrs. Westlake,—I was very pleased to receive your letters. I'm glad to say that I am coming along splendidly. I can now open my jaws wide enough to eat almost anything. I can play the piano a bit with the three fingers of my right hand. I can walk almost as well as ever. I have walked up to another hospital three times. It is a mile from here. I have been up there to visit Pte. Ashfield, who is in that hospital. I just learned bout a week ago that he was there. He and I are in the same battalion. In fact we were in the brigade bombthrowers together from March 1st till May 20th, when I was wounded the first time. He is not wounded, but is suffering from German gas. His lungs are very weak. In fact, a few days ago he couldn't breathe for a little while, and oxygen gas had to be given to him. He is coming along better now. As I can't remember myself how I was wounded this time, I was glad that Ashfield was able to tell me.

On the 26th August, three of us, (not including him but he happened to be fairly near), were in the rear experimenting with the various types of bombs and grenades, comparing old ones with new ones, when one of them accidentally exploded. I must have been holding it as I'm glad to say the other two were not wounded so severely as I was. I was knocked unconscious instantly, and remained that way two weeks. The stretcher bearers took me out to a dressing station, and when they they returned, Ashfield asked one of them if the doctor expected me to pull through. The stretcher-bearer replied that he had waited until the doctor examined me and asked him. The doctor said my heart was beating faintly, and he feared I would not live 24 hours. You may be sure I am happy how well I have come along. A fellow asked me some weeks ago if I would like a drink. I told him I only drank one drink of whiskey in my life, and took that mbore as medicine to warm my blood up as my clothes were wet through. He laughed, but I think that is one reason that I have come along so well—I left the booze alone.

Best wishes to you all.

CORP. BEN BLANCHARD.

AT STRUMITZA

Bright polr leaves; O holly green!
(Bitter cold the air!)
Sprigs of holly with their sheen
Decking tents in valley there;
Red as coral buds they glow,
Holly berries o'er the snow!
Holly hills and Christmas trees!
(Cold, ah, cold the snow!)
Guns hold high their revelries
On your summits, while below
Banners fly from o'er the sea—
English cross or Fluer de Lis!
Gathered round the campfire bright,
(Red, ah, red with gleam!)
Soldiers talk of home at night
Or in fitful sleep they dream
Home they are at Christmas time,
Listening to the church bells chime!
Morning wakes to strife again,
(Red, ah, red the snow!)
Hilltops shake with thunder then,
Red the stream in vales below!
Holly berries gleaming red
Lie beside those dreamers dead!
Far away, across the seas,
(Far, so far away!)
Dreams a maid she once more sees
Lover brave on Christmas Day!
Holly berries round him lie,
Dreamless now, 'neath Balkan sky!

BY-LAWS

SYNOPSIS OF PROPOSED BY-LAW ENTITLED "A BY-LAW TO AUTHORIZE THE BORROWING OF $30,000.00 BY THE ISSUE OF DEBENTURES THEREFOR, TO MEET THE COST OF ACQUIRING LAND FOR EXHIBITION GROUNDS."

THE purpose of the proposed By-Law is to provide for the acquiring of land for exhibition grounds, and to purchase a site therefore, the same being lots Eighteen, Nineteen and Twenty, in Township Lot Fourteen, in the Eleventh Concession of the Township of North Monaghan. The amount required and authorized to be raised by the said By-Law is the sum of $30,000.00. The Debentures to be issued to raise this sum are to be payable within twenty years from the date of the issue of the same, and to bear interest in the meantime at the rate of six per cent. per annum, payable half yearly on the thirtieth day of June, and the thirty-first day of December, in each year, and to have coupons attached thereto for the payment of said interest.

THE amount to be raised annually for the payment of the debt is the sum of $2307.46, of which $1,230.00 is for interest, and $1,077.46 is to form a sinking fund for the payment of the Debentures at their maturity.

TAKE NOTICE

TAKE NOTICE that the foregoing is a true synopsis of the proposed by-law of the Corporation of the City of Peterborough, to be submitted to the vote of the electors and that the said vote will be taken on the Third day of January, 1916, between the hours of nine o'clock in the morning and five o'clock in the afternoon at the same places a poll shall be held for the annual municipal elections.

The 31st day of December, 1915, at the hour of eleven o'clock in the forenoon, at the office of the City Clerk, in the said Municipality, has been fixed for the appointment of persons to attend at the polling places and at the final summing up of the votes by the Clerk, and the 4th day of January, 1916, at the hour of eleven o'clock in the forenoon at the office of the City Clerk in the said city, the Clerk of the said Municipality will attend and sum up the votes given for and against the said proposed By-Law, and if the assent of the electors is obtained to said proposed By-Law, it will be taken into consideration by the Municipal Council of the said corporation at a meeting to be held after the expiration of one month from the date of the first publication of this notice and that such publication was made on the 8th day of December, 1915.

TAKE NOTICE FURTHER that a tenant who desires to vote upon said proposed By-Law must deliver to the Clerk not later than the 16th day before the day appointed for taking the vote a declaration under the Canada Evidence Act, that he is a tenant whose lease extends for the time which the debt or liability is to be created, or in which the money is to be raised by the proposed by-law is payable, or for at least twenty-one years, and that he has by the lease covenanted to pay all municipal taxes in respect of the property of which he is tenant other than local improvements rates.

S. R. ARMSTRONG,
Clerk.

THE CHERNIAVSKY RECITAL
AT THE OPERA HOUSE

Very appropriate was the stage setting for the occasion, as the curtain went up at the Opera House last night. The scene reminded one of the music room in an old French mansion, brought up to date by the presence of a Heintzman Grand. An empty stage for a few seconds, while a twanging of 'cello and violin strings may have been heard in the not far distance. Then the appearance on the stage of three young men, faultlessly groomed, with a quiet, easy, unobtrusive air who made their entry amid a storm of applause.

These three young Russian gentlemen—and brothers—will have no occasion to look back with regret, so far as the warmth of the reception accorded to them by the Electric City may be concerned. The applause having subsided the three talented artistes—mind you I use the words 'talented' and 'artistes' advisedly, for they are thorough masters of their instruments—at once settled down to the work of the evening. There was no display, no affected mannerisms, which are, unfortunately, to be found among second or third rate artistes; they might have been young gentlemen in a lady's drawing room.

The programme was as follows:

Trio for Pianoforte, Violin and Violoncello No. 1—Mendelssohn.
Molto Allegro ed agitato
Andante con moto Tranquillo
Scherso-Leggiero e Vivace
Finale-Allegro assai Appassionato

Violoncello Soli—
a The Swan ..... Saint-Saens
b Musette ..... Offenabch
c Rhapsodie ..... Popper
Mischel Cherniavsky

Pianoforte Soli—
a Nocturne ..... Chopin
b Studie ..... Chopin
c Rigoletto ..... Verdi-Liszt
Jan Cherniavsky

Interval of Ten Minutes

Violin Soli—
a Ave Maria ..... Schubert
b Humoreske ..... Dvorak
c Danse Basque ..... Sarasate
Leo Cherniavsky

Trio for Pianoforte, Violin and Violoncello—
a Serenade ... Widor-Cherniavsky
b Moment Musical . . Schubert-Cherniavsky
c Slave Dance . Brahms-Cherniavsky
Leo, Jan and Mischel Cherniavsky
Accompanist - - - Alex Czerny

The first few bars of the first number showed us what class of music we were gathered together to enjoy from the trio. A quick, brilliant piece, followed by, as a contrast, a slow, quiet movement, then another vivacious morceau, showing the quick fingering needed, with a wonderful finale, quick and impassioned. Such was number one; the differences between the piano and forte passages, the lights and shades, the crescendo and dimuendo effects, to say nothing of the perfect time—as well as tune—were so well marked, is it any wonder that the performers received three calls? That number alone was, to ears musical, worth the price of admission.

In number two Mischel— quite a young fellow—showed what he could do with the violincello. Here were three pieces of totally different type, Saint-Saens' compositions being of an absolutely different nature to the light music of Offenbach, the rhapsodie by Popper being full of action. This number created deserved applause. The artist took a call, but the audience would not rest satisfied without an encore.

• • •

Jan, the pianiste, now took the floor, or rather the instrument. A very young man, but a very fine player, possessing marvellous execution and touch, without any exaggerated action. The three morceaux allotted to him were all good, differing in their style. Two recalls did Jan get, and as an encore was insisted on, he played a short movement of a type absolutely different to the other three.

• • •

Now Leo, the violinist, faced the audience. He is the eldest of the three brothers, and, judging from what I saw and heard last night, what he doesn't know about the violin isn't worth knowing. He seemed full, especially in the 'Danse Basque,' of impossible effects and clever tricks; he literally made his violin speak. In the 'Ave Maria' he, so to speak, took his audience into the prayer, while of a totally different nature was the 'Humoresque.' The applause was immense. Call and recall taken did not satisfy the audience, so the artiste favoured us with an encore.

• • •

The last programme number was another trio, three pieces adapted from three well-known composers by the three brothers. Need I say that these three items were simply perfect? Their styles were all different, yet all cleverly executed Three recalls were taken by the brothers. It speaks for the appreciation of their listeners when these three acknowledgments did not satisfy the enthusiastic hearers, so, as a final encore, they gave the "Spring Song."

• • •

This ended the recital proper. As a patriotic ending, the trio gave the Russian National Anthem, the Marseillaise, and our own, "God Save the King." This brought to an end one of the most charming musical recitals it has been the lot of the writer to attend.

• • •

Nor must the accompanist, Alex. Czerny, be overlooked. His duties—those of an accompanist, are too frequently passed lightly over—were carried out in a masterly manner, adding considerably to the effect of the successful efforts of the soloists.

• • •

It is with much pleasure that the writer can announce, on the authority of the management of the Grand Opera House, that arrangements are already in progress to secure a return engagement of these talented and so highly appreciated musicians. This is in deference to the request of several true lovers of good music who were unavoidably absent last evening owing to the counter attraction of "The Messiah," held in another place.

• • •

This is an announcement which will not fail to give universal satisfaction, if carried out, when a "full house" of highly appreciative musical folk, will, probably, be the result.

Arts and Crafts Column

In this column, conducted by Mr. Hughson Johnson, painter and decorator, all queries about the proper use of wall paper, paint, varnish, etc., will be answered. Questions relating to furniture, upholstering, repairing, furniture polishing, and decorating may be sent to The Examiner, and will receive attention in due course.

Enquirer; Peterborough Ont.:—Will you kindly solve this problem for me? my roof leaked and so stained the plaster of my bedroom ceiling that I had to whiten it to match the walls but the stain has again shown, will another coat do or will the stain again show? an answer will oblige.

Ans:—Wash off the white coating you applied which I presume is some sort of kalsomine. Then wait until the patch is thoroughly dry, it may take several days, according to how long since the roof leaked. when dry, apply a coat of sugar of lead; then a coat of plaster paris and white kalsomine equal parts mixed with water to the consistency of thick cream, this should kill the stain after which go over the whole ceiling in the usual way.

Glassical Guy, City:—An answer to the following in the "Arts and Crafts" column of this most invaluable daily will be greatly appreciated.

(A) Are the diamond glass cutters real diamonds or is that merely a term?

(B) Are those glass cutting wheels used at all by expert glass handlers?

(C) In regard to the translucent family of glass is there a right and wrong side? if so, which side should go inside, and why?

(D) What is the process of cleaning or restoring the whiteness to translucent glass when it has turned yellow with age?

Ans:—A.—Genuine diamonds are used to cut glass with. Glaziers' diamonds have a chip of diamond set in metal at the end of a wooden handle. B.—Expert glass cutters prefer the steel glass cutter wheel to the diamond for general purpose on many grounds. They are cheaper, easily sharpened, not so apt to get lost? in the shop and other reasons. They seldom use a diamond on heavy glass such as plate or 2808. This may seem strange to one unfamiliar with glass, but it is true, that most of them use a diamond only on the very thin glass.

C—In most of the translucent glass there is a rough and smooth side. In most cases the smooth side should be out for this reason, should you want your house number painted on the glass or your name put on if a professional man or for any reason, then the artisan needs the smooth side to work on. Again, the smooth side will not catch the soot and dust from the street as would the rough or pattern side.

D.—What you mean by "yellow with age" I think should read "yellow with dirt" for I do not think glass will turn yellow under ordinary conditions. To clean it and consequently restore the whiteness, use ammonia diluted with water and with a nail scrub and a little finely powdered pumic stone, give it a good scouring on the pattern or rough side and watch the result.

Santa Claus, Peterborough Ont.:—How can paint be mixed so that chalk will write on it? An immediate answer will help Santa Claus who is making a black board for the kiddies for Christmas.

Ans:—Dear Santa Claus, I am glad to help you to make a blackboard for the kiddies as they are a toy to amuse and boon to parents who may develop the young mind through the eyes by drawing sketches, writing numerals or making letters. There are regular blackboard paints on the market. But if you prefer to make your own, here is a simple, quick-drying and satisfactory receipt. Take ¼ gallon orange shellac add about ½ lb. powdered rotton stone and ½ lb. dry lamp black, mix the last two with a little of the shellac, enough to make a thin paste, stir it well to get it perfectly smooth, then add the balance of your shellac. Keep it stirred and two coats should suffice. This will furnish two coats for about eight square feet.

Dot, Bowmanville Ont.:—I heard a term used by a lady painter the other day and it sounded so ridiculous that I am curious to know if there is such a term in the vocabulary of paint as "Brown Pink"?

Ans:—This is one question which nearly floored me. I had never heard of "Brown Pink" before. But on looking up dictionary's, encyclopaedias, making inquiries, etc., I finally unearthed the following:—"Brown Pink" is a vegetable lake, made from French berries and dye woods. It is a fine, rich, transparent color, but inclines more toward a citrine, or an orange color, than to a brown. It is a very fugitive color."

I hope the above will answer personally. I am as much in the dark as ever.

WOMAN DRUGGED BY A BURGLAR

Seized by Intruder When She Stops from Room to Get Linen to Show Guests.

NEW YORK, Dec. 15. — While her husband was entertaining friends in an adjoining room, Mrs. Harry T. Heitman, wife of a lumber inspector, was chloroformed by a burglar in her home at No. 1,409 Thirty-Sixth Street, Bay Ridge. When found twenty minutes later, Mrs. Heitman was lying unconscious upon the floor, with her hands strapped behind her. Investigation showed the burglar escaped with $100, taken from a bureau drawer.

While the men were discussing the war and prospects of peace, the women talked of bargains in table linen, of which Mrs. Heitman had made a purchase on Saturday. To settle a disputed point, Mrs. Heitman ileft the room to obtain her linen, and twenty minutes later her prolonged absence was noticed. Mr. Heitman went in search and stumbled over her.

"Just as I entered the parlour," explained Mrs. Heitman, "a man stepped from behind a portiere, and before I could scream he had placed one arm around my neck and placed a handkerchief saturated with chloroform over my mouth. I became dizzy and as I slipped to the floor, I felt him tying my hands. That's all I know until I was revived."

The police were notified, but only a slight description of the burglar could be given.

The Caddie Laughed.—A visitor to Scotland went out on the links to play golf. After trying in vain to hit the ball he became enraged because the caddie laughed at his awkwardness. "If you laugh again," he exclaimed, "I'll hit you over the head—so there!" "Ah, weel," said the caddie, backing to a safe distance, "I'll bet ye wouldna ken the richt club to dae it wi'!"

FURNITURE SELLING ON A NEW MODEL

A PLAN IS SUGGESTED FOR MARKETING FINE MAHOGANY BUFFETS.

In every community there are scores of housewives whose dinners are a delight. The reputation of each of these ladies stands high. One, perhaps, has a neat talent in the production of an entree, another can conjure a pudding out of the vast cosmos of the commonplace, another can perform miracles with custards and jellies. Now let us suppose that the principal furniture dealer in the community sends to each of half a dozen of the most distinguished hostesses a noble mahogany buffet. He declines payment. "No," says he, "you are a housewife of distinction. You have both technique and temperament in the art of cookery. Diners-out flock to you like the moth to the flame. It is for me a sufficient distinction to have my buffet in your dining-room. All I ask is, first that you write me a testimonial, declaring that you have found my buffet superbly designed for dinner-giving, and, second, that when you have a party to dine you will mention in a most casual way that the Nesselrode is Nessel-ring on Muchison's mahogany buffet."

When the furniture dealers adopt this method of doing business they will have a precedent. Members of the piano trade have followed such a system. Instruments not infrequently have been supplied free of charge to eminent musicians either at their homes or at their studios, in the belief that such "sub rosa" gifts will have commercial value to the manufacturer.

No Gourlay Piano is sent out in this way. Wherever a Gourlay is found it is either on rental or has been purchased in the ordinary manner. The Gourlay, Winter & Leeming Company from the beginning of their manufacturing activity some twelve years ago determined to have no part in such unbusinesslike forms of advertising. They make the Gourlay piano, admittedly an instrument in the first rank. They do not give it away or lend it. They sell it, and because of the high merit of the piano more and more Gourlays are sold with each succeeding year. Call at the office of J. O. Fife, 341½ Water Street, and see the Gourlay piano.

DR. PEARSON SUED BY WIFE FOR $10,000

She Alleges He Has Not Made Full Accounting in Management of the Estate.

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—Dr. Henry Pearson, living at the Langdon Hotel, has just been made defendant in an action in the Supreme Court begun by his wife, Mrs. Minnie H. Pearson, to recover $10,102.48, which she says is due in connection with his management of her properties, worth more than $125,000. The two have been living apart since April, 1915.

Mrs. Pearson, who is said to come from an old Southern family, had realty in Alabama worth $125,000, according to the answer of the husband. He collected the rents for her, together with other funds, which he disbursed at her direction, Dr. Pearson declares. In January, 1913, the physician says he ceased to be superintendent of his wife's properties, and just prior to April, 1915, "such differences" arose between them "that the defendant was unable to live in peace with the plaintiff." They separated under a private agreement. Dr. Pearson says he does not owe his wife more than $7,000, which he has already admitted as an indebtedness.

Mrs. Pearson says she was married October 3, 1907, and turned the management of much of her property over to her husband. He rendered a statement June 29, 1915, showing that he owned $7,602, she says, but insists that the entire amount due is $10,102.

HIGH PRAISE FOR GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC.

The Grand Trunk's new transcontinental route is winning high praise from American tourists for the excellence of its service and the beauty of its scenery.

In a letter just received by the Grand Trunk officials, a well-known insurance expert of Cortland, N. Y., says: "There is no finer service, or more uniform courtesy extended to the traveller, nor a better equipped train than we had from the time we left Toronto until we arrived at Prince Rupert, and we say this after having travelled upon the finest trains of other railroads. The trip on the boat from Prince Rupert to Seattle is very grand and unusual, and the boats palatial."

I have discovered that if clothespins are thrown into the boiler while the clothes are being rinsed the pins will not split. I used to lose almost one-third of my pins, but I seldom lose one now.—H. K.

Restaurants Must Supply Wash Basins For Their Patrons, Also Individual Towels

Important Regulation Passed by the Board of Health—Board Endorses Recommentations of Sanitary Inspector Spence—Peterboro's Milk Supply is Well Above Standard.

INSPECTOR'S ANNUAL REPORT

Sanitary Inspector Spence has been authorized by the Board of Health to see that restaurants supply wash basins for the use of their customers, and that hotels, railway stations, and other public places within the city substitute individual towels for the old-fashioned roller towel. Dr. C. H. Amys, medical officer of health, who was present at the regular meeting of the Board, which was accounted for yesterday afternoon, related a story of an hotelkeeper who, upon hearing one of his guests complain of the dirty condition of the towel, said, "seventy guests have used that towel and you are the first to complain."

The Sanitary Inspector was also successful in having the Board pass a resolution recommending the placing of restrictions on the poultry industry within the city limits. The present by-law prohibits fowl running at large while a new regulation will be introduced restraining poultry owners from constructing hen-houses within twenty feet of a dwelling or building wherein food is kept for consumption. The appended report of Sanitary Inspector Spence provides some interesting reading to citizens generally, and more particularly to the milk consumers. Mayor Buller expressed his approval of the manner in which the milk supply is regulated.

The Inspector's Report.

The report follows:

In presenting my fourth annual report for your consideration, it is gratifying to state that distinct progress continues to be made in the administration of the Public Health in the City of Peterborough, and that although much remains to be done before my ambition of claiming for Peterborough a place second to none in the Dominion from a sanitary viewpoint, is realized, yet its consummation does not appear quite so utopian as it did nearly four years ago, when I declared that such was my goal.

As my work is naturally of a routine character, an annual report must, of necessity, be somewhat of a repetition, but the following statistics relating to the work accomplished during the past year will, I hope not be lacking in interest.

Total number of calls and inspections—3,850, detailed as follows:—

Milk Supply.

Great care has been taken to ensure to the public a pure milk supply. Two sources of supply have been cut off during the year and two licenses of milk vendors suspended for a time, owing to conditions not being satisfactory. 204 samples of milk have been tested by me showing an average percentage of butter fat of 3.65 which is slightly higher than last year. The legal standard is 3 per cent. fat so that the above figures show that the milk the citizens are getting is of very good quality. The same may be said of the cleanliness. The instrument for showing dirt and sediment in milk has been used frequently, and seldom has there been cause to complain of dirty milk. The lactometer which the Board of Health purchased for me this summer has proved invaluable and was the means of discovering one instance where water had been added to the milk, which resulted in a fine of $20.00 upon the offender.

Of the 48 vendors whose milk has been periodically tested, 19 show an average of butter fat between 3 and 3.5 per cent., 16 have an average between 3.5 and 4 p.c. and 9 have an average of over 4 per cent.

There are one or two amendments to the milk by-law I should like to suggest at a later date.

Improvements Effected.

A marked improvement is to be seen in the condition of the yards in the business section, also in the protection from dust and flies of food stuffs, notably fruit and fish, most of the stores being now equipped with glass covered cases to contain the latter. I did not see this in any of the cities I visited this fall with the object of noting sanitary conditions, and the storekeepers are to be commended for their action in this respect.

Another improvement worthy of notice is the cleaning up and sewering of Lafayette and Jackson Avenues, and other unsanitary terraces where sewer connection has been made. This, with the extended garbage collection area, and the by-law to abolish pit closets, and to do the cleaning out by city workmen, will make a great improvement in the sanitary conditions of the city next year.

Recommendations

I should like to recommend to the Board of Health some measures to govern the keeping of poultry and horses, which at present are the source of many complaints to this department. I should like also to see hotel lavatories equipped with individual towels, and restaurants should be compelled to have wash basins for the use of their customers. A few refuse receptacles placed on the main streets would also be a help to preserving the cleanliness of the sidewalks.

In conclusion, I should like to express my appreciation of the support and encouragement I have received from the Board of Health and the City Council, in measures I have brought before them affecting the public health, and also to the press for the assistance they have rendered in the work.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

C. A. G. SPENCE

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

The Board of Health will ask the Utilities Commission to enclose the reservoir at the waterworks dam and make that portion of the river a restricted area.

The Price of Bread.

Dr. C. H. Amys was of the opinion that the price of bread was high considering the present price of flour. He was inclined to attribute this to the Board of Health's proposal to have all bread wrapped. He thought the Board should take some definite action along this line.

Ventilation is Bad.

Sanitary Inspector Spence has been empowered to take action in connection with a George street moving picture theatre, which he claims is very poorly ventilated.

Isolation Hospital.

It has been left to Dr. Amys, Medical Officer of Health, to decide whether the boiler at the Queen Mary Isolation Hospital should be insured. If the steam pressure is limited to fifteen pounds, the boiler need not be insured according to Government regulations.

High Standard of Health Revealed in Annual Report of Medical Officer of Health

Two Hundred and Ninety-five Deaths Recorded During the Year—Thirty-one Per Cent. of These Had Passed the Alloted Span of Life—Twenty-two Deaths From Tuberculosis—Dr. Ames Issues Warning Regarding the Necessity for Placarding Houses Where Contagious Diseases Are Located.

"Measles is a disease that is very difficult to control, because the people do not know they are required to report them, even if a physician is not called in. They also look upon a placard outside as a greater affliction than the disease within. They don't realize that the placard may be a warning to some innocent child or person to keep out, and if that card was not on the door, the inhabitants of that house might be legally and morally responsible for some little one's death."— Extract from the annual report of Dr. C. H. Amys, Medical Officer of Health.

Yesterday afternoon the Board of Health met in regular monthly session and among other things, adopted the appended report of Dr. C. H. Amys, Medical Officer of Health. It will be noted that this city has been particularly free from epidemics or deaths from other than natural causes. Dr. Amys laid particular emphasis upon the necessity of more consistent co-operation on the part of the citizens in respect to contagious diseases. Parents are often reluctant to have their houses placarded, whereas the absence of such a precaution might prove disastrous to some other parent or persons.

The report contains the following:

I beg to report the following in respect to the health of the City of Peterborough:—

There were 295 deaths and 467 births during the year. With reference to the deaths it is interesting to note that out of 295 for the year, no less than 92, or 31 p.c. had passed the allotted span of three score years and ten, 15 p.c. were 80 or over, while 48 p.c. reached 60 years; 20 p.c. of the total number of dead did not reach the age of one year, yet not one death was due to any one of the so-called contagious diseases of childhood. Of these deaths there were 22 due to tuberculosis in its many and varied forms. I am sorry to have to report that the Physicians and Laity have failed to live up to one of the requirements of the Health Act, that is, to report all cases of Tuberculosis. There has not been one case reported during the year except those that have died of it.

There were 28 cases of Typhoid Fever with four deaths. Nine of these came from the same source, a well close to the shores of the Creek. That portion of the City lying along and in the immediate proximity of the Creek is not a safe place for a well, as the formation of the ground is bad.

There were eight cases of Scarlet Fever, no deaths, and not more than two cases occurring in one month, so you see we kept this dread disease well within bounds.

Diphtheria comes next with twenty-three cases and no deaths. This disease, in a city the size of Peterborough and with the possible carrier always at school and elsewhere, requires some effort to control, but thanks to the assistance of the School Nurse, Sanitary Inspector, and with a liberal use of antitoxine we are almost free of it at present.

Co-operation Wanted.

I wish to suggest that the school Boards of the city and suburban schools get together and make arrangements so that a school Nurse is engaged to make visits to those schools not included in the present arrangements. If we leave the Collegiate Institute or any of the schools not visited, we weaken the whole principle and the working out of the same.

Measles:—Fourteen cases during the year, with no deaths.

This is one of those diseases that is very difficult to control, because the people do not know they are required to report them, even if a physician is not called in. They also look upon a placard outside as a greater affliction than the disease within. They don't realize that that placard may be a warning to some innocent child or person to keep out, and, if that card was not on the door, the inhabitants of that house might be legally and morally responsible for some little one's death.

Mumps:—None reported during the year, and no deaths.

Smallpox:—None reported—no deaths.

Chickenpox:—None reported—no deaths.

Whooping Cough:—One case—no deaths.

Epidemic Cerebro-spinal Meningitis:—No cases—no deaths.

During the summer we were very much alarmed over this dread disease, but although it was at our very doors, there was not one authentic case ever developed within our boundaries.

I must congratulate the Board on its decision to do away with all closets within a stated area comprising the centre of the city, and also to do away with all the deadly pit closets within our city.

I trust that the Council for 1916 will immediately appoint a Building Inspector and that one of his duties will be to see that no building permits be granted unless the plans provide for a room for a closet.

I also suggest that the new Council court annexation of the suburb lying to the south of us. Our sewers and water mains permeate a large portion of this district, and the inhabitants, by coming in and connecting up, will be helping us to build up a greater, healthier, and cleaner city.

C. HEWITT AMYS
Medical Officer of Health.

SOME ECHOES OF THE CAMPAIGN

Aftermath of the Canvass for Patriotic Fund

A letter received on Tuesday brings the news that in the case of Sergt. Cooper, of 147 Hart Avenue, that his pay is to be continued and that a sustenation allowance of about $20.00 per month will be forwarded to Mrs. Cooper. This, with the allowance from the Patriotic Fund will bridge the time until a pension is made and payments on account begin.

Mistakes continually occur in the list of teams and workers. Several of those who came and volunteered service with the teams were not mentioned, and for which omissions apologies are due. So we will add to the Roll of Honour for service in the subscription field the names of Alderman McIntyre and Mr. Logie, Manager of the Bank of Montreal. Both came and strengthened Mr. Walker's team and did admirable work.

Messrs. H. G. Walker and P. A. Ferguson, who looked after subscriptions from the teachers in the Public and Separate Schools have nothing but words of praise for the reception accorded and the fine amounts subscribed. All the teachers were not seen on the days of canvas, but many on Monday and Tuesday of this week. The canvassers were delighted, securing sums as high as $25.00, and no lower than $7.50. This did not include the principals of the schools. Last year one day's pay was the average.

A. O. U. W. Held An Enjoyable "At Home"

In the Foresters' Hall, Simcoe St., Last Evening

A very enjoyable "At Home" was held last evening in the Foresters' Hall, Simcoe street, under the auspices of the local branch of the Ancient Order of United Workmen. The chair was occupied by Mr. J. Turner, Sr., who in a splendid address extended a hearty welcome to all present. Mr. R. J. Winch contributed two recitations that were much enjoyed, as was also one by Master Percy Luther. Mr. Nichol gave several pianoforte selections that were thoroughly appreciated. The chairman sang two songs in his usual happy style. Addresses were given by Mr. Bert Armstrong and Rev. Mr. Skene.

Card games were played, and at the conclusion refreshments were served.

A MEETING OF THE EXHIBITION BOARD

A meeting of the Exhibition Board was held last evening and $50.00 was voted by the Board to the Band Fund of the 33rd Regiment, which so kindly furnished a programme at the fair this year. The balance of the accounts were passed and arrangements were made for the presenting of the by-law for the purchase of the grounds, in a proper manner before the citizens of Peterborough.

The attention of the Board was drawn to the practice of some parties making themselves a nuisance by breaking into the stables and sheds at the fair grounds, and an example will have to be made unless the practice is discontinued.

THE PRESBYTERY SHOWS MAJORITY AGAINST UNION

Total Figures Given at a Meeting of the Peterborough Presbytery Yesterday Gave an Adverse Vote on Proposal

LOST BY 242 VOTES

At a meeting of the Presbytery of Peterborough, held yesterday in Port Hope, the results of the voting on Church union for the whole Presbytery were presented by the clerk. The complete figures are:

	For	Against
Elders	111	169
Members	1736	1882
Adherents	290	357
	2185	2347

Total majority against union, 242.

The figures for the vote in 1911 were:

	For	Against
Elders	134	70
Members	2269	1715
Adherents	479	415
	2782	2200

Majority in favor of union, 494.

It will be observed that 469 more votes were registered in 1911 than at the present vote.

ST. ANDREW'S FIGURES.

The vote on church union was completed in St. Andrew's church on Sunday last and resulted in a majority of 59 for union. The vote in detail was:

	For	Against
Elders	6	4
Members	140	86
Adherents	9	9
	157	99

The vote four years ago gave a majority of 77 for union, 9 more ballots being cast. The totals then were 171 for and 94 against.

AUSTRIA PLANS TO MOBILIZE WOMEN

Use of Great Army of Female Workers in Factories Will Free More Men for Fighting Line.

ZURICH, Dec. 15.—The Austrian military authorities are preparing for a systematic mobilization of a great army of women workers for the munitions factories, where, owing to the number of men who have gone to the front, work is proceeding in a slow and unsatisfactory manner.

It is expected the employment of women will release still more men for the front, and it is declared that every capable fighting man is now required there.

It will also enable the factories to supply material to Austria's allies. Even mothers, having the care of households, are urged to work half a day in the factories.

Destitution Among Refugees in German Alsace.

BERNE, Switzerland, Dec. 13.—According to an official statement, there are in German Alsace 25,000 refugees distributed in villages outside the war zone, of whom about 15,000 are in distress.

GREECE'S ACTION IS THE PARAMOUNT BALKAN ISSUE

LONDON, December 15.—The role of Greece in the present Balkan situation is now the paramount issue, and the general opinion here is that the Hellenic government will before many days have to take sides with either the Entente powers or the Germans and the Bulgarians. Threatened from the sea by the allied fleets and from the north by a Bulgar-German invasion, Greece is to-day in a dilemma surpassing in seriousness all she has gone through since the Balkan operations began. Pressure from both sides continues with increased vigor.

All the advices from Athens indicate that the further maintenance of Greece neutrality depends on whether the Germans and Austrians or the Bulgars carry the pursuit of the allies into Greek territory. For the armies of the Central powers Greece is expected to allow leeway. Should, however, the Bulgarians, her traditional foes, cross the frontier, a Greek-Bulgarian embroilment is believed inevitable. On the other hand, the guiding factors of German's diplomacy and her general staff are presumed to be fully realizing these facts and to have devised their plans accordingly.

Unofficial Athens despatches say that Germany has asked Greece "whether the new facilities afforded the allies compromise Greece neutrality in any way."

The German diplomats in the Greek capital are known to be desirous of avoiding friction with King Constantine's government, but to be equally determined not to allow further Greek "accommodation" of the allied forces to offset the German and Bulgarian victories in Serbia.

"THE MESSIAH"

Handel's beautiful oratorio, "The Messiah," was presented last night in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church to a large and appreciative audience by the Peterborough Choral Society, under the able leadership of Mr. John Allan, organist and choirmaster of the church. The production was a decided success, and is still another rung in the ladder of success which Peterborough is mounting in establishing herself as a recognised musical centre.

The Oratorio.

"The Messiah" is an oratorio, or tone poem, composed by Handel, and woven around a libretto from Holy Scripture (Isaiah 40) by Charles Jennens. An oratorio is a sacred composition, sung throughout by solo voices and chorus, to the accompaniment of an orchestra or organ, but without the assistance of scenery, dresses or action. It might be termed a religious recreation, but it is the supremacy of the music that stirs our inmost being.

"The Messiah" is a great Christmas theme, being the great call to Zion to prepare herself for the coming of Christ. It was first performed in Dublin for charitable purposes in 1742, and no musical work has had such long, continuous and enduring popularity. Much of the regard with which it is held is owing to the lofty subject, but much must also be attributed to the splendid music: the stirring "Glory to God," the stupendous "Hallelujah" chorus and the magnificent "Amen."

"The Messiah" exercises a sway of an almost unparalleled character over the English people, who recognise Handel as a sort of national fetish for was he not also the author of the 'Dead March" in "Saul," one of the greatest things in existence. The inspiring nature of the subject must have helped him to compose rapidly—it was finished in twenty-four days—for when he began the "Hallelujah" chorus—the most colossal thing in music—it seemed as if all Heaven and Earth were lying open to his gaze.

The Composer.

George Frederick Handel, one of the greatest composers of the world, was born at Halle, Lower Saxony Feb. 23rd, 1685. In 1710, at the invitation of George I., he came to England, and sixteen years later became a naturalized English subject. With the possible exception of Bach, he was the greatest organist of his age. His readiness in extemporising was marvelous and his influence over his choristers and responsively over his audience was dramatic in the extreme, his object being always to foreshadow the glories of the future. The future for him, however, was one shadowed by the affliction of blindness, but this did not in any way interfere with his performances. Indeed, only eight days before his death, which occurred in 1759, in his 74th year, he took part in his famous oratorio, "The Messiah."

The Conductor.

As a conductor Mr. John Allan fully sustained his high reputation. A leader plays upon his chorus as an organist plays upon his instrument; he must play upon them individually, and collectively, and make them into one responsive whole. This was particularly noticeable last night in the variations in tempo, in the dynamic forces, in the fine balancing effect, and in the accuracy in making the chorus express the desired interpretation and purpose of the composer, who sought to reveal lofty imaginatiou and religious fervour, through the medium of music, appealing so imperatively to the ear and heart.

The Performance.

The work of the Peterborough Choral Society, numbering over one hundred voices, was a thorough illuminative rendering of their music. They sang with genuine sincerity, and interest in their work, with a tone that was exceptional for its roundness and musical quality, and surprising exactitude of execution.

The Organist.

Mr. T. J. Palmer, A.R.C.O., organist of the Metropolitan Methodist Church of Toronto, is one of the foremost musicians in Canada. His performance last night on the organ, the king of instruments, was fully up to the standard of his high reputation. It is a happy coincidence that he and Mr. Allan were near neighbours in Scotland, in the old days, having been organist in Elgin, Scotland.

The Soloists.

The soloists were Mr. Ruthven Macdonald of Toronto, bass; Mr. George Chandler, choirleader of All Saints' Church, tenor; Miss Pearl Steinhoff of Toronto, contralto; and Miss Dorothy Allan, soloist of St. Paul's, soprano.

Mr. Macdonald needs no introduction to a Peterborough audience. The rich mellowness and smoothness of his voice were pleasingly shown in "For behold, darkness shall cover the earth, and gross darkness the people," while his old-time power was fully brought out in the aria "Why do the nations so furiously rage together?" Indeed the realization that we are in the midst of war served to form a striking contrast with, and even furnish a motif for the composition, being the call to Christendom to prepare for the coming of the Lord.

Mr. George Chandler, in his tenor solos, won new laurels for himself. His interpretation was particularly sympathetic.

Miss Steinhoff's clear, bell-like contralto won many admirers. Her rendering of the aria "Arise, shine, for thy light is come," was decidedly illuminative, and the rich fullness of her voice was heard to advantage in the solo "He shall feed his flock."

The soprano solos taken by Miss Dorothy Allan, were most satisfying in their execution. Miss Allan possesses an exquisite range of voice, sweet and brilliant, and true in tone.

Her first rendition, following the delightful Pastoral Symphony, was the recitative "There were shepherds abiding in the field," which, however, was overshadowed by her [illegible] "Rejoice greatly, O daughte of Zion," bright, ripping and triumphant. The extreme range and clear expressive tones of her voice were vividly shown in the aria "Come unto Him, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and He shall give you rest."

The audience showed its responsiveness during her plaintive sympathetic treatment of the theme "Ye shall find rest unto your souls." She excelled herself, however, in that familiar solo "I know that My Redeemer liveth," which came in as a delightful, restful contrast to the "Hallelujah" chorus, soothing and calming in its assurance of a "Risen Christ."

The choruses were a most glorious sort. Best among them were "All we like sheep have gone astray," the powerful "Unto us a Son is born," the tremendously broad "Hallelujah" chorus, and the grand finale, the "Amen."

Miss Flowers made a very acceptable accompanist on the piano.

MOBILIZING WOMEN

ZURICH, Dec. 13.—The Austrian military authorities are preparing for a systematic mobilization of a great army of women workers for the munitions factories, where, owing to the number of men who have gone to the Front, work is proceeding in a slow and unsatisfactory manner.

It is expected that the employment of women will release still more men for the Front, and it is declared that every capable fighting man is now required there. It will also enable the factories to supply material to Austria's allies. Even mothers, having the care of households are urged to work half the day in the factories.

Liquor Case Was Dismissed

Defendant Swore He Was Absent at the Time Given by Inspector Stewart

This morning's session of the police court, lasting over an hour, was given over to the hearing of a charge, preferred against Harry Galbraith, of selling liquor to a blacklister. Galbraith, who is a bartender by occupation, asked for adjournment of the case up on the grounds that his lawyer, Mr. G. M. Gordon, was unable to be present owing to the County Court sittings which are in progress. Magistrate Dumble informed the defendant that "all the Gordons in the country could not save him if the evidence was against him and that the case would have to be heard. Three witnesses were called, namely, License Inspector Stewart, the blacklister in question, and Galbraith.

The License Inspector said he found the blacklister in a hotel bar about three o'clock in the afternoon of December the seventh. He was in an intoxicated condition. Witness did not see any drinks served.

The blacklister admitted being in the bar in question and also remembered being under the influence of liquor. He was not positive as to what he had to drink or the number.

Discrepancy as to Time.

Galbraith swore that he was off duty on the afternoon in question. On December 7th he went on at eight o'clock in the morning and was relieved at twelve-thirty noon. He also denied selling liquor to the blacklister as the latter was under the influence of liquor when he entered the bar, and no bartender in the city would have sold him liquor regardless of whether or not he was on the prohibited list. He did not know he was on the blacklist as he had only been in the city a few days.

License Inspector Stewart was recalled but he failed to clear up the discrepancy in time.

After a few more reams of evidence had been taken the case was dismissed.

MR. L. V. O'CONNOR GAVE ADDRESS TO THE K. OF C.

Mr. L. V. O'Connor, of Lindsay, gave an interesting and instructive address to the local Council of the Knights of Columbus last night. His discourse was a series of sketches illustrating problems and situations that confront lawyers in the practice of their profession.

He presented a fund of incidents taken from the English and American courts which incidentally indicated a wide knowledge of law procedure. Some of the cases referred to had a humourous appeal which, with the general method of presenting the subject provided an address that was well received. It is understood that the Council in this district will interchange speakers during the winter months with the object of making the meetings more interesting and profitable.

AFRAID?

Afraid of Age? Ah no, there is no Truth
In that for me—I am afraid of Youth!

Afraid that it will pass and leave no trace
Of loved things worth remembrance on my face.

Afraid that in its golden round of hours
I may neglect, too oft, to use its powers.

Afraid that in its laughter I'll forget
How many hearts bear grief and eyes are wet.

Afraid, ah! most afraid, I may not know
Love's countenance, and, blind, may let him go!

Youth conquered, all its stride and stress
Accounted for—then, only, shall I cross

Forward to Joy, with Age as guide and friend.
Fearless and sure, whatever Time portend.

True Christmas Talk

By a Father—to Other Fathers

"I remember as a child how I longed to be able to play the piano as other children could do, but I unfortunately never had the opportunity to learn to play, or study music. I made up my mind that my children would be given every opportunity to study music and know how to play the piano. I realized that if I didn't provide for their future nobody else would. I have found that a careful cultivation of musical knowledge will be reflected in the sweetness of the children's faces and in refinement of manner." Especially if you have children in your home, a good piano should be there.

FIRE SALE

THIS REMARKABLE EVENT OPENS TO-MORROW, Thursday with an Assemblage of bargains far larger than we anticipated. Much of our stock suffered practically no damage. Everything usable though enters the sale at the lowest prices we've ever marked on equal qualities. Wonderful savings here for gift buyers.

Sale Starts 9.30 A. M., To-morrow, Thursday

After days of picking over, assorting and reckless price reducing we are now ready to present to you the greatest values in our history. The fire which raged within our store recently did much damage, the stocks suffering still further from the water poured upon them. But despite fire, water and smoke combined, hundreds upon hundreds of articles are unharmed—perfect in every respect. Not even the odor of smoke is noticeable.

There are, in addition, large quantities of goods that are damaged but not to the extent that they have been rendered useless. On the contrary, a very little fixing on your part will make the merchandise look like new.

As you know, our styles are perfect—the newest and best to be found in this section of Canada. Qualities are absolutely dependable and regular prices give you splendid values. Now that such extraordinary reductions have been made, values, we believe, are the greatest that have ever been offered in Peterborough!

Attend this Sale—profit by the matchless economies it offers! Come every day, there will be something different on sale. The Sale will be continued till all stock is sold.

FIRST INTERMEDIATE O. H. A. GAME HERE ON 7th OF NEXT MONTH

At a meeting of the representatives of the Campbellford, Cobourg, St. Michael's, Peterborough Electrics and 93rd Battalion intermediates, held at the Oriental Hotel, last evening, with J. P. Bond of Peterborough as convener, the following schedule was adopted for this group in the intermiate O. H. A.:

Dec. 30—St. Michael's vs. Campbellford.
Jan. 3—Electrics vs. St. Michael's.
Jan. 7.—Campbellford vs. Electrics.
Jan. 10—93rd vs. Campbellford.
Jan. 10—St. Michael's vs. Electrics
Jan. 14.—St. Michael's vs, 93rd.
Jan. 17.—93rd vs. Electrics.
Jan. 20.—Campbellford vs. St. Michaels.
Jan. 24—Campbellford vs. 93rd.
Jan. 28—Electrics vs. 93rd.
Jan. 31—93rd vs. St. Michael's.
Jan. 31—Electrics vs. Campbellford.

The delegates present were Mr Plunkett for the Cobourg St. Michaels; T. B, Moffatt for the Campbellford Club; Don. Shook for the Peterborough Electrics, and Lieut. Widdifield for the 93rd Battalion.

WELL KNOWN FRONTENAC STAR HAS ENLISTED

The Kingston Whig says: H. H. Ferguson has enlisted for overseas service with the 146th Battalion, making another of the famous Frontenac Hockey Club to join the colors. "Tim" has been playing with the Frontenacs for the last five years, starting with the junior team. All Kingston hockey fans know that he is one of the best men who ever played hockey, and it is good luck for the Frontenacs team that they will not lose one of their best men for this winter at least. "Bob" Ferguson, who was captain of last year's K.C.I. team, is also in uniform with the artillery, but he also will be able to play.

GOOD PROGRESS IN ICE MAKING AT THE CURLING RINK

The two west ices at the Curling Rink are practically ready for the first games. Some of the members expect to do their first sweeping on Friday night. From the present progress Mr. McIntosh has made only a few more floodings should provide a fine playing sheet.

HOCKEY

Mr. Don Shook of the Electrics has written to the T. R. and A. A. and 40th Battery teams of Toronto with a view to arranging an exhibition game on Wednesday night next, December 22. A game with one of the two crack Toronto senior teams would be a great drawing card and would give the fans a line on the possibilities offered by the Electrics.

The schedule for, the junior group will be drawn up to-morrow morning at a meeting to be held at the Empress Hotel.

The 93rd Battalion held their first practice yesterday afternoon. The practice hour was changed at the last moment and some of the players were unaware of the change. However, there was a good turnout and the squad had a lively practice. Among those out were Lieuts. de Puyzalon, Gillham, Snider, Quackenbush, Matthews, Dupuy, and Widdifield, and Ptes. Carr, Wedlock and Anderson. The soldier team will practice to-morrow night between 7 and 8 o'clock, and every player is expected out.

All intermediate and junior players in Peterborough are requested to turn out for the practice of the Electrics at the Brock Street rink to-night at 7 o'clock.

Bugler Banks Given An Enthusiastic Reception at Omemee

Citizens Accorded Fitting Welcome to Returning Hero—Presented Wit Gold Watch—Sir John and Lady Eaton Present

OMEMEE, Dec. 15.—A grand reception was given Bugler Charlie Banks in our village on Tuesday night, Dec. 7th in Coronation Hall, which was one of the best and largest ever witnessed in this loyal village. The hall was packed to the doors with friends and citizens of the brave young bugler. The Bugle Band of the Boy Scouts of Oshawa, under Commissioner W. T. Eaton, with the chaplain of the brigade, Rev. John Garbutt, and citizens, marched to the station, where Bugler Banks on his arrival by train, was received with a volley of cheers that was deafening.

After a sumptuous supper at the Temperance House the crowd gathered at 8 p.m. in Coronation Hall, where addresses were read and an excellent programme carried out as follows:

Chairman's address — Sir John Eaton.
Reading address to C. H. Banks.
C. H. Banks' reply.
Solo—Mr. Hollingshead.
Reading—Mrs. Jessie Alexander Robert.
Solo—Mr. Hollingshead.
Address—Rev. Mr. Garbutt.
Collection, etc., in aid of Soldiers' Aid Society.
Solo—Mr. Hollingshead.
Reading—Mrs. Jessie Alexander Robert.
Plea for recruits.
God Save the King.

Warden Mulligan, on behalf of the citizens of Omemee, after Mr. W. T. Eaton, who was introduced by Lady Eaton to the assembly, had taken the chair, presented the young bugler with a magnificent gold watch. He was then presented with a beautiful gold ring by Lady Eaton, her little son, Master John David Eaton, making the presentation.

The following address was then read by Warden Mulligan:

To Bugler Banks—

The citizens of Omemee and vicinity welcome you back from the war. We appreciate to the fullest extent the courage, bravery and patriotism you showed in responding, when the first call to arms was heard, so that you were among the first Canadians who crossed the Atlantic, landed in England, and were finally sent to "Somewhere in France," there to fight the battles of our glorious empire.

We were grieved when the news came that you were wounded, and rejoiced when you recovered and were again able to go to the front. We know that when you were wounded the second time, and invalided home that you have done your share in the defence of the homes of our land, and the lives and honour of our women and children.

We thank you for the noble example you have given to the young men of this vicinity, and trust that they may enlist in large numbers, taking up the burden which you had to lay down, of fighting for king and country.

As a mark of the esteem in which we hold you, we ask you to accept this watch and chain, and we hope that long after the war is over and victory has perched on the banners of Great Britain and her allies, you may remember how the people of Omemee and the surrounding country honour you for what you have done.

R. J. Mulligan,
Reeve of Omemee and Warden of the County of Victoria.

Lieut. G. A. Jordan of Lindsay, at the request of Bugler Banks, made a reply, stating that the boy was not a speaker, but a fighter, and conveyed his thanks to the citizens of Omemee and Sir John and Lady Eaton.

Another grand feature of the evening was the presentation of $147 to Bugler Banks by the Red Cross Society by Mrs. G. A. Williamson, President.

After this had been presented, the clever young hero returned it to Lady Eaton with thanks, saying she could return it to the society for him. This act of Bugler Banks was received with tremendous applause.

Lady Eaton accepted the gift on behalf of the Society and informed Bugler Banks that for the generous spirit he displayed she would see that he never wanted for anything during life.

The singing of the National Anthem brought this pleasing event to a close.

Recruiting Officer Busy At Hastings

In the Hope of Securing Twenty five Recruits—News of Hastings

HASTINGS, December 15.—A recruiting officer has been busy around here for the past week in the hope of securing twenty-five recruits. If the desired number is obtained the boys will be allowed to drill at home for the winter months. The unoccupied building owned by the Radiator Co. would be used for the purpose of drilling. Several names are already on the list.

The ladies of the I.O.D.E. are busy with their weekly sale of home made cooking, etc., and are meeting with a goodly degree of success.

That the holiday season is almost here is evidenced by the decorations now in progress and signs of Christmas are everywhere to be seen.

Missionary sermons were preached on Sunday in the Methodist church by the Rev. Mr. Irwin, B.A., B.D., of Norwood, who occupied the pulpit at both services. Collections and subscriptions were taken up in aid of the mission work.

Those who attended the "At Home" given by the pupils of the Norwood High School on Monday evening report as usual a good time and a large attendance.

Rev. Isaac Snell went to Norwood on Sunday to supply the pulpit in the absence of the pastor.

A box of bedding, clothing, etc., is being packed this week to be forwarded to the supply committee of Toronto to be sent to where most needed for Christmas distribution.

Mrs. Harper of Peterborough, has been the guest of Mrs. T. Learmouth, town.

Mrs. A. Armstrong has been spending a holiday in town.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Collins have returned from a week's visit in Moorefield.

Mr. J. B. Smith of Belleville, was in Hastings last week.

Mr. J. Stevenson shipped a consignment of live stock to the city markets on Tuesday.

Mr. Winter Runnels spent the past week in Peterboro.

Mr. Will Thomson has been visiting his brother, Arthur, at Moorefield.

Mrs. Howard of Warkworth, is holidaying at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herb Oliver.

Mr. and Mrs. V. Gorman spent the week-end with friends in Percy.

Miss Ella Tate took a trip to Peterbor during the past week.

Reeve Bowles has returned from Cobourg, where he was attending the county council.

We noticed Rev. Mr. Howard of Warkworth in town on Saturday.

Dr. Hess has been successful in securing orders for some three or four new "Chevrolet" cars.

Rev. D. A. Thompson attended the ordination services of the Rev. E. Lloyd Morrow at Warkworth, last week.

Mr. James Buck has purchased a new automobile.

Numbers are attending the 6 days reduction sale now in progress at Mr. T. Coughlan's jewellery store.

The cantata, "Santa's Reception," will be given in the town hall on Christmas night by the members of the Methodist Sunday School.

FELLED TREE PINS MAN UP A TREE

Pierre Baret, Badly Hurt, Directs Rescuing Firemen for Three Hours

YONKERS, N.Y., Dec. 15.—Pierre Baret, proprietor of the White House, an inn well known to motorists in Grassy Spain road, this city, was injured painfully to-day when a tree which was being felled under his direction, fell upon him as he was seated in the branches of another tree thirty feet distant, crushing one foot and severely bruising him about the body.

Despite the efforts of firemen to remove him from his perilous position he was kept a prisoner in the tree for three hours, unable to move hand or foot, so thickly was he wedged in by denuded branches. While the firemen were sawing off branches brandy was supplied to Baret from his own cellar, and they managed to cover his foot with a blanket to prevent it from catching cold. He suffered intensely but he assisted his rescuers as far as possible by directing them which branches to cut, many of which threatened to pierce his body at his slightest movement.

Mr. Baret had decided to cut down a large oak tree in his grounds, but as this operation imperiled numerous telephone and electric wires leading to the White House he felt it incumbent upon himself to direct the work so that none of the wires might be broken. To accomplish the task better he climbed a tree thirty feet away and ordered the axemen to proceed.

Everything went well until the weakened tree began to lean forward and topple. The workmen tried to shift the tree into its ordained path, but somebody slipped, causing the tree to swerve just as it was about to fall, and in the next instant, before he had time to move out of the fork of branches, the mass fell into Mr. Baret's tree.

Dr. Agnew of St. John's Hospital attended to his injuries and later he said that Mr. Baret had had a remarkable escape from death.

Wheat production in 29 countries which ordinarily produce 89 per cent of the world's crop, is placed at 3,793,000,000 bushels by the Department of Agriculture from preliminary official estimates. That is an increase of 550,000,000 bushels over the 1914 crops in those countries, and 223,000,000 bushels more than in 1913, the previous high record. The statistics include the American 1,002,000,000 bushel crops.

THE BORROWED CHRISTMAS

(By James J. Montague.)

Of course I know there ain't no use of gettin' sore because Them children on the avenue is friends of Santa Claus.
He's like most everybody else in this here world, I s'pose;
He'd rather pass his presents round
among the kids he knows.
No matter what some people say, I'll never think he's mean
Because he don't buy toys an' things for folks he's never seen.
But when I see them Christmas trees,
all loaded down with toys,
I wisht that we was friends of his,
like other girls an' boys.

The windows we've been lookin'
through is only made of glass,
But it's the same as iron bars, if we should try to pass.
An' on the side where Santa Claus came visitin' last night
There's books, an' drums, an' tootin' horns, an' lots an' lots of light,
An' on the side where we are at it's awful cold an' dark.
An' we can't touch the nice warm glass for fear we'll leave a mark.
An' somepin'—maybe it's our hearts—
inside us sort o' aches—
It's funny what a diff'rence that a thin glass window makes!

It's always this way, every year, we cannot keep away—
We just have got to go down there an'
watch them children play.
We try to think that we're inside, an'
sometimes we pertends
That we are like the children there—all Santa Claus's friends.
An' then it seems a lot o' fun, an' often we longer
That we an' Mr. Santa Claus have never even met.
An' when we line up at the glass I look at Sis an' say:
"We'll borrow Christmas for a while;
that's somepin', anyway!"

WARSAW NEWS

WARSAW, Dec. 14.—Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hill of Saskatoon, arrived here last week to spend the holidays.

Mr. John Payne of Dummer, Sask., is home on a visit.

Mr. E. J. Leslie is visiting relatives here after spending the summer in the West.

The School Children's Bazaar, in aid of the Red Cross Fund, to be held in the Town Hall here on Monday, Dec. 20, afternoon and evening, is developing into a large event in which, from appearances, the whole Township will participate. A large amount of beautiful work has been prepared for sale. Refreshments and home-made candy will be features of the proceedings.

Again the happy Christmas is near—only seven days now—and again it has found us well prepared to meet the increased demand for gifts and the necessaries of the household for the big event.

We hereby invite you to the store, and feel sure you will not be disappointed in the showing nor in the prices.—A. F. Choate.

Life is not made out of money, and friendship, and talents, and patronage, and family influences, and good chances, and good positions, and good health and good nature; it is made out of faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness and brotherly kindness and love. —Inninger.

A LETTER ABOUT PIGEON CREEK BRIDGE

The following letter in regard to the Pigeon Creek bridge, appears in the Lindsay Warder:

To the Editor of The Warder:

Dear Sir,—In looking over the reports of the County Council in reference to Pigeon Creek bridge, I notice that Warden Mulligan favoured closing the same. He claims that there are not enough rigs going over it to keep the grass from growing on it. We are at a loss to know why any man holding the position of Warden of the County can make the statement. It can be proved that sixteen auto cars crossed the bridge in one day, also twenty other vehicles. I am sure Warden Mulligan is mistaken. I am sorry for any man who has so little knowledge of his surroundings and holding the position of reeve.

The bridge, as we all know, is in a bad state of repair and at present there is no one to look after the repairing. Mr. Flood, who formerly did this work, in fact he has attended to it for thirty years, and who knows every weak spot in it, was told to quit because he did not pull the ropes with ex-Reeve Killen of Emmamore.

There was a time in the memory of some of the oldest inhabitants of Emmamore and Emily, when it was possible to walk over the stream where the bridge now stands. The bridge was originally only fourteen feet of a plant over a small stream and it is the damming back of the Trent waters that cause all the trouble.

Every man in the two counties should know that this floating bridge over which there is so much trouble connects the two counties, and in this enlightened age why close it. Your paper could scarcely furnish adequate space for a free discussion on this matter, but for this time I think I have said plenty.

Thanking you for space in your valuable paper, I am,

Respectfully yours,
RATEPAYER.

Picturesque Babel in Muddy Saloniki

Perfect Co-operation Between the Chiefs of the Allied Forces, with Serrail Taking Leadership.

SALONIKI, Dec. 1.—The camp of the British Mediterranean expeditionary force lies to the west of Saloniki, among the rolling foothills of Mount Kortchou. Although a very considerable force has already left for Doiran, on the Serbo-Bulgarian frontier, there are still some 11,000 men gathered in the camp.

The British troops are beyond any doubt content to leave Gallipoli. The climate of Saloniki is nothing to boast of at this season. It rains every day. The rough, badly paved streets are muddy and full of chuch holes. The roads—such as they are—are knee deep in mud. Flour is scarce and the food is bad and dear. The price of everything has gone up three times since the arrival of the foreign troops. A British sovereign, for the first time in its life in a bankrupt country like Greece, is worth less than its face value in local money. While French is fairly current as a language, English is not spoken at all. Yet, despite all of these material drawbacks, the British Tommy in his camp outside Saloniki is so delighted to escape the heat, the flies, the unslaked thirst, and the stenches of Gallipoli that he finds Macedonia a sort of paradise by comparison.

The road from the harbor to his camp lies through the old Turkish quarter of the town, at a steep angle up narrow, winding streets. From almost every house hangs a projecting second storey, in which the latticed windows of the haremlike do not always conceal the eager, curious unveiled faces of Turkish women watching the passage to and fro of so many strange soldiers. Shops open their whole fronts direct on to the street. The shoemaker or tinsmith sits cross-legged at his work in what would be the show window. The camp-bound British Tommy, like every one else, is forced to bargain for his purchases from the sidewalk—a proceeding which does not improve the already badly jumpled traffic arrangements.

At every cross-road the returning Tommy loses himself in a dense crowd of Greek soldiers, so slight in comparison with the stocky, deep-chested French, so diminutive in comparison with the tall, wiry British. The Greeks seem to be gathered just where the foreign soldiers must pass in going to and from camp. Greek army pack mules choke the way at every turn. The noise, the confusion, the mixture of half a dozen strangers—all of this in contrast to the silence and the pattering of the wind-blown sand in the desert land of Gallipoli enchants the British Tommy. He is as one intoxicated with a revelation that there is still normal life in the world.

Finally the way to the camp leaves the town, between the high walls of twin burial grounds—one Jewish, the other Greek. A little further on is the old Turkish cemetery, which has become the corral of hundreds of Greek army mules. Close by, a long series of barracks built of brick shelters tens of thousands of refugees from Macedonia and Thrace and from Serbia, the derelicts of war.

The road in the open country becomes an incredible succession of mud-holes along which swing columns of broad-shouldered, blue-clad Frenchmen making their way to thier own camp lying to the south of the British compound. Trains of supply wagons, officers, automobiles, motor trucks, or "lorries" as the English call them, force Tommies and "poilus" alike into the soggy fields. Two huge tractors draw each gray-painted French 4-inch long-range gun, on whose muzzles are painted their names. One is "Boche Chaser," the other is "Death Spitter."

Along the road hundreds of itinerant vendors of everything portable set up improvised stands in the fields. Neckties, hot chestnuts, suspenders, writing paper, raw shrimps, socks, sweetmeats, fortune told, photographs taken—and bang goes Tommy's pay! Enterprising Semitic merchants have even installed barrels of beer in the fields as stations of refuge for the thirsty soldier too long on the way. Beggars, of course, cripples, little girls in tattered, hollow-cheeked misery, the old of every race and kind.

Finally the tent city appears, seeming to cover unending acres of hilltops. The road and a stream separate the French from the British.

Every day more transports arrive pouring out their soldiers—Greek, French, British. Between the French and the British there is the completest working co-operation. The French have the predominant force and they have taken the major burden of the expedition. General Serrail is beyond question the ablest of the Entente at least. While the British and French armies are wholly independent one of the other, the practical mthod of procedure is for General Serrail to suggest to General Sir Byran Mahan a certain movement. The suggestion is promptly taken in the best of part, and both armies move together like well-regulated clockwork.

LIFE

By Dr. Frank Crane

There was a thud against the gambling house door, as of a falling body. The porter opened the door, a man tumbled in and dropped sprawling upon the hallway floor.

He was entirely naked.

He was so weak he could only cry. He sobbed pathetically.

A doctor was in the house. Looking at the man and feeling his pulse he said: "He is hungry, give him something to eat.

The people there were not unkind. They fed the stranger and clothed him.

Before long he came to himself under the influence of warmth and sustenance.

"Tell us your story," they said. But he could not. Something had happened him so that he had lost all memory of his life previous to entering the place.

When he had regained his strength he looked about him and found out the kind of house he was in. He asked to be allowed to play.

Some one gave him money and he sat up to the gambling table.

He won, and lost, and won again. After a fluctuating fortune for awhile, he began to have luck.

He won heavily. Increasing his ventures he won still more.

The gambler crowds all life's sensations into a few vivid moments. As the man's pile increased entrancing visions swept through his brain.

He saw what money meant: success, fame, indulgence.

In the back of his mind he planned. When he had $10,000 ahead he pictured himself dining at an expensive table around him lively companions, before him choice meats, wines, in the room music and dancing.

He won $100,000. Now he said, he would build a house, a palace. He would take his place among the favored of men.

He won more. Half a million lay before him. He would have fame, be governor or president. Men should cheer him as he whizzed by in his limousine. His name would be in the papers.

He would have a beautiful wife, children, friends.

He saw his path marked with laughter. His heart was big within him. He smiled as he played on, and dreamed.

He would terrify his enemies, crown his friends. Men would whisper his name in awe. Women would fawn upon him.

He played on steadily through the night.

But toward morning he began to lose. He doubled his stakes, forced his luck, played ever more feverdly.

At last his money had all gone. He borrowed what he could, and lost that.

By and by he staked his clothes, and lost them.

He could borrow or beg no more. Naked he came in, and naked again he was thrust out into the street.

The door slammed behind him.

As he did not know whence he came, so he did not know whither he was going.

That is human life.

We enter it naked, we know not whence nor why.

We play, we dream, we plan.

And then we go out, naked, all our gains stripped from us.

And we go we know not whither.

Life—a mysterious episode, a gleam of light between the darkness of the womb and the darkness of the grave, a flash of activity between the great realms of stillness.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mrs. J. A. McKone, 600 Gilmour Street, will receive Thursday, Dec. 16, from 4 to 6 p.m., and afterwards on the first and second Tuesday.

The many friends of Miss Little, who was formerly with Robert Fair Company, will regret to learn that she was seriously hurt in alighting from a street car in Toronto a short while ago.

JAPANESE CHILD TO TEST HEREDITY AND ENVIRONMENT

PHILDELPHIA, Dec. 15—Fuji Adamson has deep, dark eyes, a wee bit oblant. She has a typical round Japanese baby face. Her cheeks are a rich, warm pink.

She doesn't know yet that she is to demonstrate the comparative value of environment and heredity. Even if it were explained that her pure Japanese blood and American training were fighting it out in her small body she would fail to comprehend.

Fuji is the little daughter of a Japanese gardener on the Villanova estate of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Baeder Adamson whose charms won her father's employer. Her parents finally consented to permit Mrs. Adamson to take charge of her up-bringing.

She is four now. Except for differences of feature, she could not be distinguished from any of the American children she plays with. She is vivacious and healthy. She speaks English from choice, and a little French and German on request. Her foster mother is giving her a course in gymnastics which is expected to make her tall.

Fuji is destined to matriculate at Bryn Mawr. When she reaches her majority she will be given her choice between America and Japan. Mrs. Adamson has no fear of the outcome. "Why should I?" she asks. "The child has become Americanized, and in a few years not a trace of the Japanese characteristics will be left."

French Retirement Skilfully Conducted But British Experienced Hard Fighting

Greek Government Denies Reports of the Entrance of Bulgarian Forces Into the Greek Territory---Salonikl Ready For Attack.

ATHENS, via London, Dev. 16.—The Greek Government denies reports of the entrance of Bulgarian forces into the Greek territory.

The press unanimously declares that the presence of Bulgarians in Greek Macedonia would arouse national indignation, and the situation arising from the retreat of allies to Greek territory and the approach of Bulgarian troops is pre-occupying official circles, but competent persons consider their entry most improbable.

The Greek Government is following closely the course of events, and is ready to take the decisions required by the highest interests of the country.

AWAIT ATTACK AT SALONIKA.

The Anglo-French forces expect the German allies to attack Salonika. The city is an armed camp. Forts have been built and trenches dug on the land side. Heavy artillery and many machine guns have been put in position. Only the Jewish residents remain in the city, all others having evacuated it.

Macedonia has been pillaged, according to refugees. The Greek, Bulgarian, German and Austrian flags have been hoisted there.

GREEKS TO STEER CLEAR.

PARIS, Dec. 15.—The latest information obtained by the Havas correspondent at Athens when he filed a despatch yesterday was that the allied front extended as far as Kugus in Greece, about 25 miles north of Salonika. The retreat is being carried on under favourable conditions, enabling the allies to preserve all their war material.

Athens newspapers express the belief that neither German nor Bulgarian troops will cross the Greek frontier.

It is said the German and Bulgarian forces in the Gievgeli section consist of nine divisions, three German and six Bulgarian. Greek troops in Macedonia have been ordered to avoid all contact with foreign troops.

RETIRED WITH GREAT SKILL.

SALONIKA, Dec. 13.—(via Paris), Dec. 15.—An eye witness reports that the retirement of the French to their temporary positions in Greece near the Serbian bordef was conducted with great skill. All the wounded were brought in except a few who could not be moved. The guns were piled on endless trains of freight cars, on which the last remaining inhabitants of the evacuated towns deported, their belongings scattered among the guns or heaped on top of the cars. The city of Gievgeli was razed.

The French rearguards were constantly in touch with the Bulgarians until they crossed the border, but held them in check, giving the main forces plenty of time for strategical manoeuvres. Casualties of the French were slight, consisting mostly of frozen feet, as the soldiers were compelled to march through the snow. The final positions which the allies expect to take up in a few days are being prepared.

SHARP FIGHTING.

The British retirement from the Dorian section proved to be difficult. There was sharp fighting in the Strumnitza region, but no guns were lost. The British burned villages as they fell back, and destroyed the bridges.

The harbour at Salonika is crowded with huge transports loaded to the gunwales with arriving troops. Freighters are disembarking munitions and stores. On land hospitals are being erected to supplement the facilities of the hospital ships in accommodating the wounded brought from Gievgeli.

Transference of Greek troops from the neighbourhood of Salonika has begun.

SIR JOHN FRENCH HAS BEEN RELIEVED OF HIS COMMAND

Has been Created Viscount in the United Kingdom in Recognition of his Services —German Submarine Sunk in the Black Sea

VIENNA, Dec. 16.—Austria-Hungary upholds the submarine commander's action in sinking the Ancona, claiming the passengers brought disaster on themselves by insolent remarks.

ROME, Dec. 16.—An Italian destroyer and a transport was sunk in the Adriatic Sea by drifting mines.

LONDON, Dec. 16. — Sir John French, Commander-in-Chief in France, has been relieved of his command. General Sir Douglas Haig will succeed him.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—Capt. Smith, of the Royal Flying Corps, while making a flight in his aeroplane, was burned to death, the machine bursting.

ATHENS, Dec. 13.—A German submarine was sunk in the Black Sea and a Turkish torpedo boat sunk in the Sea of Marmora.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—Sir John French has been created Viscount in the United Kingdom in recognition of his services. He will become chief of the troops stationed in the United Kingdom.

PORT HOPE, Ont., Dec. 16.—Judge Thos. W. Benson is dead of pneumonia.

OTTAWA, Dec. 16.—The Government has placed an embargo on the export of hay, which is all needed for the Allies.

PLENTY OF WORK FOR THE DISABLED

LONDON, Dec. 16. —Employment can readily be found at the present time for far more disabled soldiers than offer themselves. The labour market will absorb many more men broken in our wars, and the eagerness with which employers accept the service of soldiers discharged disabled in consequence of their service in the Army is mainly due to the demand for labour being greater than the supply.

There is, of course, a natural anxiety among those having situations to be filled to give preference to men who have been doing the nation's work abroad, and, when all other considerations are equal, the vacancy would be offered to the ex-soldier. But it is mainly because of the shortage of labour that the disabled soldier who wishes for work need only to ask for it to obtain it.

Turkish Torpedo Boat And Submarine Sunk Warship Badly Damaged

Allies Continue to Unload Troops and Heavy Guns on Greek Territory---Restrictions Against Greek Commerce Have Been Removed--Bulgarians Lose Heavily in Serbian Campaign---Zeppelin Destroyed.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—German submarine destroyed in the Black Sea, and Turkish warship badly damaged. Another Turkish torpedo boat sunk by the British in the Sea of Marmora.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—Late Athens despatches report open defiance of the Central Powers by the Greek people. The Allies are unloading troops and heavy guns night and day. Engineers are erecting fortifications so that the British can hold positions at Klindir.

ATHENS, Dec. 16.—Premier Skouloudis has been informed by the Entente Ministers that the blockade of the Greek coast is lifted. No more measures against Greek commerce are to be taken.

PARIS, Dec. 16.—Only twenty thousand Germans are with the Bulgar army. Bulgarians estimated to have lost five thousand killed and fifteen thousand wounded in the last few days.

Sir Douglas Haig's Appointment To Be Followed By Other Radical Changes

LONDON, Dec. 16.—Sir Douglas Haig's appointment as commander-in-chief of the British forces in France and Belgium will be followed by other radical changes in the higher commands of the army, it was hinted to-day. There will be no violent shake-up that might affect the administration of army affairs, but a gradual replacing of field commanders before the expected spring offensive. The appointment of the "Hero of Mons" to the supreme command of the British forces on the western front was enthusiastically applauded by the public to-day. Credited with the dashing initiative, the new commander-in-chief strikes the man in the street as a type of leader who may be expected to upset traditions of trench warfare by a brilliant stroke that may turn the tide of victory to the Allies. Some of his friends even expressed the fear to-day that the public remembering Sir Douglas Haig's exploits at Mons, might expect too much of the new commander.

Prussian Losses 2,224,248 Serb Campaign Cost 317,000

ROTTERDAM, Dec. 14. — The last ten lists of Prussian casualties contain 65,340 names. The lists cover the period from November 15 to November 26.

The total Prussian losses to date are given as 2,224,248.

(By International News Service.)

GENEVA, Dec. 14.—Swiss experts yesterday estimated the losses of the Central Powers and their allies in the Serbian campaign at 317,000 men killed, wounded or stricken with sickness. In this total they include German, Austrian, Bulgarian and Turkish troops.

The losses of the four nations are given thus in the estimates.

Germany—Killed 27,000, wounded 43,000, sick 47,800.

Austria—Killed 29,000, wounded 58,000, sick 51,000.

Bulgaria — Killed 11,000, wounded 32,000, sick 8,000.

Turkey — Killed 3,000, wounded 14,000.

BELGIANS STILL CAPTURING GERMAN GUNS—That King Albert's little Belgian army is still able to give a good account of itself, despite the fierce attacks of the Germans, is evidenced by the picture which shows a big German gun recently captured by the Belgians. It is on its way to Paris to be made over into a useful gun for the Allies.

BUSINESS AND ART IN CONJUNCTION

THE GENESIS OF A GREAT TRADE IN THE UNITED STATES AND CANADA.

It is not generally known that the earliest visits of the great pianists to America were financed by some of the more notable piano manufacturers of New York and Boston. It was necessary in the earlier years of the trade on this continent to prove to the great musicians as well as to the people of America that the ability to make a pianoforte of the highest rank was not confined to London, Paris and Vienna. There was business acumen shown also in guaranteeing the tours of Rubinstein and in later times of Paderewski. The visit of a great artist was a stimulus to an infant industry. Forty years ago people did not buy pianos with abandon, as they do now all over the United States and Canada. Furthermore, all people know that the produce of a high-grade factory in either country to-day is not excelled in the world.

Out of the commendable enterprise of the early manufacturers and the association of the trade and the artist came the excesses of a later time. Some one developed the pleasant fiction that the artist personally selects his instrument, when in reality he plays on the piano his agent has contracted to use. The traditional exploitation of artists for advertising purposes has been carried to great lengths on this continent. "Testimonials" have become a purchasable commodity. The Gourlay piano, made in Canada by Canadian experts, is not so "selected" by visiting artists. There is a reason. No money is spent by this firm for this kind of exploitation or to acquire testimonials. Gourlays do not yearn for paeans of purchased praise. They make a superb instrument and the Canadian public knows the meaning of the word "Gourlay" engraved so neatly on the fallboard. It stands for an ideal of manufacturing efficiency.

"I know a man who has the power of making all persons show his hands." "Who is he?" "My glove dealer."

Once Bitten—Twice Shy.

Advertising may make a poor article sell for a while, but the most persistent advertising would not induce you to make a second purchase of a thing that turned out to be fraudulent, and the profit on the first sale would never pay for the advertising.

Do you not think the advertisers know this? They fully realize that the very first essential of success is to have something worthy, something that people want and will keep on buying.

If you see a thing advertised regularly week after week, year after year, it is safe to conclude that it possesses actual merit and is well worth its cost.

BURNS'S POEMS SOLD.

LONDON, Dec. 15.—A first edition of Robert Burns's poems, from the library of the late Joseph Hornstein, sold at Sotheby's auction to-day for $500. The volume was of rare Kilmarnock edition, printed in 1786 by John Wilson.

It was in admirable condition. A few blank margins had been mended and restored; one letter and one punctuation mark had been marred and two or three foot notes were partially obliterated. But aside from these slight defects, the volume was almost perfect. It measured 8 3-16x5 inches, was bound in scarlet levant morocco extra, with gilt line borders, gilt back and, inside borders of gilt dentelles.

Save all pips, peelings, and scraps of apples when cooking them. Well picked over and boiled this "waste" yields juice which, after straining and re-boiling with 1 lb. of sugar to every pint of liquid, makes the most delicious apple jelly.

A Frozen Santa

By Harry Boehme

"I was in a Cheat mountain camp last Christmas eve when someone mentioned the name of 'Billie' Burke. There was an instant stillness in the cabin; the boys dropped their cards, and the words 'poor Billie' were on almost every lip. I was somewhat puzzled. 'Who was Billie Burke?' I inquired. For a moment no one answered. One of the boys called on old Sam—'Uncle Sam' they called him. 'You tell him, Sam; you knew Billie longer than any of us.'

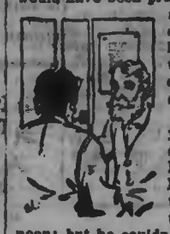
"The boys all drew their chairs near the fire and Sam told the story.

"'Yes, I knowed Billie from the time he was a wee shaver; me and him used to pelt each other with stones, tree coons and steal whisky together. You know Bill and his pop were in the moonshinin' business before the revenue officers copped it.

"'A bad cuss was that young Billie Burke before he was sent to the reform school. But what chances did he have? He knowed no better; the whole blooming family were in that one-roomed log house; the old lady digging ginseng in the summer to get enough to buy the winter's supply of snuff and chewing tobacco, and the old man running his still in the ravine, using the corn for whisky that should have made pone cakes for the kiddies.

"'Wal, sir, I never seen such a change in a youngster as Billie when he came back. He read; he wrote; he wore good clothes and fine shoes, and he was a gentleman. His people didn't know him at first. Then Billie said he was going to meet it on the square.

"'While he was at home the last time he met the schoolmarm of the Red Sulphur Spring school and he fell in love. I suppose, though, he never said anything to no one but me; he said it to me real earnestly. Any gal would have been proud to have Billie:



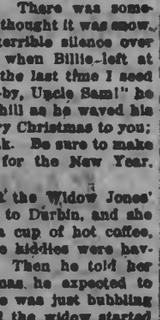
a straight, strong, clean and good-hearted boy. Why, the president's daughter wouldn't say no to him.

"'I can see him yet as he left this camp the last day I ever seed him. I done told him to wait for the log train that went at noon; but he couldn't wait. He started over the short-cut trail to Durbin—a six-mile tramp. There was something in the air; I thought it was snow. There seemed a terrible silence over the whole woods when Billie left at dawn. That was the last time I seed him alive. "Good-by, Uncle Sam!" he shouted from the hill as he waved his hand; "and a merry Christmas to you; and don't get drunk. Be sure to make good resolutions for the New Year. Good-by!"

"'He stopped at the Widow Jones' house on his way to Durbin, and she made him drink a cup of hot coffee, which she and the kiddies were having at breakfast. Then he told her about the Christmas he expected to spend at home. He was just bubbling over with joy, and the widow started to cry. At Christmas, she said, the thoughts of the ones that are departed are green in one's memory as the holly leaves that grow on the holly tree, and like a circle of holly leaves are they entwined in a wreath of memory.

"'Then Billie tried to comfort her, and asked her why she was crying. She said that her kiddies wanted to know about Santa Claus because the Paxson children, who went sledding on the hill, told them what Santa was going to bring them, and they asked their maw when Santa was coming to them. She told them that he wasn't coming; there wasn't going to be any Christmas for them because they were poor.

"'That stuck in Billie's craw, and he said he would go to Durbin and get something for 'em, and could still make No. 9 train in the afternoon for home.



"'That trail is bad enough in summer, to say nothing about it in winter. One trip a day over that Cheat mountain slope is enough for any man. I don't see how Billie could have been so 'thoughtless of himself when he always was so thoughtful of others.

"'Wal, sir, when he got to Durbin it was high noon. They say it was snowing hard, and he was covered with the soft flakes. He never tarried, but he soon as he could get a sack full of dolls, drums, candy, oranges and a sled he started for the hills. It was snowing hard when he came into town, and drifting under a light wind when he turned back. And it got awfully cold—30 degrees below.

"'You know the rest; they found him at the foot of the precipice, leaning, smiling, with the sack on his back—no more than a quarter of a mile from the widder's home. I believe, as the parson read, "Insomuch as ye have done it unto one of these—"'

"The lumberjacks are not much for sentiment, but let me tell you, when old Sam had finished the story you could see that it had affected every one of them."—Philadelphia North American.

A King's Trick.

King Gustavus III. of Sweden had been frequently invited to the little court of Schwerin. In 1783 he paid a visit to Germany, and as soon as the Duchess of Mecklenburg heard of his approach she prepared fetes in his honor. But Gustavus, who disdained the petty courts of the small rulers, sent two of his attendants—a page named Peyron and Desrouges, a valet who had formerly been an actor—to be entertained by the duchess. The two personated the king and his minister, Baron Sparre, and sustained the characters throughout. They accepted as their due all the homage meant for their master, danced with the Mecklenburg ladies who were presented to them, and Peyron went so far as to ask one of the ladies for her portrait. Meantime Gustavus was enjoying himself elsewhere in secret.

The Wonderful Toad Bone.

All early writers attribute wonderful qualities to toads and frogs and the various parts of their bodies. They believed, for instance, that if a toad was brought into the midst of a mob or other large and unruly concourse of people silence would instantly prevail. A small bone found in the right side of toads "of the proper age" was also believed to have powers over the various elements. "By throwing this bone into a vessel of boiling water," says Pliny, "it will immediately cool it, the water refusing to boil again until the bone has been removed. To find this bone, expose the dead toad on an ant hill. When the ants have eaten her all away except the bones take each bone separately and drop it into boiling water. Thus may the wondrous toad bone be discovered."

An Unfit Companion.

Mrs. Atherton had tried to impress upon her young son, Eugene, that he should play only with good boys.

"Mother," said Eugene as he came in one day, "you don't want me to play with wicked boys, do you?"

"No, indeed," said the mother, pleased that her son had remembered.

"Well, if one little boy kicks another little boy, isn't it wicked for him to kick back?"

"Yes, indeed, it is certainly very wicked," was the mother's reply.

"Then I don't play with Richard Whitney any more," said Eugene; "he's too wicked. I kicked him this morning, and he kicked me back."

Protecting Your Personality.

Can any man's life be held to be in complete if it is continued in the life of a friend? Was Arthur Hallam's life incomplete when Tennyson prolonged it forever by "In Memoriam" or the life of Socrates when Plato continued it in his immortal dialogues? Confucius said wisely, "Have no friends not equal to yourself." By that he must have meant, "Make your friends equal to yourself by giving them freely of your best." Thus you make sure of a continued life whatever happens to yourself, as a manufacturer intrusts the secrets of his manipulations to his younger partners. —Christian Herald.

Cellar Convenience.

If you live where there is no weekly collection of trash by the city an incinerator may be built in the chimney in the cellar at small expense, and two ordinary castiron doors and some short pieces of one inch pipe for a grate can be bought for a dollar or two. This will give you cleanliness and freedom from disorder in the cellar and solve your rubbish problem.

Another cellar convenience is the dustproof bin for coal, without which it is impossible to keep things in the cellar free from coal dust. To accomplish this, in making the bin sheathing should be placed between the boards.

He Didn't Know Mary Ann.

"Keep moving, keep moving," urged a downtown policeman in an effort to clear the sidewalk.

A countryman appealed to him in despair.

"I've lost my wife," he said.

"Well, get another one," replied the policeman heartlessly.

The countryman shook his head.

"You don't know Mary Ann," he answered.

European Revolutions.

The four great revolutions of modern times are the English revolution of 1688, which finally put an end to Stuart power in England; the great French revolution of 1789; the French revolution of July, 1830, which was followed by several revolutionary outbreaks in other parts of Europe, and the almost general revolutionary outburst of 1848. The July revolution in France in 1830 was followed by attempts which were unsuccessful in Germany and Italy, but in Belgium the present kingdom of the Belgians was established, and in 1832 the passage of the English reform bill was directly attributed to events and grievances of thought set in motion at that time. The revolutions of 1848 resulted in France in the fall of the bourgeois monarchy and brought about a political upheaval in Europe from many causes from Ireland to the Danube.

The Conductor's Baton.

According to the investigations of a Frenchman, the credit of inventing the conductor's baton belongs to Lully, the composer, who eventually had cause to regret his invention. Before he adopted the baton conductors were in the habit of pounding on the floor with their feet or clapping their hands to mark the time. Lully found it worth-some to keep his foot constantly in motion and so used a stick to strike the floor and beat time. He used a pole six feet long. One day he brought down the pole with such force that it struck his foot and made a deep wound. He paid no attention to the matter. The wound grew worse and ultimately caused his death. After his time conductors tried more and more to improve the baton, and it was ultimately brought to its present form.

The Pretorian Guard.

The Pretorian guard was a select body of troops instituted by the Emperor Augustus to protect his person and consisted of ten cohorts, each of 1,000 men, chosen from Italy. They had peculiar privileges and when they had served sixteen years were retired on a pension of about $600. Each member of the guard had the rank of a captain in the regular army. Like the bodyguard of Louis XI., they were all gentlemen and formed gradually a great power, like the janisaries at Constantinople, and frequently deposed or elevated the very emperors themselves.

Before the Gasoline Age.

It is curious to recall that some seventy years ago Herbert Spencer was hoping to take out a patent for a "flying machine." Only he had given up as hopeless the problem since solved by the aeroplane, regarding it as impossible to carry the motor engine and motor power required for a long flight. His idea was suggested by the principle of the kite and involved the drawing through the air of an inclined plane by iron wire cords attached to an endless wire rope moved by stationary engines. The fatal flaw was the impracticable weight of the wire rope, and the one good feature of the scheme was that it would have been of little or no use for war.—London Globe.

Henry Clay.

Many able men have preferred to be in the house of representatives rather than in the senate. Henry Clay liked the turbulence of the lower chamber better than the solemn stillness of the other branch. He began his real political career there in 1811, although he was in the senate as early as 1806. Clay's service in national office extended to his death in 1852, while he was a member of the senate. It covered a period of forty-six years in all, though part of the time he was in private life.

False Hair in Elizabeth's Time.

Queen Elizabeth had eighty wigs in her collection, and her cousin, Mary, queen of Scots, had "as many as a hundred," and among the incongruous presents made her while confined a prisoner in gloomy Lochleven previous to her being beheaded wigs were numerous. Gentlemen who particularly wished to please their lady friends presented them with wigs of the latest shade of hair and newest style of coiffuring. Fancy a gentleman of today presenting his sweetheart with the last idea in back hair!

Getting to a Busy Man.

"It's a mistake to call on a busy man at his office if you can possibly avoid it."

"That's right. Go out and ring him up on the telephone. If you call and send in your card he hasn't the slightest curiosity to know who is trying to talk to him."

Where Joy Ruled.

There is a local legend concerning Salisbury cathedral, in England. The cathedral is celebrated for its lofty spire, and the legend is that once upon a time a prisoner found guilty of some capital offense was sentenced to death and had the option given him of being executed in the usual way or of throwing himself from off the cathedral spire. He chose the latter, and, wonderful to say, he escaped death. Some time afterward he was asked he would do it again. He did, but this time his body was dashed to pieces.

Origin of "Argonaut."

The term "argonaut" comes from the legend of Greek mythology relating to the celebrated expedition headed by the hero Jason in search of the golden fleece. Naut is Greek for ship, and the vessel which bore Jason and his party was called the Argo; hence the gold hunting expedition was called the argonautic expedition and Jason and his followers argonauts, for the legend says the vessel was the first that ever sailed. Her name, Argo, has been given to one of the constellations of stars in the southern hemisphere.

The Time to Marry.

Hepsey, the maid of color, had told the mistress she was to be married.

"Well, Hepsey," said the mistress, "I'm sorry to lose you, but I suppose it is all for the best. How long have you known the man?"

"About two weeks, ma'am."

"My! No longer than that?—Don't you think you ought to wait and get to know him better?"

"No, ma'am," exclaimed Hepsey. "If I knowed him any better I sho' never would marry him."

That First Submarine.

Speaking of undersea boats, a correspondent reminds me that we can go back further than Cornelius Van Drebbel for the first submarine. Alexander the Great is said to have used them, Pliny mentions something of the kind and as early as 1579 an English gunner, William Bourne, patented a submarine boat fitted with "leather joints so contrived as to be made smaller or larger by the action of screws, ballasted with water and having an air pipe as mast."—London Standard.

No Disrespect.

Friend—I see you have turned your wife's picture to the wall. Isn't that rather disrespectful? Widower—No; it seems more natural. You see, most of my time at home I spent in buttoning her up the back.

Wire Wound Guns.

One of the chief sources of strength in big guns lies in the miles and miles of steel ribbon with which the tube is re-enforced. This ribbon, one-sixteenth of an inch thick and about a quarter of an inch wide, is wound around the tube or core of the great cannon. On a twelve inch gun about 120 miles of the ribbon is wound, a weight of fifteen tons. The ribbon has a tensile strength of 100 tons per square inch.

His Apology.

Mrs. Minks—I don't want to make a scene, but that man over there is staring at me very offensively. Mr. Minks—He is, eh? I'll speak to him. Mrs. Minks (a few moments later)—Did he apologize? Mr. Minks—Y-e-s. He said he was looking for his mother and thought at first that you were she.

The First Museum.

The first museum was part of the palace of Alexandria, where learned men were maintained at the public cost, just as eminent public servants were in the Prytaneum at Athens. Its foundation is attributed to Ptolemy Philadelphus about 280 B. C.

The Problem.

"Is this a problem play?"

"Yes, but you can't see the problem."

"Why not?"

"The manager is wrestling with it in the box office."

Motor Orthography.

Caller—I suppose you can spell all the short words, Bobbie? Bobbie—I can spell a lot of big ones too. I can even spell words of four cylinders.

Not what you do, but how you do it, is the test of your capacity.—Studley.

A good way to get rid of rats is to collect some thin chips, pieces of shingles, or tin, and pour over them enough molasses to cover them well. Sprinkle dry lye over the chips and place them in every rat hole you can find. The rats will soon move out.

Mending men's clothes often gives the housewife much bother, for they are not so easily dealt with as the feminine garments, the very sewing on of a button being a somewhat troublesome job. A tailor always gives a button a "stem" when sewing it on a coat, so that the buttonhole may easily slip over it. A good plan in order to raise the button sufficiently so as to leave room for the false shank is that of cutting a ring of cardboard a little bigger than the button, removing the centre. This may be slipped between it and the material, the needle being passed through the hole in the middle, while the thickness of the cardboard prevents the thread from being drawn too tight. When finished the ring should be broken away, and the shank of cotton straightened by several winds of cotton and buttonholed once or twice.

"What is the child howling for now," asked its father from the depths of his easy chair.

"He wants his own way," snapped the mother.

And with his mind on the latest war news the father replied:—"Well, if it's his why don't you let him have it?"

The Best Treatment For Constipation
The Experience of One Who Knows and Places Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills First

It is not difficult to secure a medicine that will effect movement of the bowels. To cure Constipation and the complications which arise from it is another matter.

Constipation of the bowels is usually preceded by torpid action of the liver. Hence it follows that if Constipation is to be cured the liver must be set right. And here lies the secret of the success of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They awaken the action of the liver and insure a good flow of bile, which is nature's cathartic. The liver, kidneys and bowels are invigorated and regulated, and the troubles with the digestive system disappear.

Mr. H. M. Bell, Innisfail, Alta., writes: "For some considerable time I have been using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which I have obtained through your firm. I suppose during my life I have used nearly all the best-known pills, as I have been subject to Constipation and digestive troubles. A friend recommended Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and I can honestly say that of all the pills I have tried nothing has suited me better—no griping—action always insured, and fine for the kidneys. This is how I have found them after a thorough test, and you may use this statement if you like."

This letter should convince you of the merits of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, but there is nothing like personal experience. If you do not feel like risking 25 cents for a box, write to us for a free sample box, mentioning where you saw this advertisement. Put this medicine to the test when you have indigestion, constipation, biliousness, backache or kidney derangements. The results will soon prove to you the superiority of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box; all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A PROPOSAL IN THREE LANGUAGES.

By F. A. MITCHEL.
[Copyright, by American Press Association.]

On Lake Como, in northern Italy, is a little cluster of hotels and shops called Bellagio. The place is near the boundary line between two countries, in one of which French is spoken and in the other Italian. English Americans, French, Italians and Germans all meet here, and the lingual condition is similar to that at the famous tower of Babel. The hotel and shop keepers, boatmen and others are obliged to continually express themselves in one of three or four languages. French is the prevailing tongue, with English second and German third.

After having finished my education I decided upon a year's travel in Europe before beginning the practice of my profession, and that summer at the height of the Italian lake season I found myself at Bellagio. The hotel at which I stopped was on the very verge of Lake Como, the water plashing against its stone and marble porch. On the evening of my arrival I dined at one of the tables on this porch. The lake—or rather this portion of it—is surrounded by mountain peaks, which stand out in bold silhouette against the twilight. On the other shore, a couple of miles away, the lights of Cadenabbia were beginning to glimmer on the line between the mountain base and the lake.

At a table on my left sat a party some of the members of which were speaking Italian, others French. Among them was a beautiful Italian girl. They were drinking champagne and chatting merrily, while I sat alone, wishing that I might even understand what they said. One of the men addressed a remark to me in broken English. I met him more than halfway and was invited to join the party.

That night I dreamed of the Italian girl, Signorina Alicia Jaconti. I had carried on a spirited dialogue with her at the table, our language being one-tenth Italian, one-tenth French, one-tenth English and seven-tenths pantomime. Every one who knows anything about love knows that as a donkey feeds on thistles so love thrives on difficulties. A man may make love to any girl who speaks the same tongue as himself and go to sleep at the same time. There's no incentive in it. But when a fellow and a girl have but a few dozen words in common and must "scratch gravel" to make themselves understood the little god empties his quiver before them.

Well, the next morning I hired one of those delightful little boats with which Lake Como abounds, each furnished with a canopy and soft cushions, to say nothing of a boatman to do the work, and the signorina and I went for a "promenade," as they call it there, on the water. Perhaps you think there was nothing for the boatman to do but to row. Not much. He spoke French, Italian and English, the illiterate chump, while I, a college bred American, knew but one language. The signorina spoke French and Italian. So, you see, there were three tongues in the party. Before starting I slipped 4 lire into the boatman's palm. He thought it was to induce him to row fast. Not a bit. I had in view a different use for him. Besides, I didn't propose that he should make me and the girl ridiculous by telling people what it was. I wanted him for an interpreter.

As soon as we were off the signorina and I, leaning back on the cushions, renewed the struggle to communicate of the evening before. It ran like this:

"Eat is ver' bellissimo" (beautiful).

"Vous n'avez pas" (you have not) "aucun" (anything) "so bellissimo in Amerique."

"Not a woman in the country so beautiful as you," I replied in four languages and a superfluity of pantomime.

"Ah, m'sieur!" (Clasped hands, smiles, eyes turned upward.)

It wasn't long before I had found her hand (under a fold of her dress where the boatman couldn't see) and a current of language common to all people, felt, not spoken, ran between us with all the sprightliness of a bubbling brook. So for awhile we sat without speaking. The boatman jogged along over the smooth waters which splashed softly against the boat. The reflection of the mountains and the heavens trembling in the lake started me again.

"Votre yeux" (your eyes), I said. "Boatman, what's the French for reflect?"

"'Reflechit,' monsieur."

"Votre yeux reflechit les— What's the French for heaven?"

"'Ciel,' monsieur."

"Bully." Then to the girl, "Votre yeux reflechit les ciel."

"Ah, m'sieur!" The eyes went up and the hands were clasped.

Fortunately that all important word is much the same in several languages, all derived from the Latin. It is amor (love), amo (I love).

"Boatman," I began and stopped. I couldn't even bear to ask for a word at such a time. "Boatman," I began again, "what's that directly behind you?"

He turned, and I whispered with my lips close to hers:

"J'amo vot" (I love you).

And so with one letter of French, one word of Latin and one of Italian I did the trick.

The signorina is now my wife and since she lives in America has been obliged to learn English. She considers it a harsh language and entirely omitted for lovemaking.

Christmas Appeal
FOR
The Hospital for Sick Children
COLLEGE ST., TORONTO.

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Thanks for your kindness in allowing me the privilege of appealing at this Christmas time on behalf of the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto.

In the 40 years of the Hospital's existence there have been treated within its walls 36,108 children as in-patients; 231,768 as out-patients; a grand total of 267,876 in and out-patients.

The Hospital for Sick Children gives a province-wide service, for little patients from every section of Ontario have sought its aid. Last year 499 patients were admitted from 332 places outside the city of Toronto. In 1914 there were 394 from 310 places.

Of the 2,838 in-patients last year 1,771 were medical cases and 1,067 surgical. In the orthopedic department of the 2,838 in-patients, 264 were treated for deformities, 21 Pott's disease of the spine, 10 lateral curvature of the spine, 10 bow-legs, 57 club-feet, 17 dislocations of hip, 42 tubercular disease of knee, hip, ankle, wrist and elbow; 76 infantile paralysis, 8 wry neck, and 21 miscellaneous.

Our battle is never-ending—is one that will continue while the world lasts, for it is the fight between the armies of life and death, to save the child life, the sick little ones, sons and daughters not only of our soldier men, but of the fathers and mothers still in this home-land province.

The Hospital is beating back disease and death, the enemies that assail the lives of little children as the British Empire is beating back Germany, Austria and Turkey, the enemies that assail the life of liberty.

So we appeal to the generous people of Ontario not to forget those so near and dear to us, who lie in the beds and cots of this great charity.

Will the people at large, as of old, respond to our call? Will they remember that every year is a war year for the Hospital, every day a day of battle, and that the Hospital needs money, not for its own sake, but for the children's sake?

The Hospital has waged its war for forty years. The people of Toronto and Ontario have been its friend, and this year of all years it requires help. Surely you will give to a charity that cares for every sick child in Ontario, for only as your money reaches the Hospital can the Hospital's mercy reach the children.

Every dollar is a link of kindness in the chain of mercy that joins the money in your pocket to the miseries of some child's life, some mother's heart.

Remember that Christmas calls you to open the purse of your kindness to the Hospital that the Hospital may open the heart of its help to the children.

Will you send a dollar, or more if you can, to Douglas Davidson, Secretary-Treasurer, or

J. ROSS ROBERTSON,
Chairman of the Board of Trustees, Toronto.

HELPING THE BLINDED HEROES ENJOY LIFE

A School in London Opened to Assist Soldiers Blinded For Life to Start Over Again—Sports Taken Up

The House of Hope stands in the midst of splendid grounds, with spacious lawns, beautiful flower gardens, near a great lake, a branch of which, spanned by a rustic bridge, runs into them, but its inmates, heroes all, live in darkness. They are the soldiers and sailors who have been blinded in the war, who are doomed for the rest of their lives to walk in a world without light. In a huge mansion in London, kindly loaned by the generosity of Mr. Otto Kahn, the American financier, they are given new freedom, they are taught to build up another world for themselves on new foundations, in place of the world of light they have left. They are taught to live in it, and to have new hopes, new ambitions, fresh ideals.

These sightless heroes of the war may seem tragic, saddening, hopeless figures—but they themselves are no longer sad, for they have found new comfort and happiness in the House of Hope. Soon after the war broke out, the Blinded Soldiers' and Sailors' Hostel, where these brave men could be received, cared for, and trained to their new condition in life, was established. In the House of Hope our sightless soldiers are being taught to be blind. By arrangement with the War Office all blinded soldiers, upon their discharge from the military hospitals, are invited to enter the hostel. Here everything that ingenious minds can devise for their comfort and training is done, and the blinded men lead very active lives. Braille reading and writing are taught them by a large staff of voluntary helpers, whose kindly aid cannot be too highly praised. Typewriting is also taught by skilled instructors who are themselves blind.

Blind Teachers There

Then, such occupations as carpentry, boot repairing, mat and basket weaving, massage, telephony, poultry farming, and market gardening are taught also by blind teachers. Each man in the House of Hope spends two and a half hours a day at Braille reading and writing, and another two and a half hours in learning an occupation that will enable him, later to earn comfortable wages, and so add to his pension. The duration of the training depends on the quickness of those learning to be blind, and the nature of their work, but it is at least six months. When ready the men are given a good start in life, and arrangements are being made which will insure that they will be properly looked after.

Sports in Day's Routine

Sports and entertainments form a good part of the daily routine at the House of Hope. There is a rowing crew, and a crew of blind soldier gentlemen rowed on the Thames against crews of blind civilians, and they won two out of three races, and on a later date they beat a strong crew of sighted oarsmen. There is an annex for the accommodation of relatives of men, who are welcome to go there and spend a few days near their husbands, sons, or brothers free of cost. Another annex is to be found at Brighton and also at Torquay is another annex, supported by the generosity of residents of that charming neighborhood, to which men in need of a prolonged period of convalescence are sent.

GIRL GIVES SLACKERS EXAMPLE OF BRAVERY

The Undying Heroism of Mlle. Duclos Marks Another Milestone of Women's Bravery Against Odds

Mlle. Duclos' famous motor exploit has made herself a great heroine. She has been decorated by General Joffre with the Cross of the Legion of Honor for her heroic act. "I was determined to do something for my country in the fighting field, something that the Germans would remember," said Mlle Duclos, describing her exploits. "My great-grandfather was a captain of grenadiers under Napoleon, and the blood of generations of soldiers runs in my veins. My first ambition was to enlist in the armored car service. I had been used to tinkering an affair of cars since my childhood, and was as fit for this work as any human being could be. But I found the authorities obdurate. They simply would not let a woman into the combatant services. I tried disguising myself as a man, but the rigid physical examination made this attempt useless. Finally it seemed to me that the only way of reaching the front was to join a volunteer motor ambulance corps, as several other women had done. I transformed a 60-horse-power eight-seated touring car into a motor ambulance for four badly wounded men or eight slightly wounded ones. I qualified for the service, and was authorized to proceed to the front in Alsace, accompanied by a mechanic."

Engine Was Smashed by a Shell

One day, eager for adventure, Mlle. Duclos drove her car up a mountain road which was not included in the trench zone. Soon the rattle of rifle bullets and machine gun fire close at hand caught her attention. A turn in the road brought her in sight of a big armored French car that stood disabled in the middle of the road. The engine had been smashed by a shell. The Germans were firing at it from cover some distance away. The French soldiers were firing away from the protection of the armor with their machine guns and their rifles, but the Germans were gradually encircling them. Three of the eight Frenchmen forming the crew of the car lay dead in the road, killed while they had exposed themselves in an attempt to repair the engine.

Mlle. Duclos saw three German soldiers rise from cover and advance in an effort to rush the car. They were shot down, but she saw that in a few more minutes the Frenchmen must be overwhelmed. Taking in the situation at a glance, this brave motorist sped up to the injured car and backed up her machine before she stopped.

"Get in!" she cried to the French soldiers, "or you will be taken in another minute." The five Frenchmen jumped into Mlle. Duclos' car with their rifles. Under a rain of bullets she sped back by the way she had come. Luckily they all escaped, and a turn in the sig-zag road soon put them out of danger.

The Germans Heaxed

The Germans must have taken possession of the car after the escape of the French. Probably they tried to repair it, and, finding that impossible, started to tow it back. The Frenchmen were not satisfied to escape with their lives and leave their car behind. Mlle. Duclos after running back a short distance found a road that would lead them to the one that the Germans would follow on their way back.

The French officer in charge of the party insisted on taking the steering wheel of the car, but Mlle. Duclos demonstrated that she was the only one who could get the best speed out of her car. Thus she forced them to let her stay in the place of danger. Behind a pile of rocks that marked the meeting of the roads they lay in wait for the returning Germans.

Up the road came the Germans jogging at a rope that drew the great disabled French armored car. There were about forty of them, practically half a company, minus the men who had already fallen in the fight.

Wholesale Annihilation

Mlle. Duclos immediately suggested that she should drive the car straight down on the unsuspecting Germans. Her opportunity for a great action had come. She seized it. Down hill upon the toiling Germans flew the great 60-horsepower car. Straight as an arrow it went, with the weight of its two tons multiplied a hundred times by its speed and downward course. All the Germans in its full path went down like ripe corn before the scythe. Straight it flew on without being swerved in the slightest degree by the human obstacles in its way.

"I felt like the very incarnation of the spirit of destruction and revenge," says Mlle. Duclos, describing this wild scene. "I was not human." The car flew on its path of death until it reached the captured French armored car, Mlle. Duclos missed this by an incalculable fraction of an inch and then slowly brought her racing car to a stop. So it was that Mlle. Duclos at the wheel of her own car led the glorious wreck back in triumph.

BRONCHITIS
COMES FROM A NEGLECTED COLD.

Bronchitis starts with a short, painful, dry cough, accompanied with rapid wheezing, and a feeling of oppression or tightness through the chest. At first the expectoration is a light color but as the trouble progresses the phlegm arising from the bronchial tubes becomes of a yellowish or greenish color, and is very often of a stringy nature.

Bronchitis is usually at its worst in the morning on account of the phlegm becoming lodged in the bronchial tubes during the night, and it very often takes some time coughing and gagging before you can get the throat clear of the phlegm.

When this happens you may be sure that if the bronchitis is not attended to immediately it will sooner or later develop into pneumonia, or some other more serious lung trouble.

The best remedy for to cure the cold is DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP.

Mrs. Roy Comer, Greenwood, Ont., writes: "I must tell you what Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup did for me. Whenever I got a cold I would be troubled with bronchitis, and sometimes I would almost choke to death. After taking two bottles of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup I was cured."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is 25c and 50c. per bottle. See that you get the genuine.

BRITISH TO THE END

Private W. Lonsdale, the English stretcher man who is a prisoner of war in Germany and whose death sentence (afterwards commuted to twenty years' penal servitude) recently aroused great indignation in the old country, writes bitterly about the treatment meted out to him. He is now in the fortress prison of Spandau, and, though in good health, is feeling the full rigor of German "discipline."

In one letter to his wife he says: "The captain came to see me yesterday and gave me some English magazines. The only time I have for reading is on a Sunday. During the week it is all work and sleep, and not a large amount of the latter.

Pleased to hear that —— (someone at the front) is still alive and well. You can tell him that I don't fancy being a prisoner of war; and also tell him that, if he is so pleased that he is likely to be taken prisoner, he had better put a bullet through his brain. Death is far preferable to what I have already gone through. In my time—were to come over again, I should never be a prisoner of war. I would be with my comrades on the pit hills in Flanders. They have tried several ways to kill me. Now they are trying to starve me because I am English. I only get half as much to eat as the German prisoners. This is not the Salvation Hotel; it is the Starvation Hell."

In another letter he urges his wife not to worry about him, as he is quite well. "So cheer up," he adds, "keep up a good old British heart the same as I am doing, and all will come well in the end. Remember: Once British always British. That is a good motto, and it takes a lot to break the heart of a true Britisher."

"Ye think a fine lot of Shakespeare?"

"I do, sir," was the reply.

"An' ye think he was mair clever than Rabbie Burns?"

"Why, there's no comparison between them."

"Maybe, no; but ye tell us it was Shakespeare who wrote, 'Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown.' Now Rabbie would never hae written sic nonsense as that.'

"Nonsense, sir!" thundered the other.

"Aye, just nonsense. Rabbie would hae kent fine that a king or queen either disna gang to bed wi' the croon on their head. He'd hang kent they hang it ower the back o' the chair."

Don't Merely "Stop" a Cough

Stop the Thing that Causes It and the Cough will Stop Itself

A cough is really one of our best friends. It warns us that there is inflammation or obstruction in a dangerous place. Therefore, when you get a bad cough don't proceed to dose yourself with a lot of drugs that merely "stop" the cough, temporarily by deadening the throat nerves. Treat the cause—heal the inflamed membranes. Here is a home-made remedy that goes right at the cause and will make an obstinate cough vanish more quickly than you ever thought possible.

Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) in a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. This gives you 16 ounces of the most pleasant and effective remedy you ever used, at a cost of only 54 cents. No trouble to prepare. Full directions with Pinex.

It heals the inflamed membranes promptly and promptly that you wonder how it does it. Also loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough and stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol, and is famous the world over for its healing effect on the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

THE TOWER OF SKULLS

Ancient City of Nish Has Remarkable Memorial Erected in It

There have been many tragic episodes in the history of Nish, the capital of Serbia. In the eighteenth century the Turks captured the city, and for 200 years it remained in their possession, although there were brief periods when the Austrians held it. Then, in 1809, the Serbians, who had recovered most of their country from the Turks, besieged Nish, but were defeated with great loss. The Turks, to celebrate their victory, erected a rough tower, composed alternately of layers of rock and skulls of Serbians cemented together.

It is related that there were originally 1,200 skulls in the Tower of Nish. For a long period it was the habit of travellers to Nish to carry off a skull as a souvenir, and this reduced their numbers. But in the Russo-Turkish War the Serbian army under the command of King Milan besieged Nish, and the fortress fell on January 10th, 1878.

The remaining skulls were then reverently buried by the Serbian troops except one, which was too deeply embedded in the plaster to be extracted. The so-called "Tower of Skulls" is now only about four feet in height, and only one skull can be seen to remind the traveller of its gloomy history.

SUDDEN DEATH

It will be recalled that on the morrow of the Battle of the Marne returned combatants related strange stories of the aspect of certain German unwounded corpses. Death had been so instantaneous that the bodies remained in a life like posture, some shouldering a rifle, others pipe in mouth. In a communication made to the Academy of Medicine, M. Rene Arnoux asserts that the phenomena were due to the efficacy of the French explosives. Within a fifteen yards' radius of the point where the shell explodes the displacement of the air is so intense as to destroy the equilibrium of pressure on the interior and exterior of the human body. The gas contained in the blood is thus liberated, causes a distension of the blood-vessels and arteries, and, ultimately bursting these organs, induces sudden death. This argument is confirmed by the state of the bodies, which often showed the heart and liver greatly distended and numerous internal hemorrhages.

REVIEW OF THE MARKET PRICES

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs will appear in Canadian Grocer this week:—

Office of Publication,
Toronto, Dec. 8th, 1915.

Shelled walnuts are up this week, Montreal reporting an advance of at least 8c, and Toronto anything from 3c to 4c. There is a big Christmas demand for all kinds of nuts, and walnuts in particular. Stocks are not at all high, neither public nor trade to pay more for the Christmas dessert as well as its Christmas pudding. There was an embargo placed on nuts, with other foodstuffs exported from France, but the importers got together in New York and put up a protest and the embargo was removed. Nevertheless, for the time it was serious, and heavy buying was the result. The situation in nuts has been further troubled by the fact that freights are very scarce between Italy and France and America and supplies in both America and Canada are comparatively small. Our readers will remember the tie-up that there was in nuts this time last year; many retailers only just got their supplies in time for Christmas selling. Taking the place in that serious situation this year is currants.

Nevertheless, there are some currants on hand, although stocks are low. The situation gets firmer and tighter every day and we should not be surprised to see further advances before Christmas. There is too, a speculative element in the buying of currants.

It is predicted that in the near future we shall see still higher levels on flour if the present state of affairs continues. Lexels on both Manitoba and Ontario winter wheat flour were advanced this week materially. With the wheat market soaring—as has been the case during last three or four days—anything may happen to flour. The Government's action in commandeering such wheat as they did, so far from preventing a tightening in the market—which was their supposed goal—actually enhanced values. There are some millers who question whether it would not have been better for the Government to have gone to the open market and bought up what stuff they wanted.

At any rate it is presumed that this is the influence which has set the wheat market both in Winnipeg and Chicago soaring, and result is advances in all grain levels in which flour and oats participate—rolled oats are firm and may be higher next week.

The sugar situation is by no means anything to crow over even yet, although there is no advance this week. The cardinal fact remains, that there is a great shortage of raws. We are in a unique position in Canada with regard to sugar at present. Spot and nearby shipments are almost nil. This is usually a quiet time in the sugar market, and if this is the case this year it will give the new Cuban crop a chance. Meanwhile, price will not be advanced exorbitantly. If, however, the trade is filled up for its requirements and starts in to buy sugar with the present condition of raws, it will probably keep fairly high.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

MISS' COAT SUIT.

By Anabel Worthington.

The coat suit will never go out of style and there are mild days even in the heart of winter when it is quite warm enough.

The model shown has French darts which join the side bodies to front and back. The closing is at the side of the front and leaves the neck high, with a turnover collar. This adjustment may be altered and an open neck with the usual turnover collar and revers substituted, as the pattern provides for both styles. The sleeve is entirely plain, without fulness and without a cuff. The lower edge of the coat comes well below the hips.

The skirt is plain and has two gores. These are given only a slightly circular cut and measure 2¼ yards at the hem in the medium size.

No material is handsomer for a coat suit than broadcloth and this is much worn at present. Poplin, gabardine, velveteen, &c., are also used and fur is liked as a trimming. It may edge collar, cuffs and the hem of the skirt.

The suit pattern, No. 7,440, is cut in sizes 14, 16, 18 and 20 years. Medium size requires 4⅝ yards of 44 inch material, with ¼ yard of 18 inch velvet for collar.

This pattern can be obtained by sending ... to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 3 for 25c.

WHERE HOME OF WAR'S CHEMICAL SUPPLIES

The Little Lancashire Town Known as the "Place of Smells" Practically Supplies World With Chemicals

People in England who have only passed through by train on a journey elsewhere are wont to grimace on hearing the name of Widnes. "Oh, yes," they say, "the town of the horrible smells." And to some extent they are right, for it is a place of evil odors. In wet weather films of iridescent color lie on pavement and roadway; a stranger would wonder but the intelligent resident questioned matters "sulphuretted hydrogen" and curiously ever notices it. Now and again when the atmosphere is heavy and humid, a thick cloud of vapor spreads abroad, and the stench is a thing to have for the basis of a nightmare. But inquirers from all over the world come to Widnes to learn of the mysteries wrought there. There, on some of the plant, the men must work with a thick coating of grease all over the face to prevent the skin from being injured. In other departments they wear masks with glass eyepieces.

Chemicals Ruin the Clothes

The Widnes housewife knows to her sorrow how destructive are some of the materials dealt with. You will see the laboring man trudge through the streets, flannel his jacket and trousers, riddled with holes. Holes which it would be futile to attempt to mend. The towel on which he dries himself, the sheets wherein he sleeps, all share a like fate. In some cases it is necessary to have a complete bath before leaving his task, and rows upon rows of them are fitted up for this special purpose. Boots upon which some of the stuffs fall would be found rotted through by morning. The chemical worker obviates this by wearing clogs. Here they make all kinds of medical requirements, antiseptics, oxygen, and the like. Since the outbreak of war, women have been admitted; a good number of them now go daily to "do their bit." Every precaution is taken to avoid accidents—but sometimes, for all the care, terrible things happen. A grain of TNT dust on a machine which had been idle for a few days was the cause of a fearful explosion some time ago, resulting in the loss of nine or ten lives. A moment's carelessness would be paid for very dearly.

"Cold With Sweat"

Some time ago a Widnes workman was dealing with a large bulk of nitre cake; a funnel which is part of the plant, has to kept full of oil. It occurred to him that he would try glycerine instead of castor oil. But with the large carboy in his hands, a thought suddenly stopped him, turning the blood in his veins to ice.

Glycerine—and that stuff lying there. "Why, good Heavens! the combination would be nitro-glycerin—cold enough to blow the town to pieces."

Said he, "I was cold with sweat." It is a pretty sight when they break up a large bulk of common washing soda; hundreds of miles are about to pass through and they gleam and glisten in the sun like so many icebergs. Along one portion of the river-bank you would think you had suddenly stepped into the Arctic regions, for a fine white powder has like a light fall of snow over everything.

ON THE OTHER FOOT

Arnold Bennet Suggests Germany as a Good Place For Pessimists

The dismal and gloomy pessimists, who, like the Fat Boy, are always trying to make our flesh creep with stories of Britain's mismanagement of this war, her unpreparedness, and lack of decisive victories, while landing to the skies what they consider big achievements on the part of the Germans, might, with considerable profit, employ some of their time reading, marking learning, and inwardly digesting the pregnant remarks of Mr. Arnold Bennett. "I can imagine," says this eminent writer, in an article published in the London "Daily News," "the wailing of some of our leading pessimists if they could be turned over to Germany and transformed into Germans. They would say: 'We have failed everywhere. We spent five thousand millions of marks on a fleet, and it is a complete failure. We had everything in our favor for the capture of Paris and we failed to capture it. We tried under similar favorable conditions to get to Calais and we failed there. We tried to put the Russian armies out of action and failed there.

"'We tried to destroy British maritime trade by submarines and we failed there. It is our submarines which are destroyed. We tried to divide the allies and we failed there. We tried to keep Italy neutral and we failed there. We had a great advantage in numbers; we have lost it. We had a great advantage in munitions; we have lost it. We have also lost all our colonies except one. Our new allies are tenth-rate nations and notoriously villainous. We are borrowing vast sums of money without attempting even to pay the interest on it. We have not the pluck to tax ourselves.

"'Our food prices have risen by a higher percentage than any others in the world. Our social organization is such that women have to stand outside butchers' shops all night in order to obtain a bit of meat, and often they have to stand several nights in succession before they can reach the counter. . . . Why is Britain throttling us? Because Britain has steadily organized herself, whereas we are steadily being disorganized. Let us Face the Facts!'"

Homesteads in Serbia

In Serbia the land belongs to the people, and every grown man has a claim to five acres, which he can neither sell nor have taken from him. His land and its produce are exempt from all claims for debt. Thus the poorest man in Serbia has always five acres to his credit.

Four out of the last nine Czars of Russia have been assassinated.

HAD WEAK HEART HAD TO STAY IN BED

Many women are kept in a state of fear of death, become weak, worn and miserable, and are unable to attend to their household, social or business duties, on account of the unnatural action of the heart.

To all such sufferers Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will give prompt and permanent relief. They do this by their calming, strengthening and invigorating action on the heart causing it to beat regularly and naturally, and in addition to this they tone up the whole nerve system.

Mrs. J. Day, 234 John St. South, Hamilton, Ont., writes: "I was so run down with a weak heart that I could not even sweep the floor, nor could I sleep at night. I was so awfully sick sometimes I had to stay in bed all day as I was so weak. I used three and a half boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I am a cured woman to-day, and as strong as anyone could be, and am doing my own housework, even my own washing.

"I doctored for over two years, but got no help until I used your pills."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box. 3 boxes for $1.25. They can be had at all druggists or dealers, or will be mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

LOCAL WEEKLY MARKET REPORT

A General Advance in Staple Lines—North-west Potatoes Arrive in Ontario—Cheese Likely to Climb Upward —Christmas Fowl Will Be a Luxury.

Market Features.

Turkeys—Up to 23 cents a pound.
Buckwheat—Advanced 10 cents.
Flour—Goes up 15 cents a hundred
Pork—By the quarter moves up one cent.
Hogs—Move up 50 cents a hundred.

Dairy and Poultry.

Butter, daily, lb.	30c
Butter, creamery	35c
Eggs, new laid, doz.	38 to 40c
Cheese, lb.	23c.
Cream, qt.	40c
Turkeys, lb.	23c
Geese	15c
Ducks	15c
Chickens	15 to 18c

The butter market remains unchanged. Toronto wholesalers report an increased supply of farmers' butter coming forward due, no doubt, to the closing of the cheese factories, which liberate large quantities of milk.

Neither is there much change in the egg situation. It is expected, however, that there will shortly be a general resumption of work on the part of the hens. Reports from New York indicate that Humpty Dumpty has taken his fall, having declined 11 cents in one week.

Cheese on the outside markets is going up. Britain's armies must be fed, and ther is nothing "Tommy" likes better than a hunk of cheese. If it is true that New Zealand has commandeered the whole output of the coming season's cheese, it would mean that a large portion of the imported cheese would be diverted from the regular English trade for army purposes, and, consequently, as long as the war lasts, lower prices could hardly be expected for Canadian cheese.

Grains, Hay.

Wheat, bush	$1.00
Oats	37c
Barley	60c.
Peas	$2.00
Buckwheat	70c.
Rye	75c.
Shorts, ton	$24.00
Bran, ton	$22.00
Flour, cwt.	$3.35
Baled hay, ton	$20 to $22
Loose hay	$19.00 to $20.00

Winnipeg's No. 1 Northern wheat was 8 cents higher this week, selling at $1.12¼ per bushel. Evidently the Government's seizure of wheat has directed attention to the immense wheat crop and created the impression that it offers a good field for speculation. Whether the stimulated trading will be a permanent effect, and keep prices up, remains to be seen. The action of the Government in commandeering the wheat seems to have had a two-fold purpose, first to prevent undue profits from speculation, and to bring pressure on the Northwest farmer to market his grain, instead of holding it for fancy prices.

Regarding peas: If there were as many saloons in Ontario as there are peas offering in Toronto, Billy Sunday would not lose any sleep over the Demon Rum in this Province.

The pea prices in Toronto are from 35 to 50 cents above this date last year:

Seed Grain.

Red clover, cwt.	$27.00
Alsike, cwt.	$25.00
Alfalfa, cwt.	$27.00
Timothy, cwt.	$12.00

Red clover seed is showing a tendency to advance; it will likely follow the firmness of the United States market, where it has gone up from 30 to 50 cents a bushel on some grades.

Fruits and Vegetables.

Apples per bag	$1.25
Apples, per bbl.	$4 to $6
Potatoes per bag	$1.60
Onions, bag	$1.25
Onions, white pickling, qt.	15c.
White beans, lb.	15c.
Carrots, peck	15c
Turnips	15c
Parsnips	15c
Beets	15c
Celery, head	10c.
Cabbage	5c.
Turnips, bag	25c.
Cabbage, doz.	40c

Alberta potatoes were creating a distinct sensation on the Toronto market this week. The tubers were fine big ones, with a smooth skin and shallow eyes, large and dry suitable for boiling or roasting. They came all the way from Medicine Hat and sold from 10 cents less than those from New Brunswick. Wholesale prices were from $1.40 to $1.80 cents a bag.

Meats and Hogs.

Bacon, per lb.	28c. to 30c.
Ham	30
Cooked hams	35c
Pork	14c to 16c
Spare ribs	10c.
Tenderloin	28c
Lamb	15c to 17c
Veal	13c. to 20c
Rib roast	18c
Sirloin steak	23c.
Round roast	22c
Mutton	13c
Small pigs, cwt.	$9.50
Live Hogs, cwt	$9.50

Wools and Hides.

Wool (no market).
Sheep skins, acre	1.25 to 1.50
Calf skins, lb.	14c. to 15c.
Beef skins	14c. to 16c
Tallow, rough	2c
Tallow, refined	5c. to 6c.

General.

No. 1 granulated sugar, cwt.	$7.25
Honey, lb.	15c
Shelled walnuts	60c
Currants	13c
Raisins	18c
Dripping	10c
Head cheese	8c.

Comparison in Prices

With this time the last two years:

Spy Traps Clog English Byways

Better Not Talk Aloud in You're Foreigner or Pro-German.

LONDON, Dec. 15.—Ther is little chance of a German spy remaining at liberty in England these days. There was a time when there was a great deal of spy activity, professional and amateur, but now the evil has been stamped out, or at least so the authorities believe.

It is accepted as an axiom here that every German or pro-German person is a potential spy and in a way the same thing can now be said of every Englishman.

It is unsafe these days for any one frankly to express his opinion, for everywhere there are ears to hear, and the slightest comment on the progress of events which is unfavorable to the British is more than likely to reach Scotland Yard, where the already efficient staff of detectives has been augmented so that all "tips," no matter how trivial they may appear on the surface, are thoroughly investigated.

Espionage on Foreigners.

It is particularly undesirable for a foreigner to permit himself to say anything derogatory of England or the allies or anything favorable about the Germans. Americans, who are easily spotted by their accent, are marks of suspicion, for the people here are now thoroughly familiar with the "hyphenated" American.

An Englishman may say dreadful things about his government, about cabinet ministers the situation in the Dardanelles, and so on, and nothing may happen, but for an American or other neutral foreigner to express similar opinions is, to say the least, injudicious.

Recently there moved into a small town adjacent to London an American family of a semi-German name. The man of the family was American to the core, ardently pro-ally in his sympathies, and a long resident of England. But unquestionably his name had a German ring.

Tradesmen Suspicious.

No sooner had he settled down than he had a visit from the police. He explained his status to them quite satisfactorily, showing his passport, and has had no further trouble in that quarter.

But his wife is having difficulties. She went to the butcher to open an account and was received with considerable suspicion. It was with some difficulty, and only after she had been identified by other customers of this seller of meat, that she made arrangements for providing her family with food.

At other shops she encountered similar difficulties. The baker asked her quite frankly if she were German, with an air that indicated that if she were she would have to go elsewhere for her bread.

QUIT MEAT WHEN KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a Glass of Salts if Your Back Hurts or Bladder Troubles You

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well known authority. Meat forms uric acid which excites the kidneys, they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

Enemy Threat Against Egypt Is Becoming More Serious

Ottoman Troops Numbering 300,000 Are Being Concentrated on the Railway Lines and Long Water Viaducts Are Being Rushed---Turko-Germans Hope to Induce Algerians and Abyssians to Also Attack Egypt---Italian Expeditionary Force is Safely Transported to Albania.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

ROME, Dec. 16.—The Turko-German threat against Egypt is becoming more grave daily in the belief of military men here. About 300,000 Ottoman troops, commanded and drilled by German officers, already have been concentrated on the railway lines and long water viaducts are being rushed.

Turko-German emissaries are said to be urging the Algerians to attack Egypt from the west, while an attempt also is being made to induce the Abyssinians to march into Egypt..

A Rome newspaper asks if, after the lesson of the Balkans, the Entente Powers are going to allow themselves to be taken by surprise in Egypt.

ROME, via Paris, Dec. 16.—Operations for the transportation of a large Italian army to Albania, requiring an important traffic with large ships, have been carried out successfully, notwithstanding traps set by Italy's opponents, it is stated. Convoys of men and materials escorted by warships are said to have reached, without hindrance, ports where landings had been ordered. It is known that an expedition landed in Albania without suffering any loss in crossing the Adriatic, which is considered by naval experts as brillant achievements for the Italian fleet.

SALONIKA, Dec. 16.—The bloodiest struggles of France and Flanders did not eclipse the slaughter in Southern Serbia when the Bulgarians delivered a fierce attack on that portion of the Front, British officers reaching here from the Front declared to-day.

The Bulgars massed in seven dense waves on a 200-metre front on one section, said one officer. "On the first day they swept us back. On the second day the French brought up a lot of murderous 75's. They cut down the advancing Bulgarian lines like scythes.

SALONIKA, Dec. 16.—A million Serbian girls and women are facing intense suffering and possible death through the lack of food and clothng, or worse fate at the hands of roving bands of Comitadjis. The well-clothed and well-fed soldiers of the Allies suffered intensely from the cold in Southern Serbia. What is happening to the girls and women left by the retreating Serbian army, the world can only guess. The Serbian Government ordered all men and boys to leave the villages and join the army in retreat through the Albanian mountains. Coincidentally the women and girls were ordered to remain and care for the villages. In other countries the women said good-bye to their men and saw them go to war. But these Serbian heroines said good-bys to their men and then waited for war to come to them, with all its horrors and outrages. It is not refugees who fled to the snows of the Albanian mountains who are sucering most. It is the helpless women and girls in the manless homes of Serbia. Lacking food and proper clothing, they are at the mercy of the winter. Lacking protection in the little villages and country districts, they may become the prey of the Balkan guerillas.

BERLIN, Dec. 16. — Aerial battles along the entire western front are reported to-day. Lieut. Immelman, in an air flight over Valenciennes, shot down a British monoplane. This is the seventh British monoplane conquered by Immelman, said the War Office. The War Office reported artillery duels at various points and said that near Vailly two small German posts on the south bank of the Aisne were attacked by surprise by the French. On the Russian front, Hindenburg's troops drove back by counter-attacks, a Russian force that advanced into German positions in the Riga district.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 16.—The Government to-day officially announced an embargo on hay, as prophesied in this morning's papers. It goes into effect immediately and that means until it is lifted, no hay will be allowed to be exported across the border.

GREATEST PROBLEM OF CANADA IS TO ESTABLISH CREDIT

Must Relieve Great Britain of the Necessity of Shipping Gold Here in Payment for War Supplies

MR. WHITE'S MESSAGE

Examiner Special:

TORONTO, Dec. 16.—The greatest financial problem facing Canada to-day as an outcome of the war is the establishment of some form of Canadian credit which will relieve Great Britain of the necessity of shipping gold to this country in payment for war supplies, and the question as to whether or not Canada can give this assistance to the Empire will have direct bearing in the placing of further war orders. Such was the message delivered to-day to members of the Board of Trade by Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance, who said as well that the time has now come for Canada to finance future war orders.

Three to Five Inches of Ice on Rice Lake Now

Mr. N. C. Merriam of Harwood, was in the city to-day, having crossed Rice Lake in his cutter from Harwood so Hiawatha, and is the first person known to have crossed the lake this winter. He reports that the ice is from three to five inches thick, and that winter has arrived in earnest around the lake.

One of the Reasons Why Some Citizens Refuse Municipal Honours

The fact that during the past few years Council duties require two and three nights a week throughout the greater part of the year appears to be one of the objections citizens raise when they decline to present themselves for municipal honours. Men of undoubted capability assert that their time is too limited to waste in what they regard useless debates over many minor matters that should be handled with dispatch. Home when they conclude that there is a great waste of time in the transaction of civic business they have no desire to be involved in the tedium which seems to be necessary to produce results in the administration of civic affairs.

SPLENDID CHRISTMAS BOX FOR LT.-COL. MILLS A STAFF APPOINTMENT

Peterborough Officer Offered the Position of Inspector of Supplies and Transport for No. 2 (Toronto) Divisional Area Which He Has Decided to Accept---Battalion Sergt.-Major T. Miller Honoured by Promotion to Warrant Officer's Rank---Guards For Munition Factories---To-day's Military News.

Lt.-Col. Mills of the 57th Regiment, and formerly quartermaster of the 2nd Battalion, C.E.F., who was brought home from the front to take command of the 93rd Battalion, found a splendid Christmas box awaiting him when he was summoned to Ottawa yesterday. Lt.-Col. Mills was offered a most important staff position, that of Inspector of Supplies and Transport for No. 2 (Toronto) divisional area, the biggest and most important division in Canada. The promotion is a recognition of Lt.-Col. Mills' services with the 2nd Battalion, and of the experience he has gained on the western battle front, and his many friends in Peterborough and in the third divisional area, will congratulate him upon the appointment, which he has decided to accept. His acceptance will of course, entail his resignation from the command of the 93rd Battalion, and while nothing official has yet been received, it is expected that Lt.-Col. Johnston, who was acting commanding officer of the 93rd from its inception, will succeed Lt.-Col. Mills as commanding officer of the Peterborough City and County Battalion.

Lt.-Col. Mills' appointment will, it is expected, take effect almost immediately. Although his headquarters will be in Toronto, he will continue to make Peterborough his home.

TO-DAY'S ORDERS.

The following Battalion orders by Lieut.Colonel J. Mills, Officer Commanding 93rd Overseas Battalion, C. E.F., were read to-day:

Headquarters,
Peterborough, Ont., Dec. 16th, 1915.

Wilson, and Col. H. M. Elliott.

The folllowing promotions in rank have been gazetted:

To be brevet-colonels, Lt.-Col. (temporary), F. S. Meighen, Lt.-Col. H. E. Burstall, C.B., Lt.-Col. R. G. E. Lockie, C.M.G., Lt.-Col. D. Watson, Lt.-Col. E. W. B. Morrison, D.S.O., Lt.-Col. Garnet Hughes, D.S.O., Lt.-Col. F. O. Sissons, R. C., Lt.-Col. H. C. Thacker, Captain and Brevet Lt.-Col. C. J. Armstrong, Major (and Temporary Lieutenant), H. D. B. Ketchen, Lt.-Col. G. S. Maunsell, D. G. E. S., Lt.-Col. J. F. MacDonald, Lt.-Col. R. J. Gwynne, Lt.-Col. C. F. Winter, military secretary, Lt.-Col. E. A. Helmer, director of musketry.

To be colonels: Lt.-Col. H. M. Elliott, Lt.-Col. Hon. Sir J. S. Hendrie, Lt.-Col O. S. Newburn.

To be honorary colonels: Lt.-Col. E. A. Thompson, and Lt.-Col. A. A. Gooderham.

At yesterday afternoon's parade of the 93rd Battalion the announcement was made that Battalion Sergt-Major T. Miller had been promoted to the rank of warrant officer in the Canadian Expeditionary Force, a deserved promotion upon which Sergt.-Major Miller will be warmly congratulated by the members of the battalion as well as by the citizens generally. The promotion is a distinction to the battalion as well as an honour to Sergt.-Major Miller and is a reward for his long and honourable service as well as for his good work here. In announcing the promotion to the battalion yesterday Major R. P. Watt said that every member of the 93rd would be glad to learn of the promotion which he remarked Sergt-Major Miller richly deserved. Sergt.-Major Miller will of course remain as battalion sergeant-major.

An interesting event took place at the supper hour at the armouries yesterday when Pte. A. Thomas of No. 5 platoon, B company, who recently joined the ranks of the benedicts, was presented with a handsome tea service by his comrades in the platoon. The presentation was made by Platoon Sergt. W. Jones on behalf of No. 5 and Pte. Thomas expressed his thanks to his fellow soldiers for their kindness.

Citizens who have magazines for which they have no use, are advised that a plentiful supply is needed for the 93rd Battalion recreation room at the armouries and they will be gratefully received by the committee in charge.

Ptes. Woods and McFaul have been transferred to the 93rd Battalion signaller's section.

Bandmaster Walter Hughes of the 93rd Band, who was ill yesterday, was able to report for duty this morning.

It was khaki night at Brock street rink last night, a large number of the men of the 93rd Battalion being represented in the crowd that greeted the opening of the indoor skating season. Even Sergt.-Major Miller celebrated his promotion to the rank of warrant officer by dawning the steel blades.

The 93rd Battalion hockey team will practice to-night at 7 o'clock at Brock street rink. Every officer, non-com and man who wants to try for a place on the team is invited out. The soldier

A Distressing Story of Poverty In London, Ont.

Special to the Examiner

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 16. — Mrs. Mary Williamson, aged thirty, found to-day with her new-born babe half starved and nearly frozen in a room in a tenement house, and died soon after being taken to the hospital. The baby died also. Three other small children were taken to the Children's Shelter. The room was in an indescribably filthy condition. The woman's husband left to enlist with the battery now training for overseas service at Guelph. A full investigation is ordered.

GEN. ELECTRIC HEAD HOME FROM ABROAD

Mr. Frederick Nicholls Says Britain is Expecting Much of Canada Just Now

Mr. Frederick Nicholls, President of the Canadian General Electric Co and acting President of the Dominion Iron and Steel Co., who has just returned from England, said that it was confidently expected in Britain that Canada would mobilize its finances as it had mobilized its young men to help Britain in standing the strain to which she is at present subjected.

"If, say no less a sum than $500,000,000 has been expended in Canada in the purchase of war materials," said Mr. Nicholls, "and that even only 25 per cent. of this amount has been paid in British Treasury notes or Exchequer bonds, it would have been equivalent to a loan of $125,000,000 to the Empire in her hour of need and at the same time such securities with the credit of the whole British Empire behind them, would have either been readily absorbed by investors, or in the meantime could have been used as gilt-edged collateral."

SIR JOHN A VISCOUNT

LONDON, Dec. 16.—Field Marshal Sir John French, who at his own request has been relieved of the command of the British forces in France and Flanders, has been succeeded by Gen. Sir Douglas Haig. Since the landing of the expeditionary force Sir Douglas Haig has commanded the first army, and has been repeatedly mentioned in despatches by his chief, whose place he now takes.

Sir John French becomes Commander-in-Chief of the armies in the United Kingdom, and for his sixteen months' service at the front has been created Viscount of the United Kingdom.

The Official Statement.

The following announcement was made to-day by the Official Press Bureau:

"The War Office announces that Gen Sir Douglas Haig has been appointed to succeed Field Marshal Sir John French in command of the army in France and Flanders.

"Since the commencement of the war, during over 16 months of severe and incessant strain, Field Marshal Sir John French has most ably commanded our armies in France and Flanders, and has now at his own instance relinquished that command.

"His Majesty's Government, with full appreciation of and gratitude for the conspicuous services which Sir John French has rendered the country at the front, have, with the King's approval, requested him to accept appointment as Field Marshal, Commander-in-Chief of the troops stationed in the United Kingdom. Sir John French accepted that appointment.

"His Majesty the King has been pleased to confer upon Sir John French the dignity of a Viscount of the United Kingdom."

That there might be a change in the supreme British command on the western front has been hinted for some time. These hints increased with the recent appointment of Gen. Joffre as Commander-in-Chief of the French army.

That the elevation of Gen. Joffre had no bearing on the substitution of Gen. Haig for Field Marshal French, however, was announced today in the House of Commons by Premier Asquith. He brought up the matter by saying:

"Some changes are in the course of being made, and will be announced almost immediately. They have no connection of any kind with the changes made by the French Government with regard to Gen. Joffre's functions."

Means Clean Sweep.

The change in command is interpreted as the culmination of the long-existing differences between Sir John French and Lord Kitchener. These differences have been common talk for months, and the dissatisfaction of the War Secretary with the conduct of the operations of the British army in Flanders has been an open secret.

The removal of Sir John French, following so closely on the announcement that Gen. Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien, who formerly commanded an army corps in France and then dropped out of the public sight, has been sent to command the forces in British East Africa, is taken to indicate a decision on the part of the Government to make a clean sweep of the higher command in France. Lord Kitchener's victory in the controversy is now regarded as complete.

Although many names had been mentioned as the possible successor of Field Marshal French, including that of the Duke of Connaught, the appointment, it is said, was anticipated in the best informed circles.

Sir Douglas Haig is nine years younger than his former chief, and like him, won his spurs as a cavalry officer. His first commission was in the 7th Hussars, and, as has been the case with most British officers of higher rank, he saw service in the Soudan, India and Africa. He was chief staff officer to Sir John French during the Colesburg operations, when the British cavalry had a difficult task in trying to round up the mobile Boer command of a group of columns, and, after the South African War, was made inspector-general of cavalry in India, one of the most coveted commands for cavalry officers in the British service.

THE TEMPERANCE WAVE.

We see in paragraphs and in news despatches that "temperance waves" are from time to time sweeping over different parts and provinces of the country, and we see that even dried fish-thirsty Newfoundland has been swept by a tidal wave of temperance. It would be a blessed thing if the wave swept over the country abundantly enough to dilute all the whisky, of, the country to innocuous weakness. It is a little remarkable that the assumed older centres of culture, morality and high living are, in this regard, behind the newer and outlying parts of the country. Ontario, with a century of culture, education and moral influence, sees and permits herself to be surpassed by communities that carparatively are of yesterday. Alberta has voted by a ratio of 60 to 40 for prohibition of the liquor traffic. Saskatchewan took a strong step in temperance advance; but the restriction of the traffic to government supervision is not enough. At the municipal elections the ratepayers are declaring against the government liquor stores and pronouncing in favour of absolute prohibition of the traffic. So strong is the prohibition sentiment that in some districts the vote was unanimous against strong drink. A good deal of this result is due to the admission of women to the franchise. They bring an uncorrupted and uncorruptable vote to the polls. They are the chief sufferers from the curse of strong drink, and have no patience with a legalised evil, that ruins their lives and homes. Extending the vote to women is one of the strongest aids to temperance progress, and to moral reform and municipal reform, that can be introduced. In Edmonton, where women voted this year the first time, their vote destroyed the "ring" that has controlled and bedevilled the government of the city for years. Votes for women on an equality with men, are abundantly justified. There has been proof that they will as a rule vote on the side of right, and against crookedness, and that moral reform will have their almost undivided support. This is one reason why certain interests fight so bitterly against the enfranchisement of women. Their vote would endanger the special privileges of wrong-doing these interests enjoy with the help of the electors composed exclusively of men.

THE NATIONAL POLICY IN WAR TIME.

Sir Sam Hughes made public last night some interesting and as yet unwritten history of Canada. He told the Liberal-Conservative Association of Ward Four that a year ago he could only find four manufacturers in Canada who would even consider taking over an order from the British Government for 20,000 shells. General Hughes had been commissioned to place the order in the United States, but he wisely determined to create, if possible, a new industry in this country. As usual he had his way, with the result that 4,000,000 shells made in Canada have already been delivered and we now have 321 factories in Canada manufacturing war munitions and employing 100,000 skilled mechanics. These factories will receive $350,000,000 from orders already available.

One objection manufacturers made a year or more ago rested upon the alleged lack of raw material. Since then Canadian steel has been utilised successfully as well as Canadian lead, copper and zinc. We are now refining our own copper and zinc.

At the conclusion of the war we will be equipped for many new industries, and have mobilised a magnificent army of skilled workmen. Thus the national policy is again vindicated. This was the keynote of the general's speech, which well merited the enthusiasm it created. —Toronto World.

The World is welcome to all the credit it can claim for the "national policy." As the national policy has been generally understood it has been the protection of Canadian industries against competition, and thus encouraging enterprise. But the true national policy is to teach our people to have faith in themselves and their resources; in their own skill and capabilities. If after nearly forty years of a "national policy" of paternalism and commercial coddling Canadian manufacturers confess inability to make war munitions on account of "lack of raw material" there is something else lacking. The political authors of the "national policy" are, in a way, responsible for this. When the question of a Canadian navy confronted our rulers, the Liberal party under Sir Wilfrid Laurier declared in favour of a Canadian-built navy, one great result of which would have been a development of our iron and steel resources that would have deprived the manufacturers of to-day of an excuse for inability to make shells on the ground of "the lack of raw material." In 1908 Sir Robert Borden was eloquent as he can be on occasion, in favour of a Canadian-built navy in the interest of the development of Canada's industrial capacity, and of our raw resources. He advocated a navy made in Canada, "built of our own material, with our own men, of our own skill." When he got the power to put this splendid ideal into practice, he abandoned it, for reasons that have not yet had any explanation, that would not discredit his patriotism and faith in Canada's capability of achievement.

Now circumstances have forced upon Canada a new responsibility, and it is a pride that Canada has risen nobly to the occasion in all ways though the development of her industrial capacity has not been helped by the supply of war material being subjected to the influences of favouritism and opportunity for extravagant profit. The country whose chief ruler said only a few years ago she "couldn't build ships in fifty years," has accomplished something much greater and made more difficult from the previous unfaith in our capabilities and resources. We all rejoice that as the World says we have now 321 factories manufacturing munitions and employing 100,000 skilled workmen in filling war orders of the amount of 350 million dollars. We all rejoice that Canada is not only furnishing its own raw material for shells, steel and copper and zinc of Canadian refining, but competing successfully in the production of war supplies with the enterprise and skill of our neighbours. Canada will give a good account of herself if her rulers will only give her a chance and apply a national policy, not based on political crutches, but upon a robust confidence in ourselves, in our capacity to practically apply a national faith in our virtually inexhaustible raw resources.

HOW THE PRINCESS PATS GAVE THEIR GALLANT LIVES TO WIN UNENDING FAME

From Corporal William B. Kysh now discharged, comes a graphic story of the end of the Princess Pats told to a reporter of the New York Herald. The Princess Pats made their last stand against overwhelming odds in rolling waves of poison gas. Those who survived might almost be numbered on the fingers of both hands; but before the regiment was disbanded by Death it had set a record that is not surpassed by that of any regiment in military history; and that is not equalled probably by any other regiment that was got together, and that had so short a time to make its mark. Some have called the Princess Pats "the finest fighting force the world has seen." Certainly the world never saw any finer. Every man was a veteran, most of them veterans of South Africa, some from Egypt, some from the Spanish-American War. It is reported that when they were reviewed by Kitchener he remarked, after he saw the colours on the breast of every private: "Now I know where all my old fighters are."

At Ypres.

A year ago last September the regiment, 1,126 strong, left Quebec. It had its baptism of fire about the middle of December. It was practically ended early in May, and to-day has but eighteen unwounded survivors. It is true that the traditions of the regiment are still kept alive, but not by veterans of previous wars. The standard is upheld by boys who were mostly college students a few months ago. The Princess Pats had scarcely arrived at the front before they were ordered into the trenches, and their first spell was for 72 hours, while shells burst over them every minute. In this baptism of fire they lost a few men, among them Captain Newton. They rested 48 hours, and then went back to their trenches at Hill 60, not far from Ypres, where some of the most terrific fighting of the war has taken place. Enough lead has fallen about Hill 60 to make a bigger hill, but its possession was important to both sides, and so the Princess Pats had to hold it at all costs.

The First Charge.

It was not until toward the end of February that the Pats had the chance they had been waiting for—a chance at the Germans. For two days previous the artillery had hammered at the German trenches, and at last the signal was given for a charge at 4 o'clock in the morning. Says Corporal Kysh: "We scrambled over the trench and ran for the Germans sixty yards away. They swept us with machine guns and bored us with hand grenades. Big Jack Johnsons screamed from behind the lines at us, and over our heads went back our own artillery's answer. The Germans came up over the trenches to meet us, and we used the bayonet. We slipped and fell, rose and fell again, stabbing and cutting; there was no chance to shoot. Then the Germans gave way. They can't eat cold steel. They were piled up in the trenches, dead and dying, so thick it was untenable, and after a while we had to abandon the place we'd won and go back to our own trench."

Trenches Filled With Dead.

Corporal Kysh explains the military use of the word "untenable" as applied to trenches. For the Princess Pats it meant literally that there were so many dead Germans in the captured trenches that the stench was unendurable, and that the bodies filled the trench to that extent that it had ceased to be a trench or offer us cover. He describes the days of waiting, when wounded and slowly dying men lay a few yards from the trenches, but in a zone swept hourly by thousands of bullets. At midnight searchlights played over the field. There was no possibility of rescue. The Germans seemed not to care about their own, if only the British wounded could not be removed.

The Last of the Pats.

After months of this kind of fighting, in which millions of shells were used, the Germans brought their poison gas into play. In the words of Corporal Kysh:

"And this time we saw poison gas for the first time. It was the second assault, about 8 o'clock in the morning. We could see that something was coming off, and then suddenly there spouted up a thick, green cloud that hid everything in front of us. The fellows under the German piles wriggled harder than ever, and everybody in our trench asked "Well, what's comin' off, anyhow?' The wind was wrong for 'em, and the Germans went back, and there was quiet until 10 o'clock. This time their gas came in. It rolled along the ground like a moving wall about eight feet high. Behind it we knew the Germans were coming, but we couldn't see them, so we let fire through the cloud. The gas had holes blown in it, and the force of the bullets swayed it a bit, but before we knew it the gas was rolling in the trenches. I heard men cursing at one end of the trench, where the gas struck first, just as a shell buried me, and then I got the gas myself. I got it light, for I was half buried, but the fellows about me screamed and rolled up as if they were burned, cursing and praying. It caught you by the throat and burned its way into your lungs; then you couldn't breathe out, and you burst or slobbered. I crept back on my stomach, for I had a bit of shrapnel in my stomach and a bullet in my leg just as I saw the Germans dropping over the sandbags. The fellows who could stand knifed 'em with bayonets or bit and fought them. I saw four of my pals—right fellows they were—lying almost over each other, all of them with gas in them."

A HARD QUESTION.

A correspondent sends in a clipping of the two following paragraphs, quoted in The Examiner, two or three days ago, with the appended query:

"HERE, SOR."

In any battle in which a British army gains honour the Irish can be counted upon to be "among those present."—Mail and Empire.

ALWAYS "THERE."

The Connaught Rangers, Munsters, and Dublin Fusiliers have added to their glories. When there's fighting—real fighting—to be done for the Empire, Kelly, Burke, and Shea, do not fail.—Globe.

When promotions are awarded, Kelly, Burke, and Shea, don't get them. Could you tell us why?

AN OLD IRISH SOLDIER.

These paragraphs were quoted from the two leading journals of the respective political parties, to show how wide and vivid was the recognition of the gallantry, and courage, and efficiency, of soldiers of Irish blood, blood that runs hot in the veins, and runs recklessly when it is to be shed to win liberty, or victory, or glory, without counting the odds. We do not pretend to be able to account for the fact asserted by "an old Irish soldier" that the Irish are omitted "when promtoions are awarded." History for centuries has told us, and we see it for ourselves to-day, that all the battle bravery and winning of victory and glory, have not been done alone by Irish soldiers in the ranks. We have had, and have still, great Irish leaders, men like Lord Roberts and Lord Kitchener, and if the truth were known, there have been many promotions of Irish privates in this war. We can't tell why, if "Old Soldier's" assertion is correct, Irish soldiers "do not get promotions." The only reason that suggests itself is this—if every Irish soldier in the ranks who shows deep devotion to duty, conspicuous bravery, and particularly plucky fighting, were to be promoted, we should have Irish regiments composed altogether of officers, and there would be no man to be led. We should have officers as plentiful and ornamental as Sir Sam's abundant phalanges of honourary colonels. "Old Soldier" must remember that merit is not always recognized and rewarded, and that a small pension and a large wooden leg are often the reward of soldiers of all races, and in all times, who have given their best to their countries. There are millions in nameless graves, of soldiers who have done gallant fighting—graves where rest—by merit of courage and devotion—inglorious and unsung "Wellingtons and Napoleons. "Old Soldier" should remember that Irishmen do not do their gallant fighting with the vision of epaulettes or the Victoria Cross before their eyes. They do it because they are Irish and can't help it. It's in the blood and in the race.

FINE EXAMPLE.

The ex-ruler of the King's Navee is having the time of his life in France. This does not mean that he is enjoying himself to the top of his bent, but only that he is having an opportunity of learning how things are for himself. The Right Hon. Major Winston Spencer Churchill, P.C., does not belong to the slacker class. He has established an excellent precedent for cabinet ministers who are not as fully in accord with their colleagues as they might be.—Victoria Colonist.

DISHONOURS ITSELF.

The German University of Muenster has stigmatized itself by conferring an honourary degree on the judical slayer of Miss Edith Cavell, General Von Bissing. No French, Italian, Russian or British university would have deemed it creditable to have the name of such an executioner on its roll of honour.—Quebec Telegraph.

NO LACK OF PROOF.

General W. T. Sherman was credited a generation ago with the aphoristic saying; "War is hell." Some war historians have of late years been denying that he ever uttered this expression, but the matter has been set finally at rest by his son, Rev. Father Sherman, now a Roman Catholic priest. He says he was himself sceptical about the alleged epigram, but has since become convinced of his father's having spoken it, because a man present at a meeting of military cadets in Michigan heard him, and there is no reason to doubt the correctness of his testimony. It would seem that General Sherman used the expression more than once, because the first recorded instance was that, when he was asked by a gathering of clergymen what he thought of war, his answer was: "Gentlemen, war is hell."—Globe.

NOTHING DOING.

German newspapers express astonishment at the assistance the British overseas dominions, and especially Canada, have rendered the Empire in the war, and declare that this country will have to pay Germany a heavy indemnity when peace is restored. There is no doubt Germany will need the money, but she will have to touch up someone else. Mr. White is making entirely different arrangements.—Sydney Post.

SHOULD LOSE NO TIME IN JOINING THE CHRISTMAS CLUB

AS THIS CLUB

Closes at 11 P. M. This Saturday

As this Club is limited to 50 members and has been open to members since November 29th you can readily appreciate why you should join TO-DAY.

Buy Your Piano NOW While This Exceptional Opportunity is Available

THE CHRISTMAS Musical Club Closes Saturday Night! After 11 p.m. on the night of Dec. 18th, the wonderful advantages which have been offered to the people of Peterborough will be no more. All those who did not take advantage of this remarkable opportunity to save as much as $150.00 on a high-grade Piano or Player-Piano will have missed a chance of a lifetime.

It's an old but true saying—"A stitch in time saves nine."

If you are in the market for a Piano or Player-Piano now is the time to take the "Stitch."

A little time, a little thought, a little careful consideration now will save you money that you might just as well use for household expenses.

These Savings Never Equalled Before

Think of buying such instruments as the "New Scale Williams"—the piano selected by the majority of the great musicians that come to Canada, the New Scale Williams Player-Piano, with the wonderful "Maester-Touch" device which gives you and all of your family the power to play all the best music ever written, and the "Sweet-Toned Ennis" Pianos and Player-Pianos—at anything but their regular price. Think of being able to buy such quality—among the best Canada produces—at the cash prices. Then think of being able to purchase these instruments at these advantageous prices on special low terms, arranged just for your benefit! Then add to these features the "Relief Insurance" (in case of illness or loss of employment). Surely such a combination of savings has never been offered on other instruments before.

Remember This Club Closes Dec. 18th

Instructions For Joining

Simply cut out, sign, or bring the coupon below to the Christmas Club, care of J. M. Greene Music Co. Ltd., Charlotte St., or 'phone the store. They will then supply you with a membership blank and illustrated catalogue. By signing the membership blank with the fee of $1.00 it will entitle you to all Club privileges, IF YOU BUY YOUR INSTRUMENT BEFORE DECEMBER 25TH.

Investigate This Club To-day

These most unusual advantages are offered up to 11 p.m. on Saturday night, Dec. 18th. Any responsible person may join providing they enroll before Saturday night — you can select your instrument any time up to Dec. 25th, and have it delivered on Christmas eve or thereabouts.

Is Your Blood Thin?

Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal should be eaten freely by those who suffer from neurasthenia, anaemia, indigestion, and all undertoned conditions. It is a wonderful health food. It enriches the blood, builds tissue, hardens bones and teeth. Ask your doctor about it.

Relieves constipation or your money back.

When making porridge, carefully follow directions on package, and do not stir while cooking, or you spoil it completely. A surprise as well as a delight awaits you when you cook it properly.

Try the new Roman Meal Nuggets. They're ready to eat. Serve with hot milk or soften with boiling water, drain and add milk and sugar.

Bulgars Lost 4,000 at the Battle of Cemo

PARIS, Dec. 16.—Some aspects of the battle of the Cerna River, one of the earlier operations in Macedonia, are recounted in the following official statement:

"It is a wild, cold country, and certain of its villages, which hardly deserve to be called, such, have totally disappeared. Vozarci, for example, to-day is nothing but a name on the map. These ruins give testimony to the violence of the combats. Preliminary operations having been completed, and reconnoissance made, the order to attack was given on Nov. 6. A battalion succeeded in attaining the Rajec, and installed itself on the hill dominating the river. Further north French troops began to ascend Archangel heights and their continued progress and rapid success greatly disturbed the enemy.

"One company was surrounded at one time, munitions gave out and revictualling failed. Despite this the French fought with greater energy, checking the assaults of the enemy by well directed fire. The Bulgarians were unable to gain the slightest amount of ground. On Nov. 11 the upper Cicero was attained. The enemy retreated in disorder. Later the Bulgarians attempted, with three divisions, to make headway in repeated attacks, but were mowed down by the fire of our mountain artillery and 75's. The enemy finally, on Nov. 15, retired behind the heights.

"These hard fought days cost the Bulgarians nearly 4,000 men. Our losses were relatively slight. Our victory may be counted among the best of the war."

THE PRIZE WINNING ESSAY ON "WHY BRITAIN IS AT WAR"

Written by Miss Mary Harstone in the Competition Recently Conducted by the Otonabee Chapter I.O.D.E.

In the competition for the prize of $5.00, offered by the Otonabee Chapter, I.O.D.E., for the best essay on "Why the British Empire is at War," the prize winning composition was written by Miss Mary Harstone, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Harstone, 565 Water Street, and is as follows:

Why the British Empire is at War.

"The great fact before the world today is that Great Britain is taking part in the greatest war the world has ever known.

"The causes of this war are many but the one great cause is the desire of Germany for world empire. Germany has long wished to conquer France. In the year 1870, during the Franco-Prussian war, she captured a small part of French territory, known as Alsace-Lorraine, and since that date France has never been free from the terror of a German invasion. Germany has been waiting for a suitable occasion to arise before declaring war, and this opportunity came in July, 1914, when the Crown Prince of Austria was murdered in Servia. Moreover, circumstances all over Europe seemed favourable.

From the German point of view the French military organization was poor; Russia would be in the midst of revolution and would have difficulty in mobilising her troops. Krupp had broken his contract with the Belgian government for large guns, and Belgian forts would therefore be unable to hold out against German attacks. She also thought that Italy would either remain neutral or join her forces, and that Great Britain would remain neutral; partly because of trouble in England and Ireland and partly because of disaffection in India, Egypt, ad South Africa.

One can hardly conceive that Germany would have expected Great Britain to remain neutral while she (Germany) attacked Belgium and France. Germany's plans included the invasion of Belgium, which invasion was not only a horrible crime but a shameful violation of a treaty to which England was a party. In the face of all this Germany hoped for, even expected, the neutrality of Great Britain.

This was one of England's motives for entering the war, [illegible] her pledge to Belgium, [illegible] she had made when entering the Triple Entente. A second, and also an important [illegible] for self-preservation.

Germany's dream was that of a world empire—to depose of France and Russia, and, finally, to crush England and Great Britain. She also wished to be the greatest military power in the world.

Great Britain, in taking up arms for Belgium and France and her own preservation, against Germany's threats, has also taken up arms against the whole conception of war as preached by the Kaiser and his followers. The German notion of war as a larger and newer idea than any before known. It has added all the resources of science to the thievishness and bloody cruelty of primeval man. War, when she made it, was to be ruthless to the last extreme.

To gain an advantage over France in the beginning, Germany had destroyed a whole nation. She gave warning that she would do it, and she has kept her word. But in doing so she has broken every law, national and international, respecting war on land and sea, leaving honour trampled in the dust.

It is for this that Great Britain is now fighting—for liberty, and the re-establishment of honour and uprightness in all dealings between one nation and another.

The Death of Judge Benson

PORT HOPE, Dec. 16.—The death occured yesterday of His Honour Judge Thomas Moore Benson. The late Judge Benson had been ill for some time, but the news of his death came as a surprise, and a great shock to his many friends.

Deceased was appointed Judge of there United Counties, thirty-four years ago. In his public and private life he had justly earned the esteem and affection of all classes.

A member of the bench in Toronto, recently referring to Judge Benson, said: "Yes, there are many older judges in the province, but, gentlemen, there is only one Judge Benson."

The late Judge Benson was born at Port Hope, Nov. 25, 1833; he was educated at the Grammar School, Ni[illegible], and at the Grammar School Peterborough; matriculated at University College, Toronto, 1851, and obtained three scholarships in law. After studying in the office of the late Mr. Justice Patterson, he was called to the bar in 1859, and practiced his profession in his native town; was elected a Bencher of the Law Society in 1871.

BIG CROPS IN THE WEST

The Examiner is in receipt of a letter from Mr. Victor Williams, Tompkins, Sask., in which he states that he has had nearly ten thousand bushels of wheat and 3,000 bushels of oats this year. He speaks confidently of the future of the west and is very gratified at the result of this year's crop. He has sent the "Examiner" the sum of $3.50 to be divided equally for tobacco to be sent to—

THE SPIRIT OF FRANCE

New York Times: Letters from French soldiers reaching the French colony here are all brave in tone, but there could be none braver than this from a French private:

"I have to tell you that I have been severly wounded and have lost my sight," his letter reads: "It will be great grief to me no longer to be able to continue my beloved work. For some time to come it is probable that I shall be laid up in a hospital in the interior. If you could manage to get for me the necessary attentions near my people and near you, I would be very grateful to you. May I tell you that I have been decorated with the Military Medal? Will you use care that my wife may not see the present condition of things to be worse than they are? My best regards to all the dear comrades."

Appended to the letter is a note by a military almoner, who says:

"It is at the dictation of this brave wounded man that I have written to you these words which I am forwarding to you with an emotion difficult to restrain. This wounded man especially appeals to the sympathy of all by his courage to suffer and his heroic resignation to the terrible fate of blindness. His two eyes have been removed, but he makes no complaint. One may well hope that so many martyrs of duty will soon merit safety and victory for our dear land of France."

The postcript is signed by E. D. Lasariste, aumonier militaire.

THE CITY WILL PROVIDE A PUBLIC SKATING RINK

Committee Was Appointed to Look Into the Matter—Hills For Sleighriding

BOARD OF WORKS

Ald. A. A. McIntyre is of the opinion that the present speed limit for automobiles should be reduced. The matter occupied the limelight for a few minutes at last night's meeting of the Board of Works. No definite action was taken, although the majority of the aldermen agreed that the question was worthy of further consideration in view of the frequency of accidents.

On motion of Aldermen Stratton and Saunders, a committee comprising Aldermen Duffus, Dobbin and Stratton was appointed to look into the question of providing public skating rinks. The committee was also asked to select three or more hills which the children of the city could use for sleighriding with safety.

Mr. W. H. Moore on behalf of his client, Mr. Mark Spenceley, 573 Division street, protested an account of nine dollars, the cost of cleaning out a sewer that was blocked with the roots of a tree located on the Spenceley property. Aldermen Stratton and McIntyre were of the opinion that the city was liable and should pay the account. After some discussion it was decided to take "no action." A similar course was adopted in the case of J. E. Emerson.

Church Street.

While browsing over the file Ald. Green unearthed a communication requesting that Rubidge street be named "Church" street. The writer pointed out that there are five churches on Rubidge street. No action was taken.

The Utilities Commission have been granted permission to erect poles on the following streets: Three on Haggart street, two on Hart avenue, two on Water and five on Maria, Birdsall and Charles streets.

City Engineer Parsons was granted two weeks' leave of absence commencing December 21st. This is the first he has had since coming to the city three years ago.

M. Flaherty was given the contract for the removal of snow in part of district number four. The contract price is $75.

John Heals wrote the Board in reference to the water getting into his cellar. City Engineer Parsons reported that the city was not liable.

A WORK OF ART COMBINED WITH A CALENDAR

The Canada Life Assurance Company, who has local offices on Hunter Street, where the genial Mr. W. R. Scadding presides, has issued a real work of art in the shape of a calendar for 1916. It takes the form of a pad calendar, entirely separate from a charming and sympathetic oleograph, which is a copy of a picture "Alone," by the eminent French artist—Theophile Emanuel Duverger The picture—which is worth it—might easily be cut away, without impairing the use of the calendar, and framed, there being a good margin without any advertising matter.

The original of this picture hangs in the Guildhall Art Gallery, London (England), and is a worthy represen tative of the type of the school of French art, to which it belongs.

Grand Jury Finished Its Investigation To-day

The Grand Jury completed to-day their tour of inspecting public institutions and will likely present their report to Judge Huycke in the County Court on Friday morning. His Honour is in Kingston to-day bidding farewell to his son Lieut. Douglas Huycke, who it is understood, leaves in the near future with a draft of the 33rd Battery. Hence, the court was postponed yesterday until Friday.

SKETCH OF THE LATE HON. W. J. ARMSTRONG

A Pioneer Resident of New Westminster, B. C., a Native of Cavan and For Nearly Sixty Years a Prominent Element in the Public Life and Progress of British Columbia

The Examiner announced a few days ago the death of Hon. William J. Armstrong, of New Westminster, one of the pioneer residents of British Columbia, where he went from Ontario in 1858, nearly sixty years ago. His death is of local interest, as he was a brother of Mrs. James Stratton, Gilmour street, the last of her brothers, and was a native of Peterborough, where he was born, 89 years ago. Some particulars of his busy and useful life are contained in the following despatch from New Westminster:

NEW WESTMINSTER, Dec. 9.—The death occurred this morning of Mr. William J. Armstrong, the leading pioneer of the city. Born in 1826, he came to this city in 1858, and was the first white settler. He was sheriff of this district for a number of years and was succeeded in the position by his son.

"The late Mr. Armstrong was one of the most conspicuous figures in New Westminster. He was a man whose activities during a long life had been many and various, and all connected with the development and advancement of a region with whose history he had been closely connected.

THE LATE HON. WILLIAM J. ARMSTRONG

"It was a distinction of which any man might have been proud to be recognized as the first settler of New Westminster, the builder of the first residence, the first merchant in a city which has attained commercial eminence. Busy in mercantile pursuits, William J. Armstrong found time, or made time, to devote himself to political and public life. For many years he represented his district in the provincial legislature. He served as sheriff of his county and sat in the cabinet as minister of finance and agriculture. In these honourable positions and as justice of the peace he writ his name large in the annals of British Columbia. Mr. Armstrong was one of the grand old men of Canada, for he was born on October 31, 1826. He was of Irish descent. He was born in the then hamlet of Peterborough, and went, in 1851, with his parents to California, where he remained until 1858, when he came to British Columbia, settling at Langley.

At that time Col. Moody had settled on a site for the capital of the colony; that place was Queensborough, now called New Westminster. A steamer, lumber-laden, put into Queensborough and with this lumber Mr. Armstrong built the first New Westminster residence and store. His first stock of goods was obtained from Victoria. From 1860 onwards his progress from one office of dignity to another was continuous. He was in De Cosmos' government until 1876, when his party was defeated. In the cool shades of opposition he continued to do active work. In the bye-election of 1881 he was elected for his city by an overwhelming majority. In 1883 he was appointed sheriff and the House then lost one of its most active and able members.

In 1837 he built a flour mill and all his life he continued an energetic business career with success.

In 1861 he was married to Miss H. C. Ladner, of Cornwall, England. They had three sons and three daughters. Both Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong were known as devoted members of the Episcopal church, and liberal supporters of church activities. He was a member of the Independent Order of Oddfellows and served as first Noble Grand of the Westminster lodge. He was the last survivor of the first council of New Westminster and his departure has broken a link with the history of the past and robbed the Royal City of a citizen long esteemed, respected, loved.

He is survived by his widow, one son and two daughters. The son is sheriff of the county, one daughter, Mrs. (Dr.) Osborne Norris, resides in Vernon, B.C., and the other, Miss Fannie, is at home.

GOLDEN WEDDING OF MR. AND MRS. R. McCAULEY, OF BURLEIGH

At their home in Haultain, Burleigh township, Mr. and Mrs. R. McCauley celebrated their golden wedding on Monday, November 29th. About forty relatives were present, most of them from Peterborough, and a very happy re-union was a feature of the occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. McCauley received many congratulations from their relatives and friends upon the closing of fifty years of married life and just as many good wishes for the future. They were also the recipients of many golden presents, and the following address from the members of their family read by Mrs. Albert Reid:—

Haultain, Nov. 29th, 1915.

Dear Father and Mother,—It is with great pleasure that we, your children, grandchildren and great grandchildren have assembled here this evening to celebrate your golden wedding.

We are now brought to realise that so few have the blessed privilege of commemorating this happy event, and we do indeed feel thankful that our Father above has seen fit to spare you for this occasion.

We wish to express to you, dear parents, how dearly you are loved by us all. Your loving care and watchfulness over us from childhood has been most exemplary. You have always been painstaking [illegible] and have set [illegible] that each of us may [illegible] and animated us with a noble ambition; the path we should aim to tread.

During the past years we could not but notice your unbounding good nature and unfailing love which you have always manifested.

You have shared our joys and sorrows all through life.

"Our fears, our hopes, our aims are one,
Our comforts and our cares,
We share each other's woes,
Each other's burden bear;
And often for each other flows
The sympathizing tear."

You have indeed imprinted on our minds, many happy remembrances that time can never efface.

And now, at this golden eventide of your life, we have gathered here to try in some small way to express to you our love and gratitude. We ask you as a slight token of this to accept this purse of gold.

We can but imperfectly express our feelings—words sound hollow, but we sincerely hope that you may both be spared many years to enjoy the comforts of this life and that the remaining years will be crowned with blessing that shall not pass away.

The radiant morn hath passed away,
And spent too soon her golden store;
The shadows of departing day
Creep on once more.
Our life is but an autumn sun,
Its glorious moon how quickly past;
Lead us, oh, Christ, our life work done
Safe home at last.

Signed on behalf of the family.

Wm. McCauley.
Mrs. S. Wilson.
Mrs. Albert Reid.

Mr. William McCauley made the presentation of the purse of gold. A very pleasant social time was spent and not the least feature was the anniversary dinner. Mr. and Mrs. McCauley have resided in Burleigh about thirty-five years, where they are highly respected and widely known. It will be the wishes of all their friends that they may be spared to enjoy other anniversaries of their wedding.

Hydraulic Lift Lock at Peterborough

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Being a visitor in your city from the United States, and visiting those wonderful Life Locks, I would be very grateful if you would kindly tell me how long it took to build them, the cost of building them, also the height, and how many lights. In fact give me all the information you can please. One could put it on those post card views, making it very interesting to send back to my friends.

J. C. K.

In answer it may be stated that the Peterborough Lift Lock is the largest of its kind in the world in both capacity and height of lift—65 feet—designed by Mr. R. B. Rogers, C.E., Peterborough. Work begun 1901; finished 1904.

Built on concrete foundation—breast wall 80 feet high, 40 feet thick, contains 25,000 cubic yards concrete. Super-structure iron and steel, 111,-100 tons.

Height of lift, 65 feet.
Ship chambers, 80x140 feet.
Time for lockage (average) 6½ minutes.

The cost, sum totalled, is not recorded—it is divided into many separate contracts.

The lift lock at Kirkfield on the same canal is of the same dimensions, though it is built of steel and the life is only 50 feet.

SIGNS OF KIDNEY TROUBLE.

In the early stages Kidney troubles are known by backache and urinary disorders. Later come dropsy, stone, rheumatic pains and perhaps diabetes. But don't wait for these. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills will help you in a few hours. Their thorough action on the liver, kidneys and bowels will clear away the pains and the aches and make you well again.

SHOOTING CONTEST IS PROGRESSING

In the shooting contest that is being held at the Allies Rifle Parlours, the first platoon of the 93rd Battalion is ahead of the second, the 4th ahead of the 3rd, and the 6th ahead of the 5th. The contest will continue until Saturday next. Besides three prizes that will be awarded to the soldiers, three prizes are being contested for by civilians.

New By-law Is In Force

New Sanitary Regulation Will Be Under the Supervision of Sanitary Inspector Spence

The by-law relating to the public health of the City of Peterborough, which was prepared by Sanitary Inspector Spence, and passed by the City Council, has been approved by the Provincial Board of Health, and is now in force. All pit closets, or closets with a vault below the surface of the ground, are now illegal, and must forthwith be cleaned out or disinfected, and filled up with earth or ashes, and dry earth boxes substituted therefor. These will be cleaned once a month by men appointed by the City Council, and the cost will be 13 cents per month. The work will be carried on in the same manner as the garbage collection. Routes will be organised, and served regularly once a month, and payment must be made to the proper officer before or at the time the work is done. It is expected to have everything in working order at the beginning of the year.

VOTE OF THANKS FOR ALD. GREEN

At the conclusion of last night's meeting of the Board of Works, Ald. Edgar moved a resolution of thanks to Ald. G. W. Green, chairman of the Board. This was seconded by Ald. Saunders.

Ald. Green assured the Board that the vote of thanks was entirely unnecessary. He had performed the duties of chairman with a great deal of pleasure, and the knowledge that his services had been satisfactory to the Board was ample compensation.

Letter From Pte. Heber Rogers

Received by His Mother Yesterday —Is in Good Health

Mrs. R. H. Rogers received another letter from her son, Pte. Heber Rogers, a prisoner at Giessen, Germany, written on November 16th. In it he states that he is well and had received another parcel from home, also several letters. Recently he sent a group photograph in which he appears quite prominently, looking fine and healthy.

SOME POINTERS FOR CHRISTMAS GIFT BUYING

Every family has in it some unfortunate member who with the very best of intentions always gives every other member the wrong thing on Christmas Day. Even when the unfortunates know it, they always brace up again about December 1st of the next year, and all by themselves plan out some more brilliant surprises. There should be a Bureau of Advice re Christmas Gifts established, where young ladies could tell young gentlemen just what they like in the way of presents, and vice versa. And fathers could protest against being given tea-tables and new rugs for the reception-room.

It is so easy to forget that mother wants things to wear occasionally. She is always revamping somebody else's costumes, and at Christmas time she jubilates loyally over the electric toaster which will make toast for everybody in the house, while she hasn't time to butter her own. But nobody ever seems to think of giving her such a thing as a set of furs.

Furs Are Plenteous and Cheap.

Some furs are expensive, of course. This season there are for the extravagant purses sets of moleskin that would show up white hair admirably, and luxurious coats of seal. But for smaller purses there are the sets of lynx and black wolf and sable. They wear splendidly, and the cold Canadian winter demands furs, no matter what Madame la Mode, who lives in Paris, may say. Fur-lined coats for the man who travels, and fur caps for grandad, who feels the cold are other valuable suggestions.

Another pointer for Christmas shoppers is that there are many things one may buy round about Christmas Eve which aren't necessarily gifts, but which lighten the housekeeper's load and make Christmas Day a more truly festive occasion. It is not easy for the housekeeper to jot down on her order list everything that one may need for the Christmas holidays. But the downtown shopper has time to wander through the stores, and such surprises as packages of Christmas raisins and nuts, candies, Southern fruits and grapes are the kind that the housewife appreciates.

Tables Not to be Neglected.

While Christmas is partly spoiled if it is looked on as a day of glorified "eats," nobody wants the tables to be just the same as on every other of the 365 days of the year. That is why the Christmas turkey is a necessity, and some old English families still manage to procure the small roast pigs. Spiced beef is another old English dish for Christmas, and its darkness looks well against the holly wreaths. Chestnuts for turkey dressing are a diversion from routine, and salads are a treat for the Christmas dinner. Especially celery is plentiful this season and this, with apples and nuts, is a groundwork for every variety [illegible]

FOR THE RED CROSS

The following articles have been contributed during December to the Red Cross Society from St. Paul's Auxiliary:

6 bed jackets
10 pairs pyjamas
24 night shirts
6 day shirts
4 bed sheets
12 personal property bags
24 many tailed bandages
36 jaw bandages
6 hot water bottle covers
500 face cloths
600 mouth wipes
18 wash cloths
35 pairs socks
6 ring pillows
35 pairs white [illegible] socks and three ring pillows from the Primary Sorah Bible class of St. Paul's [illegible]

Kitchen chairs and table legs often become shabby-looking. To brighten them up first put one pennyworth of permanganate of potash crystals into a jug of hot water, and leave them till they are quite dissolved. Now scrub the chairs clean, and dry them. Stain them with the dissolved crystals, and when they are dry apply a coating of ordinary varnish.

THE BRITISH VOLUNTEERS

From the New York Times

After many irresolutions, many warnings, threats, and postponements of conscription, Lord Derby's plan of recruiting is splendidly successful at last. Some 4,000,000 men have responded to the call. In the last three or four days the volunteers have applied in multitudes beyond the capacity of the recruiting offices and the medical officers, so that days had to be added to the prescribed period. The work will not be over until to-morrow night. Many applicants have had to be rejected for physical reasons. The general impulse of patriotic resolution cannot be doubted. In days of disaster, of political, diplomatic, and military erros, failures, incompetences, Great Britain, after saving and guaranteeing the Allies with her fleet, after raising an army of 3,000,000 in the field or ready for it, is to train a new army, exceeding by a million or so what was rightly regarded as a gigantic force for a nation taught to esteem her naval pre-eminence as enough to defend her without a great trained military force.

Before the war the whole number of her army, home and colonial, including the regulars, army reserve, special reserve, and Territorial force, was 727,141. Add the regulars in India, and the army on paper was 800,000. The Territorial army, in intention like our "Home Guards" of the civil war, was trained two weeks a year. The oversea regulars were widely scattered. The "expeditionary force," as the home regular army is called on mobilization, amounted, on a war establishment, to about 165,000 men. The army reserve is, or was, simply the name for the men serving the last five years of the twelve of enlistment. The special reserve, in 1914 estimated at 80,000, consisted of recruits who had five months of preliminary drill, supplemented every year by three weeks of training. They were officered mostly by non-professionals; not embodied permanently. The paper strength of the Territorial army, the fortnight in camp men, was 312,000 in 1914, its actual strength some 250,000. Of trained soldiers Great Britain cannot have had at the beginning of the war more than 250,000. She would not listen to Lord Roberts. She would not prepare for land warfare. She wanted peace, and loved to believe that Germany did.

After the disillusionment she did her best to repair the mistake. The great majority of the Territorials volunteered for home defense abroad. Parliament consented to add 2,000,000 men to the regular army. By November, 1915, a million men had joined the new army. Enlistments were at the rate of 30,000 a week. A quick, severe training, slow as it may have seemed to England's allies, was resorted to. A year to lick "recruities" into shape is none too long. Well, some 3,000,000 were trained. They have fought well, if they have not been too ably led. They were far too few, monstrous as their numbers seemed to the England of little wars. Now their original number is to be more than doubled. After a seeming sag in patriotism, one of those pauses rather than reactions natural during long periods of national stress; after bickerings of Cabinets and Parliament, wranglings of trade unionists and employers, exposed and suspected inefficiencies of the Government; the sharp fire of criticism and opposition in a democracy; after an explosion of dissatisfactions, discords, enmities, grumbles, the nation wakes up at last. It is John Bull all over to object to doing what he is made to do.

Many patricians have died nobly, if they lived not wholly to the satisfaction of moralists, economists, and levelers. The "middle class," the "working class," was sluggish, it was said. Why not? Great Britain has paid others to fight for her on land. She has never been used to great military forces. With her fleet and her purse she has been triumphant. Her little armies have fought gallantly, but they were little. Even glories of her past, like Crecy and Poitiers, were but adventurous raids. Bold yeomen beat the knights, gunpowder beat both; the nobility destroyed itself in the Wars of the Roses; but never has Great Britain had a great army. It was her fleet and the wind that scattered the Armada and humbled Spain. It was Cromwell's fleet, and not his army, that made the English Commonwealth terrible abroad. Nelson, not Wellington, is the hero of the Napoleonic wars. Like the Americans, who have inherited the fear, the English fear a large standing army. They have the habit of peace. Soldiering has been unreal, impossible to them.

Now it is necessary. They are going to do it. Out of the 8,000,000-odd men from 18 to 40, about 7,000,000 have volunteered. England may be clumsy, slow, bungling. She is very inefficient, very unkultural. But the deliberate resolution of a nation "too thick-headed to know when it's beaten" is a dangerous thing to its enemies. Will these British recruits be ready before 1917? No matter. England is ready to stick it out to the end. Possibly she can afford to wait considerably longer than her relative across the North Sea. And she seems able to raise many more soldiers in proportion to population than Germany.

being transformed into an almost impregnable fortress by the Allies, in anticipation of an Austro-German or Bulgarian attack. Great gangs of Greek labourers, working side by side with the soldiers of Allies, are digging row after row of earthworks. The Engineers are busy day and night mapping gun ranges. The Anglo-French artillery is being stationed on all the heights commanding the approach to the city, and the railway line leading from Salonika is heavily mined.

BERLIN, via wireless, Dec. 16.—That Bulgarian troops may pursuet the allies into Greece is indicated in an official statement from Sofia today. Declaring that Bulgarian troops have "temporarily" stopped pursuit on enemy at Greek frontier.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 16.—There is comparatively little unemployment in Canada at the present time, and no strikes of any consequence. The labour deparment official report states that throughout November employment maintained practically the same high level as in October.

GENEVA, Dec. 16.—Austrian officials believe the Austrian reply to the American note will be satisfactory to Washington, and will result in further exchanges over the Ancona incident.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

At the next session of the Legislature the city will ask for authority to extend to the Campbell Flour Mills Company the exemption which was granted to their predecessors, the Central Milling Company. The Campbell Milling Company has agreed to pay all the expenses in connection with obtaining the necessary legislation. The matter was decided at a meeting of the Finance Committee of the city council, held yesterday afternoon.

BARE GERMAN FRAUD IN 'PARISIAN' STYLES

Police Make Raid on Firm of Worldwide Fame in the French Capital

Cheap Teuton Imitations Palmed Off as French—Many American Women Deceived.

LONDON, Dec. 14—A sensation has been caused in Paris political circles, according to a member of the French Chamber of Deputies now visiting London, by a discovery that a certain dressmaking firm which of recent years has been hugely advertised throughout the world was originated and financed by Germany. The object aimed at was to drive a wedge into Parisian pre-eminence in women's fashions, with a view toward eventual transference of that leadership to Berlin, and meanwhile providing markets for fabrics made in Germany but palmed off upon the unsuspecting world as genuine French goods.

A raid made by the Parisian police resulted in the discovery of a plan of campaign on a vast scale. Production of cheap imitations of exclusive French designs already was in operation. Many American women, according to my informant, whose official position precludes publication of his name, have paid extravagant prices for "creations" of this well-advertised "Parisian" firm, in the belief that they have been wearing exclusive French goods, whereas in reality the materials have been base imitations made in Germany.

Under French laws, fabrics imported from Germany had to be described as of German manufacture by a stamp on the border. A device whereby this difficulty was overcome was to make a double-sized border of lisiere on the fabric. The stamp was upon the outer edge of this lisiere, and after arrival of the materials at the Paris headquarters of the firm in question the outer border was carefully removed and all traces of the origin of the fabric thereby destroyed.

A peculiar feature of the affair is that the firm in question professed to be the newest expression of French dressmaking, but was not so much in Paris as in New York and London. Its nominal head paid visits to both New York and London, and, thanks to remarkable skill in advertising, got his firm well into the limelight. He used to deliver lectures on the supremacy of Parisian fashions and the beauty of French-made silks and velvets. The distinctive styles he invented were generally denounced by French artists, and had much less vogue in Paris than they had in New York and London.

Jist Like Ye.—Sandy had been photographed, and, as he was looking intently at his "picter," Tam MacPherson came along. "What's that ye hiv there?" he asked. "My photygraph," replied Sandy, showing it proudly. "Whit d'ye think o't?" "Mon, it's fine!" exclaimed Tam, in great admiration. "It's jist like ye, tae. An' whit micht the like o' they cost?" I dinna ken," replied Sandy. "I hinna peyed yet." "Mon," said Tam, more firmly than ever, "it's awfu' like ye!"

When one is tempted to write a clever but harsh thing, though it may be difficult to restrain it, it is always better to leave it in the inkstand.—Smiles.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

SCHEDULE FOR JUNIORS DRAWN UP TO-DAY

At a meeting at the Empress Hotel this morning at which F. D. Craig was convenor, the following schedule for this Junior group was adopted:

Jan. 1—Peterborough at Campbellford (afternoon).
Jan. 3—Belleville at Lindsay.
Jan. 7—Campbellford at Belleville.
Jan. 13—Lindsay at Peterborough.
Jan. 13—Belleville at Campbellford.
Jan. 17—Peterborough at Lindsay.
Jan. 21.—Lindsay at Belleville.
Jan. 24—Campbellford at Lindsay.
Jan. 27—Belleville at Peterborough
Jan. 31—Lindsay at Campbellford.
Peterborough at Belleville.
Feb. 4.—Campbellford at Peterborough.

LINDSAY TEAM NOW IN GROUP

The Lindsay Intermediates have been admitted into this group of the Intermediate O.H.A., making five teams in all. The schedule will therefore have to be revised, a nice little job for Convenor J. P. Bond. Peterborough will get lots of hockey with eight Intermediate, and three Junior games scheduled for January.

HOCKEY

HOCKEY.

The Electrics had a great turnout of Intermediate and Junior players out last night, in fact the squad was so large that Coach Billy Breen had to work them in shifts. Among the Intermediates out were Tobin in goal, Jerry Coughlin, Pete Spratt, Bryden, Montgomery, Jackson, Evans, Bailey, A. Coughlin, Crough, Hamilton; while the Juniors had a raft of youngsters including Legros and Rose, the only survivors of last year's team.

The Peterborough Junior's first game is scheduled for the afternoon of New Year's day, when they will play at Campbellford.

CURLING

Mr. M. Tooley has reappeared at the Curling Rink and is preparing to go into action with a new rink this winter. His services as vice-skip, he states, went to the highest bidder as the result of his showing last year on Mr. Kenner's rink, and this year he is lined up with Skip Giroux. Mr. Tooley has been assured by Mr. Metheral, second stone, that they should pick up enough trophies this winter to add considerable zest and satisfaction to their play. This rink has a vacancy, the lead remaining to be chosen, and Mr. Tooley states that they will likely bring in a man from Winnipeg for this position. Bredin is regarded as a likely choice, and Mr. Tooley considers that he would make a suitable first stone and top off the Giroux rink to perfection.

With three boys in khaki, Mr. Angus McIntosh has produced another rangy son of about fourteen, who has been helping build up the playing sheet in his spare moments. In a few more years this lad should be as tall as his dad, and another vigorous "chip off the old block."

The first curling of the season opened this afternoon just three days earlier than last year. Herb. Martin, Jim Metheral, Percy Fitzgerald and M. Tooley tried out the eastern rinks, which, with the exception of one little ridge, are in fine condition. Good progress is being made with the rest of the rink. It is likely that there will be games to-night on the two east rinks.

Have your potatoes baked in a quick oven and served as soon as they are thoroughly cooked. It is impossible to do away with the starch, which is almost the whole potato, but cooked in this way they are much more easily digested.

Winning is all Nonsense.—One day, while her grandfather was paying a visit to Florence's home, the little girl said to him:—"Gran'pa your talk about perseverance winning is all nonsense." "Well, well!" cried grandfather, "why do you say that?" "Why," said the little girl, "I've worked all the afternoon blowing soap bubbles and trying to pin them on mother's hat."

team will have to make the most of their practice hours during the next few days as many of the players will be away during the holiday week.

Private George Carter Promoted.

Sergeant George S. Carter, No. 12125, Company D, 39th Regt., West Sandling, Kent, England, went overseas with the 39th Battalion as a private. He was in the days of peace one of the most popular "posties" in Peterborough, his "beat" being in the west end. He writes to one of his former "patrons," a lady on Gilmour street, and says in part:

A few lines to let you know that I am still in the land of the living and glad to say I am well. We are getting plenty of rain, however, and our camp is a mud hole. We had as a welcome reminder of home the other day, a little snow and a little frost, but it is now raining again, so you can imagine what our camp is like. I saw Walter Perks to-day; he has just come out of hospital, and he looks rather thin, but I understand he is to be assigned to work in the staff office of our battalion. . . Please remember me to all my friends near you. I should like to write to all of them if I could. . . . I have been over here five months, come Dec. 4th. I am the postman for our battalion and am kept pretty busy. I am glad to tell you I have been promoted to a sergeant, that is, three stripes on my right arm. I have got used to the army, though I shall be glad when the war is finished and I get back to my own little home. My wife and little girl are here in Folkestone. It makes everything more pleasant to have them here and I get off to get home with my wife and I stay all night; so you see I am better off than many of the boys. I am glad I enlisted when I did, and I am afraid there are a good many lads hiding behind their mother's apron. There are not many comforts in the army, but just the same I would not change places with any young man in Peterborough.

Hamilton, Dec. 15.—Rev. Dr. Nelson, pastor of Knox church, and Dr. Laker, of Zion Tabernacle, yesterday severely scored the London Ministerial Association for its action in protesting to the Attorney-General against movie pictures being used at Sunday recruiting meetings.

Dr. Laker said this was no time for carpet criticism. Dr. Nelson declared that ministers were an expensive luxury in a Christian country in war time, and that two-thirds of them ought to be at the front leading their men, instead of finding fault with people who were doing their bit at home in securing recruits. Dr. Nelson has two sons with the American battalion.

The Kingston Standard says: Lt.-Col. Low is arranging to get 2,000 red, white and blue rosettes which he intends distributing among local relatives who have sweethearts at the front. One will be given to each lady who secures a recruit for the 146th Battalion, and every young lady in the city and county will be invited to assist in getting the number of men necessary to fill up the Frontenac Battalion. Ladies are doing much in England in recruiting and it is felt that Canadian ladies can do their share, and will if given a chance.

The following from the London Advertiser will be read with interest here, as Sergt. Knipper until a few months ago was a cornet player in the band of the 57th Regiment. The Advertiser prints a photograph of Sergt. Knipper with the following description:

"This is Sergt. T. G. Knipper, the man who looks after the destinies of Lieut.-Col. R. I. Towers' command, and who was formerly a member of the 33rd Battalion. Band Sergt. Knipper is a native of Alsace, France, and is as thorough a patriot of the allies as one would find anywhere. He is one of the best musicians who ever came to London. He was in charge of a musical organization in Alsace prior to his coming to America. He was in Canada when war was declared and immediately placed his services at the disposal of the Dominion. He speaks the English language fluently, although one would know he is not native born. Sergt. Knipper is well liked by his bandsmen, not only because he is a thorough musician, but because he is a real man. When the new band instruments come the leader declares he will have a musical organization second to none. One may well believe his statement after listening to the playing of the 70th boys even with the instruments they now have.

The guarding of the C.G.E. and Wm. Hamilton Company by the 93rd Battalion will commence to-night. Sergt. Wm. Jones of No. 5 Platoon will be the sergeant of the guard at the C.G.E. to-night, while Sergt. E. P. Clarke of No. 6 Platoon will be the sergeant of the Wm. Hamilton Company guard. A sergeant and three men will guard the power house at Nassau, going out on the evening G.T.R. train and remaining on duty for 24 hours.

WINTER TOURS TO CALIFORNIA, FLORIDA, ETC.

At this season of the year many are planning their winter tours. Considerable numbers annually visit the ever-popular California resort, while many choose the flowers and sunshine of Florida together with the very even climate.

Numerous people in comfortable circumstances, well able to afford a winter tour, have the mistaken idea that a trip of this nature is most expensive. This is not so. Thanks to modern railway facilities, an extensive trip, both interesting and educational, may be made with speed and comfort at a comparatively small cost. Why not investigate?

The Canadian Pacific Railway offers particularly good service to Detroit, where direct connection is made for Florida via Cincinnati Ohio and Atlanta, Ga. Jacksonville, Florida, is reached second morning after leaving Detroit. Excellent connections to Florida can also be made via Buffalo.

The Canadian Pacific-Michigan Central route (via Michigan Central twin tubes between Windsor and Detroit) will be found the ideal line to Chicago, where direct connection is made for the Southern States. New Orleans is reached second morning after leaving Toronto.

Direct connection is also made at Chicago for points in California, Texas, Arizona, etc.

The Dining, Parlour and Sleeping car service between Toronto, Detroit, and Chicago is up-to-date in every particular. Connecting lines also operate through sleeping and dining cars.

Those contemplating a trip of any nature will receive full information from any C.P.R. agent; or write M. G. Murphy, District Passenger Agent, Toronto.

CHARGES GERMANS TORTURED RUSSIANS

Red Hot Bar Rubbed Over Soles of Another—Thirty Prisoners in House Set Afire.

Simeon J. Koshkin, who arrived here Saturday from Petrograd on the Norwegian-American liner Kristianiafjord as a member of a Russian commission of sixty-one engineers gave out yesterday at the Hotel McAlpin a statement, which he said was an extract from the sworn testimony collected by the Extraordinary Commission of Inquiry into the atrocities committed by the Germans on Russian prisoners.

The following are the mildest incidents seen in the official report brought here by Mr. Koshkin:

"A peasant named Peter Yakovlev Shimchak, belonging to the first category of the army reserves was in Denmark when war was declared. He boarded an English sailing vessel and was taken prisoner by Germans. He was placed in solitary confinement in Hamburg, and subsequently removed to a concentration camp near Berlin called Zele-Lager, occupied by Russian, French, and Belgian prisoners. The prisoners were given scant nourishment and were harnessed to plows together with cattle. They were thrashed with sticks of gutta percha, which were supplied to the sentries for the purpose.

"Some of the prisoners were tightly bound with a rope to a post and left in that position for a couple of hours. As a refinement of cruelty they were forced to kneel on jagged pieces of bricks for hours so that the knees were cut and sore.

"While interned a prisoner Shimchak witnessed two most striking cases of German barbarity. A Cossack had to submit to his nose being cut off, but as the severed part was still hanging by the skin he begged the Germans to cut it off completely. One of them therefore handed him a penknife with which the Cossack completed the amputation of his own nose.

"Another Cossack had both of his ears pierced with a bayonet, the Germans turning the bayonet round in order to make the wounds as large as possible. Shimchak escaped in June, 1915, and swore to this statement before a Magistrate in Petrograd.

"Ivin Efremov Zinoviev, senior subaltern in a Cossack regiment, wounded in battle near Tarnov, May 23, 1915, was captured by the Germans. The following day he was questioned by German officers regarding Russian movements, and when he refused he was taken to an engine-room, where he was stripped naked and tortured with electrically-charged wires.

"A German officer finally took a red-hot bar about as thick as a finger and rubbed it over the soles of Zinoviev's feet until a physician told him to cease the torture. The Cossack subaltern fainted. Later, he escaped and swore to this statement before the commission.

"Alexander Andreyov Triastain, a private, testified that on Feb. 18, 1915, at the battle of Novui-Dvori the Germans captured thirty wounded Russian soldiers. The prisoners were placed in a separate house and left three days without food or medical assistance. On the third night the Germans withdrew and set fire to this house. Triastain was one of ten who managed to escape from the flames.

"Sub-Lieutenant Alexi Neklyukov, wounded in November, 1914, near Lovich, was captured by the Germans, who tore every finger nail from his hands with a metal instrument. Neklyukov was subsequently recaptured by the Russians. His story was told under oath, and photographs were taken of his fingers."

British Lose 6,572 Officers By Death

LONDON, Nov. 30. — Officers' casualty lists for three weeks ended yesterday are very much smaller than for some weeks and indicates the comparative lull in operations in the Dardanelles and on the western front. The losses would have been still smaller had not there been included some casualties in operations in Persia and elsewhere.

During the three weeks the British army lost 168 officers killed or died of wounds, 307 wounded and 17 missing, a total of 507, deducting 12 from the wounded total and 36 from the missing—who have since died and are included in total killed—the losses to date since the beginning of the war are 6,572 killed, 12,666 wounded and 1,733 missing, total 21,171.

Principal losses during the last three weeks were in the Royal Field artillery, with 6 killed and 22 wounded; Canadians, 2 killed and 21 wounded; Lancashires, 14 killed and 8 wounded; Australians, 5 killed and 16 wounded; Yorkshires, 16 killed and 12 wounded. The Royal Flying Corps has been more unfortunate of late, losses during the three weeks among officers being 4 killed, 6 wounded and 10 missing.

Brigadier General Knatchbull is reported wounded and three lieutenant colonels have been killed.

TO HANG FOR MURDER.

At the Assizes at Parry Sound recently, Arthur Richard Cassan of Ryerson township was found guilty of the murder of James Degeorge, a young Italian, on September 15.

The jury returned twice to the court to ask questions, and, after an absence of about two hours, returned a verdict of guilty. His Lordship, in addressing the prisoner, said he could hold out no hope of clemency. He sentenced Cassan to be hanged on February 2.

It is said that Cassan at one time lived in Belmont Township.—Havelock Standard.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. Edward H. Soucie of Revelstoke, B.C., is visiting his mother, Mrs. J. Soucie at 236 Perry street. This is his first trip east in 21 years.

The engagement is announced at Campbellford, Ont., of Mary Helena, daughter of Mr. Patrick and the late Mrs. Kelleher, to Mr. Patrick E. McCauley, Trenton, Ont.; the wedding to take place about the middle of January.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

The work on the building is now complete with the exception of the decorating. As the Boys Department is to be entirely completed this week it is proposed to formally open the same with the following programme carried out during the week commencing December 20.

Monday Night—Parents Night.

It is greatly desired that the boys will bring their parents and not only show them the new Boy's Department but allow them to inspect the whole building.

Tuesday Afternoon 4-6 p.m.

Open to all school boys of the city 10-13 years of age.

Wednesday Afternoon 4-6 p.m.

Open to all school boys 13-18 years of age.

Wednesday Evening.

Christmas tree for the boys. Members.

Thursday Afternoon.

Open to all Collegiate boys.

Thursday Night.

Open to all the older boys of the city.

There is no present that may be given to a boy that will give him so much enjoyment for the whole year as a ticket entitling him to the use of the Y.M.C.A. privileges, so in view of the fact that a membership canvass is to be made we trust that the parents and friends of the boys will use "Y" tickets as Christmas gifts.

The bowling and billiards and other senior privileges will be in use by the advisable to delay the formal senior opening of the completed building till after the first of the year. It is proposed to have a week of events beginning the week of January 10, to which the public will be invited to attend and make a thorough inspection of the building which will then be fully completed and decorated. It is proposed later to give a list of the contractors and the work that each has done in connection with the alterations. It may be interesting to note that the alterations and furnishings and decorations will cost the Association in the neighbourhood of $5,550, well within their original estimate. It may also be of interest to note that over 60 men have been employed by the various contractors for a full period or at least a part of the time.

WEDDING BELLS

FROWDE—LOGAN.

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized in Teeswater, Ont., on Tuesday, when Norma B. Logan, eldest daughter of Mrs. T. H. Logan, 1365 Garnet street, Regina, was married to Chester J. Frowde, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Frowde, 490 Walton street, of this city.

The ceremony was held at 12 o'clock, in the presence of relatives and friends at the home of the bride's uncle, Mr. R. J. Hiscox, by whom she was given away.

Lohengrin's wedding march was palyed by Miss Nell Fowler, of Teeswater. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Tier, Methodist minister at Teeswater. During the signing of the register, Miss Fowler sank "Because," and "I Love You Truly."

A dainty dejeuner was served following the ceremony and after receiving congratulations and hearty good wishes. Mr. and Mrs. Frowde left for Toronto and Hamilton on the 3 o'clock train, after which they will reside in Peterborough.

The residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Newton, "The Maples," Monaghe street, Tweed, was the scene of a very quiet wedding ceremony yesterday morning at eleven o'clock when Mr. Fred J. Doughty, the well known and enterprising local representative of the Empire Cream Separator Co., of Toronto, and Miss Mabel Adeline Chamberlain, the adopted daughter of Mr. Newton, were united in matrimonial bonds by the Rev. C. H. Coon of that locality.

The bride was given away by her father, and was attired in a dress of brown satin, with all-over lace trimmings.

Many useful and valuable presents were manifest tokens of the respect and esteem in which the happy couple are held by their numerous friends and acquaintances in both districts represented.

Some forty relatives and friends gathered at Mr. Doughty's house, 640 George Street, last night for a reception in honour of the occasion. After partaking at a well spread table the party adjourned to the parlour and to the accompanying strains of the piano by a gallant lad of the 93rd Batt., a few of "the songs of Zion" were sung. The strains of the music then turning to patriotic and other popular airs, "songs of love and war," for the great part of those present with musical ear adapted to that particular class of music; a very congenial evening was spent. At a reasonable hour the party broke up, leaving with Mr. and Mrs. Doughty, who will take up their residence at 640 George street, the heartiest congratulations and best wishes of all.

OBITUARY

MRS. MILLEN G. DOBBIN.

Death's call came yesterday to Olive L. James, beloved wife of Mr. Millen G. Dobbin of Lindsay, and formerly of Peterborough, at the family residence, Lindsay, in her 33rd year.

The deceased lady had been ill for about ten weeks, but in spite of the best medical attention, and the most careful nursing she passed peacefully away.

The deceased was a daughter of the late Henry James, of Mariposa, and besides her sorrowing husband and little daughter Viola, aged a year and a half, she is survived by her mother who resides in Lindsay, one brother Richard, of Emily, and five sisters, Miss Nellie and Mrs. Barnsley of Lindsay, Mrs. Beadle of Valentia, Mrs. Norman Osborne, of Mariposa and Mrs. Ed Pearce, of Sprucedale. The late Mrs. Dobbin was a Methodist in religion and a member of the Queen Street Church.

Her early death has evoked expressions of sincerest regret from a wide circle of friends who will sympathize with the sorrowing husband and relatives in their bereavement.

The funeral will take place on Friday, December 17th, at 1.30 o'clock, from the family residence, 7 Melbourne Street, East, to Zion, Mariposa. Service in Zion Church.

EYE TALKS SERIES

No. 4—To Get The Best Eye Service

If a watch is so out of order that it will not run, it is necessary to do more than shake it trying to get a few more ticks out of it. You must have it put in running condition.

It is the same with eyes that refuse to do all you want them to without having them tell your brain they are tired by a warning ache, or letting you know they can't see clearly when things seem to waver before you or run into each other in a jumble most unaccountably. That means that you are not getting the service from your eyes that you should, or can. What you want is a pair of Fowler's Pebble Glasses fitted to exactly put your eyes in perfect working order, and your eye troubles will be over.

Norwood Cow Is Canadian Champion

NORWOOD, Dec. 17. — Rauwerd Count De Kol Lady Pauline, owned and developed by Mr. G. A. Brethen Hill-Crest Farm, Norwood, is the newest Canadian Champion. Beginning her record three days after freshening in the semi-official A.R.O. she has produced 29,017 lbs. of milk, 8508 lbs. fat 113,25 lbs. butter, 80 per cent. fat) in 365 consecutive days. This makes her the Canadian champion milk cow by a wide margin, only three cows in the world having exceeded her year's milk production one in California, another in Washington while the third is owned in Massachusetts. Her nearest Canadian competitor is the well-known British Columbia cow, Madam Posch Pauline, with a record of something over 27,000 lbs. Rauwerd averaged nearly 90 lbs. of milk a day for eight months, and for that period exceeded the World's Champion cow, Tilly Alcartra, by a substantial margin.

Rauwerd's daughter, Countess De Kol, was in her time the champion junior three-year-old producer of the world. As a producer and reproducer Rauwerd is, therefore, about all that anyone can desire. The final chapter of her story was told when Mr. Brethen took her to Toronto Exhibition this fall and won second place in a strong milch class. She was then taken to Ottawa and, although milking over eleven months, she was awarded first place in her class.

A pawky Demand.—The lady of the house shut her lips tightly when she saw who had rung the bell. "No" she said, "you were here in July. I never give to a beggar twice. I know he is undeserving of help." "I wouldn't 'ave called, mum," said the tramp, seeing that he need except nothing more from that house, "only I 'oped you might 'ave one of them homemade cakes left like you gave me a month ago. I wants to enlist, but I'm jest a stone too light, and one of your little cakes would 'ave put me right."

Allies Close To Strong Base at Saloniki, See A New Balkan Phase

Anxiety For the Safety of the Allied Force in Greece Has Abated Now That the British and French Are Across the Greek Frontier

LONDON, Dec. 18.—Anxiety for the safety of the allied force in Greece has abated now that the British and French are across the Greek frontier and within a short distance of their strongly fortified base at Salonica, where reinforcements are arriving daily.

But with this phase of the Balkan campaign over keen interest, which also carries with it much anxiety, is manifest in the next moves along the Greek frontier.

Although it seems certain the Bulgars will not invade Greece and no further fighting is expected for the present, the possible moves of the Austro-German forces in the peninsula are causing much concern. However, reports received in London last night from Salonica say the critical days for the Allies are over and that they will be able to hold on at Salonica until they are in a position to resume the offensive.

The position of the Allies army at Kukus, about twenty-three miles north of Salonica, is regarded in military circles as the advanced base selected for a duplication of the famous lines of Torres Vedras, which Wellington's army established in the Peninsula campaign. Between Kukus and Salonica the country is mountainous, with ranges rising in succession to the northward of the Greek port. These ranges can be passed only at certain points by an army, and the intersections of the different roads form so many strong positions.

When the British in the Peninsular campaign against Napoleon found themselves reduced to the narrow tongue of land embracing Lisbon the lines of Torres Vedras were established, which once and for all in the fighting between 1807 and 1814 riveted securely the English hold on the Continent. From these lines of Torres Vedras the British were in time enabled to advance and eventually invaded France by way of the Pyrennees.

Salonica, it is declared, affords to the British and French the same opportunity to establish themselves firmly in the Balkan Peninsula as in the case of Torres Vedras. In the latter position the British formed three lines covering 60 miles of frontage, embracing 150 forts and mounting a total of 600 guns. The second line was at a distance of ten to twelve miles in the rear of the first and the third line was established as a defence against enforced embarkation. A British fleet of great strength lay in the Tagus supplemented by a superb body of marines.

At Salonica, it is pointed out, the Allies have it in their power to cover a distance of fifteen miles inland with the fire of the fleet, and the ability to reinforce at will the force on shore. In no circumstances is it believed possible for the Teutonic invaders to dislodge the Allies from the Salonica position, while so long as the latter remain before that place their presence will demand a large force of Teutons, necessarily drawn from the western and eastern frots. The allied fleet will be enabled by the very nature of things, it is declared, to play an active part in any operations undertaken by the Germans against Salonica, and this part must be a telling one.

The same situation with reference to the Serbian army, which has retreated into Albania, holds true. Therefore it will be able, it is declared, to intrench itself at Scutaria or Avalon, and with a base on the sea front that base can be additionally protected by the fire of an allied fleet.

OUTLOOK IN THE BALKANS IS MUCH IMPROVED

LONDON, Dec. 17— The Arab reports say the Turks lost two thousand men in their attack on the British of Dec. 12th

LONDON, Dec. 17.—The outlook in the Balkans is much improved. The Italians will attack the enemy's flank

TORONTO, Dec. 17.—The Manufacturers' Life Insurance Company has been taken over by the Sun Life.

ATHENS, Dec. 17.— The Bulgarian Government will raise a new army of one hundred thousand men.

KIRKWALL, Dec. 17. — The Ford peace ship has been released and is now proceeding to Christiana.

THE HUNGARIAN LEADERS ARE STILL DEMANDING PEACE

Demonstration in Favour of Peace in the Hungarian Parliament on December 7th—Italian Liner Sunk by a Submarine

LONDON, Dec. 17.—Reports that the Hungarian leaders are demanding peace were revived to-day by the Morning Post, which printed a Budapest letter to-day, reporting a peace demonstration in the Hungarian parliament on December 7.

Count Karolyi, the Independent leader, declared that since the Central Powers had defeated all their enemies and conquered Serbia they should offer peace terms.

The Hungarians, the Count said, have done their share to bring victory to the Austro-German case and, therefore have a right to urge peace negotiations.

LONDON, Dec. 17. — The Italian liner "Porto Said," 5,000 tons, was sunk by a submarine in the Mediterranean.

Are Grateful To Canada

Serbians Voice Appreciation of Donations and Sympathy

LONDON, Dec. 17. — The Serbian Minister desires the Canadian press to express his grateful thanks to the people in every province of Canada for their active sympathy and generous contributions in relief of the distress in Serbia. His Excellency specially mentions the work done by many Canadian doctors and nurses in Serbia, which in the early part of the year had the most valuable effect in preventing the further spread of the epidemic.

The Minister announces that Serbian relief funds are still appealing to benevolence for starving people in the country and for hundreds and thousands of desperate, starving refugees who are dispersed in Greek villages, in Albania deserts, or in the rocky hollows of Montenegro. Contributions will be gratefully accepted through the Serbian Ministry, 195 Queen's Gate, London.

CHANGE IN THE MARRIAGE ACT

Deputation of Methodists Induces Hon. W J. Hanna to Have Provision Made Province-Wide.

That the Marriage Act be so amended as to permit a license to be granted a couple who have lived in the province fifteen days, instead of 15 days in the county in which the marriage takes place, was the request made to the Hon. W. J. Hanna, provincial secretary. A deputation consisting of Rev. J. H. McBain, Tillsonburg; Rev. Geo. Barker, Guelph, and Rev. W. E. Wilson, London, urged the change on behalf of the Hamilton Methodist Conference.

The ministers said that Section 19 of the Marriage Act provided that a license should not be granted nor should a marriage ceremony be performed for two people who had not lived in the county, in which the wedding was to take place, for fifteen days prior to the ceremony. This rule gave little protection to the minister, as he was always confronted by couples from other counties who wished to be married by him and yet they had not lived in his county for fifteen days.

After listening to the arguments, Mr. Hanna said that Section 19 of the act had never been pointed out to him in that way. He promptly issued instructions to his department to have an amendment to the act prepared so that Section 19 would be made province-wide and it would only be necessary for a couple to be residents of the province fifteen days prior to the ceremony. The amendment will be submitted at the next session of the legislature.

"SNOWED UNDER"

LONDON, Dec. 16.—In the House of Lords yesterday, the Earl of Derby, Director of Recruiting, when questioned regarding the results of his recruiting campaign, declined to give any figures in advance of Premier Asquith's statement, which will be made public next week. The Earl declared, however, that "we were absolutely snowed under" with recruits last week and that the gross total of enrollments was very large. He added that it would be impossible to call up the married men until the country was absolutely convinced that the single men had come forward to enlist to such an extent as to leave only a negligible quantity unaccounted for.

"We must keep faith to the pledge the Premier gave the married men," said the Earl. "Nobody can yet say whether or not the single men have come forward in sufficient numbers. That will be known Tuesday.

"Only men who have actually enlisted and been attested under the group system have been taken into account. Their willingness to join was not considered."

BULGARS WILL RESPECT THE GREEK NEUTRALITY

Announce They Will Not Pursue the Allies Further at Present—Western Front May Be the Scene of a Grand German Offensive—Russians Commence Big Drive on the German Lines.

AUSTRIA REPLIES TO NOTE

ATHENS, Dec. 17.— The Bulgars announce that out of respect for Greek neutrality they will not pursue the allies further at present.

LONDON, Dec. 17.—Huge convoys of German ammunition is pouring into Flanders. One report says the Kaiser is expected on the western front to witness a grand German offensive.

GENEVA, Dec 17.—Vienna newspapers which commented on the American note were suppressed.

LONDON, Dec. 17— Petrograd despatches intimate that the Russians have commenced a big drive on the German lines

LONDON, Dec. 17.—The British government will in future prevent shipments of feed by parcel post from the United States to Germany.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—Austria's reply to the United States note has been received, but not published.

WINNIPEG, Man., Dec. 17.—A German prisoner here admits a plot to destroy munition plants in the United States and bridges in Canada.

Duke Is Desirous of Paying His Debts

LONDON, Dec. 16.—The adjourned meeting of the creditors of the Duke of Manchester was held in the Bankruptcy Court. The Duke is confined to his room in Paris. It was announced that he was desirous of paying his debts in full when arrangements have been completed, and that the Duke had great objection to be adjudicated a bankrupt. He thinks, according to his representatives, that his personal effects will be sufficient to cover his indebtedness.

The meeting was closed after the official receiver remarked that any application against the adjudication could be made before the Bankruptcy Court.

REINFORCEMENTS ARE SENT UP THE TIGRIS

LONDON, Dec. 17.—Mr. J. Austen Chamberlain, Secretary for India, today received despatches from General Sir John Nixon, commanding the Mesopotamia expedition, and communicated their contents to the House of Commons.

General Townshend, who is in charge of the British forces which retreated from the vicinity of Bagdad, reported to General Nixon that there was a heavy musketry fire for an hour on the British north front on December 12, but that the Turks did not attempt an advance. A heavy attack made on a village on the right bank of the Tigris was repulsed. On December 13 all was quiet, according to the report.

General Nixon's despatches added that British reinforcements continue to be sent up the Tigris.

BRITTANIA'S OFFICE RAIDED BY POLICE

LONDON, Dec. 17.—The police raided the offices of Brittania, the official organ of the Women's Social and Political Union and seized its outfit of types and other equipment. The journal was formerly known as "The Suffragette."

The raid was the result of an official order from Major-General Sir Francis Lloyd, commanding the London district. Scotland Yard men took charge of all the type and copy for the current issue.

"The raid was no surprise to me," said Miss Annie Kenney of the suffragette organization, "as the authorities took exception to our comments on Sir Edward Grey and a certain British General in the Balkans. They cannot suppress us because as long as we have facts we shall publish them. Where there is intrigue we shall expose it. When we have a statement to make we shall make it what ever happens."

INDIAN SUMMER.

The Term May Have Had Its Origin in the Far East.

The origin of the term "Indian summer," like that of the word "blizzard," has been the subject of much research. It has been traced back only as far as the latter part of the eighteenth century, and it did not become common until after the first decade of the nineteenth.

Many explanations of the name have been offered, all of which assume that the term "Indian" used in this connection refers to the American Indians.

A recent note in the Monthly Weather Review calls attention to a totally different use of this term, in which the reference is not to the American Indians, but to East India.

Under the British board of trade regulations one of the load lines marked on ships bears the initials "I. S.," this being the maximum depth to which vessels can be loaded for voyages during the "Indian summer"—i. e., the fine season in the Indian seas.

How long has the term "Indian summer" been used in this sense? It is not recorded in any dictionary nor apparently in any work on meteorology. Is it possible that our autumnal Indian summer was so named by sailors or travelers who saw in it a resemblance to the fine weather attending the northeast monsoon in India?

When to Stop Advertising.

An English journal requested a number of the largest advertisers to give their opinions concerning the best time to stop advertising, and the following replies were received:

When the population ceases to multiply and the generation that crowded on after you and never heard of you stops coming on.

When you have convinced everybody whose life will touch yours that you have better goods and lower prices than he can get anywhere else.

When you stop making fortunes solely through the direct use of this mighty agent.

When younger and fresher houses in your line cease starting up.

When you would rather have your own way and fail than take advice and win.

A Candid Caller.

A small boy had been coerced into making an afternoon call with his mother. He had rebelled vehemently over the calling business, saying: "Aw, what you want to make me go there for? She hasn't any boys, and it won't be any fun."

But, dressed in his best suit, he had put on his company manners and had behaved very well indeed, and when their hostess served refreshments he began to feel glad that he had come.

When it came time to leave he held out his hand, saying gallantly:

"Goodby; I've had a good time"—and then, right while his young mother was beaming her approval, he added honestly—"a whole lot better time than I expected to have."

A Benevolent Refusal.

"Senator, I wish you would give me a job as your private secretary."

"Oh, my boy," responded the oily senator, "don't get mixed up with the government service. Nothing to it. Ruins a young man. Besides, I have promised that position to my son."

Cynical.

"Is he a good after dinner speaker?"

"If there is such a thing as a good after dinner speaker I presume you'd call him one."—Detroit Free Press.

Naturally.

"I saw Mabel buying rouge the other day."

"That gives color to the report that she paints."

Man's Adventurous Side.

There is always a temptation to cross a bridge which has been condemned, man being an adventurous cuss at heart.

FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW

Druggist Says Ladies Are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Hair that loses its colour and lustre or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even colour, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture by asking at any drug store for a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. Besides, it takes off dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully drakening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

An Ancient Tragedy.

A historical paper in Lord Montagu's collection in London tells of a strange tragedy "done in Holborn, a little before Christmas," several centuries ago: "A boy seven years old came up into a gentleman's chamber and prattled to him and drew his sword and flourished with it. The gentleman, being in bed, wondered to see the boy toss his blade so and said: 'So, good boy, thou hast done well. Put in the sword.' The boy, persisting, the gentleman rose and held him the scabbard, and the rude handed lad, thinking to sheath the sword, lustily chopt it into his body. Company were called. One offered to strike the child. 'Let him alone,' quoth the gentleman. 'God is just.' This boy's father did I kill five years since and none knew. Now he hath revenged it.' And the gentleman died the second dressing."

The Last of the Ruffs.

In 1702 the rage for ruffs, such as are seen on many monumental effigies, began to decline. A writer in the London Chronicle of that year says of gentlemen's dress, "Their cuffs entirely cover their wrists, and only the edges of their ruffles are to be seen." It is said that a distaste for ruffs was first created so far back as 1613, when a woman named Turner wore them on her trial for the murder by poison of Sir Thomas Overbury. The French revolution of 1789 much influenced British fashion, and the picturesque cocked hat and ruffles then gave way generally to round hats and small cuffs. The period of their final disuse cannot be easily determined, as men of old fashioned or eccentric habits have worn ruffled shirt fronts within quite recent memory.

THE SECRETARY BIRD.

It Kicks Like a Mule and Can Swallow a Snake Whole.

The rarest and most valuable birds in the New York zoological garden are the strange pair of secretary birds quartered in the ostrich house. "Secretary birds" they are called because of the crest of long dark plumes that rises from the back of their heads, giving them the appearance of a clerk with a bunch of quill feathers behind his ear. It's an aristocratic name, but the thing that makes the secretary bird valuable is not his looks. The natives of South Africa love him because he can kick like a mule.

Toss into his cage a snake, no matter how vicious, and the fight begins immediately. The bird cautiously approaches the snake with wings widespread to escape the sudden lunges by fright if necessary. Once, twice, three times perhaps the snake lunges. The bird darts back, waiting his chance. At last it comes, and one of those long, hard legs shoots out like the hoof of a mule, landing squarely on the snake's head. It reels and falls back stunned to be knocked out completely by a second blow. And then its victor proceeds to swallow it whole.

In South Africa the birds are regarded as a great protection. They are affectionate mates and always travel together. When pursued they spread their wings and make off over the ground with the speed of a running horse.—Every Week.

Victor Hugo.

Victor Hugo was the wealthiest of the nineteenth century authors and also the hardiest. At one time he made less than 1,000 francs last him and his brother for eighteen months, and one chop would serve for lunch three days in succession. But this early abstinence did not spoil Hugo's digestion, for at the age of eighty-three he cracked nuts with his teeth and ate oranges as some folk eat apples—peel and all.

Then the Row Started.

Mrs. Snappem (who has been suffering from toothache)—Thank goodness, I've had that tooth out at last! Mr. Snappem—Happy tooth! Mrs. Snappem—What do you mean? Mr. Snappem—It's out of the reach of your tongue.

The Grind.

"What are you doing now?"

"Two a day," said the vaudeville actor. "And you?"

"I can't quite equal that," responded the popular novelist. "Two a week is about my limit."

Moral Suasion and a Strap.

"She seems to have abandoned her moral suasion ideas relative to the training of children."

"She has."

"How did it happen?"

"Well, I was largely instrumental in bringing about the change. You see, she has no children of her own, and I grew weary of her constant preaching and theorizing, so I loaned her our Willie."

"Loaned her your boy?"

"Precisely. She was to have him a week on her solemn promise to confine herself entirely to moral suasion."

"Did she keep her promise?"

"She did, but at the expiration of the week she came to me with tears in her eyes and pleaded for permission to whale him just once."

The Nebular Hypothesis.

The nebular hypothesis assumes that the matter composing our sun and planets once existed as a vast gaseous nebula, spiral in form, having an inconceivably high temperature and slowly revolving on an axis passing through its center of gravity. As the mass cooled by radiating heat into space a contraction of volume with accelerated axial rotation would ensue, in accordance with well known dynamic principles. The centrifugal force thus rapidly increased would cause the separation of large masses which would, by mutual attraction of their own particles, gradually assume a spherical form and become planets. By a repetition of this process planet after planet would be thrown off and the central glowing sun would remain.

The Place For Lovers.

Ian MacLaren wrote that Gaelic is the best of all languages for terms of endearment, that it has fifty ways of saying "darling." The old tongue of the Isle of Man, a picturesque island almost equally near to Ireland, Scotland and England, is said to be even better furnished with terms for the use of lovers, that it has or had ninety-seven ways of saying "my dear."

Irish Language.

The "natural language" of the Irishman is the Gaelic, the old Celtic tongue, which is still spoken, to a certain extent in Ireland, Wales, the Highlands of Scotland and northern France, where the remnants of the Celts are still dwelling.

Flat Failure.

"You department store people have everything. It's a wonder you don't have a department to supply women with husbands."

"We tried that once, but the percentage of returned goods was too large."

He who has injured thee was either stronger or weaker. If weaker spare him, if stronger spare thyself.—Seneca.

A PAIN IN THE BACK

COMES FROM THE KIDNEYS.

When a pain asserts itself in the back you may rest assured that it comes from some derangement of the kidneys, for were there not something wrong with the kidneys the back would be strong and well, and would be without a pain or an ache.

For backache, lame or weak back, there is no remedy to equal Doan's Kidney Pills.

They take out the stitches, twitches, and twinges, limber up the stiff back, and give perfect relief and comfort to all poor, suffering women who suffer so much from a weak, lame, aching back.

Miss Iva A. Ferris, Mill Cove, N.B., writes: "I suffered for two years from pains in my back. I tried several kinds of patent medicines, and was almost discouraged until I noticed your advertisement of Doan's Kidney Pills. I thought it would not hurt to try them. I had only used two boxes before I noticed a great difference, and after I had taken four boxes I was completely cured. I would not be without them in the house. I can recommend them to all I know."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

WATCH SORE THROATS

because swollen glands or inflamed membranes often affect other tissues and lung trouble easily follows.

As Nature's corrector of throat troubles the pure cod liver oil in Scott's Emulsion is speedily converted into germ-resisting tissue; its tested glycerine is curative and healing, while this wholesome emulsion relieves the trouble and upbuilds the forces to resist tubercular germs and avert the weakening influence which usually follows.

If any member of your family has a tender throat, get a bottle of Scott's Emulsion to-day. Physicians prescribe it to avert throat troubles, overcome bronchial disorders and strengthen the lungs. No harmful drugs. Always insist on Scott's.

Burns' Letter Sold for £24 at Inverness.—For the purpose of raising funds for comforts for the Cameron Highlanders a free gift sale was held at Inverness recently. Some rare articles were sent in by the nobility and gentry of the Highlands. The articles for sale included a letter written and signed by Robert Burns at Mossgiel in 1786. It was presented by the widow of Colonel Leslie Fraser, and was purchased by Captain Dunlop for £24. The collection also included a letter written and signed by Sir Walter Scott.

The correct posture for sleep is to lie on the right side with the limbs stretched out to their full length, and the arms either straight down by the body or in any comfortable position, provided they are not raised above the head; the mouth should be closed, and all the muscles of the body should be relaxed.

HOW SCOTTISH WOMEN WORK

There is a great deal said and pictured about the way English women of all classes have pitched into the work entailed on those who stay at home from the war. The work is just as important as at the front, and perhaps not quite as dangerous. Nor are the English women alone in their industries. We have seen recently an article from the London Times detailing some of the unusual activities of the women of Scotland.

Two fields in which the people of Scotland excel are marine engineering and shipbuilding. Since the war they have greatly extended their operations and the work being done is described as follows:

"One of them is larger than any of the individual Sheffield works and is, indeed, the largest single establishment that we possess in this country. In size it is second only to Krupp's at Essen, and not a bad second. The firm is at present directly employing about 40,000 persons, and the great bulk of them, including 4,000 women, are in these huge works. They are engaged mainly in making guns and shells of all patterns and sizes. Some idea of the varied requirements of modern warfare may be gained from the fact that the firm is at present turning out 77 different varieties of shells. So the manager of the shell department, who is a great expert, informed me. The statement will surprise even engineers who know something of the subject, and I subsequently thought that I must have misunderstood him. So I took occasion to ask another manager elsewhere in order to verify the point. He accepted the figure without the slightest hesitation and said it was quite likely. He was making 14 different kinds himself in a comparatively small factory. Nothing by the way is more noticeable in going through a series of these war factories than the enthusiasm and devotion of the workshop managers. They are wrapped up in their work and intensely keen about the results. All the managers and the foremen in these war workshops prefer women to men, not because they are cheaper, for they are not, in the sense usually meant, and it would make no difference to the manager if they were, but because they do their best to help, and put no artificial obstacles in the way of the highest results.

The most noticeable feature of the armament works—by which I mean the great establishments normally engaged in producing weapons—in both of the districts with which I am now dealing, is the employment of women. In one they have been employed to some extent for years, but the number has now been greatly increased; as I mentioned above, there are now some 4,000 of them. In the other they are a new departure, like the military ammunition on which they are engaged, and though the number is small the case is very interesting. They have a factory to themselves, not a new building, but a converted one, and by no means capacious one for convenience, but the amount of work they do is astonishing. I trust that the censor will allow me to state the output of this factory. The information possesses no military value but great industrial interest. There are 350 girls with only eight skilled men to look after them, and they work in two shifts. They are making high explosive shells and they turn out many thousands a week. There is no flinching-the-gun outburst of energy. On the contrary they have gradually worked up to it since March, when they started. Of course they vary in experience, but the acceleration of particular operations up to three and four times the rate at first attained is common. The manager who is justly proud of his khaki feminine troops and knows exactly what every girl is doing showed me one that had increased from 30 to 120, another from 40 to 150, and so on. The automatic increase of output thus achieved by practice alone has an important bearing on the product of newly organized resources, if it is allowed to operate freely, as it is with the women. I saw a girl doing a particular operation on a lathe which had been previously worked by a skilled man, she was turning 166 per shift, against his 30. The champion of the factory is a girl who is machining the copper bands on shells; her "record" is 1614 in a 10-hour shift, or say 161 per hour. And each shell has to be lifted into position and lifted out again. The weight raised in an hour can be easily calculated. These are Scottish girls. They are doing just the same work as those in the national shell factory at Keighley, which is of much the same size. The work is not like that on fuses which in the main consists in feeding light material into an automatic machine but it is well within their capacity. They are visibly and avowedly happy in doing it. They earn good money. The minimum is 18s 9d a week but one who cannot earn more is of no use. Most of them earn a great deal more; the average earnings in some shops are 30s; in others 40s. Some earn up to 4 pounds. The champion mentioned above has earned 5 pounds. But it is not the money only. Their hearts are in it. "These girls," said the manager, "are working on honor." They are helping the war, and every shell they turn out is a shot at the enemy."

Plump Thighs Sure Sign Of Good Christmas Turkey

BUFFALO, Dec. 16.—Harry D. Lamon chief of the division of poultry branch of the Department of Agriculture has issued a bulletin giving instructions now to buy the Christmas turkey according to science and not chance.

The purchase of a Christmas turkey, Mr. Lamen therefore declares, is a simple matter, once you know how. Of course, everybody wants a tender bird, old enough to be well flavored, but young enough to be palatable, and that is what Mr. Lamon tries to make clear.

"The best turkey for home consumption," says Uncle Sam's turkey expert, "is one about a year old. If it is too young the meat will taste 'flat'; if too old, the labor of mastication will probably be too hard. As a general rule, a hen turkey is better than a gobbler. Care must be taken to insure tenderness by feeling of the flesh and lifting up the wings to see whether the skin breaks easily. The older a turkey, the tougher the skin.

"A prospective buyer should see that the turkey he chooses is well fleshed across the loins or thighs. The average buyer looks at the breast of a turkey and lets it go at that. The thigh are a much better criterion. If the bird is well fleshed there, it is almost a certainty that it will prove to be abundantly supplied with meat on the breast. But the contrary is not always the rule. Consideration of these two points, age and the degree of flesh, will insure to the purchaser the maximum of return for the money invested, and will make the principal part of the Christmas dinner a feast for an epicure.

"There is one more point that I ought to emphasize: Do not select too small a turkey for the number of persons you expect to feed. If you don't care to cook a very large turkey, fearing that it may be old and tough, invest in two small ones."

"Many persons whose sole acquaintance with the national bird consists of consuming it at the table are unaware that there are many kinds and varieties of turkeys, not all of them suited for food purpose. The bronze turkey is the most popular, and therefore the one that is in most demand in the Eastern markets. Texas raises a great many of these birds and they also are found abundantly in Northern New York and Central Illinois.

"Texas, particularly, has been unceasing in her efforts to break into the exclusive turkey trade of the big cities, and everything possible has been done to foster the raising of these birds in the Lone Star state. The growing of turkeys throughout the Union appears to have improved as the result of a determined effort on the part of producers of what is known as 'standard-bred' stock to demonstrate that it is more profitable to use pure breeding stock than the smaller and less vigorous stock of days gone by.

TO BAR GERMANY'S FLAG ON SEAS TILL BELGIUM IS PAID

Great Britain and the other nations of the Allies never will consent to peace with Germany until full indemnification for the destruction wrought in Belgium has been paid in full, according to an official despatch received in this city by British agents and which was learned yesterday. The message came in cipher from a high officer of the British War Staff and reads:

"One part of the Allies' peace terms. On no account will the German merchant marine flag be permitted to be seen on the high seas until the fullest indemnification has been paid. The Allies have the power to do this and we shall use it."

This message was interpreted by British agents here as meaning no peace will be concluded until devastated Belgium has received full reparation. It means the great fleet of German merchant steamships tied up at New York, Philadelphia, Boston and other ports along the Atlantic coast, will be forced to lie idle until the debt civilization demands has been paid. It means these vessels, valued at more than $100,000,000 will be held practically under mortgage for the little nation that gave its life and delayed the Teutonic forces in their dash on Paris.

Further, according to British agents, it means all of these vessels will remain in harbor probably for years to come, unless Germany agrees to pay the full price demanded.

It can be said with full authority that British agents here believe Austria will break with the United States over the Ancona note. With Austria and America at odds, Germany, of course, must follow, they say, and the result will be a full and harmonious working arrangement by the United States with Great Britain and France. Word has been received here from Washington that the next two weeks will show a determined stand taken by the administration, and that there will be no more dallying with situations of extreme emergency. It even is said in some quarters that the United States will be drawn into the war, but that this country's activities for the most part will be strictly on the moral side, which alone will be sufficient to bring the conflict to a speedy determination in favor of the Allies.

"The United States will not delay any further in her treating with Germany or Austria," said one British agent. "When the time comes for her to enter the war she will play a moral part. This will be for greater force than anything yet has shown in the war. It will result in throwing around Germany completely a wall that will isolate her from the rest of the world.

"An illustration of the far reaching effect of this may be taken from the matter of high explosives alone. The Allies have received practically none from this country until the middle of last month. There have been sporadic efforts to get munitions in quantities abroad, but they have been futile because even this country was not prepared. When the war started contracts were placed here for enormous supplies of ammunition, equipment and other material. It took the United States manufacturers, even with their wonderful resources, almost a year to get their factories properly organized. The result has been that shells and high explosives are only now just beginning to go abroad."

Avoid Harsh Pills! Doctors Condemn Them

Most Pills unfortunately are harsh and drastic; they cause inflammation and great discomfort. Rather like nature is the way a pill should act, mildly but effectively. Science has established nothing more satisfactory as a family pill than the old reliable pills of Dr. Hamilton's, which for forty years have had a premier place in America. Dr. Hamilton's Pills are very mild and can be effectively used by the aged, by children, and indeed by men and women of all ages. No stomach or bowel medicine is more reliable. No remedy for indigestion, headache or biliousness is so effective, so mild, so certain to quickly cure as a 25c box of Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRL'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

This little frock is very effective when developed in two contrasting materials and it is much liked for combinations of plaids and plaid goods.

It has a plain waist, with high neck and long sleeves, and this waist closes in the centre of the back. So also does the skirt, which is made of a straight length of material, with plain panel in front and pleats turning backward and meeting in the centre of the back.

The distinctive feature of the frock is the overblouse. This is made with a seam on each shoulder, but it is intended to be slipped on over the head. The neck is quite open and the sides entirely so, joined only at the lower edge, where there is a band facing, resembling a hem turned on the right side.

Pretty frocks in this style are made of plain colored serge, with underwaist of white goods or of some bright color in taffetas or messaline. Plaids and stripes are also effective used in the same manner, and such a style gives an excellent chance for remodelling old frocks and utilizing perhaps parts of dresses of older members of the family.

The dress pattern, No. 7410, is cut in sizes 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. Medium size requires for dress, 1⅞ yards of 44 inch material, pleated frilling, ¾ yard; for overblouse, 1⅛ yards of 36 inch goods.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10c to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 15c.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

"A LITTLE CHILD SHALL LEAD"

Being a Story of How a Husband and Wife Were Reunited on the Eve of Christmas

"Terrible storm!" Arnold remarked as they stepped off the train into a smother of wind-harried snow.

"Terrible," returned the traveling man with whom he had been conversing for the past hour. "I think I'll drop in at the club on my way home," he added. "They may need me."

"Club?" Arnold interrogated.

"Yes; the Good Fellow's Club—a sort of hold-over from Christmas. Come along! It's right on the way uptown."

Without waiting for a reply, he plunged out into the storm, and Arnold followed. He had no intention of accepting the invitation, but his hotel was within a few blocks, and he welcomed the walk after the inaction of a long journey.

For some time they plodded on in silence. The wind roared down the nearly deserted streets, driving the fine snow into the face so that it almost blinded him, and snapping his long ulster so tightly around his legs that he found progress difficult.

"Here we are!" the other man shouted; and Arnold, suddenly realizing that he needed shelter in which to catch his breath, followed him in.

"Not much to see," the traveling man explained. "Just a place to store what was left from Christmas, and to receive what the boys send in from time to time. They've sort of got the habit, you know. There's going to be a lot of suffering if this keeps up, Marshall." He turned to a tall man who was untying a bundle of blankets, and Arnold was left to look about him.

As the other man had said, there was not much to see: a row of tables piled high with clothing and food; a few sleds, looking stolid and unattractive beneath a pile of fussy little doll-buggies; a counter littered with toys; and a dozen or so people, blue-nosed and shivering, crowded around a hissing radiator.

"I must be going; my boy has been watching for me ever since that train came in," the traveling man at length announced, turning the collar of his fur coat up around his ears. "In the name of that same boy," he continued solemnly, laying a bill into the hands of a little blonde woman, who nodded understandingly.

"In the name of my boy"—Arnold coverd the bill with another—"who never was." He made the mental reservation under his breath much as he had crossed his fingers in his pockets when he was a boy.

"Going home, too? They had reached the outer door, and the light of expectancy was deepening in the older man's eyes.

"Have no home," Arnold answered shortly.

"Well, that's tough luck on a day like this. Either you've procrastinated or Providence has been most unkind."

"It's a little of both, I think," Arnold admitted gloomily. "Good-by. Glad to have met you."

They shook hands outside the door, and the other man almost immediately was lost in the storm. Arnold thrust his hands deep into his pockets, bowed his head before the wind, and started uptown; but scarcely had he got beyond the shelter of the doorway when he plunged over a child coming from the opposite direction.

"Why—why, bless my soul!" He caught her up to keep from falling over her and steadied himself against a railing. "What are you doing here?" he demanded impatiently

She wriggled from his arms to the pavement. "I'm going the Good Fellow's Club" she shrilled over her shoulder as she waddled on, "to get someing to eat and someing to play with."

Arnold followed her back to the door. He would see her safely in. The people in there would know what to do with her. But even with his hand outstretched above the little head, she wabbled uncertainly, and, though he caught at her with his awkward, unaccustomed hands, she slipped through them, and fell heavily upon the ice-covered steps.

"It slipped right out from under me when I put my foot on it," she whimpered accusingly, when he again had her in his arms.

"And then flew up and hit you, didn't it?" supplemented Arnold grimly.

"An' hurt me awful. Oh, see! The blood is sifting out of my elbow!"

He found it "sifting" from a dozen tiny punctures in the plump arm when he stood her on a counter besides the hissing radiator.

"I stick court-plaster on Lollipop when she leaks sawdust," she offered whimsically, craning her neck to see her wounds

"Where in the world—" began the little blonde woman as they crowded about the two

"Found her outside," Arnold explained briefly "She says she wants—what did you say you wanted?" He felt that these people must hear the request to appreciate it.

She stood erect and faced them: a comical little figure whose only visible garment was a dirty kitchen apron that involved her from head to foot. It evidently belonged to a portly woman, for there was a large worn place just below the belt, through which she had thrust her head; and its long strings were wrapped round and round her waist. Whether it was doing duty as a dress, or she had put it on for extra warmth, Arnold could not guess; but it so offended his nostrils with its odor of stale food that he glanced speculatively at the garment-laden table.

"I want—" She stopped short, and, raising both hands, impatiently put back a cloud of wind-blown, hazel curls. Arnold promptly forgot the apron in the loveliness the action revealed. Rosy, dimpled, with a pouting little mouth, whose seriousness the dancing eyes belied, the face was so unlike what he would have expected the curls to hide, that he stared in amazement.

"By Jove!" the tall man exclaimed; and the little blonde woman and the bald-headed man and all the rest echoed his surprise in their various ways.

"I want someing to eat and someing to play with," she told them impressively.

"The little darling!" A woman voiced the sentiments of most of them.

"She's hungry!" a man growled, as though accusing all of them.

"Your mother sent you, maybe? insinuated the bald-headed man.

"No; I was so hungry I snuk out while she was asleep. She has a awful headache."

She had scarcely finished when they were offering her food, the tall man, in his eagerness, thrusting half of a most pernicious mince-pie into the more than willing little hands; but Arnold with a strange, delightful sense of proprietorship, took her only a sandwich and a glass of milk, and waved the rest away.

"Do you want her to have 'a awful headache,' too? he demanded sternly.

"You're right," agreed the little blonde woman. "But we'll send home a basket of good things with her. Her mother will know what she ought to have."

"Oh, you mustn't!" the child demurred. "She wouldn't take it, and—oh, you mustn't.

Knowing glances passed among those about the table, heads wre nodded understandingly, and Arnold caugt the words "pride" and "better days"; till the child prickled the bubble of their sympathy by explaining:

"'Cause—don't you see?—she'd 'pank me like everyfing for running away. She says when she lay down, 'Dolores, if you stir out of this room I'll 'pank you good and plenty, so I will.'" She augmented the threat by tapping her palm with a plump forefinger.

"But how did you know where to come?" some one asked.

"I've been here before," she returned shortly, with a quick, furtive glance into the faces about her.

"But we must take you home, dear," the bald-headed man announced, rather pompously. "We couldn't let you out alone in such a storm."

"I comed alone, didn't I?" she remindd, intent on her sandwich.

"That was different. Come, tell us where you live."

"Over there." An airy wave of the small hand included half the city.

"But what street? What number?" The tone was peremptory now.

The sandwich finished, she set down the cup; and, seeking out the questioner from those about her, regarded him with a sort of wondering patience. "I s'pect I'm too little to read numbers, and I know I ain't big enough to know about streets."

"She does know!" the little blonde woman whispered delightedly to Arnold.

"Try again, my friend," he advised soberly. "Though small, still, she is a woman.

"Of course you don't know about streets; but how did you get here?" The tall man took up the questioning with a patronising glance at the discomfited one. He had children of his own. "You walked, of course—maybe from just around the corner?"

"I didn't walk: I runned," she corrected mildly.

"Very far? A block? Two blocks?"

"Oh, five or twelve, I guess; and I rode 'em mostly on the car." She had taken another cup of milk, and was now selecting a sandwich with great care.

"You have money to ride on the car?" the little blonde woman asked in surprise.

"No. I told the man I'd give him a nickel the next time; and he said, 'Oh, you ki-id!' and set me right up next the stove."

The gruff, half-pitying, half-laughing "Oh, you ki-id!" brough a ripple of unsteady laughter from her hearers.

"Then he put me off, and I was 'most here when he runned over me an' here I am." She hurried through the explanation as though anxious to be through with the tiresome subject; and, with it done, her cherubic smile beamed impartially on all. On Arnold, who had sat down beside the table, she bestowed an affectionate little pat.

"Let me see, he pondered, with twinkling eyes. "Where does she live?"

The two questioners grinned at each other sheepishly.

"I'm coming," Dolores announced suddenly; and, a cup in one hand and a sandwich in the other, she stepped fearlessly off the table into the lap of the astonished man. She made no effort to save herself when she slipped off her precarious footing, so sure was she that he would not let her fall.

"My feet's 'most froze, and so am I," she chattered, when Arnold, with awkward tenderness, had seated her on his knee.

"She is cold," he corroborated. "Haven't you something warm over there—something that will take the place of this filthy apron?"

"The little red cloak!" the tall man declared happily, starting toward the table.

"The very thing!" agreed the little blonde woman; but when she would have untied the apron-strings Dolores unaccountably held them fast.

"You can't take it off!" she announced defiantly.

"Why, dear? The cloak is warm—"

"'Cause—well, maybe 'cause I ain't got much on under it."

"The modest little thing!" murmured one of the women.

"It as least shuts in some of the odor of pancakes and fried hominy," Arnold remarked gratefully when the red cloak was buttoned snugly up to the round little chin.

"It's Tillie's apron. We don't ever have no pancakes and hominy," she confided sorrowfully. "Seems like we don't ever have anyfing, but headaches—and 'pankin's. She set the empty can on the table, daintily flicked a crumb from the red coat, then, glancing up, read aright the expression on the faces about her

"I need the 'pankin's, an' they hurt her worse'n they do me," she told them loyally; "but it's—it's—"

"Your father?" some one suggested in a low voice.

Dolores pursed up her rosy lips and frowned meditatively. It became very still in the big room. There was no sound but the purr of the relenting radiator and the rattle of the sleet against the panes. She seemed to have forgotten them entirely as, her face over Arnold's hands, that she had clasped tightly in both of hers, she pondered the question. Then, suddenly, in a high-pitched treble, totally unlike her own soft voice, she spoke.

"My dad comes home soused 'most every night and cleans out the place. Oh, he's the limit, my dad is; the low-down ornery cuss!"

Arnold started so violently that he nearly toppled her off his lap; the others gasped and fell back precipitately; and Dolores, seeing the impression she was creating, warmed to her work.

"He pawned Benny's shoes yesterday, and it's a God's mercy the young 'un didn't get the con, or something, totin' home the clothes barefooted. An' he beats me up regular, and slaps the baby something scandalous.

"Terrible!" "Awful!" "This is likely to be a case for the Society, after all!" were some of the comments Arnold heard. He did not analyze his own feelings, but his arm closed fiercely about her at the thought of her father, and something primal surging up within him clenched his fists.

"We had another baby, but he died. He was an awful cute kid." She sighed mournfully and clasped her little hands in her lap. There seemed to be nothing to say, only, the men shuffled uneasily, and the women shook their heads. Arnold held her closer as he saw her lips quiver and the tears slowly fill the big eyes; but his sudden laughter was hysterical when she added reminiscently:

"Gee! but we had a swell funeral all right! It was as good as a show!"

"Does your father work?" asked the bald-headed man.

"New! He just tears things up an' keps Maw from workin', if he can. He kicked down the stove last week and busted it." She paused to laugh unpleasantly, then went on: "I don't know as it makes much difference though; we don't ever have enough wood to singe a cat!"

"Your mama washes?" some one asked.

For a moment the child stared, wide-eyed at the questioner; then, dropping her head till her curls hid her face, she "nuzzled" into the bosom of the little red cloak. "Yes, she washes," she returned, serious again; "but Dad didn't do an endurin' thing but loaf around and eat the grub away from us young 'uns. Oh, Me 'n' me do sure wish he'd get jugged peace." She sighed dolefully and shook her head.

Arnold groaned. Such language! Such experiences! In his ignorance he had believed them to be the portion only of the very low and depraved. She could not belong entirely to this class, though, he reasoned. Abused, neglected, starved she might be; but there was still some spark of decency left in the home, for the beautiful hair was soft and clean, and the grimy little hands were well kept. In a little while they must take her back to that same home; to the headaches; to the "'pankin's"; to be "be at up regular."

Christmas Appeal
FOR
The Hospital for Sick Children
COLLEGE ST., TORONTO.

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Thanks for your kindness in allowing me the privilege of appealing at this Christmas time on behalf of the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto.

In the 40 years of the Hospital's existence there have been treated within its walls 26,106 children as in-patients; 231,768 as out-patients; a grand total of 257,876 in and out-patients.

The Hospital for Sick Children gives a province-wide service, for little patients from every section of Ontario have sought its aid. Last year 499 patients were admitted from 233 places outside the city of Toronto. In 1914 there were 394 from 210 places.

Of the 2,838 in-patients last year 1,771 were medical cases and 1,067 surgical. In the orthopedic department of the 2,838 in-patients, 364 were treated for deformities, 21 Pott's disease of the spine, 10 lateral curvature of the spine, 10 bow-legs, 57 club-feet, 17 dislocations of hip, 48 tubercular disease of knee, hip, ankle, wrist and elbow; 76 infantile paralysis, 8 wry neck, and 21 miscellaneous.

Our battle is never-ending—is one that will continue while the world lasts, for it is the fight between the armies of life and death, to save the child life, the sick little ones, sons and daughters not only of our soldier men, but of the fathers and mothers still in this home-land province.

The Hospital is beating back disease and death, the enemies that assail the lives of little children as the British Empire is beating back Germany, Austria and Turkey, the enemies that assail the life of liberty.

So we appeal to the generous people of Ontario not to forget those so near and dear to us, who lie in the beds and cots of this great charity.

Will the people at large, as of old, respond to our call? Will they remember that every year is a war year for the Hospital, every day a day of battle, and that the Hospital needs money, not for its own sake, but for the children's sake?

The Hospital has waged its war for forty years. The people of Toronto and Ontario have been its friend, and this year of all years it requires help. Surely you will give to a charity that cares for every sick child in Ontario, for only as your money reaches the Hospital can the Hospital's mercy reach the children.

Every dollar is a link of kindness in the chain of mercy that joins the money in your pocket to the miseries of some child's life, some mother's heart.

Remember that Christmas calls you to open the purse of your kindness to the Hospital that the Hospital may open the heart of its help to the children.

Will you send a dollar, or more if you can, to Douglas Davidson, Secretary-Treasurer, or

J. ROSS ROBERTSON,
Chairman of the Board of Trustees,
Toronto.

PERFECT HEALTH IS EVERY WOMAN'S BIRTHRIGHT.

A Prescription That From Girlhood to Old Age Has Been a Blessing to Womankind.

HOW SCOTSMEN RALLY TO TUNE OF THE PIPES

Stirring Deeds of the Gallant Scotch Have on Many Occasions Been Made Greater by Pipes Rally

"As the men bombed their way along the German trenches after the first rush, two of the Black Watch pipers stood upright on the parapet under a terrible fire and played 'Highland Laddies,' the regimental charge of this gallant corps. They stood in a terrific storm of fire with bombs bursting all round them, and flung their Highland battle air to the breeze until one piper fell dead and the other was wounded." This was what happened during the British attack on the German lines north of La Bassee and it is one of the many such epics that have been recorded for at least two centuries.

Heroes of the Pipes

It is almost a tradition of the Highland regiments that the pipes have largely contributed to every victory gained by their countrymen, not only by the animating strains of their music, but by the coolness and self-possession of the pipers in the hour of danger. When the 42nd Highlanders, who formed part of the attacking party that captured Fort Washington, in 1777, scrambled up the precipice determined to have their own share of glory, the first to reach the summit was one of the pipers, who, as soon as he had made good his footing, began to play. He continued sounding his war notes until at last his body, riddled with bullets, fell from point to point, till it reached the bottom of the rock mangled and disfigured. Again, at Waterloo, where the Camerons earned imperishable fame, it was Piper Kenneth Mackay who specially distinguished himself. In the thick of the fighting that raged round the farmhouse of La Haye Sainte, the Camerons charged the French columns. The enemy's cavalry came to the support of the baffled infantry, and the Camerons formed square. And, while the Cuirassiers came thundering on, Piper Mackay stepped outside the square of bayonets, and, marching around, played the stirring "Cogadh na Sithe."

Instances From History

It was the strains of the pibroch that brought life and hope to the besieged garrison in Lucknow; it was the inspiration of the heroic pipers struggling up the ramparts of Tel-el-Kebir that goaded the British on to victory; and it was Piper Findlater playing of the "Cock o' the North" to the Gallant Gordons, while he lay on the ground badly wounded, that carried the heights of Dargai and won for him the Victoria Cross. In the present campaign the pipers of the Black Watch have several times distinguished themselves when playing the "kilted warriors" into action.

It was at Loos that Piper David Simpson, of the 2nd Battalion Black Watch, died on the field of glory. "All through the battle roar," wrote one of his comrades, "rang the soul-stirring notes of the charge by the piper, at once a stimulus and a rallying call to every man wearing the red hackle. Three lines of German trenches fell to that fierce assault. Then the command came down the line to have a try for a fourth. Piper Simpson at once got his pipes in position, turned to his company with the cry, 'Come on, boys!' and striking up the battle tune of the Black Watch, again ran, playing, towards the foe. In a few ten or twelve paces, a bullet struck him, and, with the exultant yell of his triumphant comrades in the ears, he died."

Music That Fires the Blood

Describing the inspiring scene of the passage of a kilted battalion along one of the rocky roads of Flanders with the bagpipes skirling 'defiantly, a British correspondent at the front wrote thus: "The drone of the pipes seems to rouse a cold, calculating devil under the tartan. It is not altogether a pleasant sight to see a Scottish regiment being played into the trenches. You can see that there is killing ahead; see it in the grim determination of the men, the thrust of the jaw, the grip of the knotted hands on rifle butts, and you feel that the wall of the pipes ahead is a battle cry fiercely urging them on. 'Mon,' said a sergeant from Dumfries, to whom I mentioned this matter of bagpipe inspiration, 'mon, when I hear "Th' Cock o' th' North," I could kill yon Germans wi' ma bare haands!'"

BAD SALT RHEUM ON HANDS.
Could Not Do Her Work.

Eczema or salt rheum is one of the most common of all skin diseases. It may centre itself on any part of the body, but there are certain places where it most usually begins, such as the bends of the elbows, the backs of the knees, the groove behind the ears, the scalp, on the palms of the hands, between the fingers, or on the soles of the feet.

It is, as a rule, not dangerous, but is very irritating and annoying to the sufferer on account of the terrible itching and burning sensation it causes.

It is impossible to eradicate this trouble from the system by external applications, as it is caused by the blood being in an impure state. What you need is a good blood cleansing medicine such as Burdock Blood Bitters. A medicine that will drive out all the foulness from the blood and make it pure and rich.

Mrs. Adelard Theriault, Theriault, N.B., writes: "Some time ago I was troubled with salt rheum on my hands, and it was so bad I could not do my work. I tried several medicines, but they all failed to help me. One day a friend told me to try Burdock Blood Bitters, so I got a bottle, and before I had taken it my hands were better. I am not afraid to recommend B.B.B. to anyone."

B.B.B. has been on the market for the past forty years, and is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Doctor Said Only Hope Was In An Operation

Was Skeptical When He Began the Use of Dr. Chase's Ointment—Relief Came Quickly

Here is a plain, honest statement in regard to Dr. Chase's Ointment. Between the lines of this letter you can read the gratitude which its writer feels. One does not suffer from annoying, distressing piles for ten years without appreciating a cure when it is obtained.

Almost every mail brings the report of someone who has been cured of piles by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Such statements are never used without the permission of the writer, and until we are satisfied that the cure is genuine and the writer a person of responsibility.

You may believe in operations for piles, and think there is no other cure. Write to Mr. Ingles, enclosing stamp, and he will gladly verify his statement. He will tell you that the pain, the expense, the risk of an operation are quite unnecessary. That relief and cure come with the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mr. Ernest W. Ingles, Penticton, B.C., writes: "I suffered from piles for ten years, and though I tried all kinds of ointments and injections I really had no permanent relief until I used Dr. Chase's Ointment. When I began this treatment I had absolutely no faith in it, for I had been examined by a well-known physician in Vancouver, and he said that an operation was the only thing that would benefit me. It was surprising the relief I obtained from the very first box, and now, after using four boxes, I am practically cured. My case was so exceptionally bad that I received no relief day or night, and for this reason the results are wonderful."

You can obtain Dr. Chase's Ointment from any dealer at 60 cents a box. If you do not want to risk this much send a two-cent stamp to pay postage, and mention this paper, and we shall send you a sample box free. We are so certain that any sufferer from piles will obtain relief by using this ointment that we do not hesitate to make you this offer. Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

LUSITANIA MURDERER IS INSANE KAISER'S ARMY AND NAVY AT ODDS

That the commander of the German submarine which sank the Lusitania is at present a physical wreck under treatment in a sanitarium at Kiel and the object of the opprobrium of the entire German navy is the statement made by Mr. A. de Smit, a Dutch journalist who has completed a trip through Germany and publishes his findings in the Petit Parisien. He had occasion to discuss the situation with men in different walks of life, whom he had known intimately before the war, and who spoke freely with him, unaware, that there was any probability of publicity being given to their statements, as Mr. de Smit had been known to them for many years as a business man.

Among others whom he saw and from whom he received confidences was one who, as a newspaper man before the war, had figured prominently in socialist circles, and indeed was regarded as a rabid opponent of monarchical systems of government. This man is now the editor of an English publication printed in Germany and circulated in the United States and other neutral countries for the purpose of interesting popular sentiment on the side of Germany the entire work being carried on at government expense.

Mr. de Smit learned that there is no harmony of sentiment between army and navy in Germany regarding the sinking of the Lusitania and the murder of women and children. The navy condemns the act and the Dutch journalist quotes the typical sentiment of a naval officer who said that "the army had the good fortune to see the war, to take part in it, to live in it, to be doing something; had an interest in sight; whereas the German navy"—the officer shrugged his shoulders with a gesture that revealed a tired and disabused disposition.

Haunted by Sight of Dying

As for the sinking of the Lusitania, this officer said the naval officers disapproved the act, that "it was a crime, an abominable crime," for which its perpetrators already had been punished by the Sovereign Being who must judge all men.

He added that when the Lusitania sank and the submarine commander saw the men, the women, the little girls and the little boys drowning without help and witnessed their agony and their hands outstretched in vain, it seemed to him that those hands crushed him and gradually he became insane; dreadful nightmares now haunt his sleep and his victims leave him no rest.

On the other hand the same writer quotes a German army officer as justifying the sinking of the Lusitania as part of the policy of the German military authorities to wage war by every means, material and moral, in order to crush the spirit of the enemy and force him to seek peace. With regard to the Lusitania sinking and the murder of women and children in Belgium, this officer said:—"Man muss diese ganze Bande ausrotten" ("We must exterminate the entire band") This word "exterminate" seems to have been drilled into the minds of the military forces and has been constantly used; the necessity for an extermination of the enemy is considered one of the impelling forces of the war. It is the typical expression of the citizens who are adherents of the von Tirpitz policy.

This same officer deeply regretted that the exterminating capacity of the troops had so greatly diminished, and that the men in the ranks were not now what they were during the drive on Paris in August and September, 1914, but, he added bitterly, the troops of von Kluck and von Bulow are no more. The officer, however, would not admit what other Germans had said, that there is a feeling of general lassitude and a desire to be done with the war as quickly as possible, and that the feeling is manifested largely in impatience with the inactivity of the commanders and in demand for energetic action.

A MANGY CUR GUARDS THE SHOPS IN RHENISH VILLAGES

A mangy cur yaps behind the shuttered windows of a little shop. Over the cobbles of the street rolls a country cart, piled high with the possessions of the shopkeeper, the furniture of kitchen and parlor (a beautiful walnut dresser, a terrible "new art" sofa, bits of wooden bed-boxes and a tired geranium are visible) At the other end of the street a sergeant enters the village with a squad of Landstrumers. . . .

This is the interpretation. The mangy cur is now and henceforth the hall-mark of every shop where food of any kind is for sale in the Rhenish villages south of Mayence. He has been acquired by order of the authorities, and his business is to prevent the destruction of provisions by fire; his midnight yappings are to awaken the provision merchant, and to call his attention to the danger, That is the official explanation of the order. Possibly the prevention of incendiarism during aeroplane raids is the true reason In any case the departing furniture is to be thus interpreted; like Guebwiller, which is being bombarded out of existence, there are numbers of villages west of the Rhine which are being deserted by their inhabitants, partly in fear of air raids, but chiefly in fear of the anti-aircraft guns. For spent shrapnel falling on women working in the field and children playing in the village street is the terror by day and night of the Rhenish villages. They say the guns of Istein have done more damage to property and injured more subjects of the Arch-Hun than all the raids of all the Allied airmen.

Flight of the People.

The flight of the village population from the districts of the Lower Rhine has become serious for the authorities owing to the consequent lack of accommodation for the troops Guebwiller itself is by this time almost empty, much to the disgust of the mayor, who threatens to refurnish the empty houses at the expense of the refugee owners and thus provide comfort for the troops.

Further inland you note a marked contrast. Here in some village of Franconia, with a chapel of the Swan-Knights and a ruin reminiscent of the Deutsch-Ritters, one is beyond all but nightmare dreams of air raids. One is also, curiously enough, outside the "famine pale." Vaguely one reads in the Government-inspired Kreisblatt (local newspaper) or hears at the Red Ox of the high prices of meat in the big cities, of butter battles in Hanover and Saxony, and of potato fights in Stuttgart or Stargard. These things do not come nigh the Franconian village. The Bauer, the peasant farmer or his wife, knows only that he sells his eggs to a Government commission at a royal profit, that his potatoes do nicely in the nearest market, that his butter is no longer at a discount, and that he or she has a nice nest-egg in the second war loan, not to speak of sundry bank-notes sewn into the flock mattress in the attic.

True there are few men about, but gangs of prisoners did the reaping ploughing, and cleaning, and goodness knows their labour was cheap enough. Nor is it likely to be lacking in the near future.

The Catholic priest might perhaps tell a different tale. He knows that all through Catholic Germany has gone an order to be sparing of oil; only the perpetual light before the Altar is to be retained, and the burning of candles, for the first time in his memory, is to be vigorously discouraged.

He probably knows, too, why in this the best nut year within living memory there are so few nuts on the market. They are being collected district by district, and the oil is being pressed from them for sale at cost price when the winter is hard upon Southern Germany.

The Peasant Doesn't Know.

But the Bauer does not know. The careful maintenance of the local Press for a generation is beginning to pay now. It has been pulled through the hard days of competition with the big metropolitan dailies; it has been pap-fed with cheap news and expensive official advertisements, until in this hour of need it is as tame as a young pheasant before the keeper. Lately the Imperial Government circularized the permanent Government officials throughout the Empire, desiring them to exercise a still sharper control over the local Press. There was called into being a news agency, called the "German Imperial Agency" (Reichs-Korrespondens), which provides the local journals with "news," special articles and the like in mould ready to put on the printing machines.

It is curious that the pap-fed local Press makes no attempt to conceal the "one feature of the war which is causing widespread dissatisfaction" (Frankfurter Zeitung), namely the inefficiency of the Government measures for keeping down the price of food in the big cities.

But the peasant is the mainstay of the German Army now, and must be, if things go awry, the chief pillar of the Government authority afterwards. Labour troubles in the towns there will be, anyhow; there must not be labour troubles in the villages. So the peasant farmer is enabled to earn high prices for his produce, and "war weariness" is kept as far as possible from the Red Ox.

The farmer knows that if prices were not high in the towns there would be fewer banknotes in his flock mattress. So why conceal the facts?

And, after all, prices even in the towns are not so bad as they might be. Four shillings per cwt. for potatoes is hardly exorbitant, and if some things are running short, if the church lamps must burn low and the candles be unlit, if the copper pan must go from the kitchen and the copper ornaments from the "Gute Stube" (parlor), there is food enough to go round and paper money enough to buy it with. So the Government can afford to cultivate the village, and does so with prudence not unmixed with zeal. War weariness in the village? No, sir, not yet.

SKIN SOFT AS A CHILD'S.

"I was a great sufferer from eczema and salt rheum for years," writes Mr. John W. Naas, Lunenburg, N. S. "Five years ago three boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me and the old trouble never returned. My skin is as soft as a child's now, and I shall always say a good word for this Ointment."

Hope awakens courage. He who can implant courage in the human soul is its best physician.—Von Knebel.

SUITS—OVERCOATS Make Acceptable Gifts

THE things that Men appreciate above everything else are the Practical Gifts of Things for everyday use—things that the recipient would buy for himself.

AND then, too, you raise his opinion of you just another bit higher when you present him with something practical and sensible—something he would buy for himself.

Every time he wears the Scarf, the Shirt, the Overcoat, the Suit, the Sweater Coat, the Hat, the Cap, or the Underwear, or the Hose, or the Bathrobe, or the Suspenders, or the Umbrella, or the Gloves, or the Cravat, or the Muffler, or the Handkerchiefs, which you gave him, he thinks of you.

So, when you select a present for "him" remember men are practical. They cherish the memory of a practical, useful gift, but soon forget the other kind.

And make your gift to "him" something he will really like better than all the other presents he receives—let it be something he can wear.

And don't lose sight of the fact that most men know that anything that bears a LeBrun label is absolutely right in style and dependable in quality.

WAR HAS WIPED OUT MANY ENGLISH GOLF PROFESSIONALS

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—John C. Anderson, runner-up in the national golf championship this year, who has returned from a stay of five weeks in Great Britain found that war had paralyzed golf there. Virtually the only golf countenanced in the United Kingdom, he found, is a series of exhibition matches played on famous courses by Vardon, Ray, Taylor Duncan and Braid for the benefit of the war relief fund. Almost, every player of military age, amateur and professional, is at the front. Some of the women players are serving with the Red Cross. Men 60 years old or more serve as caddies.

The only golfer whom Anderson could find to play with him over the St. Andrews links was Andrew Kirkaldy, who tied for the championship in 1879.

The meeting of the Golf Professionals' association has been declared off for this year because there are no golf professionals left in the country to hold a meeting.

Having a Scrap.—Four-year-old Donald was out in the street having a scrap with a boy older than himself, and getting decidedly the worst of it. But his quick wit saw a way of avoiding actual defeat. "Did you call me, mother?" he shouted loudly. There was no reply, and the other boy went on pummelling. Then Donald shrieked desparately, "Call me in, mother, dear! Oh, do call me in, quick!

FOE PREPAERS TO ATTACK ALLIES NORTH OF SALONIKI

German-Bulgarian Forces Massing at the Greek Frontier and Will Be Reinforced by 50,000 Austrians---Belgian Relief Ship Liverpool Has Been Mined or Torpedoed and is in Sinking Condition---Russians Occupy Important Persian City of Hamadan.

UNITED STATES CONSIDERING AUSTRIA'S NOTE

PARIS, Dec. 17.—Austria has sent reinforcements into Montenegro, and is pushing with great energy her campaign to capture or annihilate the Montenegrin army.

Despatches received here to-day said the Austrians are advancing on a seventy-mile front. The Montenegrins are resisting stubbornly along the Lim River, but lack heavy artillery and ammunition to check the invasion of the Austrian army, which now occupies a front extending from twenty to thirty miles within the Montenegrin frontier.

At the same time furious fighting has been resumed between the Bulgars and Serbs in Albania.

Athens despatches to-day reported that 150,000 Bulgarian and German troops are now massed on the Greek border at Giegvli and Doiran.

To these will be added the 50,000 Austrians advancing from Krivelak.

There is every indication that the attack on the Anglo-French forces north of Salonika is about to begin.

It is not believed in Geneva that the Italians will participate in the Balkan fighting at present unless the Bulgarian drive westward constitutes a real menace toward Albanian territory.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—President Wilson and Secretary Lansing spent this morning considering reply of Austria to the United States' last Ancona note, which in some quarters was described as an ultimatum. The cabled reply is about one thousand words. It is expected it will be before the full Cabinet to-day.

LONDON, Dec. 17.—There is no indication in the first official casualty lists from the Balkans of terrific losses which German reports said had been inflicted on the British troops there. To-day's list shows ten dead and twenty-eight wounded and missing from the British army in that theatre. There are many casualties from Gallipoli, however, but comparatively few from France.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 17.—"Austria can't be silenced merely with big words like a Central American State," says the Cologne Gazette commenting on the Austrian reply to the American note. "President Wilson tried to glorify himself by making Austria yield as Germany did in the Arabic case, but Austria saw through his plan."

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 17.—Travellers arriving from Belgium confirm yesterday's rumours of the destruction of a German Zeppelin with its entire crew just inside of the German lines. It was apparently headed for the British army headquarters behind Ypres, and had a huge cargo of bombs, and carried forty of a crew. It is supposed here that British anti-air guns hit the air monster and caused the explosion. It is generally understood that the Canadian divisions hold the British lines in the neighbourhood of Ypres.

Three peasants, working in nearby fields, were arrested and sent to Germany in an effort to keep the news from becoming public, the travellers said.

PETROGRAD, Dec. 17.—The Russian troops have occupied the important Persian City of Hamadan, it was officially announced to-day.

Hamadan lies 160 miles southwest of Teheran and has a population of about 30,000. Trade routes from Bagdad, Tabriz, Ispahan and Teheran meet at Hamadan, making it a city of considerable commercial importance.

ROTTERDAM, Dec. 17.—The relief ship Levenpool from New York has been mined or torpedoed. She was in a sinking condition when last reported.

The second despatch received said that the Levenpool did not sink, but was beached on Mucking Flats.

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—The Belgian relief ship Levenpool sailed from New York Nov. 24 with 6,540 tons of lard and bacon for relief work in Belgium. She was fully equipped with side banner, etc., indicating to belligerent vessels that she was a relief ship, and illuminated banners at night, making it impossible that her identity might be mistaken. She was British owned, but under charter to the American Commission for the relief of Belgium. She flew the Belgian relief flag. She displaced 4,884 tons.

LONDON, Dec. 17.—Efforts to remove Sir Edward Speyer and Sir Ernest Cassel from the Privy Council because they are of German birth, failed to-day when the Court dismissed quo warranto writs recently brought by a citizen of British birth.

PARIS, Dec. 17.—Forty thousand Bulgarian and German and Austrian prisoners have arrived in France from Serbia.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Dec. 17.—A merger of lake fleets of the Interlake Steamship Co., and Cleveland Steamship Co., involving fifty steamers and outstanding capital of ten million dollars, was reported under way to-day.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 17.—The Bulgarians lost 15,000 in the Cerna River fighting, according to advices received here to-day.

MILA, Italy, Dec. 17.—Two Americans in Gorizia, members of the Shareholders' Banking firm, were accused of receiving a letter from an American hostile to the Austrians. They denied this.

"Then they were taken before an Austrian court martial and condemned to death. They were executed as spies and all their valuables and bank deposits confiscated. It is understood Washington has the facts in this latest outrage."

Mr. W. Rogers, 48 George St.,
Peterborough, Canada:

Somewhere in France, Oct. 24th, 1915.

Just a line to let you know how much the smokes are appreciated by us all. We received them right in the firing line, just when we were getting short. As one of the few old boys left out of the first Fifty-Seventh Contingent I am glad to know that we are not forgotten by those in the old home town.

LANCE-CORP. H. S. SHERWOOD,
No. 2 Co., 2nd Battalion.

HAVE YOU CONTRIBUTED YET?
BRING IN THAT QUARTER TO-DAY.

For 25 cents you can give a Peterborough soldier in the firing line 1/5 lb. Canadian Manufactured Tobacco.

50 Canadian Manufactured Cigarettes.

One Box of Matches.

Enclosed in this package is a postcard which the soldier will use to thank you.

Come to the meeting Friday 8 p.m., Bank of Montreal Chambers. If you have any questions to ask or want any information regarding this Fund we will be pleased to answer them.

93rd BATTALION TO ALSO FURNISH GUARD FOR MACHINE COMPANY

Order to That Effect Was Read To-day---Col. Brown, General Staff Officer, a Visitor to the 93rd---One of Last Night's Guard Taken Suddenly Ill--To-day's Military News.

The 93rd Battalion, in addition to guarding the C.G.E., Wm. Hamilton Co. and the power house at Nassau, will also furnish a guard of a N.C.O. and three men for the Peterborough Machine Company, starting to-night. Lt.-Col. Johnston, Lieut. Bailey and Lieut. Widdifield of the 93rd Battalion, and Majors Cameron and Eastwood, A.M.C., are in Norwood this afternoon examining and swearing in a number of recruits for the 93rd.

TO-DAY'S ORDERS.

The following Battalion orders by Lieut. Col. J. Mills, O. C. 93rd O. S. Battalion, C.E.F., were read to-day:

Headquarters,
Peterborough, Ont., Dec. 17, 1915.

1—Duties—

Orderly officer for to-day—Lieut. J. M. C. A. Cools.

Orderly officer for to-morrow—Lieut. A. P. Stock.

Orderly officer for Sunday—Lieut C. R. Browning.

2—Parades—

6.30 to 7.00 a.m., physical training; 8.30 to 10.00, squad drill, Sec. 35-46; 10.00 to 10.30, orderly room; 10.30 to 12.00, march out.

3—Strength Taken On—

The following men having enlisted, are taken on the strength of the 93rd Battalion, C.E.F., and posted to the companies marked opposite their names from the dates mentioned:

Wm. Jos. Gadaw, B Co., Dec. 16th, 1915.

Edward Thos. Williams, B Co., Dec. 16th, 1915.

Bert Williams, B Co., Dec. 16th, 1915.

Albert Giles, B Co., Dec. 16th, 1915.

4—Leave of Absence—

The Commanding Officer has been pleased to grant the following leave of absence—Capt. J. E. R. Munro from 23rd inst., till Monday, Jan. 3rd, 1915.

5—Promotions—

The Commanding Officer has been pleased to make the following promotion: To be sergeant, B. Co., Corporal C. Payne.

Supper Hour—

Until further orders the supper hour will be at 5 p.m. instead of at 5.30 in order to give the guards sufficient time to enable them to get their evening meal prior to their reporting for duty.

7—Use of Dubbin—

Dubbin should be used on boots at least twice a week. The preparation called linoleo must not be used in future under any conside ration as it is deemed that some of the ingredients used in the preparation are considered most harmful for the boots.

8—Change of Address—

All N. C. O.'s and men will forward at once to the paymaster of the 93rd Battalion, C.E.F., through their company officer any change of address which might occur. This information is absolutely necessary in order that the cheques for assigned pay, etc., may be made promptly.

9.Guards.—

Adverting to Battalion Order No. 44 of the 16th inst., a Guard consisting of 1 E. C. O. and 3 men will mount daily at the Peterborough Machine Co., situated on George Street, by 7 p.m.

10—Physical Training.—

In future and until further orders all Subaltern Officers will parade for Physical Training with their Platoons and sections; this also applies to attached officers.

11.—Late Passes—

Seat cheques for performances at the Grand Opera House for Friday and Saturday evenings will be taken in lieu of late passes.

J. MILLS,
Lt.-Col., Officer Commanding 93rd, O. S. Bn. C. E. F.

Pte. Frank Seaton of A Company 93rd Battalion, was suddenly stricken with pneumonia while on guard duty at the Armouries, early this morning and had to be removed to Nicholls' Hospital in Comstock's motor ambulance.

Col. Brown, General Staff Officer of the 3rd Division paid an official visit to the Armouries this morning.

All five beds in the Barracks Hospital at the Armouries are occupied to-day, bad colds being the complaint in each case, mong the patients are Orderly Room Sergt. King and Pte Layfield of the Band. Only mild cases are kept at the Armouries Hospital. If no improvement is manifest in twenty-four hours the patients are

Jury Suggests Farm For Jail Prisoners

In its Report Presented to Judge Huycke This Morning — Public Institutions in Very Satisfactory Condition — Reference to His Honour's Sacrifice.

WILL GO TO COUNTY COUNCIL

In commenting upon the Grand Jury's report this morning, Judge Huycke's voice broke when he attempted to acknowledge a very kindly reference to the enlistment of three of his sons for service overseas. The reference must have recalled the poignant memories of three farewells within the past six weeks, rendered all the keener by the most recent parting with his third son, yesterday, preparatory to departure to England in the very near future. His Honour was deeply moved and, remarking that he could not trust himself to speak further, abruptly dismissed the jurors with the best effort he could muster, to convey his appreciation of the sympathetic expressions in the report.

The presentation was as follows:

To His Honour Judge Huycke, Judge of the County Court of the County of Peterborough, and Chairman of the General Sessions of the Peace for the said County.

We, your Grand Jurors, beg leave to present:

We are very happy to observe that there was but one criminal case for trial at the present sittings of the Court, which fact speaks well for the administration of the law in the County under your Honour's jurisdiction, and for the active enforcement of it by the County officials in general.

We visited the County Gaol, as directed by you, and investigated the case of the boy under sixteen years of age now confined therein. We quite agree with you that the gaol is not a suitable place for a person in this boy's condition, and that his removal to a more suitable institution is highly desirable.

We further recommend that consideration be given to the question of providing the inmates of the gaol confined on minor charges, with out door exercise and employment, which we believe, would tend to help their physical and mental development, and with this end in view, we would suggest a Prison Farm for City and County

House of Refuge.

We found the gaol premises in good cleanly condition and properly cared for. We visited the County House of Refuge and found therein 28 males and 12 females, which taxes the capacity of that portion of the institution allotted to the males to its full extent. We found therein two men whose minds are deranged, and we strongly recommend their immediate removal, to an Hospital for the Insane.

We visited the Protestant Home, a compartively speaking, new building, it being all that could be desired in its appointments, and in the provisions made for the comfort of its inmates.

We also visited the Nicholls Hospital, where everything was found most modern and satisfactory, the new wing being in our opinion absolutely fireproof, and the building having fireproof doors separating the different parts of the building from each other, a wise provision for the safety of the patients occupying the building.

St. Joseph's Hospital was also visited by us, in which we found everything in splendid condition, having sanitary arrangements up to date, and being kept in a most cleanly and wholesome condition.

The House of Providence for the aged, and St Vincent de Paule Orphanage for the children, are two institutions in which the inmates receive every care and attention and the conditions of which are as homelike as possible. Your Grand Jury heartily congratulates the management of

THREE YEARS IN KINGSTON PENITENTIARY

William Norcott, Convicted of Assaulting a Fellow Prisoner While Incarcerated in the Local Police Station—Has a Record

SIX MONTHS FOR VAGRANCY

In this morning's police court William Norcott was sentenced to three years in the Kingston Penitentiary. Norcott was convicted of assaulting a fellow prisoner while occupying one of the guest chambers of the police station. The prisoner is no stranger to Peterborough having been arrested here during the year 1909 on a charge of theft. On that occasion he was invited to leave town. Since that time he has served time in Moose Jaw and Winnipeg for vagrancy. Norcott pleaded for another chance and was reminded that his record was of such a character as to exclude any claim for leniency.

Six Months.

The tulips will be abloom in the park when Thos. Bell completes the six months' sentence that was handed to him this morning. The charge against him was one of vagrancy. Magistrate Dumble read out his record, which among other things, includes assault, shoplifting, vagrancy, and assault with violence. He has just completed a sentence of ten days in the county gaol for attempting to steal a ride on the C.P.R. He was released on Wednesday and apprehended again yesterday. He admitted having no visible means of support. Bell will spend the next six months in the Ontario Reformatory.

Edison Expert At J. M. Greene Co.

Will Give a Talk on the Edison Machine at a Recital To-morrow Evening

Mr. L. Bourgette, an expert from the Edison laboratory, is in town and will be at the J. M. Greene Music Co. Studio for the next few days. Mr. Bourgette will be present at an Edison recital in the J. M. Greene Co recital hall to-morrow evening, and will give a talk on Edison machines, their equipment, and their splendid qualities of tone. The programme for this recital will be published in to-morrow's issue. Mr. Bourgette will be here part of next week and it is altogether likely that he will give a tone test recital on the Edison diamond disc machine. The public is cordially invited to attend.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

FRIDAY, DEC. 17, 1915

ALLIES' UNCHANGEABLE ATTITUDE.

We shall never sheathe the sword until Belgium recovers in full measure all, and more than all, that she has sacrificed; until France is adequately secured against the menace of aggression; until the rights of the smaller nationalities of Europe are placed upon an unassailable foundation, and until the military domination of Prussia is wholly and finally destroyed.—Premier Asquith.

REV. FATHER FITZPATRICK.

The people of Peterborough, city and county, will learn with regret that on January 10th of next year, Rev. Father Fitzpatrick, of St. Martin's, Ennismore, will cease to be a citizen of the county of Peterborough, where as both a priest and a man he has held and holds a high place in the popular respect and esteem. He has been translated to the diocese of Calgary. It is regretted that this removal has been made at his own request—in the interests of his health, which it is hoped the dryer air of Alebrta will benefit; and the general wish is that the hopes founded in change of climate will be fully realized. A native son of the county grown up amongst and advanced to a high plane of usefulness among his [illegible] Father Fitzpatrick, in his departure, will be followed by the universal regret and as universal good wishes of the community, independently of religious considerations.

MEASLES MORTALITY.

In this moment of world militancy, when men are being mowed down by millions, measles may be looked upon as a trifling matter. But the greater the wreckage of humanity by war, the greater the loss of human life—including hundreds of prime Canadians—the greater the necessity of preserving human life here at home, by preserving human health and taking precautions against the spread of disease. Not only the report of Dr. Amys, Medical Health Officer, but an article from the Mail and Empire tells us of the sinister importance of what is commonly regarded as a simple disease. When by carelessness in regard to reporting cases of measles, the danger of contagion is greatly increased, as well as the danger of deaths from the thus carelessly communicated disease, it is time that the public were aroused to the seriousness of the situation. People who have measles in the house incur a terrible responsibility by neglecting or refusing to report such an outbreak. If by their carelessness they are contributing agents to the death of the children of their neighbours, they will have an awfully uneasy time of it with their conscience. Such a death or deaths would be worse than similar ones on the battlefield, for in the latter event it would be incurred for some noble purpose, not gratuitious contribution to the destruction of human life.

EXHIBITION GROUNDS PURCHASE.

The President of the Canadian National Exhibition, has given the City Council of Toronto a cheque for $45,000, which it was remarked, did not represent all the profits, and that another cheque might yet be presented. This is a matter of interest to Peterborough. The city of Toronto is virtually in partnership with the Exhibition Board, in a way that justifies the interest the city has taken, and takes, in the exhibition. It derives direct profit besides the incidental and general benefits derived from the presence of the exhibition in the city.

These circumstances are a hint to Peterborough as to the necessity or rather wisdom of revising its attitude towards the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition. The city at present derives considerable incidental advantage from the presence in the city during the ehibition of a large number of visitors, who put a no inconsiderable amount of money in circulation to the stimulation of the commercial activities of Peterborough. Important as these advantages are, they could and would be made much more important, if the Exhibition directors were not handicapped — homelessly handicapped. With possession of permanent grounds, which would admit of, as well as warrant, the erection of suitable and adequate permanent building and other permanent improvements, much more would be possible and more than probable. With these provided, and with the splendid district around us, there is no reason why, the Peterborough Industrial should not last a week instead of two days. With good and permanent buildings and permanent situation guaranteed, the exhibition can be made a far greater and worthier attraction than it can be possibly made under existing conditions.

The purchase of the present grounds would be a splendid investment for the city; and apart from exhibition considerations altogether. For fifty-one weeks of the year they could be used as a recreation and pleasure park, and for one week, more or less, they could be devoted to a profit-making exhibition.

The purchase of the grounds is not a question of argument so much as of action. It is only necessary to state a few of the conditions. The purchase of the grounds at a figure which, after the expiry of the present option, may never be so favourable again, involves an interest and sinking fund charge of $2,800 a year for twenty years. At the beginning the surplus from the exhibition will be applied to meet the cost of new buildings and equipment. After that the increased surplus will be turned over to the city and will largely meet or substantially decrease, the annual payment. Besides the annual grant of $600 a year made by the city will be discontinued, and the annual charge reduced to $2,200. The annual grant of $600 a year made by the city represents the interest at 6 per cent on $10,000 — one-third the purchase price of the exhibition grounds — with no refund in the shape of return of surplus of profits. These profits, with the exhibition placed on a permanent basis, with suitable grounds and buildings, would cover the whole interest charge and make the possession of the exhibition grounds and park practically a possession without cost, and for years a source of income to the city.

In dealing with such a proposal, we must also look to, and provide for, further growth and expansion of the city, and create conditions of permanent benefit, which must come, especially in a commercial sense, by bringing the city and the surrounding county into closer relations, and making Peterborough a real centre for all the splendid surrounding area of prosperous and populous country.

The attention of our readers is specially directed to the closely reasoned letter on the subject by an exhibition director, which appears in our news columns.

CARSON AND REDMOND.

Carson seems to be a wrecker by inclination and disposition. He was willing to wreck the British Empire and bring upon it the horrors of a civil war, rather than see peace and tranquility brought to Ireland through granting it home rule. What a contrast between this turbulent, reckless individual and Mr. John Redmond, who stood strongly behind the Asquith Government in all its perils and vicissitudes, and just as strongly stands behind the Coalition Government of Liberals and Conservatives. — Hamilton Times.

GERMAN TRADE IS STAGNANT.

STOCKHOLM, Dec. 16.—According to information from the iron and industrial centres of Germany, while orders for goods for military use have lately increased, those for goods for ordinary business purposes have diminished.

The German market reports state that the building industry is very quiet, and that the very high prices for food stuffs, raw materials and labour are preventing the establishment of new industrial or commercial enterprises unless concerned with the provision of war supplies. The production of pig iron during October increased slightly, and the Iron Plate Syndicate has fixed the basic price for the first quarter of 1916 at 153 marks a ton, the present figure.

all of the institutions visited on the very efficient manner in which their duties in connection with these institutions have been discharged, and we are confident that the inmates receive every care and attention that kindly thought and experienced training can do for them.

We are pleased to report that we were most courteously received by the various officials of the county and we wish to acknowledge the readiness with which all questions were answered, and access given to every department we wished to visit.

We regret very much to hear of the illness of the Sheriff of the County, and we heartily wish that he will be soon fully restored to health to resume the duties of his office which he has filled for many years with much credit to himself and benefit to the county.

PATRIOTIC SENTIMENT.

We were deeply touched by Your Honour's reference to the patriotic sentiment prevailing in the community at the present time, in the presence of this great conflict which is taking place in the world at the present time, and in which our Empire is engaged, so costly in loss of treasure and human life and which is fraught with such serious consequences in respect to the future stability of the world's space, it is a matter of the greatest pride and satisfaction to be able to observe the splendid spirit of determination and sacrifice with which the people of this county, in common with the rest of our fellow citizens, are imbued. A little over a year ago the citizens of Peterborough contributed in the neighbourhood of $40,000 to the Canadian Patriotic Fund, providing for the maintenance of the dependants of our country's brave soldiers fighting her battles in foreign lands, and notwithstanding the fact that frequent calls have been made upon the financial resources of our people since, generously and magnificently responded to, yet the citizens of Peterborough again, a few days ago, contributed a further magnificent sum of over $62,000 to this same Patriotic Fund. As in the city so in the county, have the people responded at all times most generously to the requests that have been made for contributions to the various patriotic objects, the county itself supplementing their efforts by the generous promise of about $20,000 to the Canadian Patriotic Fund. While the people of this county fully appreciate the gravity of the situation, their patriotic endeavors during the last 16 months of the war make it manifest that they are animated by the same firm determination as is apparently present in every other part of the Empire, that this terrible struggle shall be brought to a successful conclusion and for the lasting welfare of our country, and of the great empire of which she forms so important a part. The people have been elevated to new heights of sacrifice and have been moved to a deeper sense of duty and patriotism. In this conflict they are prepared to make every sacrifice, even the supreme sacrifice of giving their lives if required in the defence of their country.

The County of Peterborough has given a notable example of their patriotism in sending a very large number of her sons to take their part in the terrible conflict that is being waged on more than one continent in defence of human rights and the principles of justice. We can not but express our admiration and deep sense of gratitude to those brave and patriotic women who have given their husbands, and the self sacrificing and patriotic parents who have allowed to depart from their homes their sons to engage in this the most terrible war the world has ever seen.

APPRECIATION OF JUDGE'S WORK.

In conclusion may we be permitted to add our words of praise to those of the rest of the community respecting your Honour's assiduous labor and deep and abiding interest in every patriotic movement taking place in this county, and to add our words of acknowledgment of the great sacrifice that your Honour has been called upon to make in permitting three of your sons to respond to their country's call by promptly enlisting in the expeditionary army, a sacrifice in which your reverend and respected wife more than shares, and for which noble example the community feel indebted to her as well as to your Honor.

I have the honor, to remain,
Most respectfully yours.
W. J. OKE.
(Foreman.)

In reviewing the report Judge Hayeke said that it was fitting that the Judy should acknowledge the service of those who have the supervision and care of public institutions, and the manner in which they have performed their duties. The suggestion of a farm for prisoners he would suggest to the county council for their careful consideration. The presence of two mentally deranged persons in the House of Refuge was drawn to the attention of His Honor who remarked that it was not a suitable place for them. Passing on to the participation of this county in the war, Judge Hayeke said that Peterboro had done well but he would not say that they had done more than their duty. Ontario did not occupy the first place in the number of men enlisted nor in the amount of money contributed, but this was not quite as true now as it was three months ago. Present figures would put Ontario in a better position though it was late in arriving at its proper place.

Peterboro had cause for pride in its contribution of men and in this respect occupied one of the very first places.

MORTALITY FROM MEASLES

Necessity of Vigilance and Precaution Against Contagion

In his latest bulletin the Medical Officer of Health strongly urges the taking of all possible precautions to prevent the spread of measles. The disease is one against which parents and the public authorities should do everything they can to protect the children. Dr. Hastings tells us not only that the mortality from measels is four times as great as from scarlet fever, but also that the number of deaths traceable to measles, though directly attributed to other diseases is far greater than those immediately resulting from it. He says that no other known agency does so much to destroy the natural immunity to germ diseases generally. In a large proportion of the deaths from pneumonia it is found that the patient had previously suffered from an attack of measles. The law requiring the registration of cases of measles is, it appears, generally complied with by the physicians.

In the United Kingdom the ravages of measles are at the present time greater than ever before. According to the English Registrar-General's statistics, the increase in the mortality from that disease has been alarmingly great. Quoting his figures, the Local Government Board states that the average number of deaths occurring annually from measles in England and Wales in recent years is 11,000, of which the great majority is of children under five years of age. During the first half of the present year the number of deaths reached a total of 12,414. The Army Council reports that measles is the cause of much disablement among the troops, and it says that accurate information of the presence of the disease among the civil population would be of the utmost benefit to the military authorities. The Local Government Board has issued an order applying a system of notification of measles and German measles in England and Wales. Medical practitioners, parents, guardians and other persons in charge of patients are required to report cases to the local medical officer of health. We cannot be too careful in the measures we take for guarding against this disease. The lives of our children are among the most precious of the trusts committed to us, and never was it more important that we be loyal to that trust than it is now when the waste of adult life by war is so ruinous.—Mail and Empire.

Care of the Teeth.

Even the layman is able to detect it, however, for the teeth of the primitive peoples of to-day show a marked difference from those of civilized nations. Some teeth have already been lost to us, many have diminished in size and others show signs of an early departure.

One more serious import, however, are the statements of dentists, who practice their profession more scientifically than their brothers of a few decades ago did. In the olden days dentists merely pulled and filled teeth, but to-day the dentist makes an honest effort to correct bad conditions.

Modern dental science has proven that rheumatism, tonsilitis and even appendicitis, to say nothing of other minor disorders, are chargeable to unhygienic mouth conditions. The honest dentist of to-day concerns himself with these things as well as with seeing that teeth are merely intact.

INVESTIGATION WILL COMMENCE ON MONDAY

Case Between Mr. G. N. Gordon and the School Board is Listed for Hearing at Eleven O'clock on Monday Next

The investigation into certain affairs respecting the Board of Education which has been authorized by the City Council will commence on Monday before His Honour Judge Huycke. Counsel for both sides are busy preparing for the case which is listed for hearing at 11 o'clock. A number of school teachers will be required to appear and give evidence. Arrangements have been made to have their work in the schools taken care of as the time set for the opening of the investigation will conflict with a number of seasoned examinations.

MEETING OF THE UTILITIES COMMISSION

The Peterborough Utilities Commission met yesterday afternoon. Members of the City Council were present to confer with the Commissioners regarding the removal of the Otonabee Power Company's poles from the city's streets. The commissioners decided to take the matter up at an early date.

The Finance Committee of the City Council will sell fifty thousand dollars' worth of debentures that were authorized for the use of the Commission, leaving twenty thousand dollars worth unsold. Mr. H. O. Fisk, Manager of the Commission, was authorized to sell some office fittings that were taken over from the Peterborough Light and Power Company.

SCHOOL TEACHER

Anaemic, Run-down, Nervous —How She Recovered

There are so many cases like this right here in Peterboro that we are publishing this interesting letter with the hope that some of our customers will try Vinol and get the same happy result that Miss Baez did.

Key West, Fla.—"I am a teacher and became anaemic, nervous, run-down no energy or desire to do anything. I could not sleep and had that languid nervous feeling that made me a burden to myself. I had taken various tonics without benefit. I heard of Vinol and tried it. Soon I had a good appetite, could sleep all night and it built me up so I have the ambition to do any kind of work." Mary L. Baez, Key West, Fla.

The reason Vinol was so successful in this case is because it is a constitutional remedy that goes to the seat of trouble. The peptonate of iron contained in Vinol enriches and revitalises the blood while the strengthening, tissue-building properties of the extractives of cods' livers and beef peptone aid in building up the tired, overworked, run-down system.

EXHIBITION DIRECTOR DEALS WITH THE PURCHASE OF THE GROUNDS

Well Reasoned Arguments for Purchase of Grounds and Demonstration of the Advantages

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—In the city papers of a few days ago I read an article from the pen of Mr. M. H. Quinlan on the proposed city by-law to provide the Exhibition of this city with permanent grounds.

Mr. Quinlan admits that the property is a decided bargain, but questions the advisability of turning it over to the Exhibition as a permanent grounds for exhibition purposes.

I have before me a copy of the by-law which shows that it will take $2,807.46 annually for a period of 20 years to pay for the grounds at the purchase price of $30,000, and the interest on the debentures.

At the present time the city gives a yearly grant of $600.00 to the Exhibition which would be discontinued, leaving a net cost to the city of $2,207.46 yearly for 20 years. For this sum the Exhibition Board will turn all surpluses into permanent buildings and generally improving its appearance such as replacing the present unsightly old fence with a modern cement and iron fence, laying it out for park purposes, etc., and when suitable buildings have been erected all surpluses would be turned over to the city. Mr. Quinlan asks the question, are the surpluses guaranteed? They are not, but when a surplus of about $700.00 a year for the past two years has been created in the face of such adverse conditions, it is confidently expected that with increased facilities for providing a fair, increasing it from practically one day to a four-day fair, that the surplus will be correspondingly increased. Surpluses of as high as $1,400.00 have been made, and there has not been a deficit for years. There are numerous methods of augmenting the receipts of the Exhibition if proper grounds and buildings are provided.

The Exhibition is not conducted by a wealthy corporation, but by a board of business men of this city, and farmers in this community, who have no aims at direct profit—nothing but the interests of this city at heart.

Peterborough is the logical centre for a big fair between Toronto and Ottawa, and even under adverse conditions has beaten out its rivals until it is in the position that it must go ahead in permanent grounds or get out of business.

As it is, it brings thousands of people into the city, but if enlarged and allowed to grow, would mean much more to the business of this city than at present.

Peterborough should have a fair, it should own its own grounds, and the proposed grounds are the cheapest and best grounds for the purpose to be had in the city or adjacent thereto.

If Peterborough is going to be a large place the fact of having a park so situated as the Exhibition grounds will be highly appreciated in years to come, and if it is not going to add much to its population, there is any quantity of vacant property to be built up within the city limits.

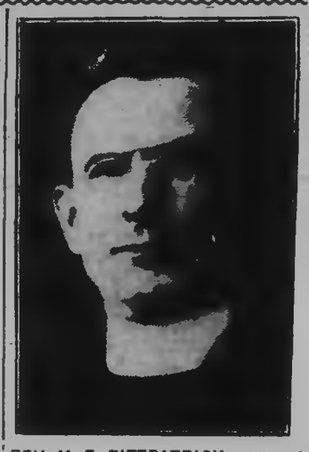
If the ratepayers will go into the matter fully it is felt that they will without hesitation support the proposition of putting the Exhibition in permanent grounds on the present site.

Yours truly,
EXHIBITION DIRECTOR.

Constable Negligent Is Verdict of Jury

Private Taylor Died from Overdose of Alcohol, is Finding.

TORONTO, Dec. 7.—Death from an overdose of alcohol was the verdict rendered by the jury which investigated the death of Private George Taylor. Pte. Taylor died in No. 6 police station, where he was conveyed after he had been refused admission to the camp at the Exhibition grounds. The jury added that there had been negligence on the part of the constable who had searched the deceased. This rider was added after evidence was produced to show that Taylor had been drinking heavily for some days before his death, and that a whiskey flask was found beside him in the cell after he had expired.



REV. M. F. FITZPATRICK, pastor of St. Martin's church, Ennismore, who is transferred to Calgary diocese, and leaves on Jan. 10.

DETROIT GIRL PRO-GERMAN TOO FREE IN UTTERANCE

Stratford, December 17th.—If Miss Cecilia Ronan of Detroit, just now thought to be in Toronto, comes back to Stratford to complete her visit to friends here she will have to pay at ten dollar fine and police court costs.

Miss Ronan, while in a corner store in the east end, is alleged to have boldly declared: "The Germans will win. I hope they do and crush John Bull."

The wife of a soldier now in the trenches resented the remark and notified the police. A summons was issued for Miss Ronan, and when she failed to appear in court to-day a fine of $10 and costs was entered against her name. Her hostess declares she does not know where the girl went but the police think she went to Toronto.

Giving Satisfaction

OTTAWA, Dec. 17.—Private advices received from England and the front state that the Ross rifle, about which there was some complaint, is now giving satisfactory service. The trouble with the Canadian arm was due to the bore being slightly smaller than that of the Lee Enfield, and the British ammunition sometimes jammed in the Ross. Now that the bore in sixty thousand Ross rifles has been slightly enlarged they are being used again by the Canadians in the front trenches with highly satisfactory results.

Third Division Recruiting.

Kingston, Ont., Dec. 16. — In the third military division there are twelve battalions and four batteries of artillery, the upkeep of which is $400,000 per month. Since December 14 eleven hundred recruits have been secured.

WATER-FILLED TRENCHES PREVENT INFANTRY ATTACKS

LONDON, Dec. 17.—Col. J. J. Creelman, of Montreal, in command of the Second Field Artillery Brigade, will leave for home to-morrow on the Canadian Pacific liner Metagama, having six weeks' leave for the transaction of his private affairs in Canada.

Col. Creelman stated that the trenches of both the British and the Germans in Flanders were filled with water, and that under the present conditions only artillery fighting is possible. He had frequently seen of late a German shell fall in trenches formerly occupied by Canadians and raise a column of water forty feet high.

The British War Office report issued last night records that near Armentieres British forces entered hostile trenches and killed seventy Germans. The British losses were trifling. The report in the German wireless that the British lost four aeroplanes is stated to be absolutely untrue.

The French official report chronicles a number of successes in the valley of the Aisne, to the south-east of Vailly. A coup-de-main was successfully carried out against a group of houses held by the enemy. This resulted in the capture of 50 prisoners, without the French sustaining any losses. On the left bank of the Aisne, at Ville-au-Bois, the French heavy artillery destroyed several walls concealing the enemy's bomb-throwers and snipers. On the heights of the Meuse, in the Bois-de-Chavaliers, French batteries caused extensive damage to the enemy's works.

MERGER OF SUN LIFE AND MANUFACTURERS

Mr. W. H. Hill, manager of the Sun Life of Canada at Peterborough, has received the following self-explanatory telegram, which confirms reported merger of two great life assurance corporations, the Sun Life and the Manufacturers Life:

Montreal, Dec. 16th.

W. H. Hill, Sun Life of Canada, Peterborough, Ont.:

An agreement has been completed, whereby our company is to reassure the business of the Manufacturers Life Insurance Company, amounting to over 80 millions, subject to approval of the Dominion Government Treasury Board. Great benefits will accrue to policy holders of both companies by the amalgamation. Please emphasize this to Manufacturers Life policy-holders and others who may inquire.

Sixteen Killed in Triple Collision

Special to The Examiner:

NEWCASTLE, Eng., Dec. 17.— Sixteen persons are known to have been killed and more than fifty injured in a triple collision to-day between a freight train, a pilot engine and a passenger train in a heavy fog near Jarripe. Four coaches were overturned and completely incinerated.

San Toy On Jan. 5 and 6

The musical play, "San Toy," will be produced in the Grand Opera House on Wednesday and Thursday, Jan. 5 and 6, by the Peterborough Operatic and Dramatic Society, under the sole direction of Mr. R. J. Devey.

Probably the most ambitious work ever given here on the lines of a musical play by amateurs. A splendid presentation may be confidently anticipated.

LONDON, Dec. 17.—Mrs. Asquith, wife of the British Premier, to-day appealed to the Courts to prevent the London Globe from printing alleged libelous statements about her associating with German prisoners and describing her as a traitor.

Important Pastoral Changes in Catholic Diocese of Peterborough

Rev. M. F. Fitzpatrick Goes to Calgary and Rev. P. J. McGuire is Moved to Ennismore — Other Changes Incelved.

His Lordship Bishop O'Brien has announced the following changes in the diocese of Peterborough, to take effect on January 10th:

Rev. M. F. Fitzpatrick of Ennismore is transferred to the diocese of Calgary, Alta.

Rev. P. J. McGuire of Downeyville is appointed successor to Father Fitzpatrick in Ennismore.

Rev. P. J. Galvin of Norwood is moved to Downeyville.

Rev. D. A. Casey, assistant priest at Bracebridge is moved to Norwood.

Rev. Father McGinity left this cdral staff, is transferred to Parry Sound as assistant to Rev. P. J. Kelly.

Rev. Father McHugh of Kingston is attached to the staff of St. Peter's Cathedral.

Rev. Father McGinnity left this morning for Parry Sound, the population of which has been largely increased of late by the employees of the Nobel Ammunition plant and by other industries engaged in the production of war material.

Probably the most important item of the above official announcement is that affecting the parishes of Ennismore and Downeyville. Rev. Father Fitzpatrick has not been in the best of health for several years past and his transfer was spoken of about two years ago. In Ennismore he has laboured assidiously and zealously for the upbuilding of the parish, and his efforts have at all times been advanced by a fine intelligence. In Enprovision of a continuation school he has accomplished very successful work in behalf of the children, and to his personal attention in its progress may be attributed in a large measure the results the school has accomplished.

Rev. Father McGuire, who, like Rev. Father Fitzpatrick, has many friends in the city, has done splendid work in Downeyville during his long pastorate there, and there is no doubt but that both these priests will be greatly missed by their present parishioners.

Rev. Father Galvin and Rev. Father Casey, who are also involved in the diocesan changes, are younger members, but they have both shown their abilities, their piety, and their devotion to the spiritual welfare of the people whose pastors they have been in the past. Rev. Father McGinity's linguistic abilities will be of particular value in the Parry Sound parish on account of the numbers of foreigners in that community and adjacent to it.

Burgomaster Max In Close Confinement

PARIS, Dec. 17.—"I greatly fear I shall have lost completely the use of speech before the banquets, which you speak of my presiding over in the future occur," says Burgomaster Adolphe Max, of Brussels, in a letter sent to a friend from the German fortress at Gats, in which he has been confined for the last year.

The burgomaster, whose disagreement with the German military authorities at Brussels led to his imprisonment, says in his letter that army officers imprisoned at Glats are permitted to mingle freely, but that he, for some reason he is unable to fathom has not been allowed to come in contact with them.

Paris newspaners, in publishing the letter, asked whether Pope Benedict, king Alfonso or President Wilson cannot intervene to alleviate the lot of the burgomaster.

HOLIDAYS ON DEC. 22ND.

The Separate schools will close on Wednesday next for the Christmas holidays.

COUNCIL WILL MEET AGAIN

A Number of Matters Remained to Be Cleared Up Before the Close of the Year

One more meeting of the City Council will have to be held before the expiration of the present term. There are a number of small matters outstanding which will have to dealt with before the present municipal government breaks up. Among these is included a by-law relating to the 1916 garbage collecting contract. This would have been passed at the last meeting had the document been available. When the time came to submit the matter to the Council the by-law was missing. The Property committee is also contemplating holding another meeting to deal with the tenders respecting the sale and disposal of ashes. It is the intention of Ald. A. A. McIntyre, chairman of the committee, to call this committee together on the same evening that the Council meets.

THINGS THAT COUNT

"What, when our time comes, does it matter whether we have fared daintily or not," says Henry George in Social Problems. Then he goes on to say: "Whether we have worn soft raiment or not, whether we have a great fortune or nothing at all, whether we shall have reaped honours or been despised; have been counted learned or ignorant as compared with others; how we may have used that talent which has been entrusted to us for the Master's service?" Truly, what does it matter, when eyes are closed and breath gone out of the body for ever, if out of the silence comes the voice, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

ENEMY BRINGING UP TROOPS ON THE WESTERN FRONT

LONDON, Dec. 16.—The belief that the Germans intend to make another bid for victory on the western front is growing. Persistent reports come from Holland of the concentration of German armies in Belgium and Luxemburg with the intention of striking a blow as soon as the ground permits of it. At the present moment the greater part of the country is a sea of mud in which it would be suicide for any army to attempt an offensive.

The reported concentration of Germans doubtless accounts for the many air raids which the Entente allies are making behind the German lines in an effort to upset the movement of troops and destroy shelters, camps and supplies of munitions which are necessary for an offensive.

Blew Up Munition Depot.

Heavy French artillery blew up a German munition depot north of Puisaline, in the Tracy-le-Val district, between the Oise and the Aisne, yesterday, according to the communique issued by the War Office this afternoon. The communique also tells of fighting with hand-grenades in Artois and of the impeding by French artillery of the repairs which the Germans were trying to make on their trenches at an-de-Sapt, in the Vosges, damaged by the firing earlier in the day.

French aviators had many clashes with German air men yesterday. In one of these two French machines met three German machines and one of the latter was forced to land.

Four allied aeroplanes, including one battle plane with two motors, were brought down by German anti-aircraft guns, the British War Office announced to-day, during raids on Bapaume and Peronne, in France, and Vulheim, Baden.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

WILLARD AND FULTON SIGN FIGHT ARTICLES

CHICAGO, Dec. 16 — Articles of agreement binding Jess Willard, the world's heavyweight champion pugilist, to a match March 4 at New Orleans with Fred Fulton, of Rochester Minn., for the world's championship, were signed here.

Willard is to receive $32,500, win lose or draw, and Fulton is to get $7,500, with a provision that in lieu of the lump sum he can elect to take fifteen per cent. of the moving picture rights. The agreement makes the fight a twenty-round championship contest to be held before the New West Side Athletic Club of New Orleans.

The agreement was signed by Tom Jones for Jess Willard, Mike Collins for Fulton, and Thomas S. Andrews of Milwaukee, for the New Orleans Athletic Club. The referee will be chosen later.

HOCKEY

The Electric Intermediate and Junior teams will practice at Brock Street Rink to-night. The Intermediates will practice from 7 to 7.30, the Juniors taking the last half-hour. The Junior squad will be cut down to normal proportions after to-night's practice.

All Junior players are requested to secure immediately proofs of their age. This is most important as no certificates can be issued unless the O.H.A. is furnished with definite proof of the age of the player. Junior players should write to the Registrar-General's department, Toronto, enclosing 25c, and ask for a birth certificate or else procure a baptismal record from the clergyman of the Church which they attend. Junior players who were registered in other years do not need to furnish any further proof but new players should attend to that important matter at once.

Minutes of the Last Meeting of the North Monaghan Council

Held at the Court House on Wednesday—Accounts Ordered to be Paid

The North Monaghan council met in the court house on Wednesday, Dec. 15, with Reeve McIntosh in the chair and Deputy Reeve Forster and Councillors Rye, Bell and Robson present. The minutes of the meeting of Oct. 14 and the minutes of the last two meetings were read and were adopted on the motion of Messrs. Rye and Robson.

Mr. George Hawke came before the council and presented his tax bill and schedule. He claimed to be assessed for four lots which he never owned. He also claimed to be overcharged on buildings. On motion of Messrs. Rye and Robson the clerk and the collector were instructed to investigate the above error in the assessment, and also any other errors which may have been made in the assessment roll and report to council on Dec. 28.

Mr. Wm. Whitfield appeared before the council and asked them to open a culvert which they authorized Mr. Mcmerlet, road commissioner for No. 5 R.D., to fill up some time ago. The culvert in question was on the 8th con., between Mr. Whitfield's and Mr. Hogg's property.

Mr. W. H. Bradburn, township treasurer, was present and presented his annual statement of the finances of the township for the year ending Dec. 15. On motion of Messrs. Robson and Bell the treasurer's statement was accepted and will be published.

The following accounts for payment were passed:

John McIntosh, telephone message, 35c.
Wm. Scott, repairs for grader, $3.
Nicholls Hospital, re Nellie Cole, $33.
Times Printing Co., $63.69.
Peck, Kerr and McElderry, preparing by-law agreements, $15.
W. H. Bradburn, war tax stamps, $3.
Taylor and Hall, culvert tile, $38.56.
Little Lake Cemetery Co., re A. Oliver's grave, $6.
Bruce Johnston, judge's court, revision of voters' lists, $11.25.
Archie Patterson, culvert, Harper's swamp, $3.15.
A. E. Saunders, groceries, charity, $6.85.
Bruce Johnston, postage, publishing the minutes, typewriting, etc., $30.10.
N. V. Beaton, refund Wagstaff's dog tax, $2.
H. Nesbitt, grant re court house, $7.50.
Moved by Messrs. Forster and Robson that the same deputy returning officers and poll clerks who acted last year, be appointed.—Carried.

The following salaries and sessional allowances were passed:

Wm. Robson, half year's sessional allowance, $15.
J. H. Bell, half year's sessional allowance, $15.
Jno. McIntosh, half year's sessional allowance, $15.
H. B. Rye, half year's sessional allowance, $15.
J. H. Forster, half year's sessional allowance, $15.
Bruce Johnston, half year's salary as clerk, $37.50.
W. H. Bradburn, half year's salary as treasurer, $37.50.
E. A. Peck, township solicitor, $30.
Dr. Greer, ten months' salary, M.O.H., $70.
W. B. Anderson, nine months' salary, sanitary inspector, $37.50.
Bert Sanderson, caretaker of the town hall, $7.50.

Moved by Messrs Bell and Robson that the above accounts be paid.

The following payments having been authorized by by-law, were ordered to be made:

To County Treasurer for County purposes, including House of Refuge, County War Relief, Provincial Government War tax, etc. $4,235.14
To Treasurer S. S. No. 1.....$ 600.00

The meeting then adjourned.

usually sent to one of the city hospitals.

Mounting Guard at the C. G. E. Wm. Hamilton Co., and the Power House at Nassau, as well as maintaining the usual guard at the Armouries, will give the men of the 93rd Battalion plenty of experience in guard work. The new work means that between 60 and 70 men of the Battalion are absent from drill each day on account of their guard duties, while it also means that each Sergeant can count upon about two guards a week.

Lance-Corp. Harry Norman is in charge of the guard which is on duty at the Nassau power house to-day. They will be relieved to-night, the new guard going out on the 5.40 train

Mrs. Hugh Davidson, Aylmer street, has just received word from her youngest son, Oscar, informing her that he has enlisted for overseas service with the Canadian Engineers, 2nd Field Troop, and expected to leave for Ottawa at any moment. Mr. Davidson enlisted from Moose Jaw, where he has been with the C.P.R.

Capt. Charles Ackerman is speaking at a recruiting meeting in Campbellford this evening. The other speakers for the occasion are Col. W. H. Floyd, O. C. 130th Battalion, and Col. W. N. Ponton, Belleville.

The 57th Regiment has placed at the disposal of the men of the 93rd Battalion, their piano for the recreation room, as well as a large number of papers and magazines for which the 57th had subscribed and which are now available for the overseas men. The lads in khaki will appreciate their kindness.

Col. Brown, the general staff officer of the division, heard the 93rd Band at practice this morning and afterwards addressed the band, congratulating them upon their efficiency. They would find he said, plenty of competition at Barriefield next spring, but from what he had heard the 93rd did not need to fear comparison with any of the overseas units bands.

Kingston, Dec. 16. — Lt. E. D. Huycke who left with the draft from the 33rd Battery, is the third son of Judge Huycke, Peterborough. Lieut. G. M. Huycke left with the first draft from the 33rd Battery and is now in the trenches. Lieut. W. F. Huycke, who was assistant adjutant, left with the draft from the 58th battalion from Barriefield camp.

A number of gifts have been received for the recreation room at the armouries, including a comfortable chair, a table and a table cloth. More furnishings are needed to make the room a comfortable place for the men when off duty, and gifts along that line will be thankfully received.

German Military Prisoners in Great Britain Hold Enviable Role

LONDON, Dec. 17.—The most enviable role in the war unquestionably is that of the German military prisoner in Great Britain. The remarkable treatment which the Kaiser's soldiers receive after they have been captured by the British troops is one of the greatest wonders of the war.

This was clearly demonstrated during a thorough investigation of a British camp for military prisoners which the correspondent of the Mail and Empire was authorized to visit by special courtesy of the War Office.

The camp visited was at Dorchester, four hours by train from London, where there are at present almost four thousand German soldiers captured on the battlefields of Belgium and France, particularly about Looe.

These men live their own lives, do what they wish with their time and receive practically no orders at all from the handful of British officers in charge of the camp. These officers have wisely adopted the system of leaving the entire discipline of the camp in the hands of the German non-commissioned officers.

There is absolutely nothing in the camp to justify the use of the term "prisoners" beyond the few guards surrounding the enclosure. No orders or restrictions whatever interfere with the daily life of these men. They live as they please and do as they will.

Every Comfort of Life.

The British Government provides them with every comfort of life. They are quartered in large, airy houses, specially constructed, well heated, and equipped with every modern comfort. Shower baths with hot and cold water, and steam baths are at their disposal as often as they please. Nothing which might add to their personal comfort is omitted. Whole some food of the very best quality is supplied to the men in abundant rations and the cooking is done by their own cooks. For this work these cooks who are also German prisoners captured at the front, receive compensation from the British Government of six shillings a week. All the other men performing work of any description for their fellow-prisoners, such as shoemakers who repair their boots and the tailors who patch up their uniforms, also receive special wages for these services. Not one German prisoner is employed on work of any description beyond the actual cleaning of his own quarters without receiving compensation in the form of weekly wages.

The amazing freedom left to these men was evidenced on all sides during my tour of the camp. In the sergeants' mess was a Christmas tree prepared by the men. The prisoners have organized a band with instruments generously supplied by the British. On these instruments they play daily their national anthem and German tunes.

A correspondent was permitted to speak at great length to many of these prisoners. Infantry men from all parts of Germany and sailors from German submarines and cruisers everyone expressed great satisfaction at the treatment he was receiving, and, although unwilling to say so openly, many intimated that they were glad to be away from the fighting line and to be living in such safe and comfortable quarters.

All Are Contented.

The correspondent had a long talk with Sergt.-Major Emil Hutter, who is warrant officer of the entire camp and who was captured at La Bassee. The Sergeant-Major had no hesitation in saying that all the men were happy and contented.

Several told the correspondent confidently that before they arrived in England many months had gone by since they had received their daily rations such as the British Government supplies. But comfortable quarters and excellent food are not all that falls to the happy lot of these prisoners. Few men indeed would not feel at ease, and even proud, to wear the fine-appearing and well-tailored brown corduroy suits, the warm flannel underwear and the shapely shoes which the Germans receive from the British Government as soon as their uniforms begin to wear away.

Make the following for the children. Soak half a pound of sago in cold water for three hours, then boil one pound of fruit with sugar to taste. When cooked pass the fruit through a sieve, add the sago, and return to the saucepan. Simmer altogether till the sago is clear, then pour into a wetted mould. Turn out carefully when cold.

EYE TALKS SERIES

No. 4—To Get The Best Eye Service

If a watch is so out of order that it will not run, it is necessary to do more than shake it trying to get a few more ticks out of it. You must have it put in running condition.

It is the same with eyes that refuse to do all you want them to without having them tell your brain they are tired by a warning ache, or letting you know they can't see clearly when things seem to waver before you or run into each other in a jumble most unaccountably. That means that you are not getting the service from your eyes that you should, or can. What you want is a pair of Fowler's Pebble Glasses fitted to exactly put your eyes in perfect working order, and your eye troubles will be over.

OBITUARY

CHILD DIES.

The death occurred yesterday of the infant child of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Cerone, 463 Sheridan street, at the age of two months.

The funeral took place this afternoon to St. Peter's cemetery.

AARON S. MAGUIRE.

The death occurred this morning at 8.30 of Mr. A. S. Maguire, at his late residence, 100 London street. The late Mr. Maguire was about to come down stairs this morning when he suddenly expired. He was seventy-four years of age and was born in Cavan. He lived at Warsaw for a number of years, but for the past thirty years he had been a resident of Peterborough. He was a man highly esteemed for his many sterling qualities, and his death will be deeply regretted by all who knew him. He was a member of the George street Methodist church.

His wife, four sons and three daughters are left to mourn his loss. The sons are Messrs. Walter, Montreal, Millard, St. Catharines, Lawrence, New York, and Hugh at home. The daughters are Mrs. J. S. Minnell, Seattle, and Misses Olive and Laura at home. One brother in Stratford also survives him.

The funeral arrangements have not yet been made.

Interpreter Got Goods By False Pretences

St. Catharines, December 17. — George Alexander, a Russian, foreign counsel and interpreter, was last night found guilty by a jury of obtaining goods under false pretences. Evidence was given to the effect that he accepted $25, half the amount he was to receive for securing immunity from the courts for an Armenian prisoner. The money was marked. Sentence was suspended by Judge Carman, there being two charges pending against Alexander at the present session of the county court, of arson and the theft of $200 which a young Austrian attempted to send to his wife in Lemberg.

Greatest Grain Shipment Ever From Head of Lakes

Port Arthur, Ont., Dec. 17.—From September 1 to December 11, inclusive, 166,316,965 bushels of grain was shipped from Port Arthur and Fort William, the greatest volume in the history of the head of the lakes. The nearest approach was in 1913, when 128,009,000 bushels was shipped in the same period. Duluth and Superior shipments from August to December 12 were only 94,359,000 bushels. A few steamers are due to-night or to-morrow to winter here, and navigation will then close.

New Bulgarian Army Is Being Prepared

PARIS, Dec. 17.—An Athens despatch to the Havas Agency, dated Wednesday, says The Hestia learns from Sofia that the Bulgarian Government is preparing a new army by calling up all exempted men and all Bulgarians able to bear arms living in the regions occupied in Serbia. The Bulgarian staff is said to count upon thus raising an army of 150,000 men. They will be armed with Austrian rifles.

Gave Stolen Wheel To Police Sergeant

Although Short of Funds Thief Was Unable to Sell His Prize.

TORONTO, Dec. 17.—Joseph Lacombe, a remittance man from England, who was no permanent resident in Toronto and who has been the victim of money stringency, walked into Agnes Street station last night and presented to Sergt. Snider a bicycle, which he claimed he had stolen from a dealer named J. R. Lee, Queen Street and Spadina Avenue. Lacombe told the sergeant that he had made a number of attempts to dispose of the bicycle, but failed. As a result he decided to confess his crime and surrender himself to the police.

Germany Will Attack Saloniki, Says the German Minister

LONDON, Dec. 18.—It is officially announced that the reported engagement of Kitchener to the Countess of Minto is untrue.

ATHENS, Dec. 18.—The German Minister here has notified Greece that Germany will attack Salonika.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—A plot to blow up the Welland Canal has been discovered. A German secret service agent has been arrested.

HOW TO PEEL OFF A WEATHERBEATEN FACE

It's really a simple matter to renovate a face soiled by dirt, wind or cold. Ordinary mercolized wax, used like cold cream, will transform the worst old complexion into one of snowy whiteness and velvety softness. It literally peels off the outer veil of surface skin, but so gently, gradually there is no discomfort. The worn out skin comes off not in patches, but evenly, in tiny particles, leaving no evidence of the treatment. The younger, healthier under skin forming the new complexion is one of captivating loveliness. One oz. of mercolized wax, to be had at any drug store, is enough to remove any coarse, chapped, pimpled, freckled, faded or sallow skin. Apply before retiring, washing it off mornings.

Many skins wrinkle easily with every wind that blows. An excellent wrinkle remover, because it tightens the skin and strengthens relaxed muscles, is a wash lotion made as follows: Powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in witch hazel, one-half pint. This gives immediate results.

Britain's Army Is Increased To Five Million Men

Result of Lord Derby's Enlistment Scheme—Greece Has Accepted Proposals of Neutral Zone of Two Kilometres Along the Greek Frontier—German Patrol Boat Wrecked in in the Baltic—Increased Revenue

LONDON, Dec. 18.—Recruits from Lord Derby's enlistment scheme is estimated at one and three-quarter millions. This gives Great Britain an army of approximately five million men.

PROPOSAL ACCEPTED.

LONDON, Dec. 18.—The Bulgarian Government officially announces that Greece has accepted the proposals of neutral zone of two kilometres along the Greek frontier.

PATROL BOAT WRECKED.

LONDON, Dec. 18.—A German patrol boat "Buna," was wrecked on the Island of Tangelan in the Baltic Sea. Bodies of several German officers were found on shore.

INCREASED REVENUE.

LONDON, Dec. 18.—The Russian Government has prepared a bill providing for a revenue of four hundred million dollars by increased taxation.

OSCAR II. ALLOWED TO PROCEED.

LONDON, Dec. 18.—The Foreign Office announced that the Ford steamer Oscar II. will be allowed to proceed when a bond is given by the captain to return part of the cargo considered contraband.

PINSK MARSHES SWALLOW UP WHOLE COLUMNS OF MEN AND MATERIAL

A Berlin newspaper recently described the privations endured by the German armies on the Russian front, special attention being devoted to the hardships of the troops in the Pinsk marshes. It is surmised that this article is an advance notice to the public to prepare for news of enormous losses of men in that "accursed region," as the paper terms it, where the treacherous ground sometimes swallows up whole columns of guns and munition wagons, with men and horses.

"Squads of our soldiers," says the German newspaper, "who stray from the beaten trails will often find themselves all of a sudden engulfed in a quagmire, where they must inevitably perish, unless some other contingent is in the neighbourhood and can be summoned to their assistance. The forests and bogs of Pinsk resound with moans and cries of distress. The fastnesses of the woods and the lichen covered marshes are haunted by the spirits of the German soldiers who have met a miserable death there.

"Considerable forces have been employed in this unfortunate Pinsk campaign. The difficulties of the territory itself have been further aggravated by the actively hostile attitude of the inhabitants in the wild region. Death is hiding behind every tree and shrub, and it has been found useless to try to patrol the district in the ordinary way. Entire platoons and cavalry troops are detailed for duties which in a less primeval region could be attended to by individual soldiers. The peasant population is offering the invaders a stubborn resistance, and their sharpshooters are picking off any German soldiers who may be caught away from their command. The marshlands are practically dotted with the bodies of such victims of the vindictiveness of the natives. In many a case when the corpse of a German is found, half immersed in some quagmire, an examination is likely to disclose that a bullet from some hidden enemy has helped to despatch him from his misery.

"Nature has made the Pinsk territory a stronger defence work than any forts could have effected. Its occupation by our troops is an adventurous undertaking, which should rather be put off until the ground has frozen sufficiently to provide at least some measure of safety to the invading army."

TAVISTOCK EX-REEVE ACQUITTED BY JURY

WOODSTOCK, Dec. 16.—At the continuation of the County Court session before Judge Wallace here two cases were disposed of, one, that of ex-Reeve Appel, of Tavistock, being the most important on the docket. After being out little more than an hour the jury brought in a verdict of "not guilty."

The charge was made by H. N. Roth, alderman, of Tavistock, that on the occasion of his taking the oath of qualification when elected reeve of Tavistock, Mr. Appel perjured himself, in that he swore he was a British subject, when, according to the prosecution, he was an alien of German birth. After witnesses had been heard regarding the character of the accused and his servic in municipal affairs, it was urged that when Appel took the oath he was under the impression that he was a British subject. Great interest was displayed in the case, and the hall was packed.

The Dereham case of McKibbon v. Anscomi, for assault, resulted in the jury awarding the plaintiff damages to the extent of $375.

Time Has Arrived For Greece To Take a Definite Course

Must Decide For or Against Allies in View of Salonica Situation—Teutons Likely to Demand Passage

LONDON, Dec. 18.—Confirming cable despatches the Times Athens correspondent telegraphs:

"The moment has arrived when the Greek government must make grave decisions. The Allied troops now have all retired into Hellenic territory, while those of the Central Powers stand upon the threshold of Greece. What will happen? Will the Germans and Austrians insist on similar facilities to those granted to the Allies and demand the right to pass through Greek territory? This is probable.

"But are the German and Austrian forces numerically sufficient? It is known that a considerable number of German troops have been withdrawn to the north, where other dangers threaten. If the Austro-German forces are insufficient, will they invite the Bulgarians to accompany them or will the Bulgarians consent to remain behind? It would seem as if the whole question turns upon that point.

"Can Greece sit still and see Bulgarians on the territory she so lately won with her life's blood? It is doubtful, doubtful even whether, should such be the desire of the Greek government, public opinion could be restrained. The Greek government can be trusted to run no unnecessary risks. Caution has been its policy and neutrality its aim.

"But the Greek government consists of Greeks. Every Greek is at heart a patriot. Greece has struggled to maintain neutrality and made great sacrifices to do so. Only events that would unite Greek sovereign and government with the people would force Greece to abandon neutrality."

The Times' correspondent, by asking the question, "Are we on the eve of these events?" adopts the Irish method of informing the British public that the Bulgars are ready to invade Greece and that Greece is ready to attack them.

Replying to a request for a statement as to the position of Greece and the Entente Powers, Lord Robert Cecil, Parliamentary Under Secretary of Foreign Affairs, said:

"The immediate object of the Allies has been to regularize our military position at Salonika and deny to Bulgaria and the Central Powers any control, direct or indirect, over Salonika. This we believe to be in accordance with the wishes of Greece herself.

"The British government hopes the negotiations may reach a satisfactory conclusion. It is impossible to say more at present."

For Higher Pay to German Troops

Reichstag Budget Committee Discusses Proposal to Reduce Salaries of Superior Officers

BERLIN, via London, Dec 18.—The Budget committee of the Reichstag has adopted various resolutions looking to the regulation and cheapening of food supplies. These resolutions include a reduction in the maximum prices for rice and vegetables of all kinds, as well as foodstuffs for live stock and provide for special allowances of grain to breeders of animals and poultry.

The Budget committee also has adopted a resolution recommending the reduction of the age limit for old age pensions from seventy years to sixty-five years. Another resolution, increasing the war allowances of the families of soldiers and the pay of privates, was referred for further action.

The committee also discussed a proposal to reduce the war salaries of the higher officers in order to obtain funds for increasing the privates' pay. The socialists finally offered a resolution demanding a thorough revision of all military salaries.

The War Minister opposed such changes, as did also Dr. Helfferich, the Secretary of the Imperial Treasury, who remarked that savings thus made would be insignificant.

GET IT FIRST—NOT LAST

When a cold grips your system it is convincing proof that your condition is weakened—remember that. It is risky indeed to simply trust your strength to throw it off, because neglected colds have brought more serious sickness than any other one thing, while weakening cathartics and stimulating syrups are often depressing and dangerous.

The one best treatment for any cold—the one so often relied on when others fail, is the powerful blood-nourishment in Scott's Emulsion, which feeds the very sources of bodily strength to suppress the present cold and generate strength to thwart further sickness.

Get Scott's first, not last—and insist on the genuine—always free from injurious drugs. No advanced prices.

The President's Wedding Day

Threatened Crisis With Austria Only Matter Standing in the Way of An Uninterrupted Honeymoon

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.— This is the President's wedding day.

At 8.30 to-night Uncle Sam will have a new first lady, Mrs. Edith Bolling Gault Wilson, but the momentous event failed to move the President from his customary routine work. He was about the executive office early clearing up unfinished ends of Government business preparatory to leaving it for two weeks.

Aside from a conference planned with Secretary of State Lansing to take up the answer to Austria's Ancona note, the President expected to see no official during the day.

The only matter standing in the way of an uninterrupted wedding trip was the threatened crisis with Austria.

Investigations of Pro-German Plots

Began in New York To-day When Three Pro-Germans Were Arranged on a Charge of Attempting a Hostile Expedition Against a Country Friendly to United States

NEW YORK, N.Y., Dec. 18.—Charged with attempting a hostile expedition against a nation friendly to the United States, the first charge of the kind made by the Government authorities since they began their investigations of pro-German plots, Paul Koenig and R. E. Leyendecker were arraigned here to-day before United States Commissioner Hough ton.

Fred Metzler, alias F. R. Reimer, a German youth, said to be Koenig's stenographer, also was arrested early to-day.

The formal charge against the trio is that they conspired to conduct a military enterprise against the Dominion of Canada by plotting the destruction of the Welland Canal, twenty-seven miles long, connecting Lake Ontario with Lake Erie.

ROSS RIFLES NOW RECHAMBERED

All the Canadian Divisions Once More Using the Weapon.

OTTAWA, Dec. 18.—The work of rechambering the Ross rifles of the Canadian force in England, France and Flanders has been completed and the arm, it is said, is now thoroughly adapted to the ammunition which is being issued. The trouble with the rifle in the first place was that it was very finely chambered to take the accurately-made Canadian ammunition, when the attempt was made to use less precisely-sized ammunition obtained from the United States the rifle jammed.

Sixty thousand rifles have been rechambered, and are in the hands of the Canadians of the first, second and third divisions. The production of the rifles in Canada, has been greatly increased since war began, and the supply is now sufficient to arm all Canadian troops which may be raised.

A Tragedy.

"How's that black-and-tan dog of yours?"

"Dead."

"Dead?"

"Yes, swallowed a bunch of watch keys, and they wound him up."

The Artist's Tone is the EDISON Tone

There is no such thing as an "Edison Tone." There is, in the New Edison, a Bonci Tone, a Spalding Tone, a Destinn Tone, an Anna Case Tone—each separate and distinct; each faithful to the distinctive character of the artist. But the New Edison has no tone of its own. It is merely a perfect vehicle for the reproduction of the artist's work. There is no foreign sound, no "talking machine" tone. Mr. Edison has eliminated all these. The music of the New Edison is nothing but the pure, unaltered, life-like tone of the original artist. Come in and hear your favorite record today on the New Edison. We will be glad to play it for you without obligation.

ROADS IN CHINA.

They Remind One Very Much of the Snakes in Ireland.

BECAUSE THERE ARE NONE.

What Apologies There Are For Them Are a Great Deal Like the Bed of a Stone Quarry—The Torture That Goes With a Trip in a Peking Cart.

Describing the roads, or, rather, the lack of roads, in China and the torture that is undergone by the tourist who, used to the luxurious modes of travel we may employ, trusts himself to the uncertain joys of a trip in a Peking chair, a writer in the Wide World Magazine says:

"Now, a Peking cart is a very venerable mode of progression. When our ancestors were lightly dressed in woad and had no conception of any wheeled vehicle the Chinese lady was paying her calls in the back of a Peking cart, the seat of honor under the tilt, well out of sight of the passers by, while her servant sat in front, the place of comfort, if such a word can be applied to anything pertaining to a Peking cart.

"In spite of its long and aristocratic record if there is any mode of progression more wearying and uncomfortable I have not met it. It is simply a springless board set on a couple of wheels with a wagon tilt of blue cotton over it and a place for heavy luggage behind. The Chinaman sits on the floor and does not seem to mind, but the ordinary westerner, has myself, packs his bedding and all the cushions he can beg or borrow around him and then resigns himself to his fate.

"The Peking cart has one advantage, people will tell you—it has nothing to break in it. But there are moments when it would be a mighty relief if something did break, for if the woodwork holds together as it tosses you from side to side you yourself are one sore, bruised mass. No; I cannot recommend a Peking cart, even on the smoothest road.

"And the roads in China are not smooth. We all know the description of the snakes in Ireland. 'There are none,' and much the same might be said about the roads in China. There are so called roads, certainly, upon which the people move about, but I have seldom met one that was any better than the surrounding country, and very, very often on this journey I met roads where it was ease and luxury to move off them on to the neighboring plowed field.

"The recipe for a road there in the north seems to be: Take a piece of the country that is really too bad to plow or to use for any agricultural purpose whatever, that a mountain torrent, in fact, has given up as too much for the water, upset a stone wall over it—a stone wall with good, large stones in it—take care they never for a moment lie evenly, and you have your road.

"Leaving Peking for the eastern tombs, you go for the first two or three hours along a paved way of magnificent porportions planned and laid out as a highway should be. The great stones with which it is paved were probably put there by slave labor, how many hundred years ago I do not know, but the blocks are uneven now, some of them are gone altogether, though how a huge block of stone could possibly disappear passes my understanding, and whenever the carter could be took the cart down beside the road, where at least the dust made a cushion for the nail studded wheels, and the jarring and the jolting were not quite so terrible.

"It takes as long to get beyond the environs of Peking in a cart as it does to get out of London in a motorcar. First we passed through the Babylonish gate, and the great walls were behind us; then, outside the city, all looking dusty, dirty and khaki colored in the brilliant sunshine, were numerous small houses, and the wayside was lined with booths on which were things for sale.

"Along the roadway came an endless army of people, clad for the most part in blue cotton—men walking, men with loads slung from a bamboo across their shoulders, donkeys laden with baskets or sacks of grain, with fat Chinese on their backs. There were Peking carts, there were mules, there were ponies, and this busy throng is almost the same as it was a couple of thousand years ago.

"But it was a long, long while before I could feel I was really in the country. There was the khaki colored land, there were the khaki colored houses, built of mud apparently, with graceful tiled roofs, and blue clad people everywhere and everywhere at work.

"Always the fields were most beautifully tilled. There were no fences. The Chinese are too civilized to need fences, and when you see stone walls it is only because, since they can't be dropped off the planet into space, the stones must be disposed of somehow."

Paris For Politeness.

Translated rather crudely and literally, this is the notice in a Paris trolley car: "Messieurs the passengers descending from the carriage are urged literally "prayed"), before renouncing the shelter which the carriage they are about to quit offers them, to assure themselves, as a preliminary, that no carriage coming in the opposite direction is in proximity."

Hope for the best, but work hard for the result.
